LOOK HERE!

If you could entertain the surplus crowds outside your door until seats were ready—keep them smiling, stimulate public enthusiasm, and at the same time get back all the pennies paid back in change thru your ticket window.

WOULD YOU?

invest $50.00 with the absolute assurance that you get your money back—please your patrons—advertise your house—cut your overhead and keep the crowds coming back.

T. W. Hamlin, Says:—

Our Favorite Film Star post card machine sold out all the cards the first day it was put on the floor. Apollo Theatre, 209 W. 125th St., New York Other machines getting from $20 to $50 per day

NOW IS THE TIME

To place your order. There is no other legitimate proposition in which you can place your money which will bring as big, quick and sure profits as these machines, besides giving your patrons a clean live, up-to-date amusement and making them all boosters for your theatre.

We give you 6,500 cards with each machine. The cards sell for $65.00 which pays for the machine and leaves a cash profit of $15.00. Additional cards can be bought to net you 200% profit. Machines are 6 ft. high 18" wide, oak finish, mechanically perfect and an ornament in any lobby. Catalog free on Request

TELLS THE ENTIRE STORY

WITH DIRECT-CURRENT PROJECTION

Whether yours is a small or a large motion picture house, you'll find that the Columbia-Silvertip combination lends a pronounced taste of distinctiveness to the story on the screen.

Before the advent of the Silvertip the trying problem of the time was to perfect a carbon which would maintain a permanent, sharp point during use, thus eliminating shadows on the screen. By presenting to the motion picture world this special carbon of small diameter, heavily coated with metal to carry the current sufficiently, projectionists can avail themselves of the ideal arc so long sought for.

The Columbia-Silvertip combination gives a light source of high intensity together with flickerless screen registration.

CHARLES RAY

A World's Record!

"GREASED LIGHTNING" will scoot to success like a burst of blue blazes.

This is a testimony and a prediction.

When Charles Ray as "Blacksmith Andy" gets his old tin Lizzy to working in "Greased Lightning," and when he gives the worthies of Pipersville a special demonstration of his Little Giant Potato Peeler---it'd have been a great peeler if it had only worked ---you'll see visible evidence of why Charles Ray and his pictures are so sure-fire, money-making, popular.

For delightful humor, quaint rural types, happy good feeling and thrills, there hasn't been a better picture in many moons.

Ray is one of the finest screen artists before the public. This is the best thing he has done---not excepting "The Girl Dodger." You'll say so and your audiences will too.

Wanda Hawley, Robert McKim and Otto Hoffman are some of the many good ones in the cast.

Lay a big bet on "Greased Lightning." She never skids, takes all grades on high and will bring home the money.

More power to him!

WITH every succeeding production the name of Cecil B. DeMille becomes of increasing box-office-money value to the exhibitor.

Today he is the giant of his profession, the leader of them all, the record breaker of box-office statements.

Consider "Don't Change Your Husband," "Old Wives for New," We Can't Have Everything," "The Squaw Man," "Carmen," "Till I Come Back to You." This is the one director of them all, whose name is synonymous with success—not only artistic success but real cold cash, box-office success.

Now comes his "For Better, For Worse," more splendid than his best, with all the wealth of detail that has made his name famous.

With a superlative cast of players including Elliott Dexter, Gloria Swanson, Wanda Hawley, Tom Forman, Theodore Roberts, Raymond Hatton, Jack Holt, Sylvia Ashton and others.

SCENARIO BY JEANIE MACPHERSON

THIS is the story of the men who couldn't go—of the misunderstanding, disrespect, and isolation that came to some real heroes who did the work at home.

In it is told a love tale, poignant, throbbing, compelling, heart warming.

It is surrounded with all the luxury and wealth of investiture that characterize every Cecil B. DeMille production.

A one hundred per cent money-winner.

"THE TEST OF HONOR"

"A PICTURE EVERY EXHIBITOR OUGHT TO GO AFTER"

SO says Variety of the "Test of Honor." Here's more of the review: "This is a whale of a feature. It is one of the best pictures for dramatic values that has been turned out in a long, long while. It is so good a picture that there seems to be a lack of words that might adequately voice its praise. It is a picture with all the essentials that go toward making a feature production that is out of the ordinary run of screen plays. It is about as fine a piece of work as Barrymore has ever done either on stage or screen."

And here's part of an editorial headed "A Real Artist" from the Exhibitors' Trade Review: "It is a pleasure to call attention to a real star—John Barrymore—and his picture, "The Test of Honor.' Mr. Barrymore's portrayal is without exception one of the finest pieces of acting the screen has ever seen. He has complete command of all the moods—from farce to tragedy and in this picture his work in characterized by a finish and a maturity which deserve very high praise."

Then this, from a whole page by Edward Weitzel in the Moving Picture World: "John Barrymore is the best dramatic actor who has appeared in New York this season. He is equally proficient on the shadow stage. His latest picture 'The Test of Honor' is a picture exhibitors should be eager to run. It has every element for both artistic and financial success. Its story is intensely dramatic but is never over the heads of the general public, that large class that demands that first and foremost it be entertained. The additional interest contributed by the presence of Barrymore will receive its proper valuation but the picture would itself reveal sufficient merit to score a pronounced hit."

Star Value — PAULINE FREDERICK

Beauty and power united by intelligence and building on success after success, have given Pauline Frederick a following possessed by no other emotional star of screen or stage. From "The Eternal City" to "One Week of Life" runs a record of pleased patronage that means absolute box office draw.

Story Value — ONE WEEK OF LIFE

She was married to a drunkard. She ached for one week of life in a paradise of love. And she found another woman to take her place. What happened in those seven terrible, magical days is the story that Cosmo Hamilton of Cosmopolitan fame has written especially for Goldwyn.

Production Value —

Everything that Goldwyn stands for. Quality in direction. Quality in cast. Quality in setting, photography, laboratory work. Director Hobart Henley has built a splendid ensemble out of a cast headed by such well known players as Thomas Holding, Sydney Ainsworth and Corinne Barker.

will grip American screendom as the problem of the painted woman and the little girl around the corner has gripped civilization since the dawn of history. Your patrons will be thrilled and moved and uplifted by Goldwyn's panoramic picturization of Robert H. McLaughlin's sensational drama of love and compassion.

On April 21st when the critics first see "The Eternal Magdelene"—in your theatre or your competitor's—the newspapers will echo such praise as the National Board of Review gave the picture after a private screening.

"The sympathetic screen version of this touching drama takes hold of one's heart. The evident sincerity of the cast will create an impelling desire in all who see the picture to have, with them, some part in spreading the gospel of human understanding as opposed to that New England rigidity that made 'The Scarlet Letter' possible. The world as a motion picture audience owes your company a debt of gratitude for the production".

The "80 per Cents" Have Made a First Run Star

It was the smaller exhibitors, the men who are generally credited with constituting 80 per cent of the industry, that gave Bennison his send-off. They saw the audience-appeal of this powerful and likeable Western star and his initial picture, "Oh, Johnny!" They had no hard and fast, full-booked-up, first run contracts to prevent the introduction of a new star. So they booked Bennison.

Start a snowball rolling—the hill will take care of speed and size.

The "little fellows" gave the Bennison snow ball a start and he's been rolling up contracts ever since.

The contracts on the outside of the snowball are first run contracts—big ones.

First run exhibitors in big city after big city have realized the great drawing power that Bennison has built in the second and third run houses. And they are clearing their tracks for his next and best picture—

East to West

For a big special of the West-that-was, there's no testing ground in America like the East-that-is.

The producer of border melodrama will find no more exacting audiences anywhere than in the great cities that line the Atlantic Coast. They expect much from that old romantic West — hard riding and hard shooting; brave living and brave loving; punch, punch, punch and one more punch for the finish. And, with all this, a wealth of that rich atmosphere of hardy chivalry and romance that only the most expert of directors, players and technical men can summon to the screen.

And what is the reaction of the easternmost East—New England—to the newest photoplay of the old West, Zane Grey's story, "The Border Legion," directed by T. Hayes Hunter and acted by Blanche Bates and Hobart Bosworth?

Bookings speak for themselves. But audience-reaction is even more important, and here we have the word of two representative leaders among New England exhibitors.

"The Border Legion" is a big drawing card from the box office standpoint, and that is what we exhibitors look for. It is a wonderful picture and we are doing wonderful business with it. It has all the ear marks of a box office money getter.

Manager Thomas D. Soriero
Park Theatre, Boston

Thought it would interest you to know that "The Border Legion" proved to be one of the best Western pictures we have ever played both in the point of story photography, and with the drawing powers of Blanche Bates it is a very good card for us.

Manager Gordon Wrighter
Poli's Palace, Springfield, Mass.

Such is the test of the East, met and passed triumphantly by "The Border Legion."

STEEL—the backbone of America—the thing that won the war. The Ford Educational Weekly—mirror of those mighty forces which have made America the dominating factor in war and peace—sees in the story of steel and a score of other industrial romances that dramatic quality which has made America a nation of great inventors, mechanics, engineers and captains of industry. The Ford Educational Weekly satisfies that craving, felt by nine out of ten Americans, for intimate knowledge of this great national workshop.

"The physician who takes a woman through the sacred crises of her life can't be deceived, Frank."

"I don't like your going to a place where you're ashamed to take your wife."

"Yes, I have served a year in prison, but the jails would be full if every man as guilty as I were convicted."

"By our old religion a man had as many wives as he wanted but if a girl made a mistake and married without confession to her husband, she was stoned to death."

Wonderful Face of

GEORGE BEBAN

When it laughs, the world laughs, and when it weeps, the world weeps. It is the most marvelous face in the world today, for without the aid of words it can tell you old stories, new stories, stories that make your sides ache or your throat choke. It can carry you, breathless, through all the feelings of mankind. It is the face that will haunt you for months when you have seen it in that new photo-classic,

"HEARTS OF MEN"

Mirth and pathos in this powerful picture crowd each other so closely that you never can tell whether the tears in your eyes are from laughter or weeping.

As Niccolo, the Italian immigrant, thrown by a strange fate into a gunman town of Arizona, Mr. Beban surpasses even his world-famous creation in "The Sign of the Rose." You roar at his fights, his strange marriage to the beautiful Tina, the "she-snake," and his convulsive clowning, but between times you sob at Fate's tricks on him and the mystery of his lost child, "the little Cayuse." Hate burns in your veins, with his, when he discovers his adored Tina in the arms of another man.

SCREENERS TAKE REINS FOR "V" DRIVE

"Bring the Boys Home" Slogan for Victory Bonds—Airplanes and "Prop." Transport to Help Stars

THE members of the Los Angeles film players' colony, theatres and exchanges will play the same big part in the coming Victory Loan drive as they did in previous campaigns.

D. W. Griffith will be chairman of the studios committee; Harry Leonhardt, of the California Theatre, chairman of the theatres committee; and A. P. Michael Narlin, chairman of the Los Angeles film board of trade, will be in charge of the exchanges.

Miniature Transport in Park.

Pershing Park, situated in the heart of the business district, will, as usual, be headquarters for the film people's activities. Each studio will be assigned an evening at the park, at which time a program of entertainment will be given to assist in the sale of bonds.

A miniature transport has been erected in the center of the park and the stars taking part in the drive will make their appeals to the public from the deck of this vessel.

The campaign will be taken to the outlying parts of the city by four tanks. These tanks will cover the entire city through a series of precinct meetings. All of the towns of Southern California will be visited by a flock of airplanes which will transport stars from the studios to the bondselling meetings held in each town.

The slogan of the campaign will be "bring the boys home," and there is no doubt but that the film people of Los Angeles will carry the drive forward in the same intensive manner that characterized their efforts in former campaigns.

The drive lasts three weeks.

Minneapolis and St. Paul To Have $1,000,000 Theatres

PLANS for the construction of a twenty-story building in Minneapolis which will house the largest and most elaborate motion picture theatre between New York and the Pacific Coast have been announced by the Hamm, Finklestein and Ruben interests.

Simultaneously announcement was made by the same group of men that they had acquired the uncompleted Mannheimer Building in St. Paul and would build there a theatre similar to the one in Minneapolis. It is reported that the Minneapolis structure will cost upwards of $1,000,000.

"While the St. Paul structure will cost at least $600,000," said I. Ruben, "the present Lyric Theatre building will be razed to make room for the Minneapolis building, which will have a frontage of 128 feet on Hennepin avenue and a maximum depth of 208 feet.

The completion of these new houses will give the Hamm, Finkelstein and Ruben group, operating under the name Twin City Amusement Trust Estate, a total of eighteen theatres in the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis—eleven in Minneapolis and seven in St. Paul.

MULLIGAN.

To Hold I. A. T. S. E. Meet in Horticultural Hall, Ottawa

THE City Council of Ottawa, Ontario, has granted the use of the Horticultural Hall, Lansdowne Park, Ottawa, for the convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the Moving Picture Operators to be held in the Canadian capital in May. The city has also voted $500 as a grant toward the entertainment fund of the delegates who are expected from all parts of the continent. One of the features of the convention, which opens on May 26, will be a street parade from the Chateau Laurier, the hotel headquarters of the convention, to Horticultural Hall.

Six different committees have been appointed by the Ottawa locals to take care of the out-of-town guests. These are the Reception, Accommodation, Entertainment, Parade, Hall and Central Executive Committees. The convenors of these committees include E. Gorman, Steve Wagoner, F. Gooden, G. Graham, J. Curzon and W. Lans.

The Ottawa operators held a general meeting on Sunday, April 13, to arrange for the convention.

Carl Laemmle Returns East After Two Months at U City

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Film Co., returned to New York Tuesday, April 15, following an extended stay at Universal City, where he supervised the production of a number of new Universal pictures. On his return trip, Mr. Laemmle spent a day at Salt Lake City, another at Omaha and three days at Chicago, where he conferred with Manager I. L. Lesserman and District Manager Sidney Goldman.

Mr. Laemmle spent eight weeks at the Pacific Coast studios, during which time he supervised the production of several forthcoming Universal features.

According to Mr. Laemmle, the erection of new laboratories, several new studio buildings, the return of many technical helpers from the war and generally improved conditions at Universal City will make it possible for Universal to make up a loss of eight weeks in its producing schedule before the first of June.

John D. Tippett, Universal's European representative, accompanied Mr. Laemmle as far as Chicago, where he will remain for several days before coming to New York to prepare for his return to London. Mr. Laemmle's two children, Rosabelle and Julius, returned to New York with the executive.

Big Theatre Interests in Cleveland Form Combine

ONE big combine of Cleveland picture theatre interests and another in the making was the record of activities in that city for the week ending April 12.

Announcement was made that the Mall and Alhambra theatres, owned by Strong, Desberg, Laronge and Greenbaum, had combined with Loew's Stillman, and shortly would go under the operating control of Marcus Loew. It also was stated that the new Euclid Theatre, a downtown house seating 2,000 which opens Easter Sunday, would become a Loew theatre in the fall and by that time, Strong, Desberg, Laronge and Greenbaum, who built the Euclid, would have another big house finished or well under way in the Euclid-East 105th street district.

The other combine, which is reported to be well along, is between Paul Gusdanovic and Joseph Grossman. The former owns two downtown houses, the Strand and Orpheum, and three neighborhood theatres, the Homestead, Eclair and Norwood. Grossman owns the Standard, a downtown house, and is promoting a big new theatre in the Euclid-East 105th street district.

Hal Roach in New York.

Hal Roach, proprietor and director general of the Rolin Film Company, which produces the Harold Lloyd comedies released by Pathe, spent a few days in New York last week in conference with Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc. The great success the Lloyd comedies have attained and future plans of the Rolin company were the principal topics under dicussion.

Fauley Make "Art and Spaghetti."

Wilbur F. Fauley, of the New York Times staff, has contributed a group of pictures, entitled "Art and Spaghetti," portraying Bohemian life in Greenwich Village, to the Universal Screen Magazine, April 25 release. Mr. Fauley took up motion picture photography last summer, preparatory to entering the film division of the Army.

BATTLEFIELDS SETTINGS FOR FOX FILMS

Verdun, the Marne, Chateau Thierry, Belleau Wood To Be Used for Locations—Going After More Stars

THE Fox Film Corporation is planning large productions for the coming year. A letter to all Fox managers giving the first information of the big plans which are now under way was sent out from the New York office this week.

This letter discloses the fact that William Fox is negotiating with stars of worldwide fame and with some of the foremost writers of the day.

He has spent days upon the battlefields and in other points of interest, picking locations and arranging to use these historic spots, so fresh in the memory of the nation, as the background and setting for powerful, modern, after-the-war dramas and stories of today. Verdun, the Marne, Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood—names and places forever fresh in the hearts of Americans—will be seen on the screen as the settings for forceful Fox dramas.

Not to Be War Pictures.

It is announced that these new productions will in no sense be war pictures. They will be tremendous dramas and spectacular productions played by American companies.

The letter which makes this announcement to Fox managers follows in part:

"I have just received a series of cables from Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan which indicate that next fall the Fox Film Corporation will be in the market with a series of the most spectacular productions which the film industry has ever seen.

"This judgment of Mr. Fox and his mission was written upon his arrival in London. Since then both he and Mr. Sheehan have been extremely active."

Again, to quote from the letter signed by Jack G. Leo, vice-president of the Fox corporation:

"Among the things which we may anticipate as the result of the negotiations now being carried on by Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan on the other side are:

"Stories by the most celebrated authors of today—men and women of world renown, these stories to be filmed in the old world spots which are today the points of keenest interest to the entire American population."

Automatic Orchestra Pit for Cleveland's Euclid

CLEVELAND'S largest picture theatre, the Euclid, at East Ninth street and Euclid avenue, will be opened Easter Sunday. It will contain an automatic orchestra pit.

This house, in the course of construction for six months or more, will have 2,000 seats, a grand concert orchestra of twenty-five pieces, a large organ, and will present high class programs of pictures and music.

It was built by Strong, Desberg and Laronge, owners of the Mall and Alhambra theatres, which have just gone into a combine with the Marcus Loew interests.

The Euclid's seats are laid out in fan fashion, with the screen in a corner of the building. There is no stage. The decorations are in the Adam period, with a light blue predominating. Everything of latest equipment has been installed.

There are several rest rooms, parcel room, a fountain in the foyer and a mezzanine promenade.

The orchestra is under the direction of Max Faetkenheuer, well-known composer and stage director. But the big surprise of the entire theatre is the automatic elevated orchestra pit, which is operated by a hydraulic arrangement.

By this the orchestra may be playing deep down in the pit out of sight or up in full view, as desired, the pit moving up and down like an elevator.

Saenger Company to Open Its Forty-sixth Theatre

J. H. SAENGER, president of the Saenger Amusement Company, Shreveport, La., who operates forty-five theatres in five states, announces that the forty-sixth playhouse will be opened in Alexandria soon. Mr. Saenger, accompanied by E. M. Clark, special representative of the company, recently visited Alexandria for the purpose of closing the deal recently made with the Rapides Opera House Company. The property known as the Rapides Theatre, Third and Washington streets, was purchased for $25,000.

Mr. Saenger states that the legitimate attractions and high class moving pictures will be shown exclusively. The Saenger company is at present operating one motion picture house at Alexandria, the Saenger, and the new house will in no way interfere with the policy of the old one.

Hodkinson Manager Marries.

Carlos E. Moore, manager of the Pittsburgh branch of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, was married in New York City on April 10, to Miss Sade Bain, of New York. Miss Bain has been associated with Siegmund Lubin, of Philadelphia, and with Edgar Lewis in his production of Rex Beech's novel, "The Barrier." She has recently been with the Famous Players and Fox companies, and played with Leah Baird in Harry Raver's Four Star production of Augustus Thomas' stage success, "As a Man Thinks." She has now left the screen permanently. Mr. and Mrs. Moore will live in Pittsburgh.

Salt Lake Showmen Still Worried Over Tax Payment

SALT LAKE CITY theatre managers are having more trouble with reference to the payment of the war tax. It has arrived at a point where they do not know what to do, and the only remedy which suggests itself is the removal of the office of the collector of internal revenue back to Salt Lake.

Under the law the managers are required to remit an estimated one-fourth of the taxes collected during a specified period and within the following thirty days to remit the balance, accompanied by the receipt for the remittance of the first quarter.

The managers have complied with the requirement to remit a quarter of the tax for the last period in question, but no receipts have been received. It is now within a day or two of time given to remit the remainder, but since no receipts have been received they can not comply with the provisions requiring that the receipt accompany the last payment. Accordingly they are corresponding with W. C. Whaley, internal revenue collector at Helena, Mont., to ascertain what is to be done.

It has been reported to theatre men here that the Helena office is thirteen months behind in its work and that this condition is responsible for the trouble with reference to the war tax payments.

Carry Buys Washington Theatre.

One of the most important capital city theatre deals of recent months has just been consummated, whereby the Empire Theatre, at Washington, on H street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, northeast, has been purchased by Albert Carry for about $100,000.

The theatre is under lease to George W. Linkins, a prominent real estate dealer, who has been operating it for several years. The new owner will hold the property as an investment, Mr. Linkins continuing to occupy it under his lease.

The house is one of several on H street, northeast, all of which do capacity business continuously, that being the center of one of the city's most intensively populated sections.

Toronto Police Confiscate Johnson-Willard Fight Film

A RAID by the police on the Peter Pan Theatre, Queen street east and Waverly road, Toronto, during the presentation of the Johnson-Willard fight pictures has the whole city talking. The local authorities got wind of the fact that the Havana bout views would be screened at the Peter Pan Theatre at a private show and they waited until the crowd had seen about half of the feature before they made a descent upon the premises.

A representative of the Ontario Government accompanied the Toronto police officials in order to secure evidence and the police were ordered to confiscate the film. The picture had been banned by the Canadian authorities although it had been presented many times in military cantonments under the direction of Captain T. C. Flanagan, who is now an officer of the Canadian secret service.

Tickets for the special show at the Peter Pan were sold at 50 cents each and the exhibition was started after the regular performance.

Fails to Create Missouri Censor Board.

The attempt to provide a state censorship board for picture theatres in Missouri has failed, despite appeals of churches and reform organizations.

The original bill before the State Legislature is missing and a parliamentary rule prevents consideration of the substitute unless the original bill is returned with it.

The substitute was prepared by Representatives Eigel, of St. Louis, and Taylor, of Kansas City.

SUNDAY PROS AND CONS PLEAD

Governor Smith, at Albany, Hears Both Sides of Sunday Bill—Next Few Days Will Decide Fate—Hearing Attracts Greatest Interest This Year

Albany, April 16.

ADVOCATES of the Sunday motion picture bill, as well as those who opposed the measure, had their innings for two full hours or more before Governor Alfred E. Smith this afternoon, while a throng that not only packed the Executive Chamber, but extended into the lobby as well listened and aplauded the speakers. A stroke of the pen in the hands of Governor Smith during the next few days will decide the fate of the bill over which there has been so much struggle and contention during the last two or three months. In numbers, men and women were about equal at this afternoon's session. Each side was given an hour during which to make its arguments. In connection with the Sunday motion picture bill, the pros and cons for Sunday baseball were also given an airing.

No hearing thus far this year attracted greater interest than the one of today. Governor Smith appeared at 3 o'clock and announced that the opposition would be given the first hour. The Rev. H. L. Bowlby, of New York, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, handled the program for the opposition, while Senator James A. Walker appeared and stated he would handle the program of those in favor of the measure.

Speakers for Opposition Are First.

The first speaker for the opposition was the Rev. Joseph A. Dunney, of this city, a well-known Catholic priest, who is in charge of the parochial schools of the Albany diocese. Mr. Dunney said he would take up the arguments in favor of the bill one by one and that he would outline the fallacy of these arguments, first calling attention to the fact that one cannot make a referendum of the moral law.

The speaker said that to his way of thinking Sunday movies themselves tended to Bolshevism, first, because they were irreligious; second, because many of the pictures were salacious and sensual, and third, because they created disorder, for the commercialism of Sunday never made for order. He said he could summon a labor vote against Sunday movies fully as large as any labor advocate of the movies. Furthermore, said the speaker, the labor vote of this State is not in favor of the Sunday motion picture bill. The speaker closed by saying his arguments were based on religion, morality and public decency.

Speaks Direct to Governor.

The Rev. Dr. David James Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, of New York, and president of the New York State Sabbath Day Alliance, speaking against the bill, said he was not going to address a single person in the audience, but that he would speak directly to Governor Smith in view of the fact that the outcome of the bill was today solely up to the State's chief executive. The speaker said he believed the Governor was open to conviction and he was sure that as a man with a family he did not wish to commercialize the great American rest day.

"It is said the working class wants Sunday movies," said Dr. Burrell. "It is not so. It may be so with some, but not in the great body of our laboring men. Our workingman wants to be in his home on a Sunday. You don't want Sunday shows. You are not clamoring for it. The man who takes in the money and the ushers do not want Sunday motion picture shows. The men who are making money out of it, plus the newspapers, for obvious reasons, are the ones who are behind this bill. The commercial factor is the real center. I enjoy the movies and I pick my films, but six days in the week are enough and I strenuously oppose any effort to break down the Sabbath Day."

Methodist Preachers Say "Commercialism."

The Rev. O. F. Bartholomew, of Mount Vernon, stated that he wished to be recorded in opposition to the bill, and that as such he expressed the wishes of over 400,000 people associated with the Methodist Church, according to a recent conference, where a unanimous vote was taken against both Sunday motion picture shows and Sunday baseball, because of the commercialized element. The speaker said that furthermore, as an instructor of 1,500 men, constituting the largest Bible class in the United States, of which over 800 were laboring men, he had found a strong feeling against the bills, because of the fact that as labor was fighting today for shorter hours, they could not consistently support any measure which would not only commercialize the Sabbath, but require many persons to labor long hours.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, vice-president of the W. C. T. U., stating that she represented 47,000 organized women of this State, recorded herself against the bill, as she said, "in the interests of growing boys and girls."

Advocates of the bill were introduced by Senator James A. Walker, who first called the attention of Governor Smith to the fact that there was no better judge in all New York State of home requirements than the Governor himself and he believed that the Governor was today perfectly willing to intrust the question of Sunday movies to each municipality as represented by its board of aldermen.

Judge Collins Favors Sunday Shows.

Judge Cornelius Collins, of the Court of Special Sessions of New York City, and president of the Catholic Big Brothers of the Metropolitan diocese, commanded instant attention as he spoke not only in favor of Sunday motion picture shows, but Sunday baseball.

"We see our wealthy persons enjoying their tennis, their golf, their automobiles, but if my boy knocks a baseball in the air on a Sunday, he violates the law. These ministers here today represent but a type of their own church, and we can bring just as many ministers who favor baseball on Sunday afternoon and Sunday motion picture shows, because of the fact that they know the innocence of this sport and this amusement, because they know that the baseball game takes away the hoodlums from the corner on the afternoon and the Sunday motion picture show in the evening, because the latter offers an hour or two of education and a recreation and revigoration."

Mr. Jackson Discounts "Commercialism."

One of the best arguments of the hearing was made by the Rev. W. H. Jackson, well known here from frequent appearance at similar hearings. Today, he appeared, as he said, at the request of William A. Brady.

"What is this commercial talk that I hear?" said Mr. Jackson. "Is it the financial return? If so, there isn't a minister who could do without it. I work on a Sunday and I am paid for it. Let me tell you that no less a personage than Justice Cropsey, of the Supreme Court, has gone on record as saying that the Sunday motion picture shows have taken the hoodlums from the corners, where they insulted women in passing, and that in Brooklyn crime has decreased 30 per cent. because of these self-same shows. There can be no better argument."

Operators' Spokesman Scores Clergy.

James P. Holland, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, scored a hit when he stated that he was appearing today at the request of the moving picture operators, and that if the ministers wanted a job in which they had the real interest for the working people at heart, they should lose no time in getting to the third floor of the Capitol, where the health insurance bill, the minimum wage bill and the eight-hour day for women, were being held up in committee by the Speaker of the Assembly.

"I go to church on Sunday," said Mr. Holland, "but after church services I think I have a right to spend the hours as I wish, and I can ask no better for my family than to take them to the motion picture show. It is better for our young men and women to be there than to hide around the corner doing wrong. The people want this measure and they should have it."

Mayors' Secretary Gives Figures.

One of the best arguments of the afternoon was made by W. C. Capes, secretary of the State Mayors' Conference, in which he said that a careful inquiry made by his organization to the mayors showed that 23 cities in this state now have Sunday movies and in 35 cities the houses are closed, but that in 9 of the 35, according to the mayors, the houses would open if given the right to regulate the law. In the open cities, there were 6,361,661 persons, or 63 per cent. of the total population of the entire state.

The closing argument in favor of Sunday motion pictures was made by Attorney John J. McInerney, of Rochester. He was followed for a minute or so by Senator James Walker, who asked the Governor if he did not think that if Sunday movies were good for New York City, were they not good for the rest of the state, and that if Sunday baseball was good for upstate, why was it not good for New York City?

"There are some people," said Senator Walker, "who have never laughed, who never will laugh and who never want anybody else to laugh."

Among well known exhibitors present were Sydney Cohen, Charles O'Reilley, "Lou" Rogers, from New York; Gus Konigswald, H. Manus, of Brooklyn; "Lou" Bitner, of Cohoes; Charles Hayman, of Niagara Falls; Ira Mosher and Joseph Schuert, of Buffalo; W. A. Callahan and I. M. Salyerds, of Rochester, and S. I. Berman, of Brooklyn.

CENSORSHIP AGAIN LOOMS IN NEW YORK

Long-Dormant Slacer Bill Shows Sudden Life—Passes Assembly—Possibility of Becoming Law

SUDDEN life has been injected in the Slacer motion picture censorship bill, which up until a few days ago was considered a dead issue so far as the present session of the Legislature was concerned. Now the bill has passed the Assembly by a vote of 77 to 57, and while it is late in the session, it stands a fair chance of passage.

Assemblyman John W. Slacer, of Buffalo, introducer of the bill, speaking in its behalf before the Assembly, declared it was absolutely necessary that the state be given control of films that are being exhibited because some of them are of a character that should be prohibited from being displayed. According to Mr. Slacer the bill is in the interests of producers and exhibitors who demand clean movies, just as much as it is in the interest of the public.

Censorship Unnecessary Say Film Men.

Those who opposed the passage of the censorship bill put up the claim that the motion picture men themselves are driving out of the business those who do not show decent films, and that the creation of a board of censors in this state was entirely unnecessary and would also hamper the business.

The State Board of Regents, according to the Slacer bill, which was explained in detail in a recent issue of Moving Picture World, will have the power to name the board of censorship and this board would pass on all films which could be exhibited in this state only with their approval. The bill has now gone to third reading with reference.

Frederick H. Elliott and Arthur Friend, of New York, reached here today and said they were out to oppose the passage of the bill. Mr. Friend and Mr. Elliott conferred with Royal K. Fuller, who was recently active in creating favorable sentiment for the Sunday motion picture bill and who was recently apopinted as secretary to the Highway Commission.

Picture Showmen Went to the Public for Support

IN conversation with Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors League, a representative of Moving Picture World learned some of the details that led up to the successful outcome of a seven months' campaign for legalized showing of pictures on Sunday in New York State. With the bill at the moment awaiting Governor Smith's signature Mr. Cohen was loath to make extensive comment on the issue; but enough was learned to make possible the following statement of fact:

Profiting by the mistakes of other movements, both in New York and other states, Mr. Cohen and the executive committee of the State League decided upon an entirely different campaign than previously had been forwarded in the interest of "public welfare" legislation—they went direct to the public and depended upon the influence of the thousands who want pictures on Sunday to wield a beneficial effect upon representatives in the Senate and Assembly.

In promoting the successful outcome, Mr. Cohen gives unrestrained credit to his fellow-workers of the League's executive committee: Harold Franklin and Jules Mehales, Buffalo; W. A. Dillon, Ithaca; Irving Reynolds, Rochester; W. H. Linton, Utica; Sam Sheer, Long Island City; C. L. Reilly, New York; S. L Berman, Brooklyn; Al Hamilton, Yonkers, and C. A. Hayman, Niagara Falls.

These men worked with Mr. Cohen in getting the public interested in the campaign for Sunday pictures. Different centers of population were systematically canvassed for signatures to petitions and letters to representatives. Slides on the screens were a potent factor in forwarding the action of the general public. It was from this angle—the urge of the people themselves—that the bill was passed

There was no canvass for financial aid outside of the exhibitor body itself. The manufacturers or distributors were not asked to contribute and the matter was entirely financed by the picture showmen themselves. Proceeding on the basis that it was the exhibitor's business to do all he could in his own interests, Mr. Cohen and his associates succeeded.

CHINA KICKS IN WITH A CHAMPION

Floods, Revolutions and Queer Traditions of the Chinese Are Breath of Life to F. M. Sanderson, Who Manages Fourteen Theatres in Oriental Republic

By William J. Reilly

ROLL back the portals of the Exhibitors' Hall of Fame. Let them open wide to admit a new member to the meeting of famous picture showmen. When it comes to the triumphal music, let that be a blare of Chinese cymbals and blocks in a nightmare concoction of Oriental jazz, else the hero will be homesick.

F. Marshall Sanderson, general manager of China Theatres, Ltd., headquarters Tientsin, China, is not only the composite Kunsky-Rothapfel-Loew of the Far East, but in the picture are features all his own. Running a chain of fourteen theatres in a great circle in North China, he has had problems enough to make Hercules and his historical Twelve Labors look like a lead pipe snap. Bullets whistle over the roofs of his houses while a revolution is in progress one week. And the following week the rattle of musketry is superseded by the roar of the waters, and his theatres are flooded. He then makes a round of inspection in a Chinese sampan.

Success in China Is Success Anywhere.

What exhibitor in this grand and glorious republic of ours has to follow his patrons down to the seashore and show them pictures there in the hot months when the torrid weather drives the people to the sea? What exhibitor here has to cater to a people who refuse to pay for a thing before they have seen it? What showman between our shores ever had his projection disturbed by towels whizzing across the light ray, making fantastic figures on the screen?

These are but minor difficulties confronting F. Marshall Sanderson. Eight years in the East have taught him how to cope with many a puzzling situation. Curious laws and customs of the Chinese, the cosmopolitan character of the legation element in the cities, the procrastinating tendencies of the Orient all presented barriers to this business-like, clear-visioned Englishman. Yet were you to see the interior of the Empire Theatre in Tientsin, one of the five in that city owned by his company, you would put on your strongest spectacles, gaze for a long interval and then ejaculate, "Can this be China!"

Not only has the Empire a handsome lobby, a beautifully decorated interior, a luxuriously appointed foyer, and a stage for traveling shows, but there is connected with the theatre a real mahogany bar where prohibition never loiters, and a cafe and cabaret with a Russian stringed orchestra of five pieces, led by an American, Harry Carey of Los Angeles.

Empire an Oasis in the Desert.

"The Empire is more than a theatre," said Mr. Sanderson. "It is a club. The people of the East have a generous living philosophy. They like to have a good time, and be happy, so we decided that we were in China for the purpose of entertaining and that is why we established the cafe and cabaret. Even the Chinese women are dancing now, a thing undreamed of five years ago."

The Empire Theatre was built two years ago by A. Bari, a British-Indian subject, a man with a powerful insight into the future of the moving picture business in the Far East. Years ago he started the Old Arcade in Tientsin as a photoplay house, and despite all odds against him succeeded. He was the most important factor in the establishment of China Theatres, Ltd., and is now a member of the board of directors which controls the company.

Believes China Is Overcharged for Films.

Mr. Sanderson left the Far East in February. He is in America for a few months, seeking to link the motion picture business of China closer to that of F. Marshall Sanderson.

General Manager of China Theatres, Ltd., and the Orient's prize exhibitor.

America, studying America's latest houses, and trying to interest American producers in the just claims of the picture showmen of the Orient. He came to New York last week after a month on the Coast.

"American producers have the idea that the whole of China is nothing but a mint turning out money for the moving picture men. China's four hundred millions loom up larger in their minds than they actually are. They say, 'With four hundred millions of people out there, they must be harvesting money.' So the prices for their films are almost unbelievable.

"If I could interest the producers in a percentage basis for the exploiting of pictures, not only in China, but in the whole Orient, I could do big things for both the producers and myself."

Sanderson's "Revue" Unparalleled.

The work of managing the fourteen theatres controlled by China Theatres, Ltd., often sees Mr. Sanderson around the clock without a moment's rest. Coming of a newspaper family and being himself an old newspaper man, having written for the Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald, he believes in the efficacy of printer's ink in advertising. One of his many scheduled works is directing the publicity for the entire chain of houses.

The weekly "Revue," published by Mr. Sanderson himself, is a house organ, which it is safe to say has no parallel in America or elsewhere. It is a twenty-page booklet supported by advertising, containing announcements and reviews by the editor of the coming week's features, with editorial comment and a column of witty paragraphs by an American. A localized edition is printed in each city. Letters from patrons concerning various pictures and general discussions by them on the photoplay are printed, linking the public to the theatres in a way no system of American houses has succeeded in doing.

The press of the entire Orient knows of Mr. Sanderson's "Revue," and has often devoted space to favorable comment on the fact that China has in this little paper something which no sophisticated Western country has even attempted.

Tong Keeps Billboards Clean.

Besides the publicity carried in his house organ Mr. Sanderson gives his varied public abundant notice of his features through newspapers and billboards. Italian, French, and English newspapers carry his big displays, translated to the proper language, while a staff of Chinese publicity experts, after getting an idea of the picture from Mr. Sanderson, hand out the real thing to the Chinese in their native newspapers.

All the billboard posters are done by hand. Mr. Sanderson has one native who is particularly adept with brush and ideas and who does all his work on brilliant red poster sheets, which is the usual background used by the advertising artists. A scene from a photoplay tells a Chinaman more than several thousand words. He eats stills alive.

The theatres never are obliged to worry over keeping their billboards clean. A certain tong makes a living by watching the boards religiously, tearing off the posters the morning after the show, and selling them for waste paper. Each Chinaman has a certain sector of the city and no other member of the tong encroaches on his territory.

Ten of the fourteen houses operated by China Theatres are Chinese houses exclusively. The other four cater to the cosmopolitan element consisting mainly of foreign business men and the staffs attached to the various legations. Each particular nationality, of course, is strong for its own pictures, and Mr.

Sanderson finds his patrons a critical lot.

Theatre Seats Are Family Pews.

The Pekin Pavillion, one of the China Theatres' chain, finds so consistent a patronage in the legation attaches and their families that certain rows of seats in the house amount to another set of family pews. After dinner in the evening, they come around to see the one show starting at 9 p. m., and occupy the same seats night after night. The president of China is a frequent viewer of the Pavillion's pictures. The patrons pay their four dollars "Mex" or two dollars American money for the big feature pictures and after the show come around and thank Mr. Sanderson for bringing such a photoplay to them.

When asked if he used Chinese music in his theatres, Mr. Sanderson smiled. "Chinese music isn't music," he said. "It's a nightmare of noise made by the clashing of cymbals and the banging of blocks. We use pianos and orchestras in the bigger houses and pianolas in the purely Chinese theatres."

Chinaman Doesn't Pay as He Enters.

Mr. Chinaman has queer ideas on the pay-as-you-enter proposition. You don't catch him paying for anything he can't see. Accordingly such a thing as selling him a ticket for a movie show is out of the question. You must open your doors to the crowd, let it surge in, and then start your show.

"After the picture has run for a few hundred feet and we have their interest, we stop the projection, put up the lights, and take up the money in big baskets," said Mr. Sanderson. "The Chinaman puts in his coppers, 3, 10, or 20, according to the price on the seat he is occupying. Then the lights go out and the picture goes on." Two of the five theatres in Tientsin are called King Wee and Quong Ming, whose names signify Joy, Happiness or Brilliant Pictures.

In regard to the titles and continuity in the films, Mr. Sanderson said they were often entirely omitted. Before going to the theatre, the Chinaman will send his boy out and get a program of the show which contains a synopsis of the story. After getting the idea of the play firmly in his mind, he will go to the theatre and see the picture.

Fat Man Symbolizes Happiness.

"They like comedy and drama with action," Mr. Sanderson went on. Fatty Arbuckle and Charlie Chaplin are their favorites. They go frantic when they see something they really like. You never heard such a howling bedlam or saw such a whizzing of towels.

"The comedy of the fat man they like best of all. To them a fat man represents a happy man; and happiness is the great thing for which the Oriental seeks. Society drama, with intricate, involved relations between men and women, they do not understand. Cartoons they enjoy immensely, particularly those of Bobby Bumps and his dog. We are planning to make our own topical events, to be shipped also to this country."

Mr. Sanderson personally views every picture shown in his theatres and constitutes a self-appointed board of censors. Anything tending to give the Chinaman a wrong impression of the manners or life of English speaking people, he eliminates. He related the following tale of 101 per cent. showmanship:

Hanging Something to "Hell's Hinges."

"Two days before 'Hell's Hinges' was to be shown in Tientsin, I announced that the picture could not be shown as it would give offense to the missionary element. I did this after one of the biggest advertising campaigns I ever put out, and after I had the people interested to the boiling point in the Bill Hart picture and eager to see it. Simultaneously with the announcement that I could not show the picture, I asked if my patrons would not appoint a censorship committee of their own to see if there was a possible chance for the exhibition of the photoplay. Sure enough, they appointed two missionaries, a doctor and an attorney, who unanimously approved. Consequently, the clean-up was huge."

Mr. Sanderson relies on the Moving Picture World when he buys his pictures. As an instance, he cabled $4,000 to a New York bank and bought a big war film on the strength of the World's recommendation. He clips Epes Sargent's Advertising Aids for Exhibitors and often devotes an hour or two to perusing them in his scrap book and getting a fresh stock of ideas on exploitation.

Chinaman Must Have Tea and Towels.

The Chinese New Year, which comes with the first new moon of the year and lasts two weeks, is a busy time for the China Theatres. During the two weeks the Chinese give themselves up to amusement, and the houses are packed to suffocation for twenty-four hours around. The people crowd the theatres, sip tea, which they buy from the attendants in the theatres, and mop their sweating faces with cold towels likewise provided by the ushers.

The Chinaman, Mr. Sanderson finds, cannot sit through a picture show for an hour and a half without frequent cups of tea and cold towels. Accordingly, the picture is stopped about every reel for an interval to permit him to imbibe and to whizz his towel across to an attendant in the aisle, who immediately wets it in icy water and whizzes it back.

The projectionists in all the China theatres are Chinese, and Mr. Sanderson vouchsafes the statement that he has not seen projection in America to compare with that turned out by his native boys in China. The boys are first trained in the repair of damaged film and gradually work into the art of projecting pictures. They sleep in quarters provided by the theatre and are happy on a salary of five dollars "Mex" per month. The attendants are likewise natives, and save for one or two of the larger houses, the managers are also Chinese.

Continuity in English and Chinese.

While in San Francisco, Mr. Sanderson made arrangements to have titles and continuity inserted in Chinese in the films bought for his company. The Chinese will be put in a column parallel to the English and duplication will thus be avoided.

Commenting on this, his first visit to the States, Mr. Sanderson said, "I really am overjoyed with the heartiness and kindness with which I have been received. People have given me their time to show me all over their theatres and their studios. Wherever I go they cannot do too much for me. I shall carry back to China the memories of a wonderful reception."

After a week in Chicago, Mr. Sanderson will go to Seattle and sail from there early in May.

One Reason Why Firemen Demand High Salaries.

What fireman dotes on the idea of meeting that right of Herbert Rawlinton's as a regular thing? The athletic star of Oliver's serial, "The Carter Case," is shown here rescuing Margaret Marsh and William Pike.

Marguerite Clark Leaves for the Coast.

Marguerite Clark, who has just finished the final scenes of her new Paramount picture, "Come Out of the Kitchen," adapted from Alice Duer Miller's story and A. E. Thomas' dramatization of the book, has left New York for California, where she will take up her activities at the Morosco studio at Hollywood. There, under the direction of Walter Edwards, Miss Clark will start work in the Paramount version of Clyde Fitch's comedy, "Girls."

It is several years since Miss Clark has been in California, her recent work having been confined to the Eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

ADVERTISING FORUM FINISHES OFF

Final Instalment of Letters from Picture Showmen Who Voice Their Opinion of Distributor Announcements in Other Than Moving Picture Trade Papers—Forty-six Exhibitors Have Submitted Views on Important Topic

WE present this week the sixth and final instalment of letters from picture showmen who have contributed their opinions on the subject of advertising in other than strictly moving picture trade papers. Including the communications in this issue, forty-six picture showmen have expressed their views.

The discussion started in our issue of March 22, when William Sievers, holder of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise in St. Louis, expressed as his belief the thought that money was practically wasted by moving picture distributors who advertised in theatrical papers other than the strictly moving picture class.

Out of this initiation have come the opinions of these other showmen who have generally agreed with Mr. Sievers in principle while broadening the scope of their expressions to include other topics of mutual interest to both the showman-exhibitor and distributor.

The discussion has resulted in giving publicity to many complaints that the theatre managers have to make in regard to their position as retailers of films. There has been much printed during the series of benefit to the industry; of direct benefit to the distributor who has read the series carefully and has given heed to the arguments and statements of conditions as outlined by the men who make or break the picture business.

Contributions have come from towns large and small; from the biggest of circuit managers and large city exhibitors to the "little fellow" who plays pictures only three times a week, because his town cannot support full-week presentations. All section of the country have been represented; and every one of the letters have been of value in giving the distributor a line on conditions in the retail branch of the industry.

By W. T. (Bill) Yoder

Manager Pathe Exchange, Dallas, Tex.

KNOWN throughout Texas and Arkansas as one of the most progressive exchange managers in the Southwest. Mr. Yoder is admired by hundreds of exhibitors as a man who is striving for the betterment of the motion picture industry, and his statement favoring the restriction of trade journal advertising to the five publications that are devoted solely to the interests of the industry is made as a plea for an upward step along sensible lines.

IT is my personal opinion that if all companies would confine their ads to the reliable publications a great load would be lifted from the shoulders of an already overburdened set of exhibitors and exchange managers. The men who are trying to present to the theatre goers and admirers of picture shows the finest in the movie game today already have more to attend to than perhaps any other class of business men in any other line of business in the world.

I would welcome an act by the heads of all producing and distributing companies that would result in remedying this extravagance and wasteful advertising. I don't want anyone to think that I am opposed to advertising. Any theatre manager, whether he is trying to put across a girl show, a drama, a stock company or a motion picture would be a candidate for a home for the silly, were he for one moment to believe that advertising is without merit. But I do believe that the motion picture interests of America are doing a great injustice to themselves and the people who pay to see picture shows, when they heedlessly appropriate money for advertising in every publication with space enough to print their ads.

Practical Experience Dictates.

I do not make this statement from the standpoint of a man whose knowledge of the picture business is gained by sitting at a desk, in a carpeted and beveled glass office far from where the admission price is placed in the ticket window. I make my assertion from knowledge gained while I have been with picture theatres and have managed them.

I know the mental strain and nervousness which is the experience of every exhibitor, when he is trying to book pictures that will please his patrons. I know just what it is to pore through reams of pages of motion picture publications in search of a feature that will tickle the register in the box office. I know just what it means to see a competitor playing full houses, while I wondered just what I could buy to rival or go them one better.

I am well aware that the chief trouble arising when booking a picture is the worry caused a manager who ponders over the question of "Can I believe what the ——— book say about this picture? Can I believe that the picture is as good as they say it is? Can I trust that their opinion is candid and frank and based upon the merits of the picture and not upon the number of inches of advertising carried in the same issue of that publication concerning that feature?" These are the questions that boldly form themselves in the mind of every thinking exhibitor and they are the questions to which there is but one answer. And that answer is that the only way to settle the matter is to place motion picture ads in publications wholly dependent upon the motion picture business for their existence. This is my personal opinion of a remedy for the matter.

Prefers Newspapers to Billboards.

I believe in advertising as strongly as any man alive today. And more than that, I believe in advertisements in newspapers and trade journals more than any other advertising than could be suggested to me. A few days ago, I was asked whether it would be better to exploit a certain feature with the use of twenty-four sheet billboards or whether the money should be used in newspaper advertising. I immediately wrote back that personally I approved of the newspapers. That is the best way to reach the people. The billboards are usually placed in cities of over 10,000 population and this is decidedly unfair to the town of less population. The people of the villages and smaller towns are entitled to their share of whatever advertising the motion picture companies decide to devote to their films.

I want to score the publications that do the industry the so-called "honor" of placing at the tail-end of each issue a "section" devoted to motion pictures. Their sole interest in motion pictures is just how much money they can bleed from it in advertising—and that alone. There should be a combined effort by the film interests to "weed out" such periodicals by restricting the advertising to the trade journals that are published solely to help the motion picture exhibitors of this country in selecting pictures which will be profitable and enjoyable.

Business Weary of Lavish Spending.

It's plain waste, it seems to me, to do other than this. It is an extravagance that looks to me like something unpardonable. There is no industry which is as tired of gaudy and lavish expenditures of money as the motion picture business. The time used to be when the crowing ad for a show was to tell how much, or how many millions of dollars was paid out to produce it. This is daily proving itself to be foolish. The day is here now when we are trying to show just how fine a picture we can produce at as reasonable a figure as possible. And this doesn't mean that I favor a curtailing of the expenses of producing a picture. I don't. It means that I absolutely and unqualifiedly object to a waste of money, and this is what seems to me to be the present policy of many of the picture companies as regards the extent of their trade journal advertising.

I know a good many theatre managers, but I don't know of a single one who has time to read all of the trade journals that in mass formation seem to come hot from the printing presses to his office. I don't know of a single exhibitor who has time to wade through half of them. I do know, however, of lots of theatre managers who take time to throw them away. They do this simply because they have not the time to read them and know them to be hopelessly unreliable and untruthful in their editorial and news comments, and therefore refuse to fool themselves and waste their time by going through them. I know that five trade journals, as the First National Exhibitors Circuit has proposed, are a plenty—a sufficiency. I am not quite sure whether five is too many or not. I am positive that five is enough, however.

By Lou Bissinger

Manager, Washington Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

I BELIEVE that the most progressive move regarding the advertising end of motion picture production and distribution would be a decision by all film companies to restrict the advertising and exploitation of their product to five trade journals—in other words to follow the example set by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

I am somewhat inclined to believe that it would be a pretty good idea to give the advertising to less than five journals. I don't know many exhibitors who have time enough to read five of the trade publications.

Moving Picture Advertising Individual.

I don't know of any example I might cite as a parallel. You can't compare moving picture advertising to any other kind in the world. When you advertise a bar of soap you are trying to sell a product every one needs and uses and which, accordingly, will attract the attention of every one wise enough to use soap. But when you are trying to sell (I mean by "sell" to rent) a film you've got to meet the eye of only those men who have any use for films. Only the users of moving picture films will be able to take what you are advertising. Therefore, what good would it do a moving picture concern to scatter his advertising broadcast, in magazines controlled many times by friendship and advertising? I really couldn't say just how many magazines and periodicals there are in the United States. It would take a week of a man's time to figure up and see. I do know, however, that the man who runs a moving picture theatre doesn't think, consider or pretend to book his pictures from any of those million or more magazines if there are that many. The picture show man, the live show man, has his standbys and in these he looks to see which films he will book and which he will disregard

Now comes the question of whether it is money wasted to advertise—regardless-of-where. I think it is a foolish way to do business—this policy of sticking your ad in everything that will print it. It's undignified. It's just as ridiculous as pasting large signs in the cellar of your theatre.

Spending Public's Money.

It's the same with the First National's trade journal advertising policy. The First National believes that the way to conserve is to restrict its advertising to only five trade magazines. They believe and I think they are right in believing that the great majority of the live-wire exhibitors in this nation believe in the policy that the use of only two or three of the multitude of "trade" journals is a common sense way of doing business.

First National believes that money sunk in advertising is money that can't be atoned for. They believe it is the public's money they are spending and that is both a constructive and a correct view for them to take. With a policy like that there is nothing but success ahead for the moving picture men, providing other companies show progressiveness and following the example set by the First National policy.

After one considers the proposition thoroughly, he finds it will be to the advantage of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit if the other motion picture companies do not decide to adopt the plan as it has been set forth by the First National people. This is what it will mean. It will mean that when an exhibitor or manager wants to find out what offerings the First National is releasing, he will know of five ways to find out. He will know that the First National Exhibitors' Circuit's advertising department has not scattered a confusing barrage fire of advertising at all the theatre managers in the country, but that they have considerately and conservatively held their information concerning their new releases to the five standard motion picture trade journals.

Trade Journals Depend on Industry.

It is not only a matter of sound business policy, but a matter of gratitude to follow out the plan of the First National's trade journal advertising policy. There are publications in the United States that depend entirely on the moving picture business for their existence. If the moving picture business, impossible as this supposition is, should go out of business tomorrow, there are a few moving picture magazines which would naturally have to suspend operation also.

There are other periodicals. There are those that take advertisements of the variety stage for the most part, the ads of those on the legitimate stage. These usually do the moving picture people the satirical kindness of putting a small section for us in the back pages of each of their issues. For this representation many moving picture companies give them advertising. Their editorial comments and their "news" comments are amusing to a forward looking exhibitor. He knows that some of them will boost a picture to the skies for a certain number of inches of advertising.

So why should the officials of any company support these propositions that absolutely do not help their businesses, but serve rather to cheapen them?

By H. P. Thompson

Manager, Liberty Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.

THE advertising proposition that Mr. Sievers writes about in your issue of March 22, is one which I feel is a deep question. I am in about the same fix as the old Black Hawk coon who wrote home to his wife: "As I write this I am standing in five feet of blood with dead Germans floating all around me." While many have achieved success they do not know the recipe that will give it to me in my neighborhood.

However, I have always thought that the money spent for advertising in the current magazines was money thrown to the birds as far as the exhibitor is concerned. Especially is this so of the average small town exhibitor.

While there would of necessity be a small influence exerted by a "national campaign" in the magazines devoted to home reading, yet I do not believe that this influence is worth, to the exhibitor, the added cost that comes to him on his contract. I firmly believe that it is up to the exhibitor to work out his own salvation according to the needs of his own field with the advertising aids that are always at hand, viz: the local press and the matter compiled by the picture people for the exploitation of the picture.

Hadn't Observed Post Ads.

I have made inquiries of quite a number as to whether or not they had noticed the Paramount-Artcraft advertising in the Post. Invariably they said no. This shows that comparatively few of the class we want to reach or rather that we do reach are not influenced by this advertising.

It is true that there are a large number of people that are not attending the movies that should be pushing their dimes and nickels in at the box office window, but there always will be such. And no amount of national advertising will overcome this condition. The exhibitor who makes a study of local conditions and then puts pep and brains behind his advertising is the only man who can accomplish what seems impossible. Give us the goods, and we can sell them, but until they put pictures up to a consistent standard we cannot expect too much. If we have pictures that are heavy and deep, then we get one class of people; if they are light and airy we get another class and so on. We must cater to all classes; but we can have good pictures, too, that are clean, entertaining and not of the dime novel type.

Patrons Resent Exploitations of "Lemons."

That, is in itself, one of the big faults I have found with the trade advertising. Unless an exhibitor is so situated that he can see the picture himself, he gets hooked and hooked right. The exchange sends out a man with a picture. He has a big line of stuff that looks good. He has trade journal reviews that are dreams. The exhibitor buys the show and finds that he has a special that is nothing more than an ordinary picture. The exhibitor puts a lot of hard work and money behind his local campaign and he "soaks" his patrons, and all his previous efforts are gone to naught, because he has lost the prestige he has gained. He has told a barefaced lie, and the people resent it. Why trade journals will do these things, in cooperation with the producers, I cannot understand.

Why Do They Lie About Lemons?

Why will the salesman lie like a pirate to the exhibitor when he knows that the picture he is selling is a lemon? Why? But he will. He does it right along. I know. I've been lied to. What with the lying criticisms in the trade journals, unscrupulous salesmen, fictitious values put on pictures by the exchanges, there is surely a job in front of the exhibitor. Until we all play fair—fair with ourselves, fair with the people—we are going to have a hard time getting organized on a basis that will perpetuate the moving picture business.

If the exchange will play fair with me, I am not afraid of what I can do here at home, but I want the goods that I order, not shoddy when I am paying all wool prices; and when I advertise all wool goods I don't like to give my patrons shoddy. Can't the producers see that the success of the exhibitor is their success? If they want to help, just give us pictures, we'll do the rest. It's our business to give the people what they want. We are trying to build for the future as well as for the present. Can't the producer see that too?

Has Met Three Fair Salesmen.

During my picture experience there has been just three salesmen whose words have come to mean something to me. When they say: "its a bear," I grab it. I know they are square. I know they are coming back to see if I made good. They have an interest in my welfare, in that of their company. They believe in looking up. They don't insist that every picture they have is a "knock 'em dead" proposition for me. They talk sense. They give a local man credit for knowing something about local conditions. But I know what they tell me is good stuff because it is straight. First National has one of these men. That is why I like First National. They seem to be building on a foundation that will not wash away with selfishness. They want to play fair.

True values behind your advertising is just as essential in the movie business as it is in the mercantile game. If you can show a consistent value on the screen, your advertising is going to get results, but advertise three features, two of which are nothing more or less than lemons, and your advertising means nothing to the public. Let the trade journals, press reviews, the producers' own press stuff reflect his spirit of fairness, and then let the exhibitor play fair with his people and the picture game is due for an era of unheard of prosperity. And the place to begin this clean-up is at the bottom. Let's go.

By Fred J. Dolle

President, Broadway Amusement Company, Louisville, Ky., Owners of the Four Downtown and Six Suburban Houses in Louisville.

THE step that has been taken by the First National Exhibitors Circuit to restrict its advertising to those trade journals which have given proof by genuine service that they are a help to the motion picture industry is one that should be a matter of congratulation to everybody who is interested in the development of the motion picture business along well regulated lines.

One great difficulty that our business has to contend with grows out of its vast size and its wonderful, rapid growth. That difficulty is the tendency to become too diffuse. Covering the entire country in its scope and enlisting capital in such enormous amounts there has been a natural temptation to those who are looking for easy money to rush into the motion picture field in one way or another. One of the favorite ways of going after this easy money has been to start a motion picture journal or to attach a motion picture department to some publication that could show any excuse for invading the field.

Locusts of the Film Business.

There is no limit to the number of these publications that can spring up. They are like a swarm of locusts that will devour the harvest and give nothing in return. Already they have increased in numbers until it has become impossible for a business man to give time to read them. Many of them do not justify themselves as news publications, nor do they carry any message to the motion picture exhibitor, nor succeed in any way in the task of developing the great motion picture industry to the point of a perfected business organization with a tried and tested system and with the high standards of business conduct and lofty ideals for public service, which should be the aim of us all.

The First National has taken the first positive action towards checking this harmful condition which is at best a nuisance and which, I think, can justly be called an evil because it is so wasteful and carries such a tendency to bad practice. The motion picture industry should recognize and accept only the journals that depend on their merits for their success and consequent prosperity. These journals should serve as beacon lights and should illuminate every course that must be followed by the moving picture industry in seeking its full development. They should be free from every influence that would hamper them in this duty.

With more publications in the field than it can properly sustain, there will be constant tendency on the part of those who find it difficult to get along to become mere press agent sheets, taking their cue from every proposition that comes up from their advertising management. As these publications necessarily cut into the funds that are available for the support and encouragement of the real trade journals they make it more difficult for the deserving publications to earn the reward to which they are entitled. Thus, their chief effect is to lower the standard of motion picture trade journals.

Make Clear Stream Muddy.

Even this is not their most baleful effect. They muddy the streams of information which should flow clear and unpolluted. They pour into them such a mass of prejudice and subsidized stuff that the exhibitor or anyone in the motion picture business who is seeking facts and truthful opinions finds it difficult to get a clear view in this turbulent stream.

I am glad the First National has decided to make a selection of trade journals that are worthy mediums and has shown the courage to face the attacks that will come from the disappointed seekers of advertising.

By C. W. Hartman

Manager, Garrick Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

I AM against the practice of gross extravagance in advertising and I am heartily in favor of the policy of the First National Exhibitors Circuit as regards trade journal advertising. I believe in publicity—all kinds of it. I think that a good press notice is worth a meal ticket to the manager for whom it is written. Every bit of notice and publicity a theatre can get, if it's favorable, will work out to the advantage of that theatre. In our local papers here I don't care a snap, lots of times, for the advertising. What I want is the reading matter that goes with it. But I've never yet done any advertising or wanted any publicity from papers that didn't amount to much and that didn't tell the truth in their news and editorial columns.

Local Situation of Vital Consequence.

The more I've thought about it, the more it has interested me when I consider that the judgment of a manager is mainly responsible for a full house or a blow-up. A theatre manager reads the trade journals and mentally notices each of the advertisements that appeal to him. He considers just what sort of show he operates, what kind of persons attend his show, what they like. Are his audiences made up mostly of stenographers? Or are thousands of the "four hundred" his chief patrons? All this passes through his mind before he books a picture. When I see an advertisement, a title with it that sounds good, a locally popular star, and all-round classy exploitation, I begin asking myself: "To whom will that picture appeal? Will it please the working classes as well as the 'elite'? Will it be in the favor of the Governor's lady as well as the maid?" If the picture answers these requirements, then I book it.

I can find the new releases all included in the five leading trade journals. I haven't the time to read all the trade journals that come my way. They come to me from all sides. I sometimes feel that I would be able, should I take a week off, to read all of the trade journals that collect about me in a few days. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if upon investigation it were found that some of the so-called trade journals with four or eight-page motion picture departments were given away.

Truth in News Columns Essential.

I heartily agree with Mr. Sievers, of Missouri, and I believe that the Moving Picture World is undertaking a fine movement to start a discussion on this most important subject. I am firm in my conviction that Mr. Sievers expresses the sentiment of thousands of exhibitors when he says that "Three things that are demanded of the trade journals selected are: they must be the recognized leaders; they must be devoted exclusively to the motion picture industry; they must be publications, the news columns and editorials of which are not influenced by advertising." Personally I think the last qualification which Mr. Sievers names is the most important—the one regarding the truthfulness of the news and editorial columns. If exhibitors were assured that what they read in the trade journals is absolutely true, it would lessen their worry about fifty per cent. As the matter stands now, an exhibitor can take the word of a news item in some indifferent trade journal and get an idea that he was buying a world beater. And yet—twenty minutes after he has flashed his buy on the screen he sees what a lemon he has picked. But what can be done? He has rented the film because he took the word of a news item in a trade publication. He has already made his advertising spread. The people will come to see the picture. Who is the loser? It is the exhibitor, of course. The folks to whom he has promised a knockout find out that they have been misled and lured into a show which the manager grossly pretended to be extraordinary, but which was really nothing unusual or perhaps inferior. They will mentally decide that henceforth they will patronize a theatre where the advertising is at least honest, even though the picture is not anything wonderful.

Exhibitors Must Keep Patrons' Faith.

I believe the action of the First National Exhibitors Circuit will be very popular in that it will enable the exhibitors to keep faith with their patrons. No matter what the exhibitor has to pay for a film, the motion picture public will have to repay him. Therefore, is it a matter of fair play for a company to squander money in advertising that will be slow in coming back from the public?

Mr. Sievers is right. A time for a "weeding out" is here. The motion picture game will prosper and grow bigger and grander as long as we cultivate it correctly. There is a way to save money in advertising pictures. Those who follow the lead of the First National Exhibitors Circuit strike a blow for better movies.

By Floyd Stuart

Manager, Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

I BELIEVE that the policy of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit regarding trade journal advertising is the system to which every film company must logically come if the business is to be conducted on a wise plane.

I wish the advertisers could see the mess of would-be trade journals on my overladen desk. There are three books in the accumulation that I am going to read. The rest will be thrown in the waste basket. Thank goodness the circulation departments of most of those journals don't send us stamps like the amateur writers of scenarios do. We have to stamp up the blamed scenarios, but I am certainly happy that we can just dump the superfluous trade journals in the waste basket and let 'em rot there.

Every wise theatre man knows that the way to sell pictures is to advertise them in magazines that are devoted strictly to the moving picture business.

No Appeal in Theatrical Magazine.

I want to declare absolutely against the belief of many producers and distributors that any theatrical magazine is a good bet for moving picture men. Those journals which depend upon all kinds of theatrical lines for their existence are thought of by all sober minded exhibitors as merely "ways of sinking ad money."

Of course, if the plan is to see how much money you can spend, regardless of how, I would say that it's all right to go ahead and stick your ad into everything with space to print it. If you want to think along that idiotic line, go right ahead and put the ads into the church weeklies and the country papers. It's a fine way to lose money—or rather, waste it.

I don't draw my statements from any radical ideas or prejudices against any of the trade journals. I know whereof I speak because I have talked hundreds of times with many of the managers of other houses and exhibitors whom I have the pleasure of knowing. Practically all of them are of the same opinion. They agree or rather they complain, that so many different trade journals are thrown and scattered broadcast at them that they are becoming disgusted with the situation. Lots of people think that a theatre manager is an idle type. There are the ones who naturally think that the more advertising a picture receives the more notice it will get from a theatre manager. But this is all wrong.

Managers Strive for Expediency.

The live theatre manager nowadays is trying to conserve. The end of the war didn't stop conservation among the theatre managers of this country, the live ones at any rate. They're as busy as ever. They're trying to decide matters with as much efficiency and quickness as possible. There's always plenty to occupy their attention. And when I tell you that half of the moving picture theatre managers in this nation today don't read but three or at most four of the trade journals, I'm telling you the gospel truth.

By George Westfall

Owner of the Gem, Gainesville, Mo.

I AM an exhibitor in a town of less than 1,000 inhabitants and have only three shows a week—but I take three of the leading trade journals. And I have read Mr. Sievers' statement about the trade journal advertising policy of First National Exhibitors Circuit and want to back him up.

I depend on the trade journals for all my attractions and therefore don't take any chances on reading articles about pictures that are elaborated on or influenced by advertising. I did not always live in "the sticks" and know something of the ways of man. Although I don't get "first run" pictures I could not get along without my journals.

By H. M. Thomas

Manager Rialto Theatre, Omaha.

I HAVE been reading with a lot of interest the comments on the First National's plan of confining its advertising to the trade to five papers, dealing solely with motion pictures. I manage the Rialto Theatre at Omaha, Neb.,—the largest, newest and best moving picture theatre in Omaha—and I take a leading interest in all movements among film men here. I keep in close touch with the film game. I am a part of the game. With your permission, I'd like to air a few of my views on the subject of advertising for the benefit of the exhibitor.

Unfortunately, my life is short. I feel I cannot logically expect to live more than 100 years longer. My days, also unfortunately, contain only twenty-four hours, and my hours—yours may be different—are limited to sixty minutes each. I feel that I am greatly mistreated in regard to the little time I have, but that is neither here nor there.

Can Read Just So Much.

What is important is that I, one of the thousands of exhibitors, am one of those for whose benefit the producers and the distributors advertise. Since my time is so brief, I can read only so much. I'd like to read every magazine that has a page or two of moving picture information, but I can't. I'd like to play hide-and-go-seek looking through those magazines, seeking out the elusive little bits of moving picture information, but I can't. I am unusually unfortunate, you see, because I haven't enough time.

From where I sit, Mr. Editor, I can see a roomy table over at one side of my office. Heaped up on that table are piles of magazines. Count 'em. One, two, three, four, and five. Did you say there might be five magazines? I see only four—then a pile of miscellaneous magazines. That pile of miscellaneous magazines is the pile that I, some day, am going to read through. Just as soon as I can find thirty hours in a day, I am going to read through that pile of magazines.

Four Piles Are Well Thumbed.

Look closely and you will see the pages of the magazines making up the other four piles are well-thumbed. I read those trade papers. Yes, yours is among 'em. Each day I eat at least one meal. Regularly I shave. Regularly I enter my office. Regularly I pay bills. Just as regularly, once a week, I read those four trade papers. I read 'em from kiver to kiver. I dig deep into 'em. I read of a showmanship stunt and picture that stunt in my house. I read all the news, all the stories, and then I read the ads. I wouldn't pass up the ads for anything. I'd almost rather read those ads than to eat. They are that interesting to me.

Human beings have made great progress in flying, but it can't be compared to their progress in writing moving picture advertisements. We found some new ideas during the war, just past, but for every such idea the moving picture ad writers found several. Motion picture photography has advanced considerably since I first knew it; but its advancement is nothing, as compared to the advancement in writing moving picture advertisements. I try to keep up. I write some new ideas in my advertisements, myself. Guy Leavitt, your correspondent here, has made me pretty widely known by writing up some of the new ideas I have used. I am glad to give them to the trade papers. Maybe someone else can use 'em.

Reads Four and Is Through.

But when I finish reading those four papers from cover to cover, I am through. Besides, all my time is up. I'd like to get down the family album and look at it, but I can't. I have taken up all my time reading those trade papers. I'd like to read the Saturday Evening Post and see in advance some of the stories which will be told in pictures I will show some day. But how can I? I use all my time reading the four papers.

Then I get the extras. Maybe the ushers would read 'em. Maybe they'll have time. Anyway, I haven't time. I can't find time to read the extras. They do me no good.

I'm not even saying it is a waste of money for our producers and distributors to use them, and that that money might better be put into production. I don't want to get off the track. I just wanted to mention that I am sorry I haven't time, and I don't believe any other busy exhibitor has time, to read more than the honest-to-goodness trade papers.

I like a zebra in a circus parade and I sometimes, when it is real hot, order a half-and-half at the lunch counter (half milk and half cream—a-ha!) but I don't favor zebras in the moving picture magazine field. Barber pole newspapers, part one thing and part another, do not satisfy the craving I have. I used to like to play hide-and-go-seek, but that was before I got so old and so busy and time got so short.

I'm going to read what others keep on having to say.

May you have success, say I; and if there's any little thing I can do to help the good ship along, just toot the whistle.

FINDS SOUTH READY FOR BIG THINGS

Sales Manager S. J. Rollo of Exhibitors Mutual Back from Trip Sees Dixie Assured of Lasting Prosperity

DESPITE the demobilization of troops in the cantonments and the stopping of work in shipyards, business is great through the whole South and exhibitors are confident of the most prosperous spring and summer in the history of motion pictures.

This was the message brought back to New York by S. J. Rollo, sales manager of Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation, who returned early this week from a flying visit to Exhibitors Mutual branches, through which Robertson-Cole subjects are issued.

"The South never had so much money as it has now," he said, "and the impetus which the war gave to Southern business has increased instead of decreased in momentum. They say the old South is gone forever, and that the new South will rival the North in prosperity and enterprise.

"Every exhibitor I met is full of confidence. Some have suffered a little, but not as much as they expected to suffer. There is talk of new theatres in all the larger cities of the South and unless there is a set-back of unexpected proportions the next year will see under construction some motion picture palaces which will rival the cinema temples of the Pacific Coast.

"My trip was largely to look over our exchanges in the South in company with S. T. Stephens, Southern supervisor of exchanges, but I took the opportunity to meet exhibitors in all the cities I visited."

World Will Distribute Houdini in Many States

WITH the announcement of World Pictures taking over the Houdini serial, "The Master Mystery," for California, Nevada, Northern Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, a radical departure from its accustomed policy of never handling a serial has been made.

World pictures took over the distribution of this serial only after a large number of reports came into the home office from the exchange managers of the World Film Corporation in which they spoke of the box office value of the Houdini serial. It was stated that it was cleaning up. The executives of the World began to make inquiry as to the possibility of securing the distribution of "The Master Mystery" for all territory still open, only after the closest investigation into what the picture is doing.

When B. A. Rolfe, president of Octagon Flms, Inc., who produced the Houdini serial, was approached by World officials, he, knowing the reputation of the sales organization of the World, was inclined to give a favorable hearing to the proposition put before him. All details were arranged within twenty-four hours and the exchange managers of the territory indicated above were notified that World Pictures would give them a chance to show just what the company could do in making a record for serial distribution.

Expect Spring Releases of Hodkinson To Be Well Ahead

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation will be five months ahead of the customary time that the larger motion picture organizations begin their annual releasing season, when on April 20, it inaugurates a series of spring and all-summer big productions for the Allied Companies, whose pictures are distributed in the United States under the Hodkinson imprint through the Pathe branches. Most producers and distributors wait until mid-September to begin the calendar releasing year and in past years much of the summer dullness in the motion picture theatres perhaps has been directly traceable to the producers' unwillingness to risk releasing big, pretentious pictures during July or August. For this summer the most accurate reports obtainable from every section of the United States indicate a period of unprecedented patronage.

Harry Raver's production of Augustus Thomas' New York stage success, "As a Man Thinks," starring Leah Baird and directed by George Irving, will be released everywhere April 20. This is the first of the previously announced Four-Star pictures.

On May 4 Jesse D. Hampton presents a J. Warren Kerrigan picture, a secret service melodrama of action and mystery, "The Best Man," from the story by Grave Livingston Hill Lutz.

The Zane Grey story, "Desert Gold," is now being completed in California and the Colorado desert by Zane Grey's own company for release either two or four weeks after May 4.

Another producing unit about which announcement is to be made separately has completed Stewart Edward White's "The Westerners," under the direction of Edward Sloman. This production will have an early summer release.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Spring, the Well - Known Season, Hits Los Angeles, Bringing Monkey Business 'n' Everything

By Giebler

IT is Springtime, Gentle Annie, Springtime in Filmland. This announcement should have been made two or three weeks ago, but other important matters caused it to be overlooked.

We are sorry, because if Spring were not officially announced many of the recent arrivals from the East would not know that Winter had gone and Spring had come.

The usual signs of Spring observed in other sections do not obtain here on the west coast. We are not awakened at the first crack of dawn by the song of the pewee singing at our casement. Our birds do not sing any sweeter in the Spring than at other seasons. Neither do we walk in the wildwood and observe the violet and the skunk cabbage, those earliest of eastern flowers poking their heads from the blanket of dead leaves that sheltered them all winter.

Who Do the Native Sons Blow?

Our flowers, like our native sons, blow all the year round, and besides, we have no wildwood, it has all been staked off and sold to tourists for bungalow sites.

Those of us who have abided here for any length of time know when Spring is here because the rains give way to fogs, which give us the snuffles. The Spring earthquake shakes us up, the Jap gardener shakes us down for new vegetables, and summer squash makes its appearance on the boarding house tables.

Press Agents' Poetic Prose, Too.

These are the old reliable signs, and in addition to them we have other harbingers just as reliable. The chromatic scale of Harry Northrup's ties; the wide smile that wreathes the countenance of Wellington Wales; Bennie Zeidman's lamblike friskiness; Kenneth McGaffey's new pipe; Pat Dowling's new car.

Bill Russell blows in from Santa Barbara for sessions with sundry tailors and haberdashers; Sam Comly's mustache shows signs of growth; Mary Pickford has another birthday.

We are glad Spring is here. Optimism is in the air. A feverish activity permeates the colony; the day is not long enough. Even the editor of Rubbernecking feels the elixir of life surging through his sclerotic system and bumps himself into doing three studios in one week and one of them on a dark and stormy night.

Sennett Girls Not There That Night.

It was nine p.m. when I got to the Mack Sennett studios, where Richard Jones was making a comedy. Yes, the same Dick Jones that directed "Mickey," and "Yankee Doodle in Berlin"; the same Dick Jones that comes from Missouri, the home of the corncob pipe, bevo, catfish and geniuses.

I don't know the name of the comedy Dick was making. I've quit asking the names of plays I see on the fire because when I have heralded their titles far and wide through my eagerly read dope, the producers go and call them something else.

Jones Has Good Comedy Company.

Jones had a good company. There were Chester Conklin, Jimmy Finlayson, who came over from Scotland with the "Bunty Pulls the String" company a year or so ago and liked it so well that he stayed; Billy Armstrong, Marie Prevost, Harry Christensen, wrestler and strong man, and his many times wrestling partner, Kala Pasha; Katherine Mineau, and Jack Ackroyd, who has just returned from a three years' engagement in the big drama overseas, with medals and scars and stirring tales.

We had a pleasant and profitable evening, and I am not trying to cast aspersions on a band of hard working comedians when I say that the whole time was devoted to monkey business.

Does Monkey Business Pay?

One of the leading players in the comedy was Pancho, a monkey. Pancho was cast for an elopement with Kitty, a daughter of that famous feline of the films, Mrs. Pepper, and owing to the camera shyness of the cat, and the inability of Pancho to take things seriously, it required the greatest patience and the utmost perseverance to get the proper dramatic effect to the work of these two players.

Any one who has had the rare privilege of sticking around a comedy studio when the wheels are turning knows that some of the funniest stuff does not get into the picture. This evening was no exception.

And Pancho Hangs By His Tail.

The action of the comedy required Pancho to have two tails—and thereby hangs a tale, and before we go any further we must pause and speak a few kind words for the property room at the studio, for the fact that Pancho's tail was to play a dual role was not written down in the scenario. It was just a happy thought, born on the spur of the moment.

A property room is called upon to produce some queer things. I never knew that they kept an assortment of animal tails on tap, but no sooner had the request been made than here came the prop room a-running with a perfectly good monkey tail that they had been keeping packed away in the cedar chest, apparently for just such an occasion.

Pancho's real tail, a particularly long and handsome one, was wound around his body and hidden by the neat little ready-made suit of clothes he was to wear in his part, then the tail that was to double for his natural caudal appendage was fastened onto the suit at the proper place, and all was well.

The Tale of the Tail.

That is, all was well until Pancho caught sight of the tail. It was a good tail—that is, pretty good. It might have had a few moth-eaten spots on it here and there, but we all thought it looked fine.

Pancho looked at the tail in astonishment, then he made a few remarks. We thought he was bawling somebody out for not sending the tail to a dry cleaner's before he was asked to wear it, but a second or so later we realized that we did not understand money language as well as we thought we did, and also that we did not reckon on the shortness of a monkey's memory.

Which One of These Occupations of Hale Hamilton Would You Prefer.

Naomi Childers is the flower-witch on the right, and both scenes are from their forthcoming Metro, "After His Own Heart." Address your replies to the above question to our own Department of Labor.

Pancho's Fickle Tail.

Pancho had forgotten what had been done with his regular tail, and thought the one stretched out on the floor was his own. He tried to move the tail. Monkeys use their tails the same as they do their feet, and when that monk put the muscles in play that had heretofore made his tail one of the most tractable members of his make-up, and the darn thing laid there on the floor with not so much as a wiggle, he was the most puzzled Simian in the world.

He talked some more, then he took a few steps, and the tail followed obediently, but it was not coming along with the usual speed. He decided to investigate, and started to pick up the tail. There was no feeling in it, and he dropped it as if it had been a hot coal. He made a big jump, but he couldn't get away from it; old Mr. Tail went right along behind.

He Took a Little Bite.

Pancho took hold of it again, determined to fathom the mystery. He shook the tail; he pinched it; he even took a little bite of it. This was the last test. It did not taste like a monkey tail at all! He made a terrible face.

Pancho was done. His once beautiful tail would be a drag on him all through life instead of a helpful member; it would be like a mortgage—like a mother-in-law. Pancho grew voluble. He cursed the movies—comedy movies—and all things connected therewith.

"Can't you shoot your old pictures without taking all the pep out of some poor monkey's tail? Where do you get that stuff? What in the name of Darwin do you mean by it?"

And then the poor little old man broke down and cried, and somehow it didn't seem so funny after all.

A Different Tale.

The next day I went out to the Lasky lot and talked to Adam Hull Shirk, chief of the publicity bureau, and Kennth McGaffey, who used to be chief of the publicity bureau, but who is now putting subtle stuff in sub-titles.

I wandered out on the stages and found Donald Crisp directing Bryant Washburn in "A Very Good Young Man," with Helen Jerome Eddy, Anna Q. Nilsson, and Helene Chadwick as support, and listened to Donald's tale of the trip he took with Rex Beach down in the Gulf of California, where they went looking for wild adventure.

Donald says there are cannibals down there, and just before they arrived the man eaters had caught a lot of fishermen and put them in a stew, and that he and Rex Beach were shot at by the savages on two or three occasions.

Donald's Crisp Whiskers Gone.

Donald developed a severe case of whiskers while he was gone and still bore traces of the attack on his chin when I saw him. Otherwise he was all right and none the worse for his harrowing experiences.

Over on another stage Hugh Ford was making William Gillette's "Secret Service," set to the films by Beulah Marie Dix, with Captain Robert Warwick in the leading role.

This is Captain Warwick's first play since coming back from the war, where he spent a year.

Cactus 'n' Everythin' in "Desert Gold."

After Lasky's, I went over to the Brunton plant and watched T. Hayes Hunter direct a scene for Zane Grey's "Desert Gold," in one of the best built-up sets I have ever seen.

The set represented the patio of a ranch house in the desert country and was most complete and most realistic. It was a bit too realistic in spots. I refer to one particular spot near a fountain where a cactus had been set to lend atmosphere and action to the scene. If everyone who passed got as much action as I did when I passed the spot, the idea was good—distinctly good.

Van Campen Heilner, the assistant director, told me that Hunter and several of the players, after going through two weeks of desert location, where they bearded the cactus in its native lair with perfect safety, came to conclusions with the plants on the stage and had to have stickers picked out of their persons.

Enter Eddie Lincoln.

The other end of the set was decorated with Eileen Percy in a hammock, pretending to be asleep, and E. K. Lincoln, who tried to kiss her but did not because it was written down in the story that Eileen was to wake up before the actual osculation took place.

There were a lot of other players in the piece—Margery Wilson, who wore boots and had to come into the scene and weep as soon as Mr. Lincoln and Miss Percy got through with their almost kissing stuff; Edward Coxen and W. Lawson Butt, and Russell Simpson, who I seem to meet in almost every studio I visit—great demand for Russ these days—Arthur Morrison, Walter Long, William H. Bainbridge, who is a poet as well as an actor, and an active member of the local Verse Writers Club; Frank Lanning, Frank Brownlee and Laura Winston, and Abe Schultz, and A. L. Todd at the cameras.

New Des Moines Theatre Is Held Up Willy-Nilly

WITH a strike of all building trades on in Des Moines the completion of the New Des Moines theatre is held up and there is considerable conjecture about how soon it will be completed although scheduled for opening about May 1. A. H. Blank and others interested in the theatre offered to accede to the demands of the unions and pay the new scale in order to get the building done, but the labor heads have refused to treat with individual firms, and not until all master builders sign up on the new scale in every department from masons to interior decorators will building be resumed.

It was thought for a time that picture operators might be included in the strike out of sympathy with the electricians. In this respect local theatres would have nothing to fear as Messrs. Burgum, Day, Metzger and O'Hare at the Garden, Palace, Rialto and Majestic theatres respectively are first class operators and shows would go on just the same. The danger of the operators being included in the strike has passed now, according to their business agent. Meanwhile Blank and his associates with thousands of dollars of materials on hand ready to finish up the big new house are waiting.

How Prizma Films Are Made and Why They Are Practical

IN its issue of February 1, 1918, the British Journal of Photography said "We have still to wait for the ideal color film which can be bought all complete by the yard and inserted for projection into the standard cinematograph lantern."

Prizma color films answer this description and project at the same speed as the black and white films, without attachments or alterations of any kind to the usual projection machine.

The negatives are made on panchromatic emulsion, that is sensitive to all colors and is developed in total darkness.

Each area of a Prizma color positive film is practically complete in colors and may be viewed in the hand as well as on the screen. The material used is a celluloid base coated with a sensitive emulsion on each side. It is first printed with a design and treated, after which all of the pictures representing the greens and blues are printed on one side. On the opposite side all of the pictures representing red and orange are printed. The reds and greens are in register opposite one another and the same applies to the oranges and blues. After development and further chemical treatments the images appear in their natural colors and are ready for projection.

Prizma May Be Rapidly Made.

While this description appears to require a great number of operations, it is in practice rapidly executed. So far as the time consumed in making a Prizma color film is concerned, such films have been made from the negative to the projecting positive in a day.

Examined under a microscope or close to a projecting screen, the images appear to be in black, with color passing through the grays and whites. This is due to the fact that the images are in minute sections and what appears as white on the screen is not white at all, but instead is a series of designs. White light, if separated into its several parts, is composed of red, green and blue light, and conversely if one combines red, green and blue lights from three lanterns so that all of the colors fall together on the curtain one will not see color—but, instead, white. If complementary lights composed of red-orange for one color element and green-blue as the other color element are used and they are blended together over one another on the curtain, white will result.

The same applies to Prizma color films. What appears as white—a white lily for example—is composed of these five elements of color, so minute in size that at the distance from which one views the pictures, they appear as white.

Farnum Recovers from Operation.

As a result of an affection caused by his strenuous outdoor work in speaking in the various Liberty Loan and war welfare work campaigns, William Farnum recently underwent an operation for the removal of his tonsils, at the Clara Barton Hospital in Los Angeles. Mr. Farnum has now completely recovered and is at work on "The Lone Star Ranger," the story of which was written by Zane Grey.

FIRST NATIONAL TO MEET MONDAY

Franchise Owners and Their Exchange Managers to Hold Joint Convention of Co-ordinated Effort—Board of Directors to Announce New Contracts

TWENTY-SIX of the largest theatre owners and operators in the United States will convene in New York City next Monday as members of the First National Exhibitors Circuit. The occasion will be the second annual meeting of the franchise owners of the Circuit.

Simultaneously the managers of the twenty-six First National exchanges, owned and operated by these exhibitors, will hold their first annual convention in New York.

Both conventions will be held at the Hotel Astor, which, for the week beginning Monday, April 21, will be First National's official headquarters.

Plans for the meeting of the exhibitor-members of the Circuit include the announcement, by the Board of Directors for 1918-1919, of new contracts recently entered into by First National.

Form of Co-ordinated Effort.

The joint convention of franchise owners and their exchange managers is a form of co-ordinated effort without precedent in the operation of a distributing or exhibiting organization. Plans made by the members for the purchase and release of productions will be referred to the convention of exchange managers, where the commercial problems concerning them will be debated and uniform sales campaigns adopted for the distribution of the releases.

In several instances the franchise owners will be accompanied by men associated with them in their respective theatre enterprises, and who, by virtue of their financial and executive interests in the exhibiting activities of these members, are directly interested in First National.

A number of the branch managers will be present with their assistants and leading salesmen, to whom the trip to New York will mark their first visit to the home offices of the Circuit.

Past Year Proves Plan's Value.

It was just a year ago that the first annual meeting of the stockholders of the original exhibitors' co-operative organization was held in New York. This was less than a year after the formation of First National by J. D. Williams, its manager. Up to the time of its initial membership assembly the Circuit had made comparatively few releases. Its announced policy of "big special feature attractions only, distributed on the open market system," had found slight favor among the stars and producers. Charlie Chaplin was the first of the more popular stars to recognize its value as the true test of ability, and as a fair and equitable booking method for the exhibitors. His first special, "A Dog's Life," was presented at the Strand Theatre, New York, the week of the first annual meeting. The box office receipts for the seven days gave the members ample justification for their confidence in the policy which they advocated as exhibitors, and for the promotion of which they had obligated themselves financially.

To Negotiate for More Stars.

Authorization was given the Board of Directors to proceed with negotiations for contracts for the productions of other stars, to be marketed through the Circuit on an independent basis. Within the year First National has released through the theatres operated by its members "Tarzan of the Apes," "My Four Years In Germany," "Italy's Flaming Front," "The Romance of Tarzan," three additional features starring Madame Petrova, "Our Teddy" and "Whom the Gods Would Destroy," in addition to signing distributing agreements with stars that have given First National the second Chaplin production, "Shoulder Arms," two of the series of special Anita Stewart attractions, "Virtuous Wives" and "A Midnight Romance."

One of the most widely commented activities of the Circuit was its contract with Mary Pickford for three special feature productions. The first of these, "Daddy Long Legs," will be released very soon. This was followed by a contract with Norma Talmadge for twelve specials, and an arrangement with Jack Pickford for three features.

Announcement of the other contracts recently signed will be made to the members at the meetings next week.

Chief of the official tasks confronting the stockholders is the election of a Board of Directors for 1919-1920 and the discussion of plans for extension of the Circuit's interests during the coming year.

Those Who Will Be There.

First National members who will be present are Fred Dahnken, T. L. Tally, J. H. Kunsky, E. H. Hulsey, J. D. Williams, Adolph Linick, E. V. Richards, E. I. Church, Fred Levy, Thos. Saxe, A. J. Gillingham, Jacob Fabian, A. J. Jones, Robert Lieber, H. T. Nolan, J. B. Clark, Max Speigel, E. B. Johnson, Moe Mark, F. V. Fischer, W. P. Dewees, Tom Moore, N. H. Gordon, M. L. Finkelstein, T. H. Boland, H. Schwalbe, E. M. Mandelbaum, W. H. Swanson, A. H. Blank, Nathan Asher, Henry Brouse, T. E. Larson, Frank Ferrandini, Wm. Sievers, P. J. Schaefer, R. A. Rowland, and A. Freedman.

Branch managers who will be in attendance at the convention of First National exchange executives include B. Cunningham, Floyd Brown, A. C. Seery, Harry Scott, L. Bickel, Harry Weiss, W. J. Heenan, W. E. Lusk, A. Cubberly, Thomas B. Spry, Jack Brainard, E. M. Asher, C. J. Briant, R. H. Clark, L. D. Balsly, M. Johnson, J. S. Skirboll, J. H. Ashby, W. E. Knotts, J. P. Anderson, C. R. Beachman, J. J. Unger, Lee L. Goldberg, S. S. Schwarz, H. J. Fitzgerald, S. J. Baker, C. E. Holuh, and A. B. Knox.

Marion Davies Buys An Aeroplane.

Marion Davies has purchased an aeroplane for practical use, and she will begin taking lessons on it in Staten Island under Katherine Stinson, the famous aviatrix, just back from war work. The plane was purchased recently from George D. Grundy, owner of the Lexington Theatre, New York City, and the Staten Island Bungalow Colony.

Stunts That Lead to the Bughouse.

WE speak in defense of the exhibitor—who we like better to call the picture showman. He is suffering from a superabundance of "stunts." At least he would suffer public condemnation if he tried for only one week to provide a "stunt" for each of the six or seven times he changed his bill.

"Stunts" are wished on him from many and varied sources—with the press-book always doing its share. And such "stunts!"

Here is one we clip from the press-book supplied by one of our program distributors to "put over" a feature that boasts:

Jungle Atmosphere.

"Set up the jungle atmosphere at your front door. Convert your ticket booth into a grass hut of the crude style of the huts of African natives. (Stills of the production will give you the clue to this).

"Cover the floor with reeds or corn husks and set rubber plants and potted flowers in the corners.

"Spears, bows and arrows, shields made of skins, mounted heads of wild animals and the skins of animals hung on the walls will give added 'color' to the display.

"Negro boys or men, clothed in breechcloths, would make suitable ushers and the effectiveness of their employment would be enhanced if they carried spears.

"They might even engage in a spear-throwing contest just before the picture was shown. Of course, in this event, they should be brought onto the stage yelling and dancing like wild men."

Where in Fremont, Neb., can Wall Brothers get this routine of requisites?

And what of the houses where usherettes are employed?

And that mad dash onto the stage!

"Yelling and dancing like wild men."

In which the audience might join.

Oh———well; what's the use!

WE GET IT from the very clever wordsmith who publicizes "The Carter Case" that Margaret Marsh, to "endure unflinchingly the strenuous punishment" she must undergo during the progress of the serial, is taking athletic lessons—such as boxing, wrestling, et cet and ad lib. Read on:

"Special interest attaches to the fact that Miss Marsh's preceptor in the vigorous art of athletic resistance is the most desperate and ferocious of the emissaries who attacks she suffers on the screen. It is said on no less authority than the Bible that the lion shall gambol with the lamb.

"But the spectacle of the lion's teaching the lamb the very tricks which will enable the feeble beauty to withstand the dastardly attacks of the beast is a novel and unique extension of the Biblical promise."

"I can't," replied the lad, "dad might not like it."

"Oh! shucks, come on," said Hap. Finally the boy got in and started for the garage, protesting all the time that his dad would be mad. While waiting at the garage for the tow-car, Hap suggested a cup of coffee, but the boy said:

"I just know dad won't like it."

Hap turned to the kid and asked him why his dad would be mad and why wouldn't his dad like it.

"Let's Go!"

THE National Prosperity Campaign, with headquarters in the Commodore Hotel, New York, has adopted the slogan "Let's Go!" For some weeks that has been the thought behind the men who lead the motion picture industry. These men have been going, going ahead and strongly. They have been building new houses, they have been renovating old ones. They have been getting ready for the business they see not only ahead of them, but directly in front of their houses. Producers have lost no time in so ordering their affairs that they will be equipped to meet the big push when it arrives; many believe that already it is here.

Even if it has pre-adopted as its own the action implied by "Let's Go!" the industry welcomes the efforts of leaders of other lines of trade to drive home the fact that the volume of business is increasing. The film industry becomes one spoke in the great wheel driving steadily toward good times, work aplenty and good wages.

By all means, "Let's Go!"

Exhibitors Forum Comes to Close

WITH this week's issue we print the final installment of the letters written by exhibitors in favor of the stand assumed by First National in limiting its trade advertising to straight motion picture publications. It has been an illuminating discussion. Few of the motion picture showmen have felt themselves under any obligation strictly to adhere to the basic theme. They have gone afield. They have talked about trade papers in general and what in their opinion went to the making of good ones. They have given utterance to opinions that may be read with profit by those who edit trade papers as well as by those who make and exploit films.

But are five trade papers really necessary? In glancing over the letters as they apear in the World today, we find in the first two an expression of opinion to the effect that the writers are dubious as to the usefulness of five. W. T. (Bill) Yoder, manager of the Pathe Exchange of Dallas, says he is not quite sure whether five are not too many. Lou Bissinger, manager of the Washington Theatre of the same city, declares he doesn't know many exhibitors who have time to read five publications.

H. P. Thompson, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis., talks about national advertising and unfair salesmen, among other subjects of interest. "During my picture experience there have been just three salesmen whose words have come to mean something to me," he declares. "When they say, 'It's a bear,' I grab it. I know they are square."

The producers may care to have something to say regarding the many points the exhibitors have raised in the columns of Moving Picture World during the last month. Our columns are open to them. In any event, the discussion has been one of the most interesting in the history of the trade. We repeat: It has been illuminating for the producer, the trade press makers and the exhibitors.

Are You All Set for the Victory Loan?

APRIL 21 is the date set for the beginning of the campaign for the Victory Loan. This will be the last of the great national outpourings of wealth. The four others were to make possible the winning of the war. The present loan is designed to clinch the results obtained by American soldiers in the field. The interest the Government will pay has been raised to 4¾ per cent., an attractive figure, if we may borrow a phrase from the marketplace. If men and women and children will in war time subscribe and oversubscribe to loans bearing 4¼ per cent., why should not a peace time—a Victory—loan at 4¾ per cent. quickly be snapped up? Surely it is due to the men living and dead who have shed their blood that this be done.

The Passing of Sidney Drew

IT is going to be a difficult matter to fill the place that was occupied on the screen by the late Sidney Drew. An accomplished comedian, his sole mission in connection with the moving picture was to make his public laugh. He accomplished this commendable purpose with an originality of method, deftness of execution and wholesomeness of effect that made his characterization of the delightfully human Henry and the pictures in which he appeared with his talented wife warmly welcomed in every grade of screen theatre.

The list of Drew comedies is a long one and the average of merit surprisingly high. No exhibitor ever hesitated to book one of them on the grounds that it might contain anything of an objectionable nature.

Sidney Drew served the screen with loyal devotion and intelligent endeavor and was substantially rewarded for his work. Clean fun is a boon that humanity will always demand and pay for with a willing hand.

New York Responds to Impetus

NEW YORK STATE is responding to the double impetus of reviving industry and the enactment of a Sunday local option bill by the State Legislature. As our Albany correspondent points out, hardly a day passes without the filing of a new incorporation having to do with the motion picture industry.

The capital city of the Empire State also has felt the touch of opportunity. Max Spiegel is to erect a 3,000 seat house to cost upward of $300,000. Samuel Suckno, well known also to the exhibitors of the State, will build a picture house costing $200,000 and seating 1,800. Two other theatres are to be constructed during the summer. F. F. Proctor has taken over the famous Harmanus Bleecker Hall, with its seating capacity of 3,800, and plans as a part of the entertainment he will provide for Albanians a list of high-class photoplays.

In Brooklyn, William Brandt, president of the borough's exhibitors, announces he will build a house costing a quarter of a million dollars. He intends making the successor of the present Carlton a theatre second to none in his borough. Especial attention will be paid to the music. There will be employed a large orchestra under the guidance, possibly, of a musician of international fame. Also there will be installed an organ of unusual size.

Short-Sighted Business Policy

A LONG talk this week with F. Marshall Sanderson, general manager of China Theatres, Ltd., a concern operating fourteen theatres in North China, produces confirmation of the fact that the producing end of the picture business is not aware that New York City is only a spot on the globe and not the whole terrestrial sphere itself.

Mr. Sanderson stands for a company which represents the pioneer element of exhibitors in China, a brainy, growing organization, which in familiar terms is in on the ground floor of the exhibiting business in the great Oriental republic of 400,000,000 souls, and which plans to extend its business throughout the whole of the Far East.

What sensible producing company could afford to overlook the possibilities represented in a country with a population four times as large as America's, and on the top of that the prospects presented by India? In so short a space as ten years from now there will be millions of dollars of film business in these great countries. Yet producing companies, with their publicity staffs sending out yearly tons of matter, a great deal of which is left to mold on the shelves of the exchanges, do not even deign to give China consideration. The matrix, often despised and rejected by the American newspaper, is the best picture salesman of the Orient. A picture in a newspaper sells more tickets to movie-loving Chinamen than the best assortment of press dope gathered from the best of publicity writers. Yet Mr. Sanderson is authority for the statement that matrixes might be made of radium so seldom do they make their way to mails for the Orient.

It is evident the company which first becomes aware of the real extent of the horizon beyond New York City, which grasps the scope of the Orient's possibilities and gives the exhibiting companies there consideration and service of quality, will shortly be "on the ground floor" with the pioneers.

Service to these companies means a field of future prosperity rich enough to make for the whole picture business of America a mighty parallel.

Who will send F. Marshall Sanderson, Tientsin, China, a few matrixes? Who is going to roll up the curtain that separates New York's home offices from the light of the rest of the horizon?

A Fortunate Condition

A FULL-PAGE article in a recent Sunday edition of the New York Sun is headed: "New Era Finds Film Stars Leaning on Playwrights as Never Before." This is merely one way of stating a fortunate condition. The moving picture is steadily improving. The followers of the film are demanding a better grade of drama and the producers are turning to the works of the best modern authors for scenario material. This will demand better technic from the scenario writers, if the most is to be made of the stories that are being purchased at advanced prices, and corresponding skill on the part of everyone connected with the production of these best sellers and well known stage hits.

It isn't fair to put all the blame for the failure of many stories in the past on the stories themselves. Better craftsmanship on the part of the scenario writer and the director would have made many of them acceptable. A deeper knowledge of the "Don'ts" of showmanship would have prevented any scenario writer or director from allowing the hero or heroine of a picture to lose the sympathy of the spectator, as has been the case many times in the past; also the importance of keeping the hero or heroine the central figure of the story would not have been underestimated.

One producer is quoted in the articles as saying that the moving picture public cannot be fooled, and then naming a picture that the public did not take to at all. The star had scored big hits in most of her previous pictures, but her following forgot all about her charm when she was given a character in which she lost the sympathy of the spectators and it was transferred to one of the minor parts. The necessity of having a theme that starts when the picture starts and carries through to the finish is another rule that cannot be avoided if the picture is going to satisfy the public.

Even in the old days of which Lawrence Reamer speaks in the article when the star and not the play was the thing and the actress had only to choose her parts from the round of standard dramas the box-office returns showed that the public had its favorite plays—the ones in which the stars did their best work. Mr. Reamer's statement, "The vehicle in which her talents were exhibited never counted in the past," is not borne out by the facts in the case: Booth did the biggest business of his career in Hamlet, his greatest part, and Mary Anderson made a like financial and artistic record as Juliet.

Personal and Otherwise

R. EUGENE GOLDSMITH left for Chicago April 11 to join the sales force of the Pathe exchange. Mr. Goldsmith was for some years with the Kleine Company in Chicago and a representative in Pittsburgh and Canadian territories.

Adolph Eisner, of the Doric Theatre, Kansas City, was in New York the weeks of April 6 and 13 inspecting all the finest theatres of this section, fine-tooth combing for all the latest and up-to-the-minute wrinkles of equipment. At the same time he took note of the different methods of presentation, stage and screen effects and musical settings. The Doric is of Doric architecture and its furnishings are of the most artistic character. "If there is anything that New York can show us," said Mr. Eisner, "I am from Missouri and willing to be shown. The Doric wants the best and newest."

While in the Hotel Astor a few days ago we met C. S. Edwards, one of the pioneers of the industry. For years he was identified with the Yale Amusement Company, General Film and Pathe organizations.

Sergeant R. D. (Dell) Goodman, of the Sixty-third Field Artillery, who has just obtained his release, has gone to Chicago as special feature salesman for Pathe.

Nugent Flynn, of Kansas City, franchise holder of the First National in his territory, was in New York last week and will probably be here for the general meeting of the First National executives at the Hotel Astor on April 21. Mr. Flynn has been making note of general conditions in these parts and keeping his eyes open for anything new and worth while in pictures. He reports business excellent in Kansas.

T. F. Lavender, former press agent with the Newspaper Enterprise Association, has been with the heavy tank corps, stationed at Camp Meade. He will take one of the tanks through the country for the Victory Loan drive.

Walter S. Rand, personal representative of Douglas Fairbanks, has been in New York for the past week and is now leaving for Boston. He is accompanied by Louis Thompson, who acts as Mary Pickford's personal representative.

Frank J. Marion enjoyed the rare delight of meeting for the first time his own son, now six months old, when Mr. Marion lately returned from his sojourn in Spain. Master Marion was born while his father was abroad representing the Committees on Public Information.

Frank Rembush, of Indianapolis, arrived in New York this week to confer with some of the executives of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc. En route he stopped at Philadelphia for conference.

John McAleer has resigned the management of the Pittsburgh branch of the Universal Film Exchange, Inc. For two years he has held that position and leaves with the best wishes of the Universal. He will spend a few weeks visiting his family in Brooklyn, New York City, and greeting his two sons who were in France with the 27th Division. He has several business propositions under consideration, but is not yet ready to announce his future plans. The management of the Universal Pittsburg exchange will now be presided over by H. Stern, who was traveling salesman.

Arthur Leslie is now with E. A. McManus as manager of the industrial department. His experience in industrial advertising and exploitation makes him a valuable adjunct to the enterprises in which E. A. McManus is interested.

Larry Trimble greeted us from the window of a taxicab while passing up Fifth avenue, Tuesday, April 15. He has just arrived in town from Spokane, where he has been general director for the Capital Producing Company.

Charles Moyer, with the George Beban Pictures Corporation, will leave for the coast next week. On his way west he will visit his folks in Pennsylvania.

Miles Lasker, special representative in Texas for Famous Players-Lasky, has returned to New York after an absence of two months.

The Select will hold a convention of its exchange managers from all over the United States at the Hotel Astor during the week of April 21.

J. R. Grainger, who has been on the coast for the last three months representing Marshall Neilan, has returned to New York. Mr. Grainger was formerly a Fox representative.

C. F. Zittel, Jr., Dead.

C. F. Zittel, Jr., only son of the widely known dramatic editor of the Evening Journal and head of the International Film Service, died early Tuesday morning at the home of his parents in New York. He was barely nineteen and had been ill scarcely two weeks. Tonsilitis developed an infection, the poison from which distributed itself throughout the system. Blood transfusion was resorted to, after specialists gave the boy up, but without avail.

"Zit" had appointed "Florian," as he was best known, as his assistant, two weeks ago. He was taken ill on the very day he was supposed to have begun his new duties.

Powers Making Loan Films.

An order for moving pictures for the promotion of the Victory Loan has been placed with the Powers Film Products Company. The Rochester plant of the company will do the work. The force has been working night and day on the order. Among the pictures completed are "Holding On" and "Private Dillboy."

These pictures show the work and hardships of the American troops on the French front. Each picture has a message for every one in the United States not to hesitate to buy bonds of the Victory Loan.

Over two and one-half millions of feet are being used in the completion of the order.

Louis Sherwin Now on Goldwyn Scenario Staff

LOUIS SHERWIN has arrived at Culver City, Cal., to join the Goldwyn scenario staff. Formerly a Los Angeles newspaper man, he was until recently a special press representative for Goldwyn publicity in New York, previously distinguishing himself for his keen dramatic criticisms on the New York Globe for eight years. It was this work that attracted the attention of Samuel Goldwyn, who induced him to abandon newspaper work and bring to motion pictures the same acute critical faculties that characterized his reviews.

It is the Sherwin who has spent years studying the literature and drama of the world whose energies are to be devoted to that part of the film which producers recognize more and more as the foundation of superior production—the scenario. He undertakes his new assignment not only as a man experienced in the drama, but with an extensive knowledge of the newer art of the motion picture in all its angles, distribution as well as creation, gained in his contact wth the executive offices in New York. His intimacy with the amusement field makes him a valuable addition to the staff at the Culver City studios, where his judgment in the selection of material for Goldwyn pictures will be given wide scope.

First United Artists Film a Fairbanks, September 7

OSCAR A. PRICE, president of the United Artists Association, has arrived in New York and is now engaged in locating suitable offices to be used as permanent headquarters for this organization. Mr. Price reports that everything is progressing smoothly and that it has been decided to make the first United Artists release a Douglas Fairbanks picture, which will be ready for distribution about September 7.

Mr. Price also reports that W. G. McAdoo, general counsel of the company, expects to arrive in New York during the coming week, but that he will not occupy the company's offices. He will make his headquarters at his own law offices in lower Manhattan.

Millard Crouch Is Back from Strenuous Service

MILLARD CROUCH, better known as "Mel," brother of George Crouch, who handles all of the money matters of the Crandall string of theatres and is one of Harry M. Crandall's right hand men, is back in Washington from overseas. Mel, just before going into the Army was employed by Mr. Crandall at his Ninth and E streets theatre. He enlisted in a troop of District of Columbia cavalry when the call for volunteers came.

Bingham Vacationing.

Edfrid A. Bingham, dean of the Goldwyn scenario staff in point of service, is taking a much needed rest. Necessity compels him to begin his vacation with a period at the California hospital, where he went Sunday for an operation, after which he probably will convalesce in the country and grapple mentally with his next scenario.

"UNPARDONABLE SIN" IS SET FOR MAY 2

Harry Garson's Blanche Sweet-Neilan Feature Is Big Hit in San Francisco—Long Runs Predicted

NEW YORK is the next citadel which the Harry Garson forces plan to assault with "The Unpardonable Sin." The big picture, starring Blanche Sweet under the direction of Marshall Neilan, is scheduled to open at the renovated Broadway Theatre Friday evening, May 2, for an indefinite engagement of which great things are expected. The accompanying photograph shows crowds standing in front of the California Theatre, San Francisco, the night the production opened.

Crowds in Detroit, where the picture was given its premiere at the Broadway Strand Theatre, were equally large.

At the present writing Wm. Rudolph is in Chicago doing work preliminary to the opening of "The Unpardonable Sin" at the new Jones, Linick & Schaefer Theatre in the Loop district, the Randolph, Sunday, April 20. During his absence, the Garson interests in New York, insofar as they pertain to "The Unpardonable Sin," are being looked after by Herbert H. Sonborn, general sales manager.

Most of the territory on the picture has already been sold, the most recent announcement being the purchase of Kentucky and Tennessee by Colonel Fred Levy, of Louisville.

Film Goes Over in San Francisco.

The return of Blanche Sweet to the screen, through the medium of "The Unpardonable Sin" has been hailed with delight by San Francisco theatregoers and the California Theatre has been filled to capacity at all performances during the week. Manager Eugene Roth is proud of the program of which this production is a part, and the general public has also acclaimed it as a very near approach to the one hundred per cent. show. On the opening day the California Theatre orchestra, augmented to sixty-four pieces, rendered a most ambitious concert. The great organ, played by Eddie Horton, was heard with the orchestra. The California Theatre orchestra is now heard at both matinee and evening performances.

The Pacific Coast premiere of "The Unpardonable Sin" was made noteworthy by the presence in person of the star, who came up from Los Angeles accompanied by Clara Kimball Young, Harry Garson, business manager for both stars, and Marshall Neilan, director. Clara Kimball Young spent considerable of her time in looking over a studio site and in selecting locations for her next film production, which is to have Belgium for its scene.

All Chicago Publicized for "Eternal Magdalene"

ALL precedents in advance motion picture publicity will have been smashed when the big Goldwyn special, "The Eternal Magdalene," enters the Chicago Loop district, April 20, where it has been booked at the Bandbox Theatre in advance for a run of four weeks by Manager James Keane.

Manager Keane has planned a campaign of publicity that is aimed to reach every home in Chicago and penetrate far and wide into the territory that looks to Chicago as its metropolitan center. Not only will every publicity medium be enlisted, but a special publicity representative has already been appointed to push this important special and to see that no possible opportunity is wasted to draw the attention of the public to it. Aiding him will be the co-operation of Goldwyn publicity and Goldwyn billing.

Sydney Abel Sails for Europe for Fox.

Another indication of the bigness of the plans which William Fox and Winfield R. Sheehan have formulated for the extension of the Fox Film Corporation's producing and distributing activities in Europe was given when Sydney Abel, head of the corporation's contract department, sailed for England. He will meet Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan in London.

"The Unpardonable Sin" Had Some Pardonable Crowds in 'Frisco.
As shown by the above mob at its premiere at the New California, capacity 2,700, on April 6.

The exact nature of Mr. Abel's mission has not been announced, but it is understood that he will be absent several months. It is considered likely that Mr. Abel's work will be that of assisting Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan in establishing new branch offices.

F P-L Will Boost "V" Loan by Window Demonstration

FOR the three weeks covering the great drive for the Victory Liberty Loan, Famous Players - Lasky, through an arrangement with Aeolian Hall, will occupy the immense window facing Bryant Park, on West Forty-second street, with a demonstration of moving picture making to assemble the crowds while workers for the Fifth Loan solicit subscriptions. While it is not at all probable that the window will be active all of the time, the demonstrations will be given at hours when the most people are passing to insure the largest possible audience.

Beside the moving picture features there will be in frequent attendance stage and opera celebrities to diversify the "bally-hoo" and to keep pace with the daily announcements of what will happen in the big window. The "frame-work" will be an exact duplicate of one of the sets used for Marguerite Clark's production of "Come Out of the Kitchen." This set will be erected Friday evening, April 18, at 5:30, while the street crowds watch the work.

By April 21 a stand will have been erected in front of the building in preparation for the "official dedication" of the window at noon on that day. With the set complete and ready, a huge American flag will cover the window and at 12 noon, on Monday, May Peterson, one of the Metropolitan Opera House singers will "unveil" the display and sing the national anthem.

Kahn & Greenfield to Have New House.

The Kahn & Greenfield Circuit, which conducts the New Filmore, New Mission and Progress theatres in San Francisco, is to branch out shortly, having made arrangements to take over a theatre to be erected at Santa Cruz. The building will be erected by Fred D. and Minnie Hihn at a cost of about $100,000 and the local exhibitors have taken a twenty-year lease on the premises. The location is at Pacific and Walnut avenues and work on the theatre will be commenced within sixty days.

Universal's Cincinnati Exchange Wins.

Upon his return from Universal City, President Carl Laemmle, of Universal, has announced that in the exchangemen's competition for gross business on Bluebird subjects released prior to March 10, for the month ending April 10, that the Cincinnati exchange, under the jurisdiction of Lou Baum, had established a record for business on the former program features. Universal exchanges are being judged according to new business contracted for during thirty day periods.

There is a saving of $4.80 to those who pay the annual subscription rate of $3 to Moving Picture World. The newsstand price is 15 cents.

PUTS END TO "SPOONING" IN THEATRES

Dallas Manager Gets Up a Set of Three Cards for Distribution Among Offending Male Patrons

HERSCHEL STUART, manager of the Hulsey theatres in Dallas, is the originator of a plan which has been used successfully in putting an end to "spooning" in his playhouses.

The usher is provided with sets of cards—three each—which are handed in regular order to male patrons found with their arms around their companions.

The first card, which, by the way, generally gets results, reads as follows:

Dear Sir: You are doubtless not aware that you are sitting in a more or less compromising position, especially considering the fact that you are in a public gathering. There are people sitting back of you who may misunderstand your conduct. Will you kindly remove your arm from the back of the seat occupied by your companion—lest you jeopardize the good name of the lady and of the theatre. We hope you will accept this suggestion in the friendly spirit in which it is given.

THE MANAGEMENT, HULSEY THEATRES.

Sometimes the first card does not accomplish the desired results and then the following second notice is used:

Dear Sir: To protect the good name of your companion, kindly do not sit in a position that may appear to others as "out of place." True, their opinion may mean nothing to you, but it may reflect upon the character of the good woman who accompanies you, and likewise cast reflection upon this theatre. Neither you nor we can be too careful when a lady's honor is at stake. If she is your wife, all the more reason you should want to protect her. Thank you.

THE MANAGEMENT, HULSEY THEATRES.

Then, as a last resort, the following third notice is used:

Dear Sir: Love may be blind—but people sitting back of you are not. The management again requests that you refrain from making any further demonstration of affection in this public gathering. Our reputation is at stake, and we will protect ourselves immediately if you do not comply with our previous requests, by asking you to leave this theatre.

THE MANAGEMENT, HULSEY THEATRES.

Picture Men Leave For Siberia.

Under the auspices of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, eight men have left New York for the purpose of bringing the motion picture to the American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia. They sail from Vancouver April 19.

Heading the contingent is Director Leonard Martin, who has been in charge of the Washington office of the Community Motion Picture Bureau. With him are Herbert Spencer Crolly, of Pleasantville, N. Y.; Jesse Seadeek, of Rochester; Leslie P. Martin, of Boston; Earl R. Snavely, of Clearfield, Pa.; Emil Minder, of New York; Charles Diller, of Hugo, Colo., and Forest V. Bockey, of Waterloo, Iowa.

Protests Against Bill Admitting Children

The Children's Aid Society of Galt, Ontario, has raised a protest against the proposed legislation of the Ontario Legislature which provides permission for the admission of unaccompanied children to picture theatres when a matron is employed by the theatre. The Galt society has declared that the children should be allowed in the theatres only when accompanied by their own parents. The society also asks that the present law be more strictly enforced. The society suggests that exhibitors be permitted to arrange children's shows for Saturday afternoon under the supervision of local public school boards.

Alfred D. Bell, Treasurer of Nicholas Power Company

ALFRED D. BELL, treasurer of Nicholas Power Company, Inc., is a native New Yorker, having been born in the metropolis in August, 1886. Upon completing his education he entered the banking business, in which he remained for almost four years. Having thus obtained a good working knowledge of business, he branched out into the fields of real estate, where his efforts met with success.

About this time Mr. Bell became interested in politics. This interest was shared to such an extent by the Republican voters of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District of New York County that he was elected for two successive terms to the New York Legislature.

Alfred D. Bell.

Mr. Bell enlisted in May, 1918, as a private in the Ordnance Officers' Training Camp at Camp Hancock, Georgia. Here he rendered valuable service as an instructor in machine gun operation. At the time of his discharge he was a Second Lieutenant.

Mr. Bell is now devoting his entire time and energies to his duties as treasurer of the Nicholas Power Company, Inc. Although not an ardent clubman, Mr. Bell belongs to the Union, Metropolitan, Republican and City clubs, and is also a member of the Sons of the Revolution. He is a keen sportsman, and vacation time finds him either on the golf links or off on a hunting trip in the Canadian woods. There are many things about Alfred D. Bell that speak for character. One of these is that he is democratic to a degree.

Norma Talmadge to Aid Loan Drive.

Norma Talmadge has arranged with the Willys-Overland Company to have a motion picture exhibit in their Broadway windows at Fiftieth street, all during the coming Victory Liberty Loan Campaign. Miss Talmadge has received several requests from the Government loan organization to take an active part in the new drive, and at the suggestion of Miss Alice S. Emerson, of the Second Federal Reserve District, she will have charge of the block between Fiftieth and Fifty-first street on Broadway.

Some of the devices Miss Talmadge will use to attract crowds are the projections of scenes in colors from her most popular pictures illustrating four different popular songs which have been dedicated to her; tableaux by members of the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, of patriotic appeal; motion pictures, and a display of war paintings by prominent magazine illustrators.

During certain hours each day Miss Talmadge will herself sell bonds, giving an autographed photograph of herself to each purchaser.

Theatrical Profession Aids Loan.

Captain Charles B. Dillingham, of Hippodrome fame, will head a committee of actors and producers who are to compose an Advisory Talent Committee to co-operate with the Division of Meetings and Music in the forthcoming Victory Liberty Loan. The committee is composed of men internationally known in the amusement world ranging from Gatti-Casazza, of the Metropolitan, to Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., of the Midnight Frolic. All of the stars and associates of the various firms will offer their services to aid the Victory Liberty Loan. The importance and value of the work performed in previous campaigns by these aggregations cannot be estimated

Simplex Office Undergoing Change.

E. M. Porter, general manager of the Precision Machine Company, announces that increased business has again necessitated the changing around of the office arrangement which prevailed at the Simplex factory and which, at the time of its installation, was considered adequate for some time to come.

That section of the office formerly occupied by exhibition machines is now being fitted up to accommodate the large bookkeeping and auditing department, whose present quarters, when made over, will house the Sales Department.

Marion Davies May Go to Charleston.

Marion Davies and her company expect to leave New York this week to complete the exteriors on a production work on which has been under way for three weeks at the Paragon Studios in Fort Lee, which C. F. Zittel took over for several weeks. It is expected that Miss Davies and her company will go to Charleston, S. C.

ROTHAPFEL PROGRAM SETS NEW RECORD

A Day and Date Showing in Forty-five Cities of Complete Entertainment Not Before Known

FOR the first time in the history of the theatre, either on the speaking stage or on the screen, a complete program of entertainment will be given, day and date, in more than forty-five cities throughout the country, when the first Rothapfel Unit Program is given to the public in May.

The records at the Independent Sales Corporation, handling the distribution of the Rothapfel Program, show that during the week of the Program's release more than forty-five of the biggest houses in the United States will show it, day and date. No promises concerning the merits of the factors representing the Rothapfel Unit Program are made by the producers. They do, however, have every confidence in the work. The exhibitors and the public are to judge for themselves.

Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation, and his staff of assistants are doing everything known to modern exploitation, advertising and publicity to assist the exhibitor in presenting to his patrons this program. Contracts have been signed by Mr. Hall for space on the billboards throughout the country. The special representatives now out have with them every possible aid in the way of suggestions and exploitation material so that the exhibitor may know what to expect and how to bring the Program before his patrons.

Helps to Exhibitors Are Ample.

Harry P. Diggs has prepared a booklet, finished in purple and gold, which has been pronounced one of the most artistic mediums. It contains a short synopsis of the subject matter of each of the features in the Program, and statements by Mr. Rothapfel and Mr. Hall.

The twenty-four sheets for the public stands also were prepared by Mr. Diggs. These have been placed on the most conspicuous boards coming under the jurisdiction of the leading billposting companies. The newspapers throughout the country have given columns of space to comment on Mr. Rothapfel's record as an exhibitor and on his venture in the producing field.

Arthur Levey,
Exporter and importer, back from France.

Baltimore League Prepares for Coming Exhibitors' Ball

A FULL report of the activities of all the committees appointed to arrange for the Fourth Annual Moving Picture Ball to be held in Baltimore on Friday night, April 25, and the matter of opposing the holding of back lot carnivals near the moving picture theatres during the summer months, were the principal subjects which came up at the meeting of the Exhibitors League of Maryland on Sunday night, April 13.

The meeting was presided over by President Louis Schlichter, and was called to order at 8:30 p. m. Charles B. Eyer, secretary of the league, read the minutes and then Thomas D. Goldberg read a report on the progress which had been made by the various committees arranging for the ball.

Stars to Be Dined.

Those who were present at the meeting included J. Louis Rome, William Tyler, Milton Caplon, C. H. A. Stroebel, Joseph A. Winkel, Thomas D. Goldberg, Frank A. Horning, Sam Flax, E. C. Sandell, J. F. Ritterpush, J. Rabinovich, Charles B. Eyer, Louis Schlichter, Joseph Brodie, I. Rosenbauer, Julius Goodman, I. Levine, A. Albers, R. L. Byrum, Charles A. Hicks, William E. Stumpf, I. Berman and M. A. Berger, R. Evans, Baltimore American; Stewart Gibson, Baltimore News and Exhibitors' Trade Review; Mr. Ehrman, Baltimore News, and J. M. Shellman, Sun and Moving Picture World.

Arthur Levy Opens Office for Film Export and Import

BACK from France full of "pep" and new ideas, Arthur Levey, well-known film exporter, has inaugurated the World-Wide Distributing Corporation, with offices at 911 Brokaw Building, New York. Although he returned to the United States only a short time ago, Mr. Levey has already put in operation many of the plans conceived by him while still in uniform.

It is said that the young film man's ideas of propaganda pictures for sustaining the morale of the Nation has received hearty approval in official circles in Washington, and it is understood that Mr. Levey will immediately put some of his plans into operation. He leaves for England in a few days.

Before he became an actor in the Biggest Show Ever, Mr. Levey was a successful state-right distributor. He also exported and imported many important photoplays, among his imports having been "A Message from Mars," "The World, Flesh and the Devil," "Lady of Lyons," "Harry Lauder Comedies," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," etc.

Pauline Frederick
As she appears in "One Week of Life," her coming Goldwyn.

C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., Ready to Produce London Stories

THE movement for the production of big special pictures received further impetus this week with the formation of C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., to produce the Jack London stories.

Incorporation was made possible through the entrance of J. Frank Brockliss into the situation. Mr. Brockliss, who is well known in the film industry, has had sixteen years' experience and a thorough knowledge of all phases of the film business, not only in America but in Europe and England as well.

It is Mr. Brockliss' first excursion into production, but according to his own statement he is very much impressed with the possibilities contained in the Jack London material, and the ideas and plans laid out by Mr. Shurtleff for the production of super-pictures produced in the most modern and complete methods.

Shurtleff Formerly Hodkinson Manager.

It will be remembered that Mr. Shurtleff, who was formerly general sales manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, went to California about a month ago and returned with the Jack London material sewed up as far as the picture rights were concerned. Mr. Shurtleff's idea is that in the past the author has not received proper credit in picture exploitation, and in the producing of the Jack London material his plan is to alter all this and feature the author rather than the star.

Production to Begin Soon.

"We will have our own offices open by May 1," said Mr. Shurtleff, "although temporarily we will be located at Mr. Brockliss' office, 729 Seventh avenue.

"Production will be commenced about this time also. We are scenarioizing several stories now, and the title of the first one will be decided some time this week, also the director and a portion of the cast.

"The firm of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., will handle all the foreign rights for all the material that we make.

ELSIE FERGUSON IN A NEW RELEASE

According to This Favorite Player's Own Opinion, Her Next Artcraft Picture, "Eyes of the Soul," Has One of the Most Sympathetic Heroines of Her Screen Career

By Edward Weitzel

THE gentleman reclining on the floor at Elsie Ferguson's feet was not making love to her. It is true, he was addressing her in terms of endearment and emploring her to fill his heart with happiness by promising to become his wife; but he stood no chance and he knew it. So he was generously showing the other fellow who was sitting alongside of the lady with his arm around her how the thing was done. That is one of the disadvantages of being a director: You thoroughly explain to the handsome leading man the sure way to win the heroine, while he holds her in his arms and is saved the trouble of trying to think it out for himself.

Fancy looking up into the eyes of a beautiful woman and swearing that you love her better than anyone else on earth and finishing up with: "That's the way I want it done, old chap. Try it, please?"

Director Fitzmaurice didn't seem to mind, though. He got up from the floor and watched intently while the fellow who had the inside track followed instructions, and expressed his approval when the love making was over.

The warning bell sounded, the pounding and sawing and babel of sound in the studio stopped and, with a pair of spotlights playing on the heads of the lovers, the scene was transferred to the strip of film inside the camera.

A Chat Between Scenes.

There were several comfortable armchairs over in one corner of the studio, backed by a half-completed set. A table with lights and make-up material turned the place into a temporary dressing-room. When Elsie Ferguson walked slowly from the love-making scene and sat down in one of the armchairs, it was evident she was still under the spell of the emotions she had just been expressing. She recovered herself after a moment's rest and took up the conversation which had been interrupted when the director nodded that everything was ready for another scene of "The Avalanche."

Star's Part a Dual Role.

"You wanted to know about my part in this picture?" she began. "It is a dual role; I play a mother and a daughter. The girl in the early stages of the story is quite young; in fact, the most youthful person I have ever acted for the screen. The first time I dressed for the character and came down into the studio, no one knew me. I passed the messenger who had been sent to call me, and, although we looked each other straight in the face, he went on to my dressing-room and came back with the information that I was not to be found. Everyone was amused when Mr. Fitzmaurice surprised the messenger by exclaiming: 'Not to be found! Nonsense, my boy! You've let a woman deceive you about her age, that's all. She's here and waiting to go on with the scene.'"

While Elsie Ferguson was talking, the cameraman was busy shifting his camera, and the electrician, perched on a platform up where the ceiling is popularly supposed to be and wasn't, had trained several of his spots at a new angle over the top of the handsome interior set. Another nod from the low-voiced director and the star joined him and the two gentlemen in evening clothes, who were in the next scene. There was no hurry, no excitement. The instructions were given quietly, but when the rehearsing started, the moment in the play proved to be an intense one. When Elsie Ferguson left the scene, her eyes were wet with tears.

"Eyes of the Soul."

Questioned about her latest completed picture, "Eyes of the Soul," the Artcraft production, founded on George Weston's story, "The Salt of the Earth," it was evident the impersonator of its heroine found the subject more than ordinarily pleasing.

"I think the picture will be liked," Elsie Ferguson replied. "Its story is not at all complicated, just the tale of a woman's loving sacrifice for a blind soldier. Everything about it is beautifully true and human, and it shows how one sightless hero's future was made useful and happy by the courage and devotion of a girl whose pity ripened into love. The character of Gloria Swann, a cabaret dancer, is the best part I've had since 'The Rise of Jennie Cushing.'"

"There was something very fine about that young woman, Miss Ferguson."

"Yes; but Gloria is just as fine, only in a different way. One thing about 'Eyes of the Soul' surprised me: We all thought it would have its strongest appeal to women, but whenever it has been given a prerelease showing, the men among the spectators have spoken enthusiastically of their admiration for Gloria and her willingness to become the eyes of a blindman."

"No doubt they appreciate the willingness shown by women in every walk of life to help the men who have come back from war maimed and almost helpless."

Taking Toll of the Actor.

Elsie Ferguson always puts a great deal of her own self into a part she is playing; that is evident in all her pictures. She did not reply at once. Her thoughts seemed to be travelling back to the time she was living the life of this girl of the cabarets before the camera.

"I am very fond of Gloria," she said finally. "I have never felt she would have acted in any other way than the one the author marked out for her. That is what makes her so real to me, of course."

"The part was not a hard one to play then?"

The devoted followers of this screen favorite are familiar with the expressive little droop of one corner of her mouth by which she conveys so many different moods. She repeated the movement before answering:

"No—not hard to understand, but she is a girl of much feeling, and that always takes its toll of the actor."

How Gloria Helps Her Husband.

"Do you mind giving a few more of the details of the story, Miss Ferguson?"

"The most important situations are Gloria's refusal to accept the wealth and position offered her by Judge Malvin after she meets Larry Gibson, the blind soldier, and the scene where she confesses her love for the man whose helplessness seals his own lips. In spite of its theme the story is never morbid and is lightened up by the naturally sunny dispositions of both Gloria and Larry."

"Does Gloria keep on with her dancing after she becomes Mrs. Gibson?"

"No. That is one of the clever points in the plot. Larry is able to earn a living for them both—only Gloria makes it possible. Her husband had written a number of songs to amuse the boys in the trenches. Gloria hears him play them on his banjo. She learns them, gets the manager to let her sing them at the cabaret and they make such a hit they establish Larry's reputation as a song writer. His royalties bring in a comfortable living for the family."

"Larry must be a regular fellow all through."

"He is; brave and cheerful no matter what happens. His wife has every right to be proud of him."

"And Gloria is the 'eyes of the soul' referred to in the title?"

"Not entirely—there's a baby boy who, Gloria tells Larry, will also help him to see."

A Swift Shift of Feelings.

The signal from the director which called the creator of Gloria back to her present task, was not detected by the interviewer, but when Elsie Ferguson rose from her chair and started for the set in the middle of the studio, she had dismissed the heroine of "Eyes of the Soul" from her mind entirely and was responding to the nature of this newer woman whose sorrow or joy she was to make her own.

Elsie Ferguson lives the part as she portrays it for the screen.

BRANDT TO BUILD BROOKLYN THEATRE

President of Borough Exhibitors Will Erect Structure Costing $250,000 and Seating 2,400

PLANS have been filed with the building department in Brooklyn Borough by the St. Marks Amusement Company for a theatre seating 2,400 persons. The structure will replace the present Carlton Theatre and Airdrome, at Flatbush and Seventh avenues. It will cost $250,000. The house will be built on an irregular plot fronting 100 feet on Flatbush avenue and 125 feet on Park place, taking in 288, 290, 292, 292a and 294 Flatbush avenue, and 135, 137, 139, 141, 143, 145, 147 and 149 Park place.

The officers of the St. Marks Amusement Company are Thomas A. Duffey, president, and William Brandt, general manager. Mr. Duffey is a prominent insurance man, living at Sea Gate. Mr. Brandt is president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Brooklyn and conducts several picture theatres in the borough.

Mr. Brandt says it is the intention of his associates and himself to give Brooklyn the finest exclusive motion picture theatre in New York. Many striking innovations will be introduced in the construction of the house. The unusual ground plan lends itself to some of these. This involves among other things a scheme of projection altogether new to the larger houses in the East.

There will be no stage in the new theatre, but instead it will be provided with a platform large enough to provide for an orchestra of fifty musicians. Supplementing these will be what is described as the largest organ installed in any motion picture theatre in the country.

Retiring rooms for men and women will be situated on the mezzanine floor and are planned to be sumptuous. Also on the same floor will be a women's tea-room and a baby's nursery; the latter in charge of a registered nurse, which will be available to mothers at matinees.

Mr. Brandt declared the chief aim of the promoters will be to provide exclusive pictures and music of the higher order. For the latter factor in the program large plans are being worked out, it being stated that negotiations are under way with a leader of a symphony orchestra who is a man of international repute. It is expected the new theatre will be finished in time for the next season.

Stir Butte Fans by Use of Publicity Letter in Ad

RALPH RUFFNER, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Butte, Mont., recently furnished ample evidence of the value he places upon Paramount and Artcraft press books in assisting him in the composition of his newspaper advertising.

Just prior to the showing of Cecil B. DeMille's Artcraft production, "Don't Change Your Husband," at the Rialto, Mr. Ruffner clipped one of the letters to patrons from the press book and heading it, "A Statement to Butte Theatre Patrons," used it bodily in one of his advertisements.

Writing to the Famous Players-Lasky publicity department, Mr. Ruffner says of the advertisement: "It attracted flocks of attention, because fans wanted to know what the Sam Hill was the matter now—for they figured something was wrong when we addressed 'A Statement to Butte Theatre Patrons.'"

The advertisement in question was most striking in appearance, the text being set in a shield of original design, with background of heavy perpendicular black and white stripes.

Honor Flags for Victory Loan.

The Government Loan Organization for the Second Federal Reserve District has been supplied by the Washington headquarters with 50,000 Industrial Honor Flags, to be awarded organizations throughout the district during the Victory Liberty Loan campaign. Twenty thousand flags will be used by the Advisory Trades Committee for distribution in the Metropolitan District; 20,000 will be sent to the sub-district headquarters and 10,000 will be held in reserve.

The new flags are bordered in red and bear a blue roman numeral V, on a white background. Beneath the V in blue letters is the title, "The Victory Liberty Loan." On the bottom in red letters is printed, "Awarded by the United States Treasury Department." The flag is two feet, six inches wide by two feet, nine inches long.

These flags will be awarded to all organizations in which 70 per cent. of the membership subscribe to the loan.

Producers Sponsor Bill to Enjoin Contract Breakers

A BILL has been brought up in the Legislature at Sacramento by Senator Charlie Lyon, to affect motion picture stars who are tempted to break their contracts and to make them subject to injunctions. The bill was requested by the Motion Picture Producers' Association, of Los Angeles, of which W. J. Reynolds is secretary. The members are from nearly all the studios in and around Los Angeles.

The producers' plaint is that artists sometimes agree to make a picture or a series of pictures under written contract; that some other employer will offer them more money and they will quit; that a judgment takes many months to secure, and that usually the artist is found to be judgment-proof. An injunction would prevent their doing other work until their contract was fulfilled. The bill is an amendment to the code, making an injunction available in case of breach of contract for personal services.

Christie Comedies in Eastern Canada.

Contracts have just been closed between Charles H. Christie on behalf of the Christie Film Company and Jules and J. J. Allen, Famous Players Film Service, of Toronto, for the release of all Christie subjects in Canada, East of Port Arthur. This contract follows closely the deal with the First National for distribution of Christie films in Western Canada.

"In the Spring a Young ——" Four Weddings in One Week

ALBERT RAY, Fox Star, and Roxana MacGowan, of the Mack Sennett Beauty Squad, were married at Riverside, at the Mission Inn, on April 6. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few close friends of the couple. The marriage resulted from a meeting a year ago, when Ray and Miss MacGowan were opponents in a dancing contest at one of the beaches. Ray won the contest, and then was introduced to the girl from whom he had won the prize.

Bracken-Landis.

Bertram Bracken, director of the Henry Walthall features at the National studio, and Margaret Landis, who has been featured in a number of motion pictures, were married on Sunday morning, April 6, by Judge Carl V. Hawkins. The pair left hurriedly to catch a steamer for Catalina Islands, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Hunter-Evans.

T. Hayes Hunter and Millicent Evans were married in Los Angeles on the evening of April 4. Hunter is a pioneer picture director, at present in charge of the Zane Grey production, "Desert Gold," and the bride is a regular stage star, having in her early career supported such stage stars as William H. Crane, Robert Edeson and Douglas Fairbanks. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter are living temporarily at the Van Nuys Hotel, but will soon move into a new home being prepared for them at 2505 Tenth avenue.

Young-Whipple.

James Young and Clara Whipple were married on April 10 at Mission Inn, Riverside, following the signing of the final decree of divorce by Judge Weller, between Mr. Young and Clara Kimball Young two days before. The couple returned immediately after the ceremony to Los Angeles, where Mr. Young is engaged in directing Earle Williams in a feature for Vitagraph. Mrs. Young will continue her work of photoplay writing, and may occasionally appear in a film production.

New Theatre for Santa Barbara.

Construction work on a new motion picture theatre to cost $80,000 was begun last week on West Canon Perdido street, Santa Barbara. E. J. Johnson, who already operates several motion picture theatres in other cities, is the proprietor. The new house will have a seating capacity of 850, and will be 154 feet long by 65 feet wide. There will be no balcony, but the floor will be built in a sort of saucer shaped fashion that will give all seats an admirable view of the screen. The heating and ventilating system will be conducted through airshafts fed by a heating plant and power blowers. A $30,000 organ will be installed to furnish music to accompany the picture program.

Alhambra Entertains Orphans.

Eighty orphans from the Jewish Orphan's Home at Huntington Park were entertained at a special matinee at the Alhambra Theatre on the afternoon of April 5, the chief feature on the program being "Smiles," featuring Jane and Katherine Lee. Jane and Katherine appeared in person as part of the show.

Drives Auto Into Theatre Lobby.

Holton Vice lost control of his automobile while driving along First and Gless streets in Los Angeles one night last week, and drove into the lobby of a motion picture theatre near that corner, injuring an eleven year old boy, and receiving injuries himself. Both the boy and Vice had to be taken to a hospital for treatment. The only damage the theatre suffered was to the posters and advertising display.

High Jinks for Theatre Owners.

The Theatre Owners' Association will give a big high jinks and dinner dance at the Dome in Venice on the evening of April 23.

Film Stars in Salvation Army Show.

Among the volunteer entertainers for the Salvation Army benefit held at Trinity Auditorium last Saturday night were Douglas Fairbanks, in a novelty sketch originated by himself; the Sennett Bathing Girls in "Clothes That Never Saw the Sea;" Jim Jeffries, James J. Corbett and Walter Miller, three champions of the ring; Bothwell Browne, female impersonator; Fred Niblo, Ince director, in "Impromptu Remarks;" Ruth Roland, vocal solo; Ted Shawn and Margaret Loomis, dancing; Carter de Haven and Flora Parker de Haven in "Vaudeville Reminiscences;" H. B. Warner in a monologue; and Charlie Murray.

These players all gave their services free, and the show wound up a week of intense activity in the great Salvation Army drive for funds to build new houses and dormitories for the poor among whom the army has done its greatest work.

Farnum On Third Zane Grey Story.

William Farnum, with his company and his director, J. Gordon Edwards, left last week for Palm Springs to begin the production of the third Zane Grey story in which he stars. The first two were "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail." The story now in course of production is "The Lone Star Ranger," and more than 70 people and a carload of horses have been sent to Palm Springs to take part in the picture. Among the principal players in the cast are Louise Lovely, G. Raymond Nye, Lamar Johnstone, Charles Clary, Clarence Burton and Alfred Fremont.

The Johnsons Off to Southern Seas.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, who have made a number of films depicting the life and customs of the South Sea Islands cannibals, were in Los Angeles for a brief stop on their way back to the islands, where they intend to cap their record with still greater triumphs. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will travel alone, as they feel they can get better results with the natives by this method. Besides gifts for the savages, they will take only their photographic equipment with them, with special lenses for microscopic work, and other special apparatus.

McAdoos Filmed for News Weeklies.

William G. McAdoo and his family were the subject of several strips of moving pictures, taken last week under the direction of Douglas Fairbanks, who made a special trip to Santa Barbara for the purpose of supervising these pictures. Victor Fleming, official photographer on the George Washington during President Wilson's first voyage to France, was the cameraman, and he had been commissioned to make pictures for several news weeklies.

Film Experts Return East.

Frances Marion, John Emerson and Anita Loos all departed on the same day for New York, where they will continue their work for the screen. Miss Marion expects to return to Los Angeles in the fall to resume her work of photoplay writing.

New Art Building at Ince.

A new structure is being erected at the Ince studio in Culver City to house the art department in charge of Irvin J. Martin. This building will be devoted entirely to rooms for the artists, photographing room, and a room for the making and photographing of mechanical devices to illustrate action in the titles and subtitles. Another new building will contain the costume department of the studio, now in charge of Roy Purdon. One of the three big projection rooms in the administration building is being used temporarily for the wardrobe.

To Awaken Women of Egypt.

Princess Della Patra, niece of the khedive of Egypt, is in Los Angeles for the purpose of filming a picture based on her life's history, and which will be a means of opening the eyes of the women of Egypt to the obnoxious and abhorrent customs of the Orient. The Princess was betrothed at the age of eleven by her father to a Turkish nobleman who already had 33 wives. She escaped from her home through the aid of an Englishman whom she had met while at school in England. No definite plans for the filming of the picture have been announced.

Back from Canada.

Nell Shipman spent a few hours in Los Angeles when she returned from Calgary, Canada, where she and the other members of the Shipman-Curwood Film Company went to film scenes for one of the James Oliver Curwood stories. The company departed for San Francisco, where other scenes are to be made. When these are finished, the interiors will be filmed at the Brunton plant in Los Angeles.

Walsh to Film Evangeline.

Raoul A. Walsh has arrived in Los Angeles from the Eastern studios of the Fox company to remain several months, during which time he will make several productions, among them one from Longfellow's "Evangeline." Miriam Cooper, who is Mrs. R. A. Walsh, accompanied the director, and will play the title role in "Evangeline."

Star to Organize Company.

Frances Burnham, who has been playing leading roles in the productions directed by R. A. Walsh for the Fox company, has returned to Los Angeles, and expects to form a company of her own and produce plays according to her own standards. Miss Burnham was guest of honor at a dinner party given for her last week at the Alexandria Hotel by Ora Carew and Mrs. Pearl Campbell, widow of the late Eric Campbell.

Hoodoo Still Pursues Him.

Not content with supervising the disappearance of Charlie Murray's beautiful jazz shirts a few weeks ago, the special hoodoo that occasionally gets the best of Charlie saw to it that his favorite bracelet—not worn by Charlie, but a gift from him to Mrs. Murray—disappeared from his wife's arm at a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Barney Oldfield at a Venice cafe last Friday night. Murray has employed detectives to try to recover the property and hunt down the thief.

Zena Keefe.

Who will play for World in "The Amateur Widow."

Has Supervised 570 Film Productions.

Frank E. Woods, supervising director of Paramount productions made at Hollywood, California, has the record of having supervised 570 moving picture plays since some time in 1914, when he began to keep count, and is adding to that number every week that passes.

Supervising, in Mr. Wood's case, means that he has had a certain authority over every picture with which he has been connected, from the selecting of the story to the cutting, editing and assembling of the completed production.

Mr. Woods began his work as supervisor for the old Reliance and Majestic companies, when D. W. Griffith was connected with those companies, and he had a hand in turning out those plays known as Masterpieces, which were distributed by Mutual.

Among the stars whose pictures Mr. Woods has supervised are Norma Talmadge, Henry B. Walthall, DeWolf Hopper, Sessue Hayakawa, Robert Harron, Bryant Washburn, Douglas Fairbanks, Dorothy Gish, Bessie Love, Fred Stone, Constance Talmadge, Jack Pickford and Vivian Martin.

Tally Off to Meeting.

T. L. Tally, proprietor of Tally's Broadway Theatre, left on April 14 to attend the meeting of the First National Exhibitors, who will hold a session in New York on April 22, 23, 24. Mr. Tally, who is vice-president of the association, was actively concerned in organizing the circuit, and was the means of securing many of the big stars who make pictures for the First National program.

Christie in New York.

Charles H. Christie left for New York a few days ago in company with Reginald Warde, foreign distributor of Christie Comedies.

Los Angeles Notes.

Sid Grauman gave a special matinee for the poor of Los Angeles during the run of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" with Marguerite Clark. The audience at that matinee consisted of an even three thousand persons, including orphans, cripples and others, of almost every nationality in the world.

The Kinema Theatre reserved all seats during the run of "The Unpardonable Sin," the Henry Garson production featuring Blanche Sweet.

Studio Shots

Stewart Edward White and Zane Grey, famous authors, are exchanging opinions on picture producing at Brunton. Each writer is supervising the filming of one of his novels.

Valeska Suratt, one-time film star, is playing a vaudeville engagement at the Orpheum Theatre.

Charlie Chaplin entertained Peter B. Kyne, the writer, who recently returned from war, and Kyne's adopted French son, Marcel Dupuis, at the Chaplin studio one day last week.

Edgar Rice Burroughs, author of "Tarzan of the Apes," has come to Los Angeles, with the intention, it is said, of making arrangements to film others of his novels.

Ora Carew has finally completed her first picture for her own company, after thirteen weeks of location and exterior work.

Herschal Mayall is playing a bad man part in "The Open Road," for Universal.

Mary Miles Minter, under the guardianship of her mother, has filed a suit against the American Film Company to recover $4,125 back salary alleged to be due the star.

Clara Kimball Young attended the War Charities ball given on April 8 at Long Beach, and was participant in a mock wedding, playing the part of the bride, with Joe Mottell as the groom.

Mabel Normand has installed a peanut roaster in her dressing room.

Wheeler Oakman is to be leading man for Nell Shipman in the current James Oliver Curwood production.

King Vidor obtained a number of fine baseball scenes for his new Brentwood film, "Better Times," just before the first game of the season opened last week.

Harry Hilliard is Gladys Brockwell's new leading man in her coming Fox feature.

W. Scott Darling, recent Canadian newspaper man, is now assisting Al Christie in the preparation of scenarios for the two-reel special comedies featuring Fay Tincher.

Rex Beach, who has been in Los Angeles all winter supervising the production of his stories at Goldwyn, returned to New York last week, accompanied by Mrs. Beach.

James Harrison, who before the war was a Christie juvenile, has returned from France and will again take up the work of acting for the screen.

Monroe Salisbury and his company are making exterior scenes in the San Bernardino Mountains this week for "The Open Road."

The Frazee Film Company has taken over the W. H. Clifford studio on Santa Monica avenue.

Mary Pickford celebrated her birthday on April 8. It took her almost all day to open up the presents that had been coming for a whole week before.

Naomi Childers is leading lady for Tom Moore in his new picture now in the making at Goldwyn.

David Butler, the "Bebe" of "The Greatest Thing in Life," will support Dorothy Gish in a new picture. Dave is just finishing his part in King Vidor's new play.

Eugene Pallette, now out of the army, is an important character in "Words and Music," a new Al Ray and Elinor Fair feature for Fox.

May Allison will not be annoyed any more by sensational letters from H. Frederick Pfaff, of Los Altos, California, who claimed that she was his "spirit bride." Frederick has been arrested and is detained on an insanity charge.

Fred Fishback, former director of Sunshine comedies, has been signed up to direct comedies at the L-KO studio.

Francelia Billington has been selected as leading woman for "The Pinnacle," with Eric von Stroheim and Sam de Grasse, for Universal.

Robert Gordon has gone to New York to co-star with Sylvia Bremer in a J. Stuart Blackton production.

Irene Rich is playing a leading part in coming Fox production starring Gladys Brockwell.

Anna Little is leading lady for William S. Hart in his new picture. Grace Darmond is taking her place as leading lady for Wallace Reid at Lasky's.

Louis Sherwin, until recently director of publicity for Goldwyn, has arrived in Los Angeles to join the scenario staff of that company at Culver City.

Mary MacLaren is spending a short vacation in southern California since finishing "Prairie Gold," at Universal City. Thurston Hall, her leading man, is also resting.

Marguerita Fisher, of Santa Barbara, spent a few days of last week at the Van Nuys Hotel in Los Angeles.

Molly Malone has been loaned by Christie's to Fatty Arbuckle for his new comedy.

E. A. Bingham, dean of the Goldwyn scenario staff, in point of service, is taking an enforced vacation, having had to undergo an operation at the California Hospital.

Mary Pickford entertained Mr. and Mrs. William G. McAdoo at luncheon in her dressing room at the Brunton studio one day last week.

Eugene Mullen, for years head of the Vitagraph scenario department, has been engaged as scenario editor of Universal.

Dorothy Bernard and Frank Morgan, both well known on the screen, are playing in the stage production of "The Man Who Came Back" at the Majestic Theatre this week.

CALIFORNIA GETS ANOTHER RUDE BLOW

Myron Selznick, Back in East Permanently, Says Monopoly on Picture Production Is Undeserved

ONCE more, within the short space of a week, does sunny California get a wallop intended to jolt her off the pedestal of The One and Only Motion Picture Producing Center. P. A. Powers, of Universal, got out the mallet last week, while this time it is Myron Selznick, president of Selznick Pictures, who takes down the sledge hammer from the wall and drives gracefully therewith upon the reputation of the state which has seemed to enjoy a monopoly on the exportation of prunes and photoplay prints.

"All this stuff about California being the only place to make moving pictures is bunk," said Mr. Selznick, and with an upward motion of his hands as if to indicate that the California theory was a balloon which had just slipped its moorings and sailed off into the kingdom of the forgotten.

Entire Selznick Force in East.

The entire Selznick forces left the Hollywood studios last week for New York, where they will be located permanently, proving that although the poet was right when he said that East was East and West was West, there was nothing to prevent a moving picture organization from evacuating the West and conducting a rear-guard action as it did so.

Myron Selznick, who is conducting the rear-guard word battle, went on to say to the Moving Picture World man:

"There is absolutely nothing in this California talk. The weather out there is just as uncertain as it is in the East, and since so great a part of the picture is devoted to interiors, a studio in New York is as good as a studio anywhere else and probably a lot better. Besides, production in New York makes possible the closest co-operation between the producing and administrative branches. What's more, you can get more and better actors in New York than you can begin to get in California."

Commenting on the extensive advertising campaign being launched for Selznick pictures, Mr. Selznick was decisive in the opinion that the advertising for the Olive Thomas feature "Upstairs and Down" was the biggest ever put over for a single picture.

May Build Selznick Studio.

"The big electric signs for which we have contracted in all the cities and large towns make one feature of our campaign. They will advertise succeeding Selznicks. Irving Berlin has written a song, 'Upstairs and Down' for Miss Thomas' picture. The trade papers this week will contain information which will interest exhibitors and everyone else in the business.

"We are announcing the acquisition of a new male star in response to a growing demand by the public to see him in featured roles. There are several other propositions in the fire which I cannot divulge at present."

Olive Thomas will come East within a week and will begin work on her next Selznick feature a month later. Lewis J. Selznick, father of Myron Selznick, and now sole owner of Select, has acquired the George Backer studio, but it is possible that Selznick Pictures will build a new studio of their own in New York.

Monte Blue Seriously Ill.

Owing to illness which overtook him while on location in Truckee, Monte, Blue, cast for the leading male role in Lila Lee's new Paramount picture, "The Daughter of the Wolf," was obliged to withdraw from the cast and Elliott Dexter will play the character.

While Mr. Blue is still seriously ill, it is expected that he will soon be sufficiently recovered to resume his work in Paramount pictures, though not in this film. His many friends regret exceedingly his ill fortune and hope for his speedy recovery.

CHICAGOANS GET NEW TRADE RULES

At Dinner of F. I. L. M. Association Exchange Employes Get Instructions—Effective May 12

THE F.I.L.M. Association of Chicago gave a dinner at the Morrison Hotel, Friday evening, April 11, at which all the members and the chief exchange employes of Chicago were present. About 150 covers were laid and used for the occasion.

The object of this social gathering of exchange managers and their working staffs was to instruct salesmen, bookkeepers and cashiers on the new trade rules of the organization, a copy of which was mailed to every exhibitor in Chicago and tributary territory. These rules will become effective Monday, May 12.

Addresses were made by officers and other members of the association, instructing employes how the new rules will be carried out. These trade rules are eleven in number and were adopted by the board of directors of the organization after careful consideration of the various evils which have seriously affected the distributing department of the film business in the territory already mentioned.

In drafting the new rules the members of the board have aimed at the protection both of the exhibitor and the exchange. It has been agreed by the board, in view of the insistence by film exchange managers that exhibitors agree to and abide by these trade rules, that the F.I.L.M. Association of Chicago agrees to give special attention to the conduct of the detailed end of their business, so that every exhibitor will receive as nearly perfect service as possible, and that any complaints on the part of exhibitors shall receive attention and correction.

The grievance committee of the organization will handle all complaints. Exhibitors have the right to appear in person before this committee or they may submit any correspondence concerning such complaints to the committee.

The rules are so important that they are given in full here:

FIVE PER CENT FEDERAL TAX—Commencing May 1, all exhibitors will be charged by members of this Association a five per cent. tax in addition to the contracted price for film rental, this being in accordance with section 906 of the Federal Revenue Act, passed December 6, 1918.

CONTRACTS—Exhibitors must carry out all terms as specified in contracts made with exchanges. No verbal agreements will be recognized.

CHANGES IN BOOKINGS—Requests for changes in bookings will not be considered unless received by the exchange at least fourteen days before the scheduled playing date. If requests for changes in bookings are made less than fourteen days before original playing date, service must be paid in full before original playing date and subject will be furnished at later date that is mutually agreeable.

CIRCUITING—All contracts specify that exhibitors shall make shipments as instructed by the exchange. When the exchange instructs an exhibitor to ship another exhibitor (or circuit) the failure to ship as per instructions shall make the exhibitor so instructed liable.

TRANSPORTATION CHARGES—All transportation charges to and from the exchanges must be paid by the exhibitor.

BICYCLING OR SUB-RENTING—All contracts provide that film is to be shown only in theatre named in contract. If film is shown at any theatre not named in contract, the contract holder must pay an additional rental which is to be fixed by the serving exchange.

RETURNING FILMS C. O. D.—All exhibitors in this territory are notified to the effect that any exhibitor returning film C. O. D. to the exchange will be properly taken care of by the grievance committee of this organization.

DISCONTINUANCE OF C. O. D.—Every exhibitor served by any member of this association is notified that after May 12, no shipments will be made C. O. D. and that no shipments of film or accessories will be made except those that have been paid for in cash or by check before date of shipment.

CHECKS WITHOUT SUFFICIENT FUNDS—Each exhibitor served by any member of this association is notified that the giving of a check for which there is not sufficient funds shall be considered as a violation of the rules of this organization and will be taken care of accordingly by its grievance committee.

REDRESS FOR EXHIBITOR—All exhibitors served by any member of this association shall be notified that any and all complaints that they may have against any member of this association will be given careful and due consideration by the grievance committee of this organization, and that in all cases where they are entitled to any adjustments of accounts, such adjustments will be treated just as impartially in favor of the exhibitor, as in favor of the exchange.

HOLDING OUT FILM—All exhibitors served by any member of this association shall be notified that in case they hold out a film for an additional day or days over and above the number of days specified in their contract, they will be charged as per the terms of their contract for the additional day or days the film is held out. In case the exchange is damaged through their inability to fulfill some other contract on account of this film being held out, then the exhibitor is to be held liable in addition to the extra rental charge.

Manager Smith of Metro Pays Homage to Nazimova

C. E. SMITH, Metro's Chicago manager, had a pleasant surprise in store for the numerous exhibitors who called at his office the closing days of last week. The main, outer room was transformed into a delightful Chinese reception parlor, the atmosphere being created by tasteful decorative effects and by chaste and costly objects of art, which had been made in the land of the dragon and which had been rented at a neat sum to pay due homage to Nazimova in her latest Metro super-feature, "The Red Lantern." This super-feature will be released some time in May.

Handsome, handpainted 3-sheets and 1-sheets of Nazimova, artistically surrounded by other advertising adjuncts, appeared on the walls, the upper edges of which were draped with delicately colored Chinese embroidery.

To transport the visitor still more effectively to the Celestial Kingdom, a grotesque and costly incense burner in the centre of the room shed its fumes through the mouth of a hideous dog, under the rays of colored light which fell through a handsomely painted Chinese prism screen, hung from the center of the ceiling.

McCarthy and Fisher, music publishers, New York, have dedicated a song to Nazimova in "The Red Lantern," on the first page of which appears a scene from the photoplay. Mr. Smith has arranged with four of the 5 and 10 cent stores in the "Loop" district to display the song in the windows for two weeks, beginning Friday, May 11. Arrangements have also been made with the Victor people for window displays of the song, in record form.

The evident object of Mr. Smith's efforts is to give Chicago exhibitors some idea how to decorate their lobbies and stages during the run of "The Red Lantern," and also to show exhibitors in other cities how they may more widely advertise the feature by attractive window displays.

Manager Smith is highly gratified with the bookings already made for "The Red Lantern" in Chicago. He has booked it in the Rose Theatre, Madison near Dearborn, for two weeks. It has also been booked, at this early date, for a week each in the Riviera, Central Park, Woodlawn, Savoy, Broadway-Strand and Oak theatres; also for three days in each of the Ascher Bros. houses and in many others. This is the first time the Ascher Bros. have booked a feature on their circuit for more than two days in each house.

Mr. Smith is to be congratulated and commended for his departure in advertising "The Red Lantern" so effectively. His plan is not only a great aid to exhibitors in showing them how to give their lobbies and stages the proper atmosphere of the story, but it also shows how they may increase their business at a small outlay.

Funny part of this cold picture is that it's William Desmond in Exhibitors Mutual "The Mints of Hell."

Brockell & Elliott Form Organization.

F. M. Brockell and Clyde Elliott formed an organization last week called the Greater Star Productions, with headquarters in the Consumers Building, 220 S. State street, this city. They will handle the bookings of individual features in Chicago and tributary territory. Their first release is "Hearts of Men," George Beban's latest picture, which scored a big hit at the Ziegfeld a week ago. It has been booked in all the Ascher houses and over the Lubliner & Trinz circuit, the Woodlawn, etc.

Mr. Brockell was Chicago manager for Artcraft-Paramount for several years and Mr. Elliott was sales manager for that organization at the same time. They are well and favorably known here and believe that Chicago is the one best place in which to settle down. Mr. Brockell was recently manager for Goldwyn in Los Angeles and Seattle, while Mr. Elliott was sales manager for Select on the Pacific Coast.

Mutual Books Exclusively State-Lake.

Manager Levey, of Exhibitors' Mutual Chicago office, has closed with the State-Lake Theatre, this city, for the exclusive film bookings in that house, for the balance of the year 1919. One big feature is booked each week by the management of the State-Lake in connection with the attractive vaudeville entertainment offered there. Thus far Exhibitors' Mutual has booked in the new house "What Every Woman Wants," "The Turn in the Road," "Hearts Asleep," "Whitewashed Walls" and "Diana of the Green Van." Manager Levey has also contracted with the same house for the Strand comedies, for the balance of 1919.

Hustling Select Salesman Run Down by Automobile

L. R. NELSON, one of Select's hustling salesmen, was run down by an automobile in Madison, Wisconsin, one evening recently, just after stepping from a street car. The auto had no lights and the driver sped away before anyone could get his number, after dragging Nelson thirty feet. Mr. Nelson sustained severe injuries, including a fracture of the left arm just below the elbow, a triple fracture of the wrist and two broken fingers. In addition, both knees were badly bruised and his back wrenched.

Owing to the "flu" epidemic in Madison, Mr. Nelson failed to secure surgical attention and was obliged to wait until the next morning, when he took the first train for Milwaukee, where he immediately drove to The Radium Hospital. He was obliged to suffer 18 hours before being subjected to an anaesthetic and his injuries attended to by a bone specialist.

Mr. Nelson is a husky young man as well as a crackerjack salesman, and the attending surgeon assures him that he will soon be in harness again, with no permanent injury. The writer, who has been in an auto mix-up himself, wishes Mr. Nelson the best of luck.

"Shepherd of the Hills" for West.

Dan L. Martin, a well known Chicago dramatic showman, formerly of the firm of Martin & Emery, who has had considerable experience in handling roadshows, in connection with feature pictures, has been appointed general representative of the Pacific Coast for Harold Bell Wright's "The Shepherd of the Hills." He left Chicago, Monday, April 7, to take charge of his new duties and will make headquarters at Los Angeles and San Francisco. He expects to have five road shows operating soon.

It is his intention to play the feature at first class regular picture houses in the larger cities. Admissions will run to 50 cents.

Rothapfel Unit Program Starts Well.

Frank J. Flaherty, Chicago manager of the Film Clearing House, Inc., announced early last week that he had signed the Woodlawn, Riviera and Central Park theatres for the first week of the Rothapfel Unit Program, also the Alhambra, Milwaukee, for the first week's run. He also contracted with the Jefferson, Ft. Wayne, and the Lincoln Square Theatre, Decatur, Ill., for three days of the first week's run.

Manager Flaherty stated that the exhibitors in these theatres believe that the Unit Program will be a big success and the writer is of the same opinion, as "Roxey" has never yet failed in anything he has attempted in connection with the screen.

Famous Players-Lasky Favor Soldiers.

Walter L. Hill, in charge of the publicity and service department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Chicago, informs me that the organization is participating very actively in the current campaign in the city to aid returned soldiers from service abroad in finding suitable employment. Thus far the organization has found places on its pay roll for seventeen of these men, who are now working regularly and rendering quite efficient service.

Film people, in every department of the trade, will do well to find places, wherever possible, for the men who risked their all for country and liberty. It is our bounden duty.

Bryson Reports Fine Business.

J. V. Bryson, Universal's Minneapolis manager, visited the city Saturday, April 12. When seen he said that business was very good in his territory and that prospects never looked better for the northwest.

Mr. Bryson sent out a road show early last February with "The Heart of Humanity," showing North Dakota and Minnesota at admissions as high as $1. Fargo was played for one week and other towns from three to five days. He reports very fine business.

In Minneapolis "The Heart of Humanity" had a successful run of seven weeks at the Shubert Theatre, at prices ranging to $1. Business averaged $5,500 gross weekly for that time.

Mr. Bryson's road show carries a 10-piece orchestra, an advertising and billing agent, two stage carpenters and an operator.

"Fires of Faith" at Orchestra Hall.

"Fires of Faith," a Paramount-Artcraft special which interweaves the activities of the Salvation Army at home and in the war zone in France, will be shown at Orchestra Hall, Monday, May 5. The management expects to do capacity business with this absorbing feature, which shows the Salvation Army's wonderful work in France and some exciting aeroplane scenes including actual fights in the air.

The production features Catherine Calvert and Eugene O'Brien, who figure in the romantic episodes of the stirring love story.

On the same program, Burton Holmes will present for the first time in Chicago some extraordinary pictures showing his recent experiences with the Yanks at the front. These pictures form a tribute to Chicago soldiers and coming from Mr. Holmes, a Chicagoan, they will be treasured all the more.

EVERGLADES AND RIVER AMAZON FILMED

Outing-Chester's Latest Teaches Art of Catching Alligators and His Boat Gives "Onceovers" to Jungle Towns

OUTING-CHESTERS for the last two weeks in April are considerably different in character from the foregoing numbers of the series, and quite as interesting. "Up in the Air After Alligators" takes the spectator on a flying trip over Miami, Fla., with a young man who after witnessing the wonders of an alligator farm, decides to visit the Everglades for a brush against the alligator in his native haunts.

We notice that the young man, after landing in one of the streams which intersect the Everglades, is satisfied to stand by and let the other fellow do the trick. We also note that by way of giving orders he is almost as busy as the alligator who struggles fiercely to evade the embraces of his captor. An alligator, too wise to open his mouth under water, is a safe article to handle as long as his head can be kept below the surface; and it is noticable that when Mr. Alligator emerges, his jaws are held fast shut by the brawny hand of the hunter. He is then muzzled and hauled ashore, and is further mortified by being placed in the "dark room" of the hydroplane to be proudly exhibited in Miami at a later date.

A Trip Up the Amazon.

"Mr. Outing Floats a Dream" takes us to that rarely filmed part of the world which bounds the Amazon river. Starting at Para, a Brazilian seaport at the mouth of the Amazon, we sail with the cameraman up the river of wide repute, bordered by mystic jungles. The city of Manaos, equipped with all sorts of modern conveniences, is rather a startling revelation. The final stop is made at Iquitos, a village lying on the shores of the river just over the boundary line of Peru. Here we find the most interesting feature of life in this corner of Peru to be the floating markets where all sorts of tropical fruits and vegetables are sold to the consumer first hand. This is one of the most interesting South American pictures that we have seen.

BRITISH-AMERICAN BUYS WARNER FILM

"Other Man's Wife" Is First Picture Chosen for Distribution in America and Other Countries

THE British-American Pictures Finance Corporation has acquired the world rights to H. M. Warner's late independent production, "The Other Man's Wife," starring Stuart Holmes and Ellen Cassidy. It will be released by Independent Sales Corporation through the Film Clearing House, Inc., as a special. The British-American Pictures Finance Corporation is one of the five picture corporations with which Frank G. Hall is associated and from time to time it will acquire the exclusive rights to independent productions to be released through the same channel.

The United States and Canadian territories will be handled by Independent Sales through the Film Clearing House, while the foreign territory will be covered by the Apollo Trading Company. Every detail has been arranged and with the releasing of the first print of "The Other Man's Wife," clients of Independent Sales and the Apollo Trading Company will find service awaiting them in all parts of the world.

"The Other Man's Wife" was produced by Harry M. Warner, of Warner Brothers, under the direction of Carl Harbaugh, formerly with William Fox. Mr. Harbaugh is one of the screen's ablest directors. The picture is in six reels. Stuart Holmes and Ellen Cassidy have the two principal roles, supported by a cast of well known screen artists.

The publicity and advertising departments are now at work on exploitation material and aids that will surpass in novelty ideas anything before attempted.

Arbuckle Changes Release Plans.

Owing to weather conditions, which have held up work on the Paramount-Arbuckle comedy, "The Bank Clerk," and also because the script will need revision, "Fatty" Arbuckle has decided temporarily to suspend work on this particular film and make a Western subject for his next comedy release.

The title and full details of the picture, which is already started, will be announced very soon.

"The Bank Clerk" will probably be completed in the near future for later release.

Outing-Chester Will Be Shown Anniversary Week

ONE of the features chosen by Managing Director Joseph L. Plunkett for the super-program at the Strand, New York, during the big Fifth Anniversary Week, is "Cameraing Through Africa," first half of the Outing-Chester big game release. And C. L. Chester feels that Mr. Plunkett has paid his productions a high compliment. The Strand's managing director for many months has had a keen eye open for material to make his birthday week one to be remembered until next April. He cast it ahead on the Outing-Chester series and called the current release worthy.

Also the First National stockholders who will be in New York during the week to attend their annual meeting and who will be honored guests at the Strand, will find particular interest and pride in the picture, because First National Exchanges comprise a large majority of those distributing Outing-Chesters throughout the country.

WHAT IS THE LENGTH OF A FEATURE?

World Man Discusses Matter of Trade Controversy, with Particular Reference to "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," a Thousand-Foot World Pictures Release

By Epes W. Sargent

HOW long is a feature? This is not a companion query to the age of Ann, but just how long is a feature? Can a feature be shorter than five reels? And is an eight-reel feature more of a feature than a five-reel feature? In other words, isn't it possible that the motion picture business is in danger of estimating value by means of the yardstick?

There seems to be a general rule that unless a picture runs close to five thousand feet it is not to be considered as worthwhile. If it runs double that length it should be made the basis of a state rights proposition and run as a touring attraction.

As a matter of fact a feature is the most prominent offering on a program, and it may not be more than a single reel.

That has been this writer's contention for a number of years, and point was given this argument by the success of "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain" at the Rivoli, this week, where it ran away from a dramatic story in five reels, thought it is within the thousand-foot length and the actual feature probably does not exceed four hundred feet. The New York Sun, whose dramatic reviews have been the despair of the press agents these many years, threw most of its space to the short length, while the Tribune, less independent in thought, gave it an appreciative comment while devoting most of its space to the poor leaders in the dramatic offering. To the public it is clear that the one-reel fantasy was the feature.

Smooth Camera Work.

"The Ghost of Slumber Mountain" is a combination of a slight narrative and some trick work which animates models of prehistoric animals with a fidelity really remarkable. Even old time cameramen are not able to say with definiteness that the effects are gained through stop camera work or by other means, though if stop camera is the method employed, the results are wonderfully smooth. The animals actually seem to be alive and are realistic in the extreme, while their modeling has the approval of scientists as being correct according to the accepted beliefs. To the average spectator the result is startling, but the picture was put on the bill as one of the minor offerings and not as the star feature merely because it was not a five-reel length nor a drama within the acceptance of the term.

Seeks Test of Headline Value.

World Pictures, which controls this work of Herbert M. Dawley, is seeking to test the headine value of the one-reeler. It has already had experience with single reels of pulling power in the Prizma pictures, and for this semi-scientific picture it has prepared one, three and six sheets more startling than the best efforts of the circus lithographers, for the "Blood-Sweating Behemoth of the Holy Writ," is a playful lapdog as compared with the antediluvian monsters which once ranged this planet. It has prepared a plan book of unusual helpfulness in that it discards freak plans and offers the sane suggestions of an actual agent who knows all angles of publicity work.

Just what will be the outcome will be watched with interest. It may be that many will fear to book the single reel, fearing that the length will not be regarded by the public as being worth while. That is the crux of the matter. The success or failure of this experiment should show whether or not length constitutes the present standard of excellence, at least this will be shown if the picture is given a fair trial.

Public Demands Novelty.

There is no particular reason why any novelty should not be accepted. The two sections of the Martin Johnson Cannibal picture have made much more money than the average five reel drama subject. Now and then a local feature in a news reel has made more money even than a Mary Pickford opposition. The public wants novelty, and it is not improbable that the public long ago would have accepted the shorter length feature above the five-reel drama had the novelty been presented in the proper light. The trouble is that the showmen themselves seem to have united in advancing the drama as a standard. They have lacked the courage to announce a one or two-reel feature, even though it is backed up by a drama of the proper length. Even S. L. Rothapfel, who announced that he would make a one-reel scenic the feature at his Rialto one week, did not continue the experiment.

Offers Strong Advertising Angle.

One trouble has been that novelties have been so few, but a proper demand will create its own supply. There are comparatively few one-reels containing matters of real interest. If there is material it is usually expanded to greater length merely to gain the added footage which is supposed to bring the additional rental. In "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain" the novelty is real. It is unusual work and it also offers a strong advertising angle. It is something to be offered the adult public as a novelty and to the schools as an educational feature. It meets all demands, but it is in one reel.

It will be interesting to note whether or not a sufficient number of alert exhibitors will take it up to encourage other efforts along this line. In spite of its length, it probably costs as much as the average first run five because it is unique. Properly advertised, it should bring in more money, yet it is possible that there will be too few who realize this to make the experiment all it should be financially.

May Open Way to Other Novelties.

It is to be hoped that another story may be told, for if this picture succeeds in breaking down the five-reel tradition it will open the way to other novelties which cannot be extended to five thousand feet and yet which must bring a reasonable rental price in order to show a return, and it is time that a business which offers such large possibilities should broaden its scope.

Because the five-reel dramas have made money we have contentedly settled down to the exhibition of five-reel dramas, not because other lengths and other forms are not possible, but because that form and that length, standardized, can be produced with comparative cheapness. The only other forms used are news reels and scenics, and these find their way onto the programs largely because the five-reel show is considered too short.

Picture That Points the Way.

The governments of the world recently paid their testimonials to the motion camera when it was employed to show to the people the work being done on the front and at the bases. Releases such as were produced by the Division of Films were vastly more vital than the same old story with the same young girl star, yet the lead was not followed up. The Williamson Brothers made undersea photography possible, yet it has been exploited only in connection with dramatic product after the first showings.

There is much more to the motion picture than the production of canned drama in a prescribed length. It is high time that audiences as well as producers were made to realize this fact and if "The Ghost of Thunder Mountain" aids in that result it will have done a mighty work indeed. There are scientific topics of vastly greater appeal than the mimic stage. This picture does more than scratch the surface. It points the way. It is to be hoped that its direction is heeded and that eventually the motion picture theatre may become something less rigidly formal than it is at present.

Oceangoing Film Service Formed.

With the North River crowded with Government warships, John Hammill, general manager of the Navy Film Supply Company, Inc., has many of his "exhibitors" within easy reach these days. Mostly they have been scattered near the far—and even now troop transports are going over and back with films supplied by Hammill's service.

When he decided that a change from the General Film Company was advisable, Mr. Hammill proceeded from the management of General's New York exchange into a business he long has had a mind to establish. Serving films to naval ships and troop transports with promptness and along strictly up-to-date lines was a need Mr. Hammill foresaw and now the Naval Film Supply Company, Inc., is in full operation. The "Gobs" want the latest features and comedies and the Hammill service supplies them on time and in any port they may be demanded.

EXHIBITOR IS KING OF FILM MARKET

A. S. Kirkpatrick Tells Why Robertson-Cole Pictures Were Sold as Either Specials or on the Series Plan

THE picture market is wide-open because the exhibitor has made it wide-open, according to A. S. Kirkpatrick, assistant general manager and director of sales of Exhibitors' Mutual Distributing Corporation. Mr. Kirkpatrick asserts that the so-called program has been banished, that series booking exists only where, for his own protection, the exhibitor wants to book series. He says the policy of booking a picture at a time is here, because the exhibitor has finally come to a conclusion that the wide-open market is the most equitable plan. He declares, however, that no distributing organization, serving exhibitors of all classes, can maintain a rigid selling policy in all its territories, because the exhibitor insists upon buying his pictures in the way he wants to buy them.

The Exhibitor Is the King.

"The fact of the matter is," continued Mr. Kirkpatrick, "that the exhibitor is king in this business. He has not always been, I will admit, but long before he knew it he was, and we knew it long before we were willing to admit it.

"Since December 15, 1918, when the Exhibitors' Mutual began the distribution of the Robertson-Cole subjects, our sales policy has been based on the policy of a wide-open market. We have sold all the Robertson-Cole subjects, a picture at a time, except in instances where the exhibitor insisted, for his own protection, upon contracting for a star series. These men feel that the star series booking plan gives them a protection which is impossible under the open market plan and they are right in some respects.

Value of the Star System.

"Under the star series plan the exhibitor is in a position to popularize the productions of a particular star in his neighborhood or community and capitalize on the popularity which his money and his efforts have created. There is a cancellation clause in his contract by which he can discontinue the series if the productions do not meet the standard he has expected. In short, he has a guarantee that a competing exhibitor cannot steal the pictures which come in that series. He benefits, too, by a reduced selling cost—six or eight pictures sold at the cost of one under the open market plan.

"As an example of the success of the star series plan I may cite the plan under which we offered the current series of Haworth productions starring Sessue Hayakawa. There are eight pictures in the series. They were sold under the star series plan for the two first productions with an option on the rest.

Hayakawa Pictures as Specials.

"The Haworth studios actually produced a series of pictures which, up to the fifth release, has excelled anything the exhibitor expected. The third and fourth productions were better than the first and the second. The fifth excels them all.

"As a matter of fact the Hayakawa productions now being released are as near a series of specials as any series that ever was made. 'The Courageous Coward,' the current release is a special in every sense of that maligned word. Under the wide-open market policy it would have been possible to get bigger prices for 'The Courageous Coward' than for any of the previous Hayakawa releases.

Competition Affects Prices.

"Under the wide-open market the principles of competitive business apply on each individual production. The law of demand forces the prices up, and the demand is perfectly healthy business condition because it is established that the specific production will produce greater profit to the exhibitor. The distributor cannot gouge the exhibitor and expect not to suffer from the reaction which affects the entire industry. The exhibitor cannot compel the distributor and producer to operate without profit and expect not to suffer from a poorer quality of product.

"Exhibitors' Mutual is operating on a policy of fair play. We are exhibitor controlled and exhibitor owned and our efforts are directed to delivering to the exhibitor a product which he can retail at a profit.

Open Market Its Policy.

"The wide-open market plan has been a policy of this organization since the last month of 1918, and it has worked out with great success. All our pictures, star series and specials, have been offered under that plan with the option of star series up to the exhibitor. I am convinced that the wide-open market is here to stay, but I am convinced of more than that—that the exhibitor is the boss in this business and that he is going to continue to be the boss.

"The dominant policy in the conduct of this corporation's affairs has been a square deal for the exhibitor. The men who manage our exchanges and the men who work for us in the field have had this policy driven home to them.

"I might cite the policy under which the series of one star Chaplin productions were sold. These productions came onto the market in the day of the program and it would have been worth thousands of dollars to have forced certain parts of our program onto the exhibitor with the Chaplins. Instead the Chaplins were sold entirely independent of any other release and the resultant exhibitor confidence in the organization was worth more than the thousands of illegitimate profits which we might have taken.

Absorbs Federal War Tax.

"We were, too, the first to absorb the federal war tax on film because we felt that, in justice to the exhibitor, it was unfair to make him pay the fifteen cents per reel which the organized distributors assessed.

"It has long been a policy of the organization that any exhibitor with a grievance against the corporation or against the exchange with which he did business, would receive a courteous reception and a considerate hearing at the executive offices, and that rule is still in force."

Mr. Kirkpatrick has had a broad experience in the motion picture industry as producer, director, exhibitor, film salesman, exchange manager and home office executive. He has surrounded himself with an organization of practical men, who rose in the ranks of the organization itself, strictly on their own merit, men who responded to his maxim, "make it snappy."

Washington Showmen Asked to Aid Foreign Charities

WASHINGTON exhibitors are literally being worried to death by requests for assistance in collecting money for various funds to be used for foreign relief work. They find it very hard to refuse their help to the men and women who are back of the various projects, but are compelled to do so in many cases because of criticism from patrons.

"We have more calls to assist in drives and to collect money for all sorts of schemes for foreign relief than one could imagine," said Harry M. Crandall. "Personally, I hate to refuse, but the people are beginning to tire of it all, and there are many efforts that are of no avail. You see there are so many of our own people that really need help. Our streets are full at times of wounded men from Walter Reed Hospital. That brings things home to us. Then we see in the papers that it is being found difficult to get jobs for our returning soldiers.

"There is a drive for this and a drive for that purpose or a tag-day. No matter what it is, the theatre men are asked to donate and to aid. I think it would be a good idea if the people who are asking for money for foreign relief would get together just as the big organizations in this country did in the United War Work campaign. We could have one big drive and get them all that they need, or at least all that could be obtained and then turn to our home charities and the Victory Loan."

BEBAN'S "HEARTS OF MEN" GOING FAST

Hiram Abrams Reports Territories Sold on First of Star's Own Films—Has Big Appeal

NOT only has "Hearts of Men," the first production George Beban has made at the head of his own organization, been lavished with additional praise at private showings to state rights buyers, during the past week, but Hiram Abrams, who presents Mr. Beban in this remarkable picture of human and heart interest, has been disposing with greatest rapidity of the territorial rights for the country.

The territory that already has been sold by Mr. Abrams for this production and the buyers are Boston Photoplay Company, Fred Murphy, for Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut; Rolfe Film Company, H. F. Jans, for New Jersey; Frank Beverstock, for Ohio and Kentucky; the Greater Stars Productions, Inc., Clyde Elliot and F. M. Brockwell, for Illinois and Indiana; The Pioneer Film Corporation, M. H. Hoffman, for New York; The Middle West Distributing Company, Ralph Wettstein, for Wisconsin, and the All Stars Features, Sol Lesser, for California, Arizona and Nevada.

Mr. Beban, who has been in New York for the past few weeks, has been the recipient of many praiseworthy commendations. Not only has there not been a single adverse criticism brought forward, it is said, but every prospective buyer of any of the rights strongly maintains that Mr. Beban has in this production struck the human chord that will make the picture not only one of the biggest profit-getting pictures for exhibitors, but a picture that the general public will long afterwards remember and talk about.

Speaks to Prospective Buyers.

In speaking to prospective purchasers of the production this week, Mr. Beban personally explained his own version of his endeavors by saying, "I have only wished to set forth the romances of life, the big loves of real life—those loves which last all through life and which are the possessions of the humblest as well as the most cultured people. The great loves are those of the love of a father for his children, a man for his pal, a son for his mother, a girl for her sweetheart or just that love of the brotherhood of men. I have not gone out of the beaten path for the love interest in this picture, for it is that of a father for a motherless child.

"Personally I am a great believer in the good taste of the public, the photoplay public as well as the more highly educated clientele of the speaking stage, and I have never striven simply to make a picture which was merely artistic. My ambition has always been to make productions that are intensely human, universally appealing and just so filled with the nobler emotions of mankind that they will be absolutely real to everyone and to be the best kind of entertainment obtainable."

George Beban, Jr., Impressive.

One of the most impressive factors of the production is the clever acting of George Beban, Junior, who is his father's co-star. This wonderful child who accidentally walked into a picture two years ago, and was "the hit of the picture," because of his unconsciously wonderful work, plays opposite Mr. Beban in this production in a manner that it would not make even his own father displeased to say that he "shares the honors with the star."

World Pictures to Release Three More Kleine Pictures

WORLD PICTURES announces that arrangements have been effected between George Kleine and the World Film Corporation whereby the World will distribute through its exchanges "The Unchastened Woman," a feature picture made from Louis Anspacher's play. In the picture version Grace Valentine plays the title role.

Another picture which will be distributed by the World by arrangements with Mr. Kleine is "The Unbeliever." Marguerite Courtout is the star. In this picture the 78th, 79th, 80th and 96th Companies of Marines, about 1,000 men, were employed. These are the same marines who won undying fame at Belleau Wood and Chateau Thierry. Among the cast supporting Miss Courtout in this picture was Sergeant Moss Gill, who plays the sharpshooter, who reads his Bible in the trenches between pot shots at the enemy.

Another member of the cast was Captain James F. Rorke of the 5th Regiment of Marines. Major Halcomb, another member of the cast, appears in charge of a detachment of Marines.

The third picture which the World will distribute by an arrangement with Mr. Kleine is "Conquered Hearts." This is a five-reel Rialto De Luxe production in which Margaret Marsh is the star and is supported by an all-star cast. The picture was directed by Francis J. Grandon. Elsewhere we print reference to World Pictures and the Chaplin reissues.

Many Fox Films on Presidential Ship.

The following Fox features were taken aboard the George Washington just before she sailed for France:

"True Blue," featuring William Farnum; "Six Shooter Andy," starring Tom Mix; "Western Blood," a William Farnum picture; "The Scarlet Road," featuring Gladys Brockwell; "Fighting Blood," with William Farnum; "Queen of the Sea," the Annette Kellerman spectacle, and "The Kid Is Clever," a George Walsh picture. The Fox comedies aboard the Presidential ship are "Her Husband's Wife," "Are Married Policemen Safe?" "A Waiter's Wasted Life," "His Neighbor's Keyhole," "Wild Women and Tame Lions," "Who's Your Father?" "A Tight Squeeze" and "His Smashing Career."

Of the Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons are "The Leak," "On Ice," "Occultism," "Superintendents," "Tonsorial Artists," "The Tale of a Pig," "Hospital Orderlies," "Life Savers" and "Meeting Theda Bara.'

Washington Famous Rearranged.

The exchange of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on Tenth street, Washington, is to be remodeled, following the taking of a long lease on the building. District Manager William E. Smith has been in town for several days.

The business of the various departments of the exchange has so grown that the present allotments of space are inadequate and the improvements contemplated will take in a lot of formerly waste space. The reception room, now at the center of the exchange on the left, will be moved to the exreme front. The office of the assistant manager adjoining it will go across the aisle to a point adjoining the office of the manager. When this is completed all of the space on the left will be turned over to the accounting department.

George Beban and His Little Son, George, Jr., Compound a Gre at Total of Heart Interest in Hiram Abrams' "Hearts of Men."

FOX HIRES RAILROAD FOR THRILLER

Director Stanton Stages Real Train Wreck for Henry Blossom's Melodrama "Checkers"

WILLIAM FOX leased an entire railroad system in New Jersey, Sunday, April 13, to put a realistic train wreck into a picture. For half a mile the burning cars sped down a grade toward an open draw bridge in the Raritan River, while more than two thousand persons looked on one of the most interesting dramatic spectacles they had ever seen. And when the crash came as the train tipped over the open draw into a deep channel of the river they gasped in astonishment.

Director Stanton Gets Realism.

Richard Stanton, director of "Checkers," a forthcoming Fox picture, which it is said, will be one of the largest spectacles of the year when released some time in the future, spent between $4,000 and $5,000 to produce this scene, which did not run more than 200 feet. It was undoubtedly one of the most costly of picture operations. But before Mr. Fox went to Europe some weeks ago, he insisted that this incident of the story should not be slighted.

"Checkers" a Big Spectacle.

When Mr. Fox purchased the play, "Checkers," founded on the famous novel of that name by Henry Blossom, Jr., he determined to utilize every realistic incident of the story to make a picture which should be one of the great spectacles of the year. For that purpose he gathered a company of many first class screen actors, including Thomas J. Carrigan, Robert Elliott, Jean Acker, Ellen Cassity, Tammany Young and others. The story is one of real life, and its scenes run from vicious fights to dark and dangerous passages in an underground Chinese quarter to brilliant scenes on one of the great race tracks of the country. In fact, Director Stanton is now at the Havre de Grasse track in Maryland.

Priest Sales Agent for Blackton Films.

J. Stuart Blackton has announced the appointment of Robert W. Priest, president of the Film Market Corporation, as general sales agent for Blackton Productions, Inc. This arrangement was introduced in the consummation of deals negotiated for Mr. Blackton by Mr. Priest disposing of all rights to the latest Blackton Production, "A House Divided."

The first deal covered the sale of all foreign rights on "A House Divided" to Bech Van Siclen & Company and the second recorded the sale of the United States and Canadian rights to Frank G. Hall, president of the Independent Sales Corporation.

Hodkinson Uses Dailies for Sales Announcement

THE decision of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation to offer all productions distributed through that organization on a wide open booking basis, was too important to delay making it known to theatre owners in every section of the United States. Therefore in addition to using the recognized mediums of the industry for the announcement the daily newspapers of America were used through their motion picture departments and the important regional newspapers in the large cities were mailed directly to exhibitors by the Hodkinson representatives operating through thirty Pathe distributing offices.

As quickly as New York learned of the decision of W. W. Hodkinson as to open booking, San Francisco, Chicago, Atlanta and all other sections knew it and telegrams approving the policy were being received at the Hodkinson home offices in New York.

Emerson-Loos Feature Has Special "Booster" Service

THE presentation of Paramount's feature, "Oh, You Women!" advertised for immediate release on an independent plan, will be supplied with special service features of different sorts. The press department of Famous Players-Lasky has contributed as its share of the "booster campaign" an elaborately developed pressbook filled with exhibitors' aids, suggestions for promotion, advertising copy and press work.

The work is issued on heavy paper and is about 10 by 16 in dimensions. Twenty-four pages are devoted to the purpose. The covers are lithographed in colors and there is a dash of brightness carried on every page, to lend attractiveness to the issue. While the work is specifically intended to "put the picture over," it will serve as an effective advertisement for "Oh, You Women!" if it falls into the hands of an exhibitor who has not contracted for the feature.

The contents will instruct the showman in the essentials of billing, advertising and generally promoting the work from the moment contracts are signed. Four experts have contributed their share to the result—the art, advertising, promotion and publicity branches of the Famous Players-Lasky organization have shared in the outcome.

Green Roomers Hold Show April 20.

The Green Room Club's seventeenth annual Dress Rehearsal will be held at the Hudson Theatre, New York, Sunday night, April 20. That the entertainment will be one of the biggest yet is attested to by the annuoncement of program features already planned.

Among the stars who already have promised to appear are Marjorie Rambeau, Frank Bacon, Nora Bayes, Alice Brady, Herbert Corthell and James Lackaye. Ed Wynn will be master of ceremonies. The evening will also bring forth three original playlets, written for the occasion by Green Roomers.

Special Strand Overture.

One of the many special features which Managing Director Jos. L. Plunkett, of the Strand Theatre, will present during the Strand's fifth anniversary week, commencing April 20, will be an elaborate overture to be played by the symphony orchestra and enhanced by special scenic and electrical effects. Henry Hadley, the well-known American composer, was commissioned to write the composition for the Strand celebration. Mr. Hadley's new composition, which will be played under the direction of Carl Edouarde, is entitled "The Spirit of the Elements."

"Down the Steep Slope the Madly Flaming Cars Raced with Their Precious Cargo of Human Freight. Suddenly the Drawbridge ——"

But you'll know it all when you see Fox's "Checkers," which supplied entertainment for half New Jersey when it staged the above wreck on Sunday, April 6, sending a box car and caboose into Kill von Kull, an arm of New York Bay.

MUTUAL INSURANCE FOR M. P. E. A., Inc.

Newly Organized Exhibitor Association Arranges for Protection Through Motion Picture Bureau

IN last week's issue of Moving Picture World we reported the formation of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc. This organization is intended to replace all exhibitor associations of national scope that previously existed as representing the picture showmen of the country. It is an outcome of the action taken in Chicago last September when the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America and the American Exhibitors Association voted to merge into one body and selected an executive committee to act.

Developments following the meeting at the Astor Hotel, April 3-4 show that apart from performing the usual functions of an association of showmen, it is proposed to add an insurance feature to the operations of the M. P. E. A., projected along mutual lines and available only to members in good standing. The membership fee was decided upon after an exhaustive canvass with two cents per seat as the most equitable basis for assessment.

It is claimed on behalf of the insurance proposition that the two-cents-a-seat basis for membership will be offset and largely overbalanced by the insurance feature which it is claimed will save, for the exhibitor, through the mutual plant an amount that will be attractive as a membership "booster" for the new association. In reporting these claims we simply repeat the statements initiating with the organization, without prejudice or bias. We quote:

Presents Insurance Features.

"The Motion Picture Insurance Bureau, a corporation of insurance men with its principal office in Indianapolis, presented to the executive committee of the M. P. E. A., Inc., a proposition to cut present rates on fire insurance of members of at least twenty-five per cent.; to cut present rates of public liability insurance of members from a base rate of twenty cents a seat to a base rate of ten cents a seat—a cut of fifty per cent.—with a differential from the lower base rate in certain cases; to cut present rates of compensation insurance of members (where such insurance is required to be carried) at least twenty-five per cent., and to make rate reductions in various special lines of insurance.

"These reductions were all shown to be possible through handling motion picture theatres as subjects for "class insurance" and applying to them the experience of various mutual organizations, such as hardware, lumber, millers and allied mutual companies.

Soliciting to Start Soon.

"This proposition was presented by Dale John Crittenberger, general manager of the Motion Picture Insurance Bureau, and by Sharon E. Jones, of Pittsburgh, Pa., secretary of the Pennsylvania and Atlantic Seaboard Hardware Association. Mr. Crittenberger was connected for six years with the insurance department of the State of Indiana and is an insurance man of experience. Mr. Jones, in the hardware business for years, has handled class insurance for thousands of clients and is now handling it for this association.

"A contract covering the handling of insurance for members of the M. P. E. A., Inc., was signed with the Motion Picture Insurance Bureau and it is announced that within the next ten days that concern, with Secretary Rembusch, of the M. P. E. A., Inc., will begin solicitation of exhibitors throughout the country to become members of the M. P. E. A., Inc."

Projectionists' Society Has Successful Dinner

THE American Projectionists' Society, an organization of high-class projectionists, held its second annual dinner at the new Pennsylvania Hotel, New York, at midnight, Saturday, April 12. Among the diners were many prominent producers and exchangemen; and the wives, sweethearts and sisters of the members.

W. B. Landon acted as toastmaster, and kept the assemblage in gales of laughter with his witty introductions of speakers and with his clever stories.

Hugo Riesenfield, managing director of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, proved the surprise of the evening in his ability as a speaker. He said that he had inquired as to what might be the difference, if any, between a projectionist and an "operator." The reply had been, he said, that the projectionist began where the operator left off. He then launched into a dissertation on the work of the projectionist, accepting the new term gracefully. In speaking of the work he asserted that the projectionist was really an after-director, who re-directed the photoplay as it was projected to the screen. He cited several instances where ridiculous situations had arisen through wrong interpretation of tempo by the projectionist. He put especial stress on the "soul kiss," saying the projectionist could make it a thing of beauty or a mere peck. "And," he remarked, "Lester Bowen sure knows how to linger on a kiss." Lester Bowen, be it known, is the chief projectionist of the Rivoli and Rialto.

F. H. Richardson told what he called the "Story of the Motion Picture," in course of which all departments came in for a characteristic raking.

Following Mr. Richardson's speech the diners stood in silence for a period in memory of the late Frank Cannock, who was an honored member of the society.

Will C. Smith, general manager of Nicholas Power Company, and William C. Francke, of the Precision Machine Company, both covered themselves with glory.

Much credit for the success of the affair was due to the efforts of Joseph LaRose, Joseph Basson and Ben Turner, president of the society.

Files Expenses In Sunday Show Fight.

The Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, which maintained a lobby in Indianapolis at the last session of the state legislature, recently filed a statement of the expenses incurred in its fight for legislation legalizing Sunday motion picture shows.

The statement, which is made in accordance with the Indiana law, shows that C. C. Pettijohn, of Exhibitors Mutual, received a fee of $1,000; Thomas D. McGee, an Indianapolis attorney, $500, and Martin Hugg, another attorney, $250. The other expenses of the lobby are given as $2,812.97, making a total of $4,562.97.

Motion Picture Club Holds Reception at Commodore

AT the Hotel Commodore, New York, one of the newest and largest hotels in the United States, the Motion Picture Club of America, Inc., an organization composed of motion picture exhibitors, held its first reception and ball on Friday evening, April 11. Many representatives of all branches of the film industry, including producers, exhibitors and players were present, and the gathering was a success.

Dancing commenced about 10 o'clock in the grand ballroom with its attractive decorations of peacock blue, gold and cream, and lasted well into the morning. The music was furnished by a twenty-piece orchestra.

The grand march was led by Mabel Taliaferro and Creighton Hale, and among others present were Violet Mersereau, Marguerite Courtot, Dr. Hespe, John Manheimer, Mac Weisner, Charles Steiner, Hugo Riesenfeld, Sidney Ascher, Morris Needles, Frank Powell, Max Cherin, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Rosenberg, Max Oestricher, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Solomon and the former's mother; M. Kashin, N. Jacobs, J. W. Brandon, Herbert Miles, C. O. Bauman, J. V. Ritchey, Joseph Miles, I. E. Chadwick, Charles Haring, M. J. Gearson, Edward Saunders, W. E. Shallenberger, William Wright, Charles Abrams, Jack Cohn, Mark Dintenfass, John Hammill, Charles Steiner, Emanuel Goldstein, O. A. C. Lund, I. Oliver, I. N. Hartstall, Edward A. McManus, Leo Wharton, Billy Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Max Aaron, Arthur B. Reeve, John Gray, Edward O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Max Nathan, Earl Kramer and sister, and Lew Rogers.

The committee of arrangements, consisting of William V. (Billy) Hart and I. N. Hartstall, provided an excellent entertainment, consisting of a number of solos and other musical numbers.

Sol Lesser Comes to Boom "Yankee Doodle in Berlin"

WITH his wife to bear him company, Sol Lesser, the Pacific Coast film distributor, reached his New York office April 16 to start a campaign for the general circulation of "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," the Sennett five-reel comedy for which he owns rights covering all of the United States and Canada. The "bathing girl" picture has started its career in San Francisco and Los Angeles and Mr. Lesser is here to arrange for a New York theatre in which to exploit the comedy as soon as he can close his deal.

Four road shows will be traveled as soon as routes can be organized, the attraction playing the larger theatres in the big cities with groups of guaranteed "Sennett Bathing Girls" as an extra attraction. The move to add shapely beauties in the flesh to the attractiveness of their own pictures on the screen has provoked large attendance in Coast towns, and the number of road shows will be regulated only by the number of these picture beauties who can be spared from the Sunshine studios in Hollywood.

Will Open "Girl Film" Here.

The first date in the territory east of the Rockies will be played at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, starting May 11, where the "bathing girls" will be on view two weeks, going thence to Keith's Hippodrome, Cleveland, for an engagement of similar length. The exception to "road show" territory was created while Mr. Lesser was passing through Chicago on his way East. E. W. Diehl, of Detroit, bought Michigan, and Henry Dollman obtained the Indiana rights. These territories are all Mr. Lesser intends to sell.

Meanwhile Harry Garson's "The Unpardonable Sin" has started to "clean up" for Mr. Lesser in California, Nevada and Arizona—and his other territorial purchases are kept busy from Lesser offices in San Francisco, Chicago, Cleveland and New York. Mr Lesser will be here two months.

SWISS WANT AMERICAN FILM FEATURES

During War the Few Subjects They Knew Were Left Out of Calculations—Italy Gets German Foothold

IN a letter received by Frank J. Marion, of Kalem, from a man in Switzerland, the status of American films in that country, as well as in Germany and Austria, was rather definitely set forth. Mr. Marion's correspondent was applying for a connection as Swiss representative for Kalem, but as that organization is out of business, the letter has been tendered to Moving Picture World by Mr. Marion as a source of information for other firms in the industry.

"It is an undeniable fact," writes Mr. Marion's correspondent, "that the American film is becoming every day more popular in the European market, and the moment is not far that no cinema theatre can exist without United State film as a main factor in its program. I remember very well the 'Good old days,' before the war, when now and then an American feature production appeared on a Swiss screen; how the audiences enjoyed the excellent interpretation of the stars and admired the great resources in brain and genius as were there displayed.

"Since then United States film almost entirely disappeared and was replaced by German, French, Italian and Danish films, and especially the latter, have grown into an immense popularity. But this popularity would soon vanish before enthusiasm with which the famous American stars would be welcomed, who are just now, with the exception of the immortal Charles Chaplin, entirely unknown to Swiss audiences.

Italy Gaining Enemy Foothold.

"Throughout Germany and Austria the Italian industry is already making great efforts to get ahead of the competition and seems to be on the best way to succeed; but from the fact that in the German mind the United States is undoubtedly considered the most reasonable of their adversaries, the American product would find it an easy task to overrun any other foreign product. An immense field is left open for cultivation and great things may be achieved if only the necessary propaganda service is properly handled."

B. S. Moss Also Leaves Symphony.

Maurice Kashin, of the Broadway Theatre, will sever his connection with the house when it is taken over by B. S. Moss April 30. Mr. Moss has also taken over the lease of the Symphony, in uppper Broadway, where Mr. Kashin has likewise been in charge for some time. The Broadway will open under the Moss management with the initial New York presentation of Harry Garson's production of "The Unpardonable Sin," in which Blanche Sweet is the star.

PROCTOR GETS BIG ALBANY THEATRE

Pictures Oust Legitimate in Harmanus Hall —Capital City to Have Two Other Large Houses

FOLLOWING an announcement from Max Spiegel that he would erect a pretentious motion picture theatre in Albany during the next few months, came news that F. F. Proctor had acquired Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, the largest theatre in this city, with a seating capacity of approximately 3,800, and one which has been devoted for many years to legitimate productions. In a statement given out Mr. Proctor says that he plans to run high class photoplays in his newest acquisition, and that interspersed will be the cream of Broadway successes, including comedies, dramas and grand opera. An organ duplicating those at the Rialto and Rivoli in New York will be installed. Harmanus-Bleecker Hall was built in 1889 and is a huge structure located some little distance outside of the business center of the city.

Two Other Houses to Be Built.

In addition to Mr. Spiegel's new theatre, which it is said will cost upward of $300,000 and which will be patterned after some of the most modern houses in the larger cities, and which will have a seating capacity of approximately 3,000, two other motion picture houses are to be built in this city during the coming summer. Hugo Lerchner and Harry Hellman have formed a stock company and will operate what will be known as the Royal Theatre. Samuel Sucno will also build a theatre costing about $200,000, with a seating capacity of 1,800.

Up to the present time Albany, despite the fact that it is the capital city of the state, and has a very heavy transient population particularly during the winter months, has few if any up-to-the-minute motion picture houses. The Colonial, while a modern house, is located a mile or more from the business center of the city. Along Pearl street, there are a number of houses, but with comparatively small seating capacities.

Sunday Shows a Question.

Whether or not Albany will fall in line with other cities in the state and provide Sunday motion picture shows remains a question, even though it is a generally accepted fact that Governor Alfred E. Smith intends to sign the local option bill. At the present time, the neighboring city of Troy, which has Sunday movies, is a gainer by hundreds of dollars from this city every Sunday night.

GRANT.

Dolores Cassinelli Honored.

An indication of the esteem in which Dolores Cassinelli, the Italian screen star, is held by her compatriots was given recently at a festival held at the Vanderbilt Hotel, New York, for the benefit of the Free Fund for Italian Children and at which she and Mary Garden were the honorary guests of General Guiliomailti, attache of the Italian Embassy in this country. Also numbered among the distinguished persons present was the Marquis De Barbarini, Italian Minister of Shipping.

Northwest Showmen Star Showing of Loan Films

PICTURE theatres of the Northwest territory served by Minneapolis fired their opening gun in the campaign to put over the Fifth Liberty Loan by showing special film subjects on Sunday, April 6.

E. R. Pearson, manager of the Minneapolis First National Exchange, is chairman of the Minneapolis committee having charge of the distribution of the 157 Victory Loan prints allotted to this territory.

To Insure Showings.

To insure the showing of each print in some theatre during the drive Manager Pearson has urged every exhibitor who does not show each day of the week to notify him what days he does not show. In this way Mr. Pearson plans to avoid booking prints for the use of the exhibitor on days that are dark.

Schedules have been furnished each exhibitor showing where each print is to be forwarded. While 157 prints have a maximum possibility of 4,500 showings in 30 days, the theatres of this territory use about 25,000 shows in that period.

In view of this fact Mr. Pearson has urged and been promised co-operation from exhibitors to the end that maximum showings of the Liberty Loan subjects are assured.

Mark Gates Entertains Soldiers.

Mark Gates, managing director of the Dayton Theatre, Dayton, has as guests of the theatre about five hundred returned soldiers of the 148th Division, who spent two days in Dayton waiting for a change of trains. They saw "Pettigrew's Girl," starring Ethel Clayton.

About an hour after the regiment arrived Mr. Gates had men at the station Red Cross bureaus where they were being fed to announce that a party of soldiers would be made up to leave the station at seven forty-five that evening. At the stated hour about five hundred boys took advantage of the offer, and lining two abreast, paraded to the Dayton Theatre.

DISTRIBUTORS DECIDE TO IMPOSE TAX

At Meeting of Division of National Association They Adopt Clause for Insertion in All Contracts

A MEETING of the Distributors' Division of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was held in New York on April 11 for the purpose of discussing ways and means of collecting the tax which is levied on film rentals by Section 906 of the Revenue act of 1918.

This tax is charged on all film rentals and must be paid to the United States Government by the distributors each month for the rentals on their films during the previous month. So as to avoid any confustion in the matter, and that each one of the distributors would act in the same manner, a uniform tax clause was adopted, to be placed in all contracts with exhibitors for the exhibition of motion pictures on or after May 1, 1919. This tax clause reads as follows:

"The Exhibitor agrees that as long as Section 906 of the Revenue act of 1918 shall remain in force, the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor in addition to all other charges, a sum equal to 5 per cent. of the gross film rental, or in the event of a percentage booking, a sum equal to 5 per cent. of the distributor's share, for all pictures delivered and / or exhibited under this contract on and after May 1, 1919, such 5 per cent. to be added to the bill for said film and to become due when the other items on said bill become due. The exhibitor further agrees that any default in the payment of said 5 per cent. shall be considered a default in the same way as the non-payment of any other moneys due under and pursuant to this contract."

In view of the fact that the old tax of three-fourths cent a foot, which the distributors were required to pay under the 1917 law, will be rescinded as of May 1, 1919, the charge of 15 cents a reel a day will no longer be collected by the distributors, but in its place the tax will be collected, beginning May 1, 1919.

The following companies were represented at the meeting: Famous Players-Lasky, First National, Fox, Goldwyn, International, Pathe, Select, Triangle, Universal, Vitagraph, Metro, and World Film Corp.

Buhler Collates Films at Government's Request

THE United States Government is endeavoring to secure for perpetual record copies of all motion pictures taken in connection with the world war and especially those taken during the various loan drives, welfare campaigns and other activities.

As Philadelphia was the big busy center of such activities Uncle Sam naturally turned to Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company, there to aid in securing the many films taken in that part of the country and sent him a request to help make up the collection which is desired to be acquired and which will make an imperishable record of everything done in matters pertaining to the war.

In compliance with the Government's request, Mr. Buhler is having special copies made of the films taken in connection with the Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Red Cross and the Liberty Loan drives and for the coming Victory Loan Drive and also of the many other subjects photographed for the purpose of aiding the Government during and after the war.

Kay Laurel in New Paramount Film.

Kay Laurel, of Ziegfeld Follies fame, has an important role in Wallace Reid's Paramount picture, "The Valley of the Giants." This is Miss Laurel's second screen appearance.

The production was completed at the Hollywood Lasky studio. Grace Darmond is the leading woman, and others in the cast are Charles Ogle, Guy Oliver, James Neill, Will Brunton, Milt Brown, Ogden Crane, Lillian Mason, Alice Taafe, Ralph Lewis, Hart Hoxie and Jim Mason. The picture is adapted from the novel by Captain Peter B. Kyne.

WORLD TO DISTRIBUTE FIVE CHAPLINS

Completes Plans with George Kleine to Handle Four Essanay Revivals and One Newer Picture

AN announcement of more than ordinary importance attaches to the statement made by the World Film Corporation that an arrangement has been made with George Kleine, whereby World Pictures takes over the selling and distribution of five Charlie Chaplin pictures. Four of these are revivals and one a newer picture. The revivals are "Nights at the Show," "Police," "The Bank" and "Shanghaied." The newer picture bears the title of "Triple Trouble."

The World Corporation in distributing these pictures submits to the exhibitors throughout the United States the unquestioned fact that there is only one Charlie Chaplin and that unlike any other picture star, his vehicles are capable of being revived from time to time with the maximum box office returns. That it has been proved, even by blase Broadway, that Charlie Chaplin pictures can be called upon at any time to meet a crying demand for an attraction that will alleviate the distress of a depleted bank account. Mr. Chaplin is the biggest box office bet in the world today because he projects entertainment pure and simple to all classes and conditions of audiences.

World's Exchanges Notified.

On April 3 the salesmen of the World Film Corporation throughout the country were notified by wire that this company was to distribute these five pictures of Chaplin, and within seventy-two hours telegraphic returns indicates a complete wiping out of all existing records for fast selling and results obtained in distributing pictures.

The branch offices of the General Film Company have received instructions from both the home office and George Kleine to turn over to the branch offices of the World all prints, advertising matter and accessories of these five Chaplin pictures.

The General Film has turned over to the World Pictures and its branch offices a complete statement of all contracts taken, pending and in prospect and all data as regards the sales campaign since its inception for these other pictures, so that branch managers and salesmen for the World are in a position to pick up the reins exactly where they left off without loss of time.

Lieutenant Moore to Work at Lasky West Coast Plant

LIEUT. WILLIAM J. MOORE, who, before going to France, was employed in the New York office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has arrived at the Lasky Hollywood studio of that company, where he will start work in the near future.

Lieutenant Moore is the only employe of the company to have been awarded the Croix de Guerre. He was wounded several times—shot through the lung, through the leg, and gassed. However, all his wounds have thoroughly healed, and he is now well and ready again for the picture game.

Just what Lieut. Moore will do at the studio is not yet known. The company, anxious to express its appreciation of the heroism of an employe, is giving him an opportunity to select the department in which he will be happiest.

Newman Visits New York.

Frank R. Newman, manager of the Pantages Theatre at Salt Lake City, was a visitor at the home offices of the Universal last week. Mr. Newman is spending a brief vacation in New York and will confer with Mr. Pantages at Chicago on his return trip West.

A. E. SMITH REVIEWS TRADE HISTORY

Vitagraph President Outlines Growth of Company—Has Plans for Enlargement of Los Angeles Studio

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of the Vitagraph Company, the only pioneer motion picture company still extant, arrived in Los Angeles recently.

Of the small group that originated the motion picture industry and developed the art of subtle, eloquent pantomime, Albert E. Smith and the Vitagraph Company alone have remained continuously in the business; and as the head of the only company that has been through twenty-two years of evolution, his summary of the past and predictions for the future hold particular interest and significance.

The Vitagraph Company was organized in March, 1897, just twenty-two years ago. "Never in all that time has the outlook been brighter than it is today," said Mr. Smith. "The industry as a whole is back to the healthy business conditions that existed at an earlier period when competition was confined to the merits of each production and the drawing power of each star, and now with the war over, business conditions readjusted, and vastly improved equipment to work with, I anticipate an era of unprecedented prosperity."

Recounts Picture History.

Speaking of the history of the motion picture business, Mr. Smith brought out many interesting facts. Very few among the millions that daily attend motion picture shows know that the first companies to make motion pictures started business not as producers of plays in picture form, but as manufacturers of machines that projected pictures of moving objects.

"The Vitagraph Company," said Mr. Smith, "was incorporated to manufacture a machine that I invented called the 'Vitagraph,' and as there was no market for a motion picture projecting machine at that time we made the necessary films and gave exhibitions whereever we could get an audience. We made the cameras to take the pictures, the machines to project them, we acted the parts ourselves and were our own exhibitors.

"The first big step forward was made when the vaudeville theatres gave the motion picture a place on their programs as a regular attraction and advertised the number according to the machine they installed such as, 'The Vitagraph,' 'The Biograph,' etc.

"This was a great victory for the pioneers, and realizing the important bearing it would have on the future of our business, we exerted every effort to keep these theatres supplied with interesting films. This required so much attention that finally the manufacture of machines was abandoned and we devoted our entire attention to advancing the art of the pictures themselves.

Co-operation Necessary.

"It was the struggle in the early days of the industry that taught me the value of studying the public wants and co-operating with the exhibitor," continued Mr. Smith. "This co-operation must be of the practical kind. It should start at the boxoffices and take the basic form of giving the exhibitor only such pictures as the public will patronize in full strength. No other consideration should be allowed to interfere with this rule, the soundness of which has been again proved by recent experiments.

"These experiments have now come to an end and pictures will hereafter be shown on the 'booking by merit' policy. This change had to come, else the entire industry,—producers and exhibitors alike—would have gone down in ruin. To one who has studied the business since its inception, the ultimate result of the recent experiments was always plain, the answer was to be found with the public. The public will readily buy what it wants and will pay well for it, but you cannot force upon the public anything it doesn't want without courting ruin.

Depends on Public Approval.

"The motion picture business was born of public favor. It has been nurtured by the nickels and dimes and quarters of the public and it can continue to exist only by public approval. The thousands of dollars that have been turned from the doors of the motion picture theatres through dissatisfaction never have been and never could be made up on 'the big nights' when 'strong' attractions have been shown, and all of us have suffered as a result.

"The public has suffered because the class of pictures it wanted and was willing to patronize was not presented; the exhibitor has suffered because his house was not large enough on the big nights, to make up the loss of his weak nights, and the producer of meritorious features has suffered because the exhibitors average profits were small and booking conditions prevented the presentation of other strong features.

Foremost Industry Predicted.

"In the readjustment of conditions I expect to see motion pictures take first place among American industries," continued Mr. Smith, "and anticipating this, we have been steadily increasing our plant and strengthening our organization. At the present time we have more of our old players with us than at any time since the days of the Vitagraph Stock Company in 1915. Among the well known players that are again appearing in Vitagraph productions are Gladden James, Anders Randolf, Maurice Costello, J. Rogers Lytton, Kate Price and Antonio Moreno, who was absent from our forces for a short time. Among the noted directors who have rejoined our organization may be mentioned James Young and Ralph Ince."

Prefer Pictures to Oil.

Indications of oil have been discovered on the property occupied by the Vitagraph studio and a big offer made for the land has been refused by Mr. Smith. "I consider the making and distribution of pictures along the lines we have pursued more important than the production of oil," said Mr. Smith, "and instead of oil wells you will soon see many additional buildings on our property devoted to the making of Vitagraph productions."

In speaking of the producing plans of his company, Mr. Smith stated that a vast store of material was being accumulated, and as an illustration of the big stories that will be picturized during the year he mentioned Charles Klein's "The Third Degree," Robert W. Chambers' "The Cambric Mask," "The Wolf," "The Climbers," "The Sporting Duchess," "The Gamblers," "The Great Divide," and a score of other well-known stories, stage plays and original scripts.

To Increase Coast Studio.

Mr. Smith's visit to Los Angeles is a combination of business and pleasure, and his plans call for the starting of vast improvements and additions in the company's studio there. New outdoor stages will be built and the enclosed studio space will be increased to double the present area. Additional dressing rooms will be added to the present accommodations and the laboratories enlarged to twice their present capacity.

OLSON HEADS INDIANAPOLIS CENTRAL

Elected President of Big Theatre Company on Retirement of B. V. Barton—Rebuilding the Lyric

THE Central Amusement Company, which owns and operates the Lyric, Alhambra and Isis theatres in Indianapolis, has been reorganized and with the change comes the announcement of the retirement of Ben V. Barton, who has been president of the company since its inception in 1910. Mr. Barton has disposed of his interests to Charles M. Olson and others.

Mr. Olson was elected president of the company to succeed Mr. Barton. Although no names were made public, it is understood that the men who joined with Mr. Olson in buying the Barton holdings are well known in Indianapolis financial circles, but, for the time being, will not take an active part in the management of the company's affairs.

Company Largest in the City.

The Central Amusement Company is the largest theatrical and picture organization in the city owned and operated by Indianapolis men. The company is now rebuilding the Lyric, the combination vaudeville and motion picture house in North Illinois street, at a cost of more than $100,000, having recently taken a ninety-nine-year lease on the property adjoining the theatre on the south. The site recently leased is being utilized to enlarge the present Lyric building.

It is understood that negotiations also have been completed for a ninety-nine-year lease on another theatre site, centrally situated, but announcement of the details of the proposed theatre are not to be made until later.

Mr. Olson, the new president of the Central, has been identified with it since its formation. At that time the company started with an investment of $2,500, and today its assets are said to border on the half-million mark. Mr. Olson is a prominent figure in the picture business, and is a stockholder in several important film manufacturing and distributing companies.

Olson Famous as an Athlete.

Mr. Olson has served as vice-president and treasurer of the company and is internationally famous as an athlete, having been the champion light heavyweight wrestler of the world before he engaged in the motion picture and theatrical business. He founded the Central Film Service Company, in Indianapolis; bought control of and reorganized the Buckeye Film Exchange of Cincinnati, and is said to be heavily interested in the Peoples Amusement Company, which owns a string of motion picture theatres throughout the state.

Mr. Barton, the retiring member of the firm, is one of the pioneers in the motion picture business in Indianapolis. He started in business when there was only one picture show in the city and that a small place called the Vaudette on South Illinois street. He was formerly president of the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and was a member of the board of directors of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association. Mr. Barton has no definite plans for the future but says he will in all probability remain in Indianapolis.

Reno Exhibitor Candidate for Mayor.

Glenn D. Hurst, of the Grand and Rialto theatres, Reno, has announced his candidacy for the office of mayor, and a strong campaign in his behalf has been launched by prominent citizens of the Nevada metropolis. Mr. Hurst has been a resident of that city for more than twelve years and for the past ten years has been engaged in the theatre business with his brother.

Prior to his connection with this business he was a newspaperman and filled responsible positions on several publications in the East. He has attained marked success as a showman and has a wide following of friends who are confident that he will make an equally successful mayor.

Famous Players to Handle Big Special by Fairbanks

ARRANGEMENTS have been consummated between the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Douglas Fairbanks, for the distribution of "The Knickerbocker Buckeroo," Doug's first big special production since his contract with that organization expired several months ago. The picture is seven reels in length and will be handled as a special attraction.

"The Knickerbocker Buckeroo," according to reports from the West coast, is a most thrilling film. A series of episodes were taken in a railroad yard. Assisting Fairbanks in the presentation of these thrills is William A. Wellman, an ace of the Lafayette Flying Corps.

The film will be exploited on a large scale and special advertising and publicity helps are already in the course of preparation. A big advertising and publicity drive itself will be conducted. The film will be released May 18.

Form Service Bureau in Dallas for Showmen

THE Exhibitors' Service Bureau, the purpose of which is to take the worry from the shoulders of exhibitors, has been formed in Dallas. Charles D. Touchon, organizer and manager, declares that the plan is new for that part of this country and adds that already there is every indication that the bureau will be a success.

Mr. Touchon's plan is to look after the interests of exhibitors in securing satisfactory service from film exchanges, though the bureau is in no way connected with any of the exchanges. The principal cause of most of the trouble of exhibitors seems to lie in the lack of a central point of distribution, according to Mr. Touchon, and the fact that the exhibitor is not located, or personally represented, at the point of distribution.

The aim of the bureau is to overcome this difficulty and to also see that the exhibitor gets the full amount of advertising to which he is entitled. The bureau will be opened on May 1.

Margaret Turnbull at Lasky Studio.

Margaret Turnbull, author of many Paramount pictures, has arrived at the Lasky studio in Hollywood and has begun work in Frank E. Woods' department. Her first scenario will be an adaptation of "It Pays to Advertise," the former stage success, which it is understood will be used as a Paramount starring vehicle for Bryant Washburn.

Other recent acquisitions to the personnel at the Lasky studio are Walter Woods, scenario writer, and Major Wallace, an expert mechanical and electrical engineer, who has been engaged to conduct a series of experiments in special lightings for pictures.

INSTANTANEOUS TICKET TOTALER

(Compiled by B. H. Frances, Rex Theatre, Middletown, Ohio)

WE are indebted to B. H. Francis, of the Rex Theatre, Middletown, Ohio, for the accompanying tables, submitted for the convenience of ticket sellers in motion picture theatres where the basis of prices for children is 10 cents and for adults 15 cents. Mr. Francis is a member of Local No. 282, I. A. T. S. E., and M. P. M. O., proving our established contention that the projectionist of today is the theatre manager of tomorrow.

Finds Totals in a Jiffy.

Mr. Francis has found time, in addition to his duties in the projection booth to figure out the details of ticket-selling. In the table immediately to the right the total prices (including war tax) are for adults, 17 cents; for children, 11 cents. The row of figures at the left (from 0 to 10) indicate the number of adult tickets that may be asked for at the box office. The row of figures at the top indicate the number of admissions that may be required for children to go in the same purchase. Where the horizontal line meets the perpendicular row of figures indicates the total amount necessary.

Look Where the Rows Meet.

ADULTS 17c. CHILDREN 11c.

| | 0 | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | 10 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 0 | | 11 | 22 | 33 | 44 | 55 | 66 | 77 | 88 | 99 | 110 |
| 1 | 17 | 28 | 39 | 50 | 61 | 72 | 83 | 94 | 105 | 116 | 127 |
| 2 | 34 | 45 | 56 | 67 | 78 | 89 | 100 | 111 | 122 | 133 | 144 |
| 3 | 51 | 62 | 73 | 84 | 95 | 106 | 117 | 128 | 139 | 150 | 161 |
| 4 | 68 | 79 | 90 | 101 | 112 | 123 | 134 | 145 | 156 | 167 | 178 |
| 5 | 85 | 96 | 107 | 118 | 129 | 140 | 151 | 162 | 173 | 184 | 195 |
| 6 | 102 | 113 | 124 | 135 | 146 | 157 | 168 | 179 | 190 | 201 | 212 |
| 7 | 119 | 130 | 141 | 152 | 163 | 174 | 185 | 196 | 207 | 218 | 229 |
| 8 | 136 | 147 | 158 | 169 | 180 | 191 | 202 | 213 | 224 | 235 | 246 |
| 9 | 153 | 164 | 175 | 186 | 197 | 208 | 219 | 230 | 241 | 252 | 263 |
| 10 | 170 | 181 | 192 | 203 | 214 | 225 | 236 | 247 | 258 | 269 | 280 |

Special Table for Children.

The table in the lower left-hand corner of this page is reckoned on the basis of 15 cents for adults. It is presumed in this that the war tax is absorbed by the management on adult tickets. The two top rows of figures (above the separating rule) represents the number of children's tickets at 11 cents. This presumes that the management charges 1 cent war tax on tickets sold to children, and observing the basic charge of 10 cents for children and 15 cents for adults.

Figures Instantly to Twenty Tickets.

As in the other table, the very top row indicates the number of children for accounting in conjunction with adult tickets sold at 15 cents each. Let us suppose the call is for 4 adults (at 15 cents) and 3 children (at 11 cents). The figure "4," at the left, is the start. Follow out the row of horizontal figures until it meets the perpendicular row under "3," at the top, and we find the total charge to be 93 cents. Another instance: 7 adults and 5 children, $1.60, and so on through any combination including 10 each.

Quick Action and Accuracy.

If you are selling children's tickets the two top lines carry the guide. Two at 11 cents will be 22 cents; 6 at 11 will be 66 cents. Easy reckoning in any event. But these figures are to be considered separately from the combination with adult admissions. We believe that the explanation is clear. Furthermore we are of the opinion that ticket sellers will be indebted to Mr. Francis, of Middletown, Ohio, for supplying them with a time-saving and accurate guide for quick reference.

Preserve for Constant Use.

Paste the tables under the glass in yuor box-office window. Thus they will be preserved and handy to refer to.

ADULTS 15c. CHILDREN 11c.

VIRGINIA EXHIBITOR FEARS "REFORM"

J. Henkel Henry Says Anti-Saloon League Is Fighting for More Power—Urges Use of Vote

J. HENKEL HENRY, of the Empire Theatre, Winchester, Va., believes that the immediate present is the time for all Virginia exhibitors to begin a concerted effort to fight looming censorship legislation. Mr. Henry speaks as the lone exhibitor of Virginia who was present during the closing hours of the last Legislature, and through whose efforts the passage of the license reduction bill was considerably aided.

"Who are the leaders of censorship?" Mr. Henry writes. "They are this same reform element which has apparently succeeded in making the country dry without submitting the question to the people. That these people are well organized and never cease to work is a question beyond dispute. What are the results in Virginia? We would have censorship in Virginia today, had our last session of the Legislature lasted one or two days longer, and unless more liberal representatives are elected this fall, we are going to have censorship just as certain as the Lord made little apples.

"The patron of the censorship bill, Dr. Cannon, is the president of the Anti-Saloon League, of Virginia, and one of the leading prohibition workers in America. He, in conjunction with the state moral commissioner, the Rev. J. Sydney Peters, has been busily engaged for the past weeks paying the way for the election of men who will vote them more power.

"Some exhibitors are kidding themselves into believing that conditions are better during dry times. This is all wrong. The wave of prosperity that we are just going through has absolutely nothing to do with the liquor question. As a matter of fact, I contend that business would have been better if we had saloons here under proper regulations. Paying as high now as $12 a quart for liquor naturally does not leave as much money in men's pockets to spend for amusement as it would if they paid $1 a quart. My attendance has decreased with men. They frequent the restaurants, pool rooms, bowling alleys and poker games more now than during saloon times.

"We cannot afford to sit still and trust our fate to the hands of men who are tied by the Anti-Prohibition party. We must select our own men who will stand by us, and unless they are willing to give us this promise we don't want them. Primaries will be held in Virginia in August, when candidates for the Legislature and Senate will be selected. Cannon and his forces have their men slated. What are we going to do? Let's all get busy now and persuade some fellow to run who will stand by us.

Empey Sues Daily for $100,000.

The publication of a three column article in the New York Call on Monday, March 31, attacking Arthur Guy Empey, author of "Over the Top" and publisher of "Treat 'Em Rough" magazine, devoted to a warfare upon Bolshevism, in which Empey was represented as having been "fired" from the army for the good of the service, resulted yesterday in a summons and complaint being served upon the publishers of "The Call" in a suit for $100,000, for libel and Robert Spear, of 220 West Forty-second defamation of character instituted by st., New York, attorney for the fighting author.

Exchangemen Adopt Trade Rules.

Trade rules designed to protect both the exchange and exhibitor have been made effective by the Atlanta Film Managers' Association. The new rules were made effective March 31 and, it is reported, are the outcome of unfair practices of some exhibitors in the South.

McGarry Says the Orient Likes "America's Answer"

GARRY McGARRY, who is handling the United States Government picture, "America's Answer," in the Orient, recently reported from Singapore that this production is being shown to crowded houses.

Mr. McGarry, formerly a Vitagraph player and also known for his work in vaudeville and musical comedy, is on his way to Russia as a field officer of the Knights of Columbus. He has been engaged in relief work among the soldiers, has arranged many performances for the benefit of the troops, and is said to be the first to take a theatrical unit for the entertainment of the American soldiers in Siberia.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger announces that Mr. McGarry, in addition to handling "America's Answer," is also showing "Huns Within Our Gates" and other Arrow features and is meeting with great success.

DISCUSS MORALITY OF PICTURE SHOWS

Indiana Boards of Indorsers Deliberate Upon Good and Bad Effect of Photoplays on Children

THE good and bad effects of picture shows and the efforts of the Indiana and Indianapolis boards of indorsers of photoplays for juveniles to raise the standard of film shows were the principal topics disucussed at the joint convention of the two boards at the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis, Tuesday, April 1.

The good effects of the picture were presented to the boards by Frank J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, who is chairman of the board of directors of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors Association.

"The good things in literature, music and art are given in the motion picture theatres and the exhibitors are anxious to receive encouragement in presenting this kind of picture," said Mr. Rembusch. "As it is, people get what they want. Look what happened when 'The Fighting Roosevelts' was exhibited at an Indianapolis theatre recently. It had to be taken off the screen because it was too poorly patronized. 'Virtuous Wives' took its place, with the result that the house was packed at every performance. You women of the board are on the right track, and if you get back of the show the exhibitors will give you what is wanted."

Picture Show a Power for Evil.

Frank J. Lahr, judge of the juvenile court at Indianapolis, spoke of the evil effects of the picture show on the boys and girls who come into his court.

"One of the greatest powers for evil today is the moving picture show, and it needs attention," he said. "We want picture shows to present to our children ideals which they can follow through life. The picture show problem is next in importance to the temperance problem. A great deal of the evil which is done is the result of using the picture show as a nursery for the child."

Clara Burnside, supervisor of policewomen in Indianapolis, who has been appointed by Mayor Charles W. Jewett to censor films shown in Indianapolis theatres, touched on the bad effects of inferior pictures on girls and boys, but said she did not, by any means, hold the exhibitors entirely responsible for the class of pictures shown.

Pictures Not Altogether to Blame.

Comments on the talks were made by the Rev. Morton C. Pearson, head of the Indianapolis Church Federation, who said that the wrong doing of children should not be laid altogether to the motion picture show. He said he favors a moral censorship of pictures, such as the one conducted by the board. Mrs. Curtis Hodges, who gave a resume of the work of the board, spoke of the kindness and interest manifested toward the board members by many of the moving picture exhibitors.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. David Ross, president of the Indianapolis board, who talked briefly on the picture situation and the work of the board.

"The class of pictures now sent to us is greatly improved," she said. "This shows that the producers are aware of the fact that the board, as a clearing house, cannot afford to pass questionable pictures."

Former Censor Officers Re-elected.

The state organization re-elected its former officers with the exception of secretary-treasurer and fourth vice-president. All of the former officers of the Indianapolis board, with the exception of the secretary and publicity chairman, were re-elected.

British Columbia Censor Replies to Complaints

WALTER HEPBURN, of Vancouver, chief moving picture censor for the Province of British Columbia, appeared before the legislators at Victoria, B. C., in answer to several complaints that he had been using language which was derogatory to the interests of the Government and also in answer to charges that he had shown discrimination in the granting of licenses to moving picture projection machine apprentices. Mr. Hepburn had been freely discussed on the floor of the Provincial House, under a motion that his salary be reduced from $2,040 a year to $40 a year, which was supplemented later by a motion that he be dismissed. Mr. Hepburn came back with a statement which was considered a reflection upon certain members of the Legislature, and in which he referred to these members as "pin heads," it is declared.

Mr. Hepburn went to Victoria, the capital, and held a cenference with two members of the Legislature in the office of the Attorney-General, who, in the meantime, had appointed a commission to investigate the censor. The two legislators, who attended, were Major Burde and J. S. Cowper, who were the two who were most active in pressing the charges against the censor before the House. It was finally agreed, at this conference, that Mr. Hepburn should prepare a written statement as a defense of the charges against him and this was to be presented to the Legislature.

Louise Glaum Files Judgment.

On March 29 Louise Glaum as plaintiff, through Arthur Butler Graham, her attorney, entered judgment against the Paralta Plays for $1,177.73 upon a promissory note delivered to Miss Glaum on May 20, 1918, for $1,100 with interest.

ALBANY REPORTS MANY INCORPORATIONS

Unprecedented Number of New Film Firms Presages Big Business in Every Branch

ALBANY, April 14.—More motion picture concerns have been incorporated in New York State during the last few days than during any similar period of time in the state's history. Whether the prospects of favorable legislation for Sunday motion picture shows was the stimulating influence is not known, but the fact remains that hardly a day has passed in Secretary of State Hugo's office when one or more concerns directly interested in the motion picture business were not incorporated.

Among the new incorporations were the World Wide Distributing Corporation of New York, incorporating at $500,000 with Arthur Levey, Anderson T. Herd and F. E. Goldsmith as principals; Film Specials, $50,000, Leopold Fuldman, Charles J. Sonino, and Matie Hammerstein, New York; Devereaux Corporations, $50,000, Charles Ewart, Charles Helm, B. E. Swiglehurst, New York; Pleasant Amusement Company, $1,000, Myron Sulzberger, Edna and Claire Egan, New York; Associated Pictures Theatres of America, John J. Pitzer, James F. J. Archibald, Charles M. Rosenthal, New York; International Photo Play Distributors, $100,000, M. A. and Maurice Schlesinger, A. George Smith, New York; the Dooley Exchange, Syracuse, $150,000, Thomas Dooley, Joseph Crosby and H. V. Kennedy; Miller-Vermont Amusement Company, $15,000, Morris Rosen, Jacob Reisner, Samuel Steinberg; Adolph Phillip Film Company, $400,000, Adolph Phillip, Benjamin Eskowitz and A. S. Levy, New York; Syndicated Super-Features, Merle E. Smith, Miles Gibbons and Maxwell Wagner, New York. GRANT.

Peebles Is the Wanderer in the Country of Films

MEET the Wanderer. Shake hands with Harry T. Peebles, who, since his entry into the film game in 1908, has served under as many flags as it is possible for one man to get under in the course of eleven years of service. As exchange man, salesman, exhibitor, assistant district manager, theatre supply man, and district handler for a half dozen big picture concerns, Harry T. Peebles, if service chevrons and company colors were issued by film organizations, would look like a complete Rainbow Division himself.

Harry T. Peebles.
New Orleans Universal manager.

Practically all of Mr. Peebles' wandering has been done in the South and Southwest. In 1908 he took the management of the Southern Film and Talking Machine Company in Texas, which outfit he left to become a salesman for the Texas Film Exchange. From there he went to Mutual on the first day it opened for business in Dallas, and subsequently became assistant manager of the Memphis and New Orleans branches.

After a year with Mutual, he took over the management of the Princess Theatre in Memphis, now under Marcus Loew. Quitting that he went successively with Consolidated Film and Supply Company, Famous Players, Warner Features, back to Mutual, and finally back to Consolidated as manager of the Bluebird department three years ago.

Speaking of the situation in the South, Mr. Peebles said, "Several years ago, five-cent theatres had full sway in New Orleans territory, but today exhibitors are charging and getting better prices and are really making money. One noticeable improvement is that a great many of the theatres have changed from automatic musical instruments to orchestras and first-class pipeorgans.

"A few years ago a newspaper advertisement on a moving picture was a curiosity. Today newspapers solicit moving picture advertising and give the exhibitor every help. At present the New Orleans Item is to be complimented on the excellent moving picture department in its Sunday edition. The year of 1919 will be a credit to the industry in the New Orleans territory."

MARY PICKFORD AS SALVATION LASSIE

Puts on the Blue and Red Uniform and Sells Papers in Los Angeles—Express Gets Out a Special Edition

THE highest-priced film star in the world has become a Salvation Army lassie—temporarily, at least. Mary Pickford was asked to become the guest of the Los Angeles Express and Times on "newspaper day" in Los Angeles a few days ago, during the height of the Salvation Army Home Service Fund Drive. She had to become a Salvation Army lassie and sell papers. And she did not refuse.

She said in her own characteristic way: "Oh, I'd just love to sell papers! And to sell papers for the Salvation Army—let me try it for a day!"

So Mary Pickford, who is making her second picture for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, also became the highest priced "newsie" that ever yelled "Extra!"

A day was set aside in Los Angeles as "newspaper day" under the auspices of the Los Angeles Express and Times by proclamation from Harry M. Haldeman, chairman of the campaign committee. These two newspapers donated all their street sales for the day to the Salvation Army Fund, and reimbursed the regular newsboys for their daily average profit.

The Express got out a special "Mary Pickford Edition," the first time in the history of journalism in the West, so far as can be learned, that such a thing ever happened. Needless to say this edition was sold out within a short time and it was necessary to run several thousand copies later in the day. The people snatched the paper on every street corner and tossed nickels, dimes and dollars at the newsboys.

"It was great," said Miss Pickford. "I now understand why the newsboys are always so happy when they cry their wares. But to sell papers for the Salvation Army, also, made the work still greater."

Asher Lands Film Stars.

E. M. Asher, manager of the Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco, as well as the film exchange business of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, has returned from a trip to Los Angeles to study film conditions and to make arrangements for the personal appearance of film stars at the local house. He was very successful in the latter, closing contracts calling for the appearance of Bert Lytell, a strong local favorite, Viola Dana and Emmy Wehlen. He states that there is a very marked tendency toward fewer pictures, but better productions, with the end of the regular program in sight.

World to Star Zena Keefe in "The Amateur Widow"

WORLD PICTURES announces they have entered into a contract with Zena Keefe to star her in a five reel picture which bears the working title of "The Amateur Widow." Work on the picture has already started at the World studio at Fort Lee. Oscar Apfel is directing.

Miss Keefe was born in San Francisco and began her professional career as a child with a stock company. She then came East playing important roles in B. F. Keith's stock company in Providence. She then went into vaudeville as a headliner with her own act. After several successful seasons she was engaged by the Vitagraph and played in numerous important productions.

She was starred by Ivan Films in its production, "Enlighten Thy Daughter." Harry Rapp also starred her in "The Exiled Princess." Another notable film production in which she was the star was in Jack Noble's production of "Shame." Following this she appeared as the star in "The Challenge." Miss Keefe will have the support of Hugh Dillman as leading man.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

More Rioting in Butte.

BUTTE, MONTANA, has been under martial law on account of I. W. W. strikes and it looked for a while as though the soldiers would have to be called into play again to keep peace between the theatre managers. The American booked "The Heart of Humanity" and took a page for the start off, announcing that it would charge but fifty cents instead of the usual one dollar. It was a nice looking advertisement and made a good showing, with plenty of white space, but not quite enough house signature. A. C. Raleigh, the manager, writes that "one of the newspaper advertising men evidently allowed Ralph Ruffner to see my copy in time for him to get out a full page knocking us in two of the papers, which appeared simultaneously with our advertisement." Of course Ruff might have been planning a big display for some time, but it looks as though someone had leaked the news, for that "passing the Buck" looks very much as though Ruff had had an inkling of what was coming off and had hastened to meet it. He got a better position, too, though Mr. Raleigh got page three, which is just about as good as the back page. That "Aditorial" has to do with the fixed price of the Rialto admission, and while it does not make any direct reference to the American, it has an insinuating sort of twist. Then what Mr. Raleigh refers to as "a second rate house," the Ansonia kicked in with a three fives. Nothing about the American, but much about the good show you could see for a quarter, and not only that, but Ruff slipped back again with a note to the effect that some of the pictures he was showing at a quarter were shown all over the country at a dime. We don't know why Ruff should talk about Old Crow and such things. He didn't learn it from us when he visited New York, and Montana is a prohibition state even if the sheriff did pinch a bootlegger the other day for trying to sell to him. There is not much argument to what he says, and if he had said what he should have said on the subject he would have backed up Mr. Raleigh; indeed we don't see why Mr. Raleigh did not take this stuff and turn it on Ruff. Ruff himself supplied the opening, and it would have been possible to argue from that that a show is worth what it costs and not what the other man is selling it for. The Bulletin, which Mr. Raleigh says is a Bolsheviki sheet, reproduced on its front page a section of a New York paper giving the Brooklyn advertisements in which it was shown that one of the Loew houses played the picture at fifteen and twenty-five cents. The bottom of one of the American advertisements shows the reply. In addition to the cut the text just above reads: "He who

to see it, and so we feel that we have kept faith clear through with our patrons." Mr. Raleigh wants to know what we think, and frankly we do not think that he has worked adroitly. The Friday matinee we consider a blunder. To insist that it could not be shown at regular rates and then offer a single performance at that price is to show that it can be done. More, it makes every person, who paid the fifty cents, feel that the house has not kept faith. The situation is not unlike that which once prevailed in the automobile world where buyers would pay a top price at the commencement of the season and then see the same car sold a few months later at a decided reduction. This aroused so much comment that many automobile concerns now pledge themselves not to lower prices during the season. If the film was worth not less than fifty cents on the first day of its showing, it was worth not less than half a dollar on Friday afternoon. It would have been better to have shown it free to those who could not afford the full price. It not alone angers those who paid the full price, but suggests in the minds of many that the film did not succeed. Moreover it is going to eternally smash any other high priced attraction the American puts in, for the crowd will hold back for the cut price shows. There is not the slightest reason why all pictures should be shown at a flat rate. There is no reason in the world why prices should not have been advanced on "The Heart of Humanity." It was shown at that price on Broadway and ran several weeks beyond the time originally scheduled, and it does not matter that immediately thereafter is was run at a house in Brooklyn, with a cheap vaudeville show thrown in, for half the price. If the other houses object to the raise in prices, that should be the cue to point out that one house has the good sense to bring into the town really meritorious attractions at a higher price. Ruff's crack about his films having been shown elsewhere at ten cents was the American's cue to pick up that statement and admit that the way Ruff showed them they were worth the quarter against the other man's ten cents. Then Ruff would have been gagged as well as hoist by his own petard. Mr. Raleigh made the mistake of taking the onslaughts as an affront. He did not seem to seek to capitalize the opposition to his own benefit. It would seem that his personal sense of affront overlaid his showmanship and let the others get away with it. Not once did he argue that he too, could hold his prices to a quarter if he never took a chance with better stuff. He could have declined election to the has-beens. He could have announced he was going to have just as many fifty cent films as he could find worth that price. He could have convinced people that not only was this particular picture worth more than the price charged, and that the American was the leading theatre because it dared to go out for novelties instead of being afraid to show the best because it cost a little more. Instead of that he even cut the price on one show to prove that it could be done. About the strongest he got was

A Three Tens from the American.

Three Styles.

Here are three advertisements announcing the personal appearance of Harry Carey in the Seattle theatres. Two of the displays are pretty much alike, each being two sevens, yet one is much better than the other because it is laid out better. In the display on the left the announcement is split. The name runs above the cut and the "will appear in person" below. This makes a gap in the continuity of the announcement. The showing on the right is not only better displayed, but slightly better worded. "Harry Carey, in person," is better than "will appear in person," though it means precisely the same and will be as well understood. The centre display is only five inches, and lacks the display which the cut gives, while we do not like all that heavy rule work for so small an advertisement. It is one of those "printers' delight" displays, but it is not showy. The rule should have been held to the outside of the space to get it all together. A fourth display, from the Mission, is a two tens and wastes a lot of good space with about three inches more shirt front than the cut needs. The cut should have been sent to the engraver to be cropped to two and a half inches. The Mission was the only house to announce that Carey would be seen in one of his plays as well as in person, but does it rather tamely with "in connection with his fine new picture, 'Roped.' Both in person and on the screen" would have been better, or perhaps "hear him talk and see him act."

Three Announcements on the Same Subject in Which One, Through Better Display, Takes the Lead.

Nicely Laid Out.

Here is a nicely laid out display from the New Theatre, Baltimore. It is from a Sunday issue, so it carries a double bill, but they are held well apart and reversing the cut positions gives a further emphasis.

A Three Sevens, from Baltimore, Which Makes a Pretty and Effective Display.

Another inch would have done a lot to let in the sub-features, but that would mean another three inches and space is not cheap in Baltimore. One objection is that the star is stronger than the play in the top section and Miss Barrymore should have had a larger letter even at the cost of setting the names of her supporting cast in smaller letters. The title does not even draw on the stage title and should have been kept smaller to get in more type for the star. The border is neat, but would be too large for a double column space. For a three it is just about right. There is a great deal to getting the proper proportions, but apart from the Barrymore name this space is very nicely proportioned.

Large and Good.

This six fourteens from Omaha is an unusually large space, but it is working on two titles that should clean up. About the only suggestion to offer is that there is a suggestion of a double bill due to the rule on the Mrs. Wiggs cut. If this had been taken off with a chisel so that the suggestion of isolation was destroyed, there would be nothing to affect its pull, but the patron has to read it all to realize that it is a single bill—and an unusually good one. The Drews are given a prominence so seldom given small comedies that the impression is apt to be that this is a feature in itself. It is, for that matter, for the Drews pull real money, but it is a joint feature with the longer subject and something should be done to connect the two in the mind of the patron the moment he sees the space; not after he has read it through. The second of the panels in the comedy should also be taken out, permitting the second of the Paramount-Drew comedies to be read in connection with the title.

A Six Fourteens Which Gives an Excellent Display.

Misframe.

The Wilson Theatre, Baltimore, uses a frame for its display and gets good prominence from it, but the house signature is not in the frame. It is a part of the special drawing, but to get the legend large, the artist has carried it from one side of the sketch to the other. If he had brought it in to give a twelve point line around the plate he would have gained much more than he loses in display. The name could be just as prominent, and the advertisement and the signature would have been held together. It is very poor lettering, at best, for the sloping S in connection with the lower part of the L gives an awkward space. Where such letters as L, A, V, Y, or even W are used, an effort should be made to take up the lost space rather than to augment and emphasize it. Look over the A. T. F. book of specimens and you will notice how cleverly this is done to conceal the defects of certain fonts in which the slants are emphasized. Artists who do lettering have a chance to correct these faults in part and yet here is a man who deliberately does the reverse. It is inexcusable and he should be required to correct the drawing.

Window Work.

E. J. Ryan, of the Woodlawn, Chicago, sends in photographs of a window display arranged for the house by H. W. Crawford, who is regularly employed by Manager Karzas to get up such showings. Details of coloring were not supplied, but the first cut gives a general idea of the display with its specially painted posters and the heart designs. It appears that most of the hearts mask electric bulbs which throw their light inward against the display. This would make a good still display, but motion has several times the value of any still display, and knowing this, the decorator installed a motor which continuously opens and closes the large heart, giving a flash of the star back of the opening, as shown in the second cut. This is merely a part of a poster and not a special painting, but it works well and the effect of the motion drives home the display and gives it many times the selling value of a display without motion.

Using Paramount.

A. L. Middleton, of the Queen, De Queen, Ark., has signed up the Paramount-Artcraft stuff and got out a special card for his patrons. It will not reproduce, because of its color, but it is a strip of card 3 by 8 inches with five of the small cuts of Paramount players with Coming! But WHEN? You say.

Below this runs this announcement:

That's just why you want THE AMUSEMENT HERALD every week. Write your name and postoffice address on the other side of this card and drop in postoffice. Let us know you really would like to know when Doug Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Mary Pickford or any of the other big stars and special pictures are going to be at the Queen and we will mail you the Herald every Monday with entire week's program. Some wonderful pictures are coming to the Queen this year.

The back is printed up as a return card with a space for the name and address of the patron, and one went out with each of the weekly program issue, the envelope being specially printed up with a special cartoon and across the top "See directions inside how to live happy." It was a number nine envelope, large enough to attract attention. Mr. Middleton has not been in for a long time, but we take it that he has been shut down with the flu like the rest of the world. We are glad to see him coming in again, for he is as full of ideas as a dog is of fleas.

Matters of Type.

Here is an interesting study in type setting. These displays are for the Rialto, Denver, on "Common Clay," and in each case were set from the same copy. The first pair are three sixes. That on the right gives the best display to the chief line, but that on the left gives a larger display in that the repetition of the title is set in larger and more commanding type. It also gives a better (though smaller) display to the name of the star and plays up the concert in better shape. It gains so much in this direction that the use of 30 instead of a 36 point gothic for the chief title is more than paid for by the generally better display. The displays in the second example are three tens. In general the left hand display is much better. The panel in the lower right hand corner works twice as hard, and it is not necessary to use rule work to fill in with. The panel in the right hand display is largely lost through pulling down the panel. That on the left uses a measure permitting the matter to be run above the skirt in the cut. In the other the measure is wider, but must be held down to escape this obstruction, and so a smaller display is given through the omission of leads, though the type faces are similar. Note how underlining with two point rule heightens the effect and throws the title up. Note, too, how the use of upper and lower case in the name of the star and in the line "Symphony Orchestra" gives a better display. The house name, too, is made to seem larger through the use of an extended letter. The height is practically the same. It is merely a matter of width, and width was sacrificed to get those rule dewdads in between the house signature and the boxes. Both displays are well set, but one compositor seems to know considerably more than the other about setting amusement advertising. No one ever set as good an advertisement by fussing it up with rule. Note how much stronger the unruled statements around the cuts show up. Take this over to your own printer and let him study the examples. He may learn something that will make your own advertising better.

Two Three Tens Showing Two Treatments of the Same Text.

Just Right

For "Hoop-la," the Billie Rhodes play, the Rialto, Toronto, dug up a lot of old circus cuts and got out a regular circus throwaway on yellow paper, 9 by 24 inches. It has the tang of the sawdust and all the adjectives in the dictionary. It visualizes the circus and makes you long for one, so you do the next best thing and go to "Hoop-la." Now is the time to stir up the circus feeling with circus plays and you cannot do it better than with real old fashioned throwaways. Try it with any one of the numerous circus stories and then rig up a tent front similar to that recently shown in this department. The combination will make money for you.

Watch Your Own.

Watch your own business. Know what the opposition is doing, but don't worry about it. If you can't keep your mind off the other fellow, sell out before the sheriff sells you out.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Important Notice.

OWING to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Lens Charts for Framing.

In response to requests from several progressive projectionists we have had the lens charts printed on heavy paper, size 11x17 inches, for framing.

These charts should form a part of the equipment of every projectionist. Remit the sum of 50 cents and they (both charts on one sheet) will be sent you in a mailing tube. You can then have them framed for your projection room. They are of size which shows up very clearly. The figures on Chart No. 1 are ¼-inch high. Those of Chart No. 2 a bit smaller. There is no longer the slightest question as to the value of these charts. Make them a permanent part of your equipment and be up to date.

Addresses Wanted.

This department has occasional inquiries for addresses of dealers in motion picture supplies in various cities or parts of the country. For instance, just now a large manufacturer asks addresses of all reliable dealers on the Pacific Coast.

My records in this are a bit out of date. Will dealers kindly send me a letterhead, so that I may get an up-to-date list of addresses?

Stereo Trouble.

A certain projectionist in a certain city has trouble, as follows:

"After a lapse of five years I am again twisting the crank—this time with a Simplex, which I have never before used. Am up against a problem in the optical system on which I need your advice. Have copy of the handbook, but though I have not yet had time to go over it thoroughly, have not found the answer therein. My trouble is inability to get clear stereopticon projection. It is more than dark corners. I get the center of the slide all right, but the sides thereof not at all. When I have the best working light for the motion picture and the stereo is sharp the sides of the slides just simply are not, so far as the screen is concerned. Have tried condensers at different distances apart. Have used one 6.5 and one 7.5, with each alternately next the arc. The best combination I can get for the stereo is 6.5 and 7.5, set as far apart as possible and with arc close to rear condenser. That way I get dark corners only, but a poor light as stereo lens is so far away that it is beyond the condenser focusing point. This combination of condensers gives a poor M. P. spot, although I change position of arc. The best M. P. spot I get is with a 7.5 next the arc and a 6.5 in front, with 1/16" between the lenses. I should tell you that when focused the stereo lens is at extreme end of rod. Seems to me the proper lens would work closer to condenser. Have talked with the best projectionists in this locality, without result. Have also asked the Precision Machine Company. They advised that I try shifting the 6.5 and 7.5 and try two 7.5s, which I have already done. My trouble may be plain ignorance of some adjustment. As I before said, the Simplex and the single stereo lens are new to me, having always used a Power's. My distance of projection is about 80 feet. Use 50 to 60 amperes A. C. through rheostat. Carbons 5.8" above and below."

I have printed this whole letter because it so forcibly reminds us of just what we were contending with ten, and in many cases even as little as five years ago. The trouble of the good brother is not "ignorance of some adjustment," but just plain and total lack of knowledge of the optical system, lens action and cause and effect as applied to the optical system he is handling—or trying to handle. I am out of pure charity, suppressing his name and location.

There is absolutely no difference in the optical train of a Power's and the Simplex machine, except in the mechanical methods of making adjustments. A lens combination placed in the Simplex with a given adjustment, will give precisely the same, identical effect at the screen when transferred to a Power's, a Baird, a Pathe Professional, an Urban or any other projector under the sun, provided the adjustment be of the same.

You have neglected to give me the focal length of your stereopticon lens, which, under the circumstances, is very important. I think, however, you are projecting a tolerably large motion picture and a relatively small stereopticon picture. This means a very long focal length stereopticon lens, and right there lies your trouble. The proper lineup of your M. P. optical train is not based on the focal length of your projection lens, but on amperage. For 50 amperes A. C. you require for most efficient results the following: two 6.5 condenser lenses, spaced not to exceed 1/16 of an inch apart, with 18.5 inches from center of condenser to aperture. For 50 amperes you require the same, except that distance center of condenser to aperture should be about 20 inches. That is your M. P. lineup for 50 or 60 amperes A. C., but it would be impossible to secure good results with your stereo with that combination if your stereo lens be very long focal length, unless you could get your arc very close to the lens—very much closer than you can get it and very much closer than the lens itself would stand without cracking. Under the conditions, as I understand them, your only recourse is to mount a third long focal length lens so that it will come in line with your condenser when you shove over to the stereo. Just what the focal length of this lens would have to be I cannot say, but I think if you measure the distance from condenser to back lens of stereo when picture is sharp on screen, and write direct to John Griffith, he will be able to tell you. But be sure to tell him you are using 60 amperes A. C. At a guess I would say you will need a ten-inch bi-convex lens. Better send 50 cents to the Moving Picture World for a lens chart and frame same for your projection room. You should then study the optical system of the projector, using the handbook as your textbook.

Never space your condensers apart. If it is necessary to do that to get results, that fact is proof positive that your condenser combination is wrong. As a matter of fact your right plan would be to get a small stereopticon for slide projection. Very few high class houses use the projector stereopticon nowadays. One other thing and we are finished. You made the remark that you thought a proper stereo lens would work nearer the condenser. Barring the fact that for a given result some lenses work at somewhat less back focus than others, the back focus of a lens (distance from object being projected) is fixed by the size of the object, size of the screen and distance of projection. See rule in italics at bottom page 105 of your handbook.

It is not very creditable to the projectionists whom you consulted (you call them "operators," maybe you are right) that they could not solve so simple a problem. Evidently they, too, have sad need for considerable good hard study. There, gentlemen, if that hurts it certainly is no one's fault but your own.

CARBON STUBS WANTED.

Some weeks ago we asked for carbon stubs, both A. C. and D. C., from projectionists using amperage in excess of 60 and up to 100.

The response has not been at all satisfactory. These stubs, which need not be more than an inch long (it is the crater I want), are to be used in extending the lens table from 60 to 100 amperes. Only upper stubs are wanted, and it is imperative that the exact amperage be given.

Surely you can help to that extent. Don't think the "other fellow" will send stubs. DO IT YOURSELF, because there is no danger of having too many. The more the better. Get busy.

Two-Phase Advantages.

Two Chicago projectionists who ask that their names be suppressed propound the following easily answered question:

"Brother Richardson: We have had a dispute on the following question, and have agreed to submit the matter to you for decision. The question is, what advantages has two-phase current over single-phase for lighting and for use on motors? Local 110 is getting along very well. We have secured a raise in wages, and believe, everything considered, the scale in Chicago is the best in the country. Hope to see you out here again soon."

Two-phase current has no advantages over single-phase for lighting. Its advantage for power (use in motor) is found in the following: With single-phase supply it is necessary to "split the phase" for starting an indu tion motor; also, theoretically, the two-phase gives a more even torque, though I do not believe that amounts to anything appreciable in practice. So far as I know, the fact that two-phase current provided a rotary field which will start an induction motor, whereas a single-phase will not, except by the use of a special arrangement, constitutes the only advantage of two-phase over single-phase. The two-phase is more costly in wiring, though no more copper (by weight) is required. But it costs more to install four wires than two, even though the four are only equal to the two in total cross section.

Um, yes, I heard about that wage raise, and it is good, as far as it goes, BUT, while, as you say, Chicago has one of the best scales in the country,is Local 110 putting on the best screen results in the country in return for that scale. Answer me that VERY pertinent question, please? If, for instance, New York City's projection is, as a whole, better than that of Chicago, or even as good (I am making no claim that this is so, mind you. Let others who have also viewed the work in both cities answer that), with a wage scale very much lower and cost of living as high, if not higher, then there is something distinctly decayed in Denmark. Chicago, with the highest wage scale, should have the highest class work in the country, yet outside men who visit that city do not speak in very complimentary terms of her screen results viewed as a whole. Please understand that I am not giving voice to this through a desire to slam the Chicago men. Far from it. I have many good friends in that city, and would like to be able to say nothing but kind things about my four-or-six-years former home. But, gentlemen, the very best argument you can place in the hands of the exhibitor against high salaries for projectionists (mind you I am working for real salaries, not for a piffling union scale, and we would get those salaries, too, in time if proper support was given by the men themselves and by the unions) is the enabling of him to say, with truth: There! We have doubled wages in the past few years, and the men show no improvement in efficiency. That is a REAL argument against increase in projectionists' salaries. It is an argument which operates directly against the granting of anything more than can be literally forced by brute strength of organization and maintained the same way. Therefore, I again ask Chicago projectionists, in all friendliness, have you kept pace in advancement in knowledge and improvement in efficiency and in screen results with the advancement in your wages? That some of you have I know is true, but I am speaking of the thing as a whole, because the union wage scale has gone up as a whole.

Machine Manufacturer Hazzum.

S. L. Harris, Portsmouth, Virginia, inquiries:

"We frequently have trouble with film breaking when near the end of the reel, say 50 to 75 feet from end. Am using 14-inch reel purchased from a supply house in Chicago, and my projectionist lays the trouble to the reels. Can you inform me where I can purchase some real good 14-inch reels for use on Power's 6-B projectors, same to have good material, especially in the hub and in the eyelet through the hub?"

Address the Nicholas Power Company, 90 Gold street, New York City. They tell me they can fix you up all fine and dandy.

Unique Intermittent.

J. A. LeRoy, New York City, has invented a decidedly unique intermittent movement with which he claims to be able to get as high as a ten-to-one movement without injury to the sprocket holes of the film. The claim is in measure substantiated by the fact that an integral part of the invention is what seems to be a practical method for partially releasing the tension while the film is in movement. We have not actually watched the movement project a picture, but have examined the movement, and the thing does not look unreasonable on the face of it. We shall be interested in seeing a practical projection test and an extended tryout of the movement, if it progresses to that point.

Mr. LeRoy is one of the old-timers and the inventor of several devices having to do with projection machinery. We present herewith a view of a projector Mr. LeRoy claims to have constructed in 1893 and used from 1893 to 1897. Certainly this is a genuine old-timer, if ever there was one. Notice the beater movement and the revolving shutter between the condenser and aperture. But we think the upper magazine must have been added very much later., so far as we can remember, there was no magazine in use until about 1900, or maybe even a little later. The second illustration shows Mr.

LeRoy and his son, Albert C., who was with our troops in Mexico, embarked for France on the transport Havana, June 16, 1917, and died in the line of duty, July, 1917. Mr. LeRoy is himself a Spanish War veteran. He says there were 93 members of his family in the trenches in the late "Me und Gott" war.

John Griffiths.

We feel it high time that a bit of space in this department be devoted to John Griffiths, in recognition of the very excellent work he has done on the optics of the projector.

Mr. Griffiths is a practical projectionist and has been employed as such in a small theatre in Ansonia, Conn., for several years. By birth he is an Englishman. So far as we know he first became interested in the study of the optics of the projector through this department, to which he has contributed articles of great practical value ever since the discussion of optics was begun by W. S. James, a projectionist, then located at Camden, N. J.

Owing to Friend Griffiths evident grasp of the subject of projection optics, if I may coin the terms, he was selected to assist the editor in tne series of light ray experiments undertaken some three years ago. Needless to say, his aid was of great value.

It was Griffiths who gave to us the lens table published in this department long ago, and contained on page 141 of the handbook. This table, while far behind the times now, was absolutely the first step forward in practical, workable data which could be used by the projectionist to fit his projector optical train to the local condition. It was a somewhat crude effort, true, but had very distinct value, and was the forerunner of improved projector optical charts which finally developed into those published in December 28 issue of this department, known as the Moving Picture World Lens Charts.

Friend Griffiths has done much other valuable work, and should have the gratitude of every man in the profession. He is, in our opinion, the best posted man on what we may term the practical optics of the projector in North America, if not in the entire world. In making this assertion I most emphatically do NOT exclude the opticians attached to the lens manufacturing companies. Their field is an entirely different one. John Griffiths could not design a lens, so far as I know, to save his immortal soul from Purgatory, but ask him a question about some knotty point as to the projector optical train and its adjustments to meet local conditions and I will back him against them all, including myself.

Griffiths has always worked through this department, and we are indeed proud to have associated with us a gentleman of such sound, practical sense and such intimate knowledge of his subject. We have perhaps helped Griffiths some. Certainly he has helped us a lot, and through us, has helped you all a very great deal. All honor to John Griffiths!

Once More, and for the Steenth Time.

Once more, and for the steenth time I will explain, declare, tell you all, avow and set forth the fact that the question booklets contain questions ONLY. They are intended wholly as guides for study only.

George A. Atlas, Rox (presumably meaning Roxbury, Mass.), says:

"Received question booklets. They are fine and well worth their price, but I was disappointed to find them without the answers, which I had expected. What good are the questions without the answers to study and learn by? There are some of the questions that can be answered and some I never heard about in my previous study to be a projectionist. In my opinion there might be one in one hundred projectionists who could answer them without having the answer to study by. If there is a book with the answers kindly let me know."

What good would an "answer to study by" be? If I asked question and gave the answer the man would just learn the answer by heart and would know little more than he did before, because he would not know the underlying principles which operate to create that answer. The answers are all contained in the Handbook and other text books, but you must study and acquire real knowledge which will enable you to arrive at the answer not by merely reading it, but by reason of the fact that you understand the whole thing. Reading an answer and knowing the answer by reason of competent knowledge may be likened to a look at a photograph and examining the real article. The question booklets show you what the projectionist should know, hence they are to him a guide to study. Every projectionist ought to have a Handbook, some good book on physics which will contain elementary optics, and the Hawkins Electrical Guides. This small library will cost you as follows: Handbook, Moving Picture World, $4; Hawkins, ten volumes at $1 per volume, one dollar down and one dollar a month or week, I forget which, $10, from Theodore Audel Company, New York City, and a work on physics (elementary optics) perhaps $2 from any book dealer. As to the Hawkins works, many projectionists complain that much of the matter contained in the books is of no value to them. This is true, but the same thing is true of any book you can get on electrics, and the Hawkins books have the merit that you can understand them, which is more than the average man can do with the average work on electrics. It is true, however, that volumes 8 and 9 have comparatively slight value to the projectionist. But there is value in even these two, and it must be remembered that even one good, serviceable fragment of knowledge is well worth one dollar, the price of the full volume, hence I would recommend the purchase of the whole set. Having purchased the books, they will do you no good if you look through them, carefully wrap their backs in paper and lay them up on a good, high shelf. The value of these volumns comes entirely from the study of them. Take, for instance, question No. 2 of the first question booklet. Turning to page 6 of the Handbook, you will there and on pages 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 find the answer in the knowledge set forth. On pages 12 and 13 you will find the knowledge necessary to answer questions No. 1. Having mastered this you may then turn to page 161 of Volume 1 of Hawkins, where, up to page 180, you will find a more elaborate, though perhaps a bit harder to understand, explanation of dynamic action, and on page 188 the knowledge necessary to answer question No. 1. Having mastered the text matter I have suggested, you will know the answer to questions 1 and 2 because you will know exactly what takes place when a generator is started, and when you move the field rheostat control lever. And is not that better than merely learning an answer "by heart," so that you can rattle it off glibly, but without really knowing one basic fact about the subject?

Yes, friend Atlas, these books contain the answers all right, BUT you are expected to grub 'em out for your own good.

Projection Room.

J. L. Millbank, who asks that his address be not published, makes the following inquiry:

"I am remodeling my theatre and can either swing the projection room from the ceiling 56 feet (front wall) from the screen, or place it on a platform over the entrance 116 feet (front wall again) from the screen. Pictures will be 17 feet wide. The platform is solid and is 14 feet deep by 26 feet wide. What would you advise as to location and what would be the best material to use? Also, please advise as to proper size for ports and their height from the floor. There is 10 feet 7 inches headroom over platform and above is the flat, gravel roof. Any other advice you can give will be appreciated and bill for same will be promptly paid."

There is no bill for reply through department. That is precisely what the department is for, viz: to give information and to help you. I only charge for replying to questions which cannot, for various reasons, be replied to through the department.

As to location, the platform is the only one of the two worthy of even a moment's consideration. This for many reasons, among which are (a) difficulty of access to ceiling room; (b) difficulty of bracing such a room which will be free from vibration; (c) fifty-six feet and a 17-foot picture will call for about a 3-inch projection lens, which is very bad—difficult to secure sharp definition; (d) you will have considerable keystone effect (distortion) with the ceiling room.

On the other hand, 116 feet and a 17-foot picture will call for about a 6.5-inch projection lens. Which will probably mean about a 4½ or 5-inch back focus, which is a bit long and would probably mean some loss of light if an ordinary projection lens were used. I would therefore advise that you use a three-combination lens. I will furnish you with address of maker on receipt of request and self-addressed post card. The platform is ideal in size and headroom. I would advise as follows: Side walls and ceiling of 4-inch hollow tile set in cement mortar; run side walls up straight for seven (7) feet and then arch the ceiling over, with three ⅝-inch solid iron tie-rods at base of arch—one two feet from either end and one in the center; plaster room inside and out with cement mortar. Floor: six inches of rich concrete, top dressed with cement dressing ¾ inch thick. Note: tie rods to be 7 feet above finished floor. Size of room 9 feet square, with fresh air inlets at floor line, one at each corner of room if possible, leading to open air outside the building. The combined area of inlet ducts to be not less than 154 square inches. There must, of course, be a vent pipe through the roof, 18 inches in diameter, with exhaust fan located therein. For lens ports leave an opening twelve inches square, its center 3 feet 6 inches from the floor. Locate center of first opening 4 feet from right side wall. Leave another similar opening with its center 7 feet from the right wall. After the machines are all set and the light properly located on the screen, you must fill in these openings with ⅝-inch asbestos mill board, one piece at outer and one at inner side of wall, openings to be cut in these boards to just accommodate the light ray (see figure 83, p. 217 of handbook). The exact size of hole to cut can be determined by placing each board temporarily in place and projecting the light ray on it. All this is some bother, yes! but I am telling you how to make a workmanlike job. Your observation ports should be 12 inches square, with bottom of opening 5 feet 2 inches from the floor. Note: Height of bottom of opening is right for your theatre, when projection will be nearly level. With steep pitch in projection 5 feet 2 inches would be too high.

And now, brother Millbank, that I have supplied the desired information, let me advise you to get a handbook (see adv. at end of department). You will therein find detailed, illustrated instructions as to projection room construction. It is a book you and every other exhibitor should have as a part of your house equipment.

Why Resistance?

John Williamson, Unionville, Missouri says:

"I am only a rank beginner—not even an apprentice as yet, but I intend to become a competent projectionist some day. I cannot seem to understand the exact reason for the rheostat—what it is for and how it operates. Would you be good enough to explain?"

In the first place, friend Williamson, you should send $4 to the Moving Picture World and get a copy of the handbook. These things are all fully explained therein. All electrical conductors offer resistance to the flow or passage of current, but different metals offer different degrees of resistance. The practical effect of current overcoming resistance is to consume voltage. For reasons it would require too much space to set forth here, a D. C. projection arc only operates at its best at between 48 and 50 volts, and an A. C. projection arc at from 33 to 40 volts. In other words, the current supply must reach the arc at a voltage between those ranges if good results are had at the screen. We therefore insert into the circuit a "rheostat," in which the resistance is just sufficient to accomplish the desired voltage reduction—in which the difference between the line (supply) voltage and the required voltage at the arc will be consumed in forcing the current through.

In practice we put the matter in simpler form. We first determine what amperage we want and then purchase a rheostat which will deliver that amperage to the arc, which means that enough resistance is offered by the rheostat to just allow the remaining voltage to force the desired amperage against the resistance of the arc. That is about as clear as I can make matters in such a short article. The amperage consumed in the rheostat appears in the form of heat.

The Non-Intermittent Projector.

It is a poor month which does not bring at least one letter from some aspiring inventor who is working on a new and marvelous non-intermittent projector, destined to revolutionize the motion picture industry. Most of these men seem to have no idea but that their schemes are entirely feasible, or that there is any possibility of failure. They all "will have their machine perfected in just a little while," and some have gone the length of offering our humble self a heavy financial interest to take hold and push the proposed new projector.

For the benefit of these well meaning, but misguided men, let me say that it is not a matter of any great difficulty to construct a non-intermittent projector which will almost give a good screen result, but when it comes to eliminating that little "almost," why, that is very muchly something else again. We will not say that it can't be done, but up to date it has not been done, although many bright minds have labored long and hard on the problem. And of all the machines evolved, the editor has seen but one which seems to give some promise—the Boston, revolving lens projector. But that, too, seems to have dropped out of sight. I suppose it was the old story of the persistent "almost," which remained "almost." A really commercially practical non-intermittent projector would have almost untold value. The saving in film alone would be enormous. But this editor has seen so many failures that he must now be shown, and shown good and plenty before he will believe.

SELECT GIVES LIVELY HOUSE WARMING

Opens New Philadelphia Office with Jazz Band While Pretty Girls Pass the Pink Tea Around

THE official opening of the new and handsome quarters of the Select Pictures Corporation, at 1308 Vine street, Philadelphia, marked an epoch in the annals of the local film industry. Max Milder punctuated the event by holding an informal reception and entertained the exhibitors with a jazz band and some of the best local talent obtainable. Intermingled with the exhibitors were several distinguished visitors from New York, among whom were Lewis J. Selznick, A. S. Kane, Clara Kimball Young, Norma Talmadge and Marion Davis.

A large crowd filled the building while an immense throng stood outside and looked on. Souvenirs were distributed by the pretty office force, consisting of Miss Madaline Coursault, Miss Yetta Schaffer and Miss Rose Freedman, who also served tea to the women in Mr. Milder's luxurious office.

Over $200,000 have been spent in improvements on the three-story building. The projection room is equipped with two Simplex machines and contains a dozen reclining chairs.

Stanley Theatres Are Being Improved.

Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company, is preparing to enlarge and beautify the Princess Theatre, on Market street. He announces that a large organ will be installed there and another one at the Palace. The organ for the Palace will, it is claimed, be the largest and finest instrument ever built for a theatre. A beautiful electric sign has been placed in front of the Victoria Theatre on Market street.

Picking on the Exhibitor as Usual.

Burglars recently ransacked the residence of Dr. Steinberg, who controls the Strand Theatre, at Twelfth street and Girard avenue. They made away with furs, jewelry, cash and thrift stamps to the value of one thousand dollars.

Short Notes.

Paul J. Henon, Jr., is making plans for a new moving picture theatre at 724 Market street, to cover a plot of ground 30 by 130 ft.

F. J. Rembush, of the Rembush Screen Manufacturing Company, will be in Philadelphia to attend the Motion Picture Engineers' Convention, to be held during the week of April 14.

Minneapolis News Letter

Friedman Corp. Buys "Unpardonable Sin."

BENJAMIN FRIEDMAN, president of the Friedman Film Corporation, of Minneapolis, has purchased the "Unpardonable Sin." The Friedman Company has obtained the rights to Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin. It will be introduced to the Northwest simultaneously at the largest theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul early in May.

With the expansion of its activities the Friedman Exchange has found it necessary to double its floor space in the Film Exchange Building. The work of remodeling the additional quarters is now under way.

Hinds Joins Sinclair Lewis.

The Minneapolis Universal Exchange has lost a good man in the person of Fred Hinds, publicity manager for the Northwest territory. Mr. Hinds, formerly a Minneapolis newspaper man and more recently connected with the Strand as assistant manager, has resigned to collaborate with Sinclair Lewis in the writing of scenarios. Mr. Lewis is the author of "Prairie Gold," a Universal production, which will be released in May.

Auditorium to Show Moving Pictures.

J. E. Chandler, former manager of the Orpheum Theatre, at Irontown, Minn., has leased the Auditorium, at Stillwater, to play big feature moving pictures and occasional road shows. The auditorium has a seating capacity of 1,000, and is well equipped for playing the largest attractions. H. C. Robertson, manager of the Auditorium since it opened, has retired from the theatrical field to give all his time to his duties as an officer of the First National Bank, of Stillwater.

Precedent Set with Program Attraction.

For the first time in history a program attraction has been originally booked for a ten-day run in Minneapolis. The picture is the Norma Talmadge production, "The Probation Wife," which has just completed a run at the Minneapolis New Lyric Theatre.

Breilein Is Touring Middle West.

H. J. Breilein, manager of the Faust, Verdi and Victoria theatres, in St. Paul, has left with Mrs. Breilein on a tour through several Middle Western states. In the absence of Mr. Breilein, his houses are being operated by William Cutter.

"Mickey" Booked for Lyric.

"Mickey" will soon go into the Minneapolis New Lyric for an indefinite run. The date has not been definitely set yet by Ruben & Finkelstein.

Weisfelt Loses His Father.

Max J. Weisfelt, manager of the Minneapolis Fox exchange, was recently called to Milwaukee by the death of his father.

Katherine Adams to Support Williams

Katherine Adams, who made her first Vitagraph appearance in support of Earle Williams in his recent production, "A Gentleman of Quality," has been engaged to play in Mr. Williams' support again in a new picture that is under way at the company's Hollywood studio.

Marguerite Clark Has an Easier Time in "Let's Elope" than Elsie Ferguson in "The Witness for the Defense."
But the above scenes from the Paramount and Artcraft pictures are merely flashes. You can't tell what's happening next.

KANSAS CITY EQUITABLE IS EXPANDING

Will Remove to the Ozark Building May First and Increase Its Office and Traveling Force

MANAGER W. H. BELL and Sales Manager W. G. Minder, of the Equitable, have completed a six weeks' tour of northern Missouri and southern Kansas in an auto. The purpose of the trip was to get into personal touch with the exhibitors. They cleaned up the territory as they went along and left only seven towns visited without contracts.

The Equitable has been crowded for room in the past, and in order to give space for its growth will, on the first of May, remove to the fourth floor of the Ozark Building, where it will occupy the rear half of the floor. The present force will be retained and additional office and traveling men engaged. J. M. Campbell will remain as president, with W. H. Bell as vice-president and acting manager, assisted by Ed. J. Peskay, who has been associated with him for six years in various film enterprises in the West.

Carter Takes Over Kleine Film Distribution.

As a result of office changes in the General Film Company Manager Carter, of the World, this week took over the distribution of the George Kleine films—"Unbeliever," "Conquered Hearts" and "Unchaste Women." Also the Big Four Chaplin reissue—"Night in the Show," "The Bank," "Police" and "Shanghaied." Cal Edwards, the George Kleine representative, with offices in the General Film Exchange, made a trip to Omaha to superintend the transfer of the same productions to the World management in that city. All others of the Kleine productions will continue to be handled by the General Film Company, and Mr. Edwards will retain his office with them.

Royal Plays Locally Composed Music.

The Royal has been proving during the past week that it is not necessary to leave Kansas City for catchy music to accompany the moving pictures. While the Pathe Review is throwing upon the screen pictures of the Yanks crossing the Rhine and taking possession of it, the orchestra renders "When the Sammies Cross the Rhine," which was written by the poet editor of Kansas City, Thomas West, long before any one dreamed that the American army would be the one elected for this occupation. The song is also being sung by the American soldiers on the banks of the Rhine. Leo Frobstein, conductor of the Royal orchestra, said: "Why shouldn't we play it? We couldn't find any more appropriate music."

They Really Are Projectionettes.

The Misses Hassan and Doylan, of Strong City, Kansas, are showing what energetic Kansas girls can do. When they opened the Lyric in that little village of 600 inhabitants a year and a half ago, they found themselves handicapped by their failure to secure competent machine operators. Nothing daunted, both girls started in and learned to run the machine themselves, and now they alternate week about, one looking after the machine while the other attends to the box office. They have made a wonderful success, and are the only women operators in the state.

Universal Comings and Goings.

Milton H. Feld has resigned his position as manager of the Universal in Kansas City to become manager of the New Newman Theatre, which Frank Newman will open May 20. Paul Bush, who has been in charge of the Detroit branch of the Universal, has been transferred to Kansas City. C. A. (Red) Jones, who has been connected with the Universal in this city four and a half years, first as traveling salesman and later as assistant manager, has resigned to take charge of a local exchange. His successor has not yet been appointed.

Holy Week Business Light.

As Lent drew to a close the effect upon the moving picture theatres was marked. Passion Week was noticeably light in picture attendance. No special features were booked during this period, and this is a business question which might interest producers and exhibitors. Something of a moral nature with an attractive plot might draw even during these two weeks. But the failure of the moving pictures of the "Life of Christ" this Lent does not indicate that a religious subject would attract patrons.

Artistic Ad Attracted Them.

As soon as they saw the artistic ad of the Rothapfel Unit Program in the Moving Picture World Charles McAllister, of the Wichita Theatre, Wichita; Mrs. Charles Barron, of the Isis, Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holmes, of the Royal, Emporia, and Manager Nesbit, of the Strand, Tarkio, Mo., took the first train for Kansas City, to interview the Film Clearing House and secure information with regard to the program and when they would be able to secure it.

Censor Comes to Life.

The Kansas film censor has again been heard from, and the circular sent out from that office has created considerable comment and some vexation among exhibitors. It was to the effect that if any exhibitor should find in his possession a film not having the censor's tag tied to it, he should at once return such film to the office, even if he had to take it out of the machine to do so.

Setting Back Both Business and the Clock.

There is a general complaint among exhibitors about the damage done to their business by the setting back of the clock. It gives another hour of daylight at the close of the day after the usual hour for the opening of the theatres, and patrons are disposed to pass it in the open air. Those who do attend the first performance come late. And the closing hour is sixty minutes earlier, so that business is cut at both ends.

Bradford Handles the Big Features.

G. I. Bradford, who has had charge of the southern Kansas territory for the Pathe, has been made special representative for the big feature stuff in the Kansas City and Oklahoma City territories. He will confine his visit to the key cities—those of 5,000 or over.

Lavin Wins Promotion.

T. J. Lavin, former bookkeeper for the Film Clearing House, has been appointed auditor of the same company for St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas, Texas and Denver, Colo., with office in Kansas City. He is now upon his initial trip to Dallas. Miss Nova Atha succeeds him as bookkeeper.

Reed Will Represent Pathe.

A. J. Reed, who will be remembered as the Vitagraph representative in southern Kansas, but more recently branch manager for George Kleine at Detroit, will hereafter represent the Pathe in southern Kansas.

DeWalt Goes to Kansas City.

J. C. DeWalt, formerly representative of the American Film Company in Oklahoma City, has taken over the American sales interests in Kansas City, C. O. Stimson, who was in charge, having been transferred to the Pathe Chicago office.

"Ruby" Signs Up Newman.

L. J. Rubenstein, personal representative of the Rothapfel Unit Program, visited Kansas City early in April and contracted with Frank Newman for the program in the New Newman Theatre.

J. L. Burk Visits Kansas City.

J. L. Burk, personal representative of President Hall, of the Film Clearing House, visited Kansas City on his western trip, which took him as far as Denver.

Personal and Trade Notes.

W. G. Minder, sales manager of the Equitable, has started upon a six weeks' trip through western Kansas, visiting each town in his route as far as the Colorado line.

Charles Harden has returned from his trip to New York, where he purchased

"The Best Man" and the Best Woman Think It's All for the Best.

J. Warren Kerrigan, star of Hodkinson's "The Best Man," with his mother on the steps of his Hollywood home.

$30,000 worth of films from the First National, for distribution by Richards and Flynn, who are also the proprietors of the Twelfth Street and the Wonderland theatres.

Lee Gunnison, proprietor of the Royal and Crystal theatres, in Atchison, Kan., who has been confined in a Kansas City hospital for six months, has recovered sufficiently to walk about a little, but is still unable to attend to business.

David Rogers, who has been special representative for the United in this territory, has taken charge of the Kansas City branch office in place of Hunter Bennett, resigned.

"Common Cause" had such a big seven-day run at the Colonial in St. Joseph that two other theatres in that place booked it from the Vitagraph.

Gabbert and Kirby, of the Electric, Dearborn, Mo., were visitors of the General for the purchase of films for exhibition in May.

C. A. Maddux, of the Vitagraph, made a week-end trip to St. Joseph and returned with a bunch of contracts in his pocket.

Frank Duffy, special representative of Vice-president Brunet, of the Pathe, is paying his semi-annual visit to Kansas City.

Manager Block, of the Orpheum, St. Joseph, has purchased the Royal of C. F. Cuff.

G. A. Kuhn, of Ellis, Kan., came into Kansas City to line up the Select productions for the season.

Indiana News Letter

Mutual Theatre Company Signs Up Famous Players.

WHAT is said to have been the largest contract for motion pictures ever signed at Marion, Ind., was completed recently when Miss Dolly Spurr, head of the Mutual Theatre Company, of that place, contracted for the 1919 program of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, for $16,000. The contract signed by Miss Spurr means that during the remainder of the year either the Lyric or Indiana theatres, both operated by the Mutual Theatre Company, will be devoted to either Artcraft or Paramount pictures. Miss Spurr said the contract was for 159 productions.

AND NOW COMES THE TURN OF WINNIPEG

Over Half a Million Dollars Will Be Spent on a New Allen House for the Manitoba City

OFFICIAL announcement has been made by Mr. E. Allen of Toronto, president of the Allen Theatrical Enterprises, that a costly and spacious Allen Theatre will be erected in the down town section of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The site for the new house is on Donald street, between Portage and Graham avenues. It has a frontage of 120 feet and a depth of 127 feet to an alley. The price paid for the site alone is said to be $150,000, while the theatre structure will cost between $450,000 and $500,000.

Tenants of the small structures now on the site are being removed and the actual work of building the theatre will be started on June 1st. It is planned to open the new theatre not later than December 1st. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,200, with 1,400 seats on the ground floor and 600 in the balcony.

The plans indicate that the new Allen Theatre will have an attractive foyer and a beautiful mezzanine floor with spacious lounge rooms and promenade. The theatre will start off with an orchestra of 25 pieces and one of the features will be a large pipe organ to cost about $18,000.

The Allens already control two other theatres in Winnipeg, the Dominion and the Red.

The Pictures Saved the Day.

Moving pictures came to the rescue for the Orpheum Vaudeville Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, when a change in railway time for the summer made it necessary for the theatre to open its Saturday evening performance at 7 P. M., to enable the performers to catch their trains for distant points. Winnipeg did not adopt daylight saving for the current season, but the railways did and the Orpheum Theatre had to make a jump in its showtime on Saturday nights. To carry the one performance to the usual closing time of 11 P. M., the Orpheum decided to add a moving picture feature to the bill for the one night. This feature is being presented after the close of the vaudeville portion of the programme. The first feature so used was "Roped," starring Harry Carey, a Universal release. This and similar features are being booked for one showing only.

War Hero Honored at the Family.

Residents of the Beach District, Toronto, turned out in large numbers on Thursday evening, April 10, for a special benefit performance at the Family Theatre, Kew Beach, for Private William Dies, one of Toronto's real heroes. Dies came home from France with his eyesight and his right arm lost in the war. He was presented with a check for $2,800, which consisted of the receipts from a benefit hockey match and a number of private subscriptions. He was escorted to the stage of the theatre by Brigadier-General Gunn, officer commanding the Toronto district. A special moving picture programme was provided and the orchestra was augmented for the occasion.

Regent Gives Continous Performance.

The Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, discontinued its policy of giving distinct matinee and evening performances, starting with the week of April 7. To date, the Regent had been closed each day from 5 P. M. to 7 P. M., but now the performances are being given continuously from 1 P. M. to 11 P. M. Only one other theatre in the Canadian Capital gives a continuous show all afternoon and evening, this being the Strand Theatre. All other local houses are closed at the supper hours.

Miss Levinsky Goes to London.

Miss G. Levinsky, of Toronto, has been appointed personal representative for Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen, the Canadian film magnates, at London, England. She has arranged to take up her new duties at once. For a number of months, she has been in charge of the editorial department of the Canadian Moving Picture Digest. She has been succeeded as editor by Walter Greene of Toronto, formerly local publicity director for the Allens.

Regent Features Its Music.

The Regent Theatre's magazine, which is called "The Screen" contains a musical department which is conducted by John Arthur, the conductor of the orchestra. It is headed "About This Week's Overture." In this department is given a brief synopsis of the current overture and a word or two about the composer. During a recent week the musical number was "Keltic Suite," second and third movements, by J. H. Foulds.

Davis Will Open Exchange.

Maurice Davis, formerly assistant manager of the Montreal branch of the Fox Film Corporation, has arranged to undertake an exchange business of his own. He is well known throughout the Quebec territory.

R. S. BALLANTYNE GOES TO OMAHA MUSE

Former Mutual Exchange Manager Becomes the Main Works of a Middle West Picture Theatre

R. S. BALLANTYNE, for twelve years with the Mutual Film Company, has resigned as manager of the exchange in Omaha and is now the manager of the Muse Theatre, Omaha.

Mr. Ballantyne, known to his friends as "Ballay," is not new at the exhibitor's game. He started as an exhibitor in 1907, owning the Crystal, at Norfolk, Neb. He later bought the Gem, at Tilden. In 1911 he entered the employ of the Progressive Film Company, and later joined the H. & H. organization, a subsidiary of the Mutual. He went to Des Moines and, when the consolidation came about, remained with the Mutual. He was transferred from the managership of the branch at Des Moines to the position of manager of the branch at Omaha two years ago when the two offices were consolidated.

The new Mutual exchange manager in Omaha is E. J. Tilton, who served as assistant to Mr. Ballantyne for four years.

Stolte Goes to Blank.

Art Stolte has resigned as manager of the Strand Theatre, of Omaha, to become the assistant to A. H. Blank, Des Moines, head of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, franchise owners in Iowa and Nebraska of the First National releases. Mr. Stolte, it is reported, will have the management of a big, new house which Mr. Blank is building in Des Moines. During his stay of several months in Omaha Mr. Stolte made a mark for himself as a showman, and won a large circle of friends. A farewell luncheon was given in his honor at the Loyal Hotel, in Omaha.

Harry Watts, manager of the Muse Theatre, succeeded Stolte as manager of the Strand.

Omaha Entertains Laemmle

Many Scrimmages in "After His Own Heart"

IT'S A QUESTION as to just who receives the most severe punishment in "After His Own Heart," the Metro photodrama being produced on the Coast with Hale Hamilton as the star.

The story is taken from the four-part novel by Ben Ames Williams, as published in recent issues of a popular weekly magazine. The adaptation of the novel is the work of A. S. Le Vino, of the Metro staff. Harry L. Franklin is directing. The story calls for lots of action and exhibitions of strength.

Among the names of the male members of the company are William V. Mong, Harry Carter, Herbert Pryor, Frank Hayes and big Stanley Sanford.

Mr. Mong is cast as Judas P. Corpus, a multi-millionaire whose defective cardiac muscle is the cause of all the trouble brought upon Tom Duncan (played by Hamilton). Corpus is the only male member of the cast who is not actively concerned in the scrimmages with which the drama abounds.

Mr. Spleen, a famous surgeon who contemplates operating on Tom with the intention of exchanging his healthy young heart for the diseased organ of his patient, is played by Harry Carter. Besides creating Dr. Spleen, Mr. Carter takes his shart of the punishment meted out by the star.

Herbert Pryor, in the part of Adrian Keep, attorney and legal adviser to both Mr. Corpus and Dr. Spleen, also suffers himself to be brutally manhandled by Hamilton in more than one scene.

As the ex-gunman, known as Vincent, and employed as a valet to the magnate, Frank Hayes creates a difficult character in the man whose motto is "God created all men and Mr. Colt made them equal."

Big Stanley Sanford also does his scrapping on a big scale, and the way he mixes with the star when the latter attempts to escape the clutches of the millionaire's hirelings, proves him a worthy opponent for the athletic star, Hamilton.

The leading woman is in the hands of Naomi Childers.

Unique Window Display.

The office staff of the Los Angeles branch of the firm of Yawman & Erbe recently accomplished a tie-up with Paramount-Artcraft pictures, which demonstrated how effective a window display can be made with such a prosaic background as office filing cabinets.

The filing cabinets and systems now installed at the Hollywood studios and the Los Angeles branch office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation were purchased of "Y. & E.", and realizing the appeal of motion pictures, the salesmen designed his display accordingly.

The opportunities opened to exhibitors by this unique display are limited only by the number of different lines of furnishings which enter into the equipment of the modern theatre, if indeed it is necessary to stop even there. In the Los Angeles window was an attractive arrangement of a number of large color portraits and smaller photographs of leading Paramount and Artcraft stars, together with stills from recent productions.

"Probation Wife" Breaking Records.

Recent announcements from Select have told how Norma Talmadge, in "The Probation Wife," broke the house record at Loew's Stillman Theatre, in Cleveland. At Loew's New York Theatre this star has broken the house record consistently with each successive picture since first she came under the Select banner.

Elaborate Press Book on "Bolshevism on Trial"

WHAT is believed by many to be one of the most complete exhibitors' press books and advertising aids ever distributed with any motion picture production is the sixteen-page magazine and music cue sheet which Select Pictures Corporation has published in connection with the exploitation of their timely special attraction, "Bolshevism on Trial."

The magazine is printed on heavy white stock and contains many valuable suggestions and aids for the exhibitor in successfully advertising the big special. Each page is 9 by 12 inches in size.

On page 2 is a description of posters, cuts, mats, lobby display and lantern slide. The third page is devoted to a resume of the story, illustrated with a scene from production. Page 4 contains advertising suggestions and thirteen sure-fire catchlines, while on the fifth page are three synopses, two ready-to-clip press reviews and a box containing the billing and cast of characters.

On page 7 there is a reproduction of a full-page copyrighted advertisement which appeared in the New York Herald of Monday, March 10. The eighth page contains two sample advertisements, so constructed as to appeal to the average middle-sized town exhibitor who is his own advertising writer. Page 9 lists a series of advantages in store for the exhibitor who plays this production, and also contains a special suggestion on advertising possibilities. Reproductions of electros and mats are printed on page 11. A special electro and mat service has been prepared for this production, including two two-column, three three-column and two one-column. Page 12 contains reproductions of two three-sheets, one twenty-four sheet, one six-sheet and two one-sheets.

On page 13 the exhibitor has his choice of four ready-to-clip press items. These are so prepared that the exhibitor can clip them from the page and hand them to the motion picture editor of his local newspaper.

The music cue sheet and score occupy pages 14 and 15. On page 14 is printed the score, while the opposite page holds the cue. The last page of the magazine, page 18, is devoted to a list of Select branches in the United States and Canada.

"The Roaring Road" Next Reid Picture.

In "The Roaring Road," the latest Paramount picture, in which Wallace Reid is starred and which has just been scheduled for release April 13, Mr. Reid plays the role of "Toodles" Waldon, a young auto salesman who aspires to be a speed king.

James Cruze directed the production, and the scenario was written by Marion Fairfax from the series of Junkpile Handicap stories, by Byron Morgan, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Frank Urson did the photography.

Most prominent among the supporting cast are Ann Little, who plays the feminine lead opposite Mr. Reid; Theodore Roberts, Guy Oliver and C. H. Geldart.

First Capellani Picture, "Oh Boy!" Is Completed

WORK has been completed on "Oh Boy!", the first of the series of Creighton Hale-June Caprice features to be produced by the Albert Capellani Productions, Inc., for release through Pathe. The cutting and titling of the production, which is the first "Filmusical Comedy" to be transmitted to the screen, is rapidly nearing completion.

"Oh, Boy!" is a screen version of the musical comedy hit of the same name which ran in New York for more than two years.

A number of beautiful and spectacular exterior scenes have been incorporated in the picture, including a championship football game.

In addition to Creighton Hale and June Caprice, an all-star cast interprets the various characters in the picture.

Zena Keefe, who plays the part of Jackie Sampson, has been starred individually in several special screen productions, while Flora Finch, who is also prominently cast, is recognized as a comedienne of rare ability.

Other outstanding members of the cast are W. H. Thompson, J. K. Murray, Ben Taggert, Joseph Conyers, Charles Hartly and Grace Reals.

Plans are now under way for providing the production with an extensive exploitation campaign, the details of which will be announced at a later date.

Reproduce Part of San Quentin Prison.

An exact reproduction of a portion of the penitentiary at San Quentin, near San Francisco, was erected at Universal City for use in several scenes from Priscilla Dean's next Universal attraction, written by Bayard Veiller and bearing the temporary title of "The Chatterbox." The special set has been over two weeks in the course of construction. Francis McDonald, George McDaniels, Gertrude Astor, Walt Whitman, Claire Greenwood, Joseph Swickard and H. Milton Ross are supporting Miss Dean. Rollin Sturgeon is directing.

Some Alphabetical Females Are Presented in This Clever Paramount Poster.
To which might be added the fact that the same females are acrobatic also.

Emerson-Loos 24 Sheet Free to All Exhibitors

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is distributing among exhibitors who book the John Emerson-Anita Loos Paramount production, "Oh, You Women!" a twenty-four sheet which is a distinct novelty in motion picture posters. These posters are distributed through the exchanges absolutely free to all who book the picture, each receiving as many as he asks for to supply the stands for which he may contract.

The poster is striking in effect as well as novel in detail of design. The words, "Oh, You Woman!" stand out in large block letters, dominating the entire sheet and arresting attention as far as the stand can be seen. Within each letter, without detracting from the compelling force of the bold-relief effect, is a cartoon humorously suggestive of the title.

The poster was designed and executed in the Art Department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which is under the supervision of Vincent Trotta.

The twenty-four sheet is one of the features of the special campaign of exploitation of the John Emerson-Anita Loos picture which is being released early in May, independent of any other Paramount or Artcraft picture or series of pictures. There are also being distributed through the exchanges to exhibitors booking the picture, at the nominal price of $1.50 per thousand, a small two-color folder, suitable for use as an envelope stuffer. The caption on the front, when folded, reads "Everybody Wants to See—Women," the fold just covering the words "Oh, You," which completes the title of the picture when the folder is opened.

Ultimate Result of Greed Is Shown in "Destiny"

SUPPORTED by one of the strongest casts that ever has appeared in a Universal production, Dorothy Phillips will shortly be seen in a Jewel production entitled "Destiny." This film play has been adapted from an original story by Charles N. Buck by Elliot J. Clawson, and has been produced by Rollin Sturgeon, who produced "God's Country and the Woman" and other big Vitagraph productions.

Miss Phillips is cast as Mary Burton, the sister of Hamilton Burton, who craved only for power and who never gave love a thought, and of Paul Burton, who thought only of his music and of another man's wife. Hamilton Burton, as a boy, is played by Tom Ashton, and as a man, by Stanhope Wheatcroft. Harry Hilliard is cast as Jefferson Edwards, Walt Whitman is cast as Thomas Burton, Gertrude Astor as Mrs. Haswell and Nanine Wright as Mrs. Burton.

The story brings out the ultimate result of greed and deals a blow to selfishness and despotism in business. The film play is related as a vision of what might have been had young Hamilton Burton followed out his boyhood ideas and desires.

Pathe Launches New Serial with Big Publicity Drive

LAUNCHED with a publicity campaign that will take advantage of every means of bringing the picture to the attention of exhibitors and public alike, "The Tiger's Trail," the new Pathe serial starring Ruth Roland, will be released on Sunday, April 20.

The cast that has been chosen to support Miss Roland is unusual in its strong personnel. Opposite the star is George Larkin, one of the most daring "stunt" men on the screen. The principal "heavy" role is played by Mark Strong, a well-known celluloid villain. Harry G. Moody, a noted character man, is cast in a weird role. George Field, prominently known as the only understudy Fred Stone ever had, plays the part of the Hindu high priest. Frederick L. Kohler, for two years a member of the Griffith forces, and recently assistant director for Baby Marie Osborne, plays a cowboy bandit chief. Easter Walters, who has previously appeared with Miss Roland and who supported Fannie Ward in "Common Clay," plays the important role of a housemaid-vamp-spy.

Kerrigan Supported by Big Cast in "Best Man"

IN "The Best Man," the new Jesse D. Hampton Production, to be released May 4 by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, J. Warren Kerrigan has one of the strongest roles he has ever played. He takes the part of Cyril Gordon, a Government Secret Service agent.

Kerrigan is supported by Lois Wilson, who takes the part of Celia Hathaway, and who marries Gordon thinking he is another man, a real first class villain of the old school, who has been threatening to expose her family, unless she sacrifices herself—and her fortune—to his mercies.

The other characters are as carefully cast. They include Alfred Whitman, Frances Raymond, R. D. McLaren, Mary Land, Clyde Benson and Fred Montague.

Mae Murray in Delightful Comedy Drama.

What is said to be one of the most delightfully humorous light comedy dramas ever made at Universal City is scheduled for release by Universal shortly under the title, "The Delicious Little Devil." Mae Murray is the star.

The picture has been adapted from an original story by John B. Clymer and Harvey Thew, entitled "Kitty, Mind Your Feet." Robert Z. Leonard has produced the film play from the scenario by Mr. Thew.

Roberto De Valentina is seen opposite Miss Murray, while William V. Mong is seen as the press agent. The film is in six reels.

Many Breezy Comedies Listed by Universal

AN abundance of good, clean comedy of varied character is on the Universal schedule for release within the next six weeks. During that period the efforts of no less than seven different comedy companies will be released and no two comedies will have any semblance of one another.

"Green Eyed Johnny," featuring Jack Dillon, who also directed the production, a Nestor, "Looney Lions and Monkey Business," a Century, and "Skidding Thrones," a Lyons-Moran, are on the schedule for the second week of April; "Let Fido Do It," an L-Ko; "Scared Stiff," a Lyons-Moran and a Nestor without a permanent title are to follow.

"Good Night Turk," and "A Plumber's Busted Romance," are other L-Ko's to be released in the near future, while Lyons-Moran have managed to keep several weeks ahead of their schedule and therefore have six comedies ready for marketing shortly. Titles for these are "The Expert Elopers," "Harmony in 'A' Flat," "The Bullshevists," "Taking Things Easy," and Wise Wives."

Show Early Episodes of "Great Gamble."

First three episodes of the coming serial, "The Great Gamble," which is being produced by Western Photoplays, Inc., for early release through Pathe, were run off last week for the first time at the Crystal studios in New York City, where the work of completing the remaining episodes is going on.

Those who view the print were enthusiastic over the work.

Great attention has been paid to detail in the sets and the general make-up of the picture, which show to advantage in the finished product, according to those who were present at the first showing. A particularly fine set has been used in the home of a millionaire.

Charles Ray in "Greased Lightning."

In view of the success which has been attained by Charles Ray in his recent pictures, in which he has had the role of a country boy, the news that he will again essay a character of the same sort will be welcomed by the public. In "Greased Lightning," which is released April 20, the star again is put in a small town atmosphere.

This time he is a dreamy, impractical inventor. The star is said to surround his role with pathos as well as comedy.

The new picture gets its title from the hero's greatest mechanical contrivance, which is a racing automobile named "Greased Lightning."

President Enjoys Pathe Pictures.

Samuel B. Rose, naval gunner for Uncle Sam, whose management of motion picture entertainment aboard the Presidential transport, George Washington, has earned him the commendation of high authority and small, has written a letter to Pathe Exchange, Inc., expressing his appreciation of the promptness of the Pathe service and the exceptionally high quality of the pictures, which, he says, were "a source of great enjoyment to President Wilson, Mrs. Wilson and the various members of the Presidential parties."

"Relations" Is Evelyn Greeley's First.

Evelyn Greeley, after having shared starring honors with others, is now to be starred in her own right by World Pictures. Her initial venture will be "Relations." It will be in five reels. Oscar Apfel will direct the production. Miss Greeley's leading man is Hugh Dillham, who, it will be remembered, married Marjorie Rambeau the other day.

Madge Completes Making Mojave Desert Scenes

MADGE KENNEDY has returned to the Goldwyn studios at Culver City, from the Mojave Desert, where the star and her associates completed the final scenes of her newest Goldwyn picture, "Leave It to Susan."

Unlike anything she has attempted on the screen before, the artiste's role in this picture by Rex Taylor, is certain to prove as great a surprise to her admirers, as it was to the star herself. The locale of the new Goldwyn picture is in the midst of the Mojave's wastes.

She is seen as the daughter of an Eastern capitalist, who, with his family, journeys West. An amusing accident leaves her on the desert when the train resumes its trip after an interruption. Her only companion is Monmorency, her dog, and it's all because Monty spied a rabbit and gave chase, in which Susan just had to join, that she finds herself in desperate straits.

It is while seeking habitation that Susan meets with strange and perilous adventures, situations to which only the inimitable comedy art of Madge Kennedy could do full justice. The people she encounters, some of them the most desperate bandits of the plains, her experiences with them, and the thrilling episodes that follow, assure "Leave It to Susan" a place among the big surprise comedy-dramas of the year.

As her leading man, Miss Kennedy has Wallace MacDonald. Others in the cast are Alfred Hollingsworth, George Kunkel, Anna Hernandez and that laugh-provoker, Walter Hiers.

Bessie Barriscale Has Big Scenes in "Josselyn's Wife"

BEN ALEXANDER, one of the most lovable children in screen annals, comes back after his decided success in "The Turn in the Road" with another prominent part in a Robertson-Cole feature for release through Exhibitors Mutual.

This time little Ben will be associated with Bessie Barriscale, starring in B. B. Features, in her newest production at the Brunton studio, "Josselyn's Wife."

Miss Barriscale hardly could have selected a more capable cast of supporting players than surrounds her in this picture. Nigel Barrie, Kathleen Kirkham, Joseph Dowling, Leslie Stewart, Marguerite DeLamott, Josephine Crowell, George Hackathorn, Helen Dunbar, and Tom Guise are among those who will contribute to the success of the production.

The picture has been made from the novel of that name, written by Kathleen Norris.

Howard Hickman is the director.

"Miss Adventure" Is a Strong Story of the Sea

PERSONS who have seen the first print of "Miss Adventure," the William Fox Excel Picture, which Peggy Hyland has just finished on the Pacific Coast, declare it is the best Miss Hyland has made. It is said to be full of thrilling action, pathos and the sprightly good humor. The Exhibitors Service Bureau of the Fox Corporation is completing elaborate exploitation material to assist exhibitors in presenting it.

In "Miss Adventure," which was written by J. Anthony Roach, Miss Hyland has the support of a large and capable cast, which includes Lewis Sargent, Frank Brownlee, Edward Burns, George Hernandez, George Webb, Alice Mason, and little Gertie Messenger.

"Miss Adventure" is a sea story, and has all the romance and thrills associated with smuggling, desert islands, castaways, shipwrecks and other happenings on the deep.

Mitchell Lewis in a "Huskie" Scene from "The Gulf Between."
After a ten-mile mush over Shasta County, Cal., the Select star pauses for this picture for the World.

Splendid Advertising Boosts "Topics of the Day"

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC., announces that, beginning Sunday, May 4, it will release weekly the famous "Topics of the Day," selected from the press of the world by the Literary Digest and produced by the Timely Films, Inc. Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., considers it an epochal announcement in that it marks a great step forward in the achievement of the inspired vision of Charles Pathe, founder of the organization whose activities cover the entire earth.

"I am especially happy in making the announcement of Pathe releasing "Topics of the Day," says Mr. Brunet. "Impressed with the originality of the feature and the strength of its popular appeal, we have carefully watched the growth of it, its bookings in first run houses, the nature of its reception and the manner in which it 'went over.'

Best and Brightest Minds Contribute.

"Some of the big facts attending this feature in its weekly selection and its exploitation are as unusual as they are impressive. The best and brightest minds of the entire world contribute to it. All nations have a part in it and a flash of wit or philosophy that has a universal application, if it comes from the arctic circle, a hilltown, or an inconspicuous hamlet in the United States will have just as high a place of honor as though a flash from the acknowledged cleverness of some celebrity in Paris, London or New York.

"The Literary Digest has a circulation of more than a million copies. 'Topics of the Day' is a big permanent feature. For instance, a memorandum shows that it was listed from twenty to forty-seven weeks in many important picture houses of the country including Graumans, Los Angeles; California Theatre, San Francisco and Los Angeles; the Strand and the Broadway, New York City; Shea's and the Hippodrome, Buffalo; the Riviera, Chicago; Stanley Circuit, Philadelphia; Circle, Indianapolis; the Liberty, Seattle; the Jensen and Von Herberg Circuit; the Miles houses, the Majestic, the Regent and the DeLuxe of Detroit; Strand, Syracuse; the Regent, Rochester; the Fox Theatre, St. Louis and the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York.

Immense Sums for Advertising.

"The Literary Digest, in furtherance of its general campaign, which of course includes 'Topics of the Day,' will circularize every telephone subscriber in the United States, involving more than twenty million subscribers. It spends each year $1,080,000 in newspaper advertising in which, from time to time the merits of 'Topics of the Day' are set forth.

"During this especial period of activity large display of advertisements will be placed in 4,000 newspapers, regarding the Literary Digest, which will include 'Topics of the Day.' Here is formed an excellent selling point.

"Furthermore, the publishers have announced that all of the news dealers in the various parts of the United States will be advised of these arrangements with Pathe and certain instructions will be issued to them to mention in their house to house campaign the fact that certain material from the Literary Digest is to appear under the headline of 'Topics of the Day' in the leading theatres of their community. It seems that thus every possible angle has been covered from the publishers' point of view; but we will add here our splendidly effective selling organization and all of the strength of our own publicity and promotion. So it will be that 'Topics of the Day' will become the most intensively promoted feature in the world."

Frederick in Vivid Character Study.

Pauline Frederick is rapidly progressing on her third Goldwyn production at the Culver City studios. It is "The Fear Woman." The new Pauline Frederick vehicle is described as a modern, vivid and human drama. "The Fear Woman," by Izola Forrester, author of Geraldine Farrar's newest Goldwyn Picture, "The Stronger Vow," gives Pauline Frederick a role more vital and fascinating than any she has portrayed in her long and brilliant stage and screen career.

In "The Fear Woman," character dominates plot. The story depicts the growth of the mind and soul of a very unusual girl. It shows her origin, her struggles against environment and traces the effects of those struggles and the manner in which they have strengthened instead of weakened her.

Golf Champions in Drew Comedy.

Scenes showing Travers and Douglas, the well known golf professionals in a championship match are an interesting feature of "The Amateur Liar," the Paramount-Drew comedy released on April 20. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew staged the closing scenes of this comedy on the Garden City, L. I., golf links when the champions played for the benefit of the Red Cross fund.

Six Big Pictures to Be Released in May by Fox

AN exceptionally wide variety of themes is represented in the six dramatic feature pictures which William Fox will release during May. Powerful dramas, a romance of the Orient, exciting comedy-drama, a thrilling Western story, a delightful romance of a young couple's struggle, and a sprightly adventure story—all there is in the entertainment fare served by the Fox Film Corporation, to meet the needs of all types of exhibitors.

The releases for May are divided into two Standard Pictures, two Victory Pictures and two Excel Pictures.

"The Siren's Song," a super-production staged by J. Gordon Edwards, tells a story of a singer's sacrifice to prove her love. Its scenes are laid in Paris and Brittany, and the picture is full of striking and picturesque settings.

Tom Mix will have a release in May—"The Coming of the Law," declared to be the best of all the Mix pictures. Mix, the Fox Exhibitors Service Bureau of the Fox Film Corporation states, has been forging to the front so rapidly that exhibitors are clamoring for more and more of his pictures. The picture is based on a popular novel by Charles Alden Seltzer and was staged by Arthur Rosson.

"A Fallen Idol" is the title of the Evelyn Nesbit picture to be issued next month. This picture was photographed at Jacksonville and Miami, Fla., and has many novel settings. Miss Nesbit plays the role of an Oriental princess. The story was written by E. Lloyd Sheldon and the picture was staged by Kenean Buel.

Gladys Brockwell will have another strong offering in "The Divorce Trap." This picture, directed by Frank Beal, is a tragedy of modern divorce, and holds a big appeal to men and women alike.

Peggy Hyland's release will be "Miss Adventure." It tells the story of a child who falls into the hands of a smuggler, is rescued by an honest sea captain and grows up in a tiny fishing village. It reaches a thrilling climax in an automobile chase which end with a plunge into the sea.

Albert Ray will see his second William Fox picture released next month. This is "Words and Music By——," and in it Mr. Ray and Elinor Fair play the roles of two young people who start from Kansas and find fame and fortune on Broadway. It is lively, clean romance, full of humor and pathos.

Metro Releases Hamilton's "After His Own Heart"

NOT since the creator of the financial genius in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" made his debut on the screen, has Hale Hamilton, the Metro star, had a more satisfactory vehicle than in "After His Own Heart" which is scheduled for release on April 28.

"After His Own Heart" is another of the stories produced by Metro under the new policy of the adaptation of popular novels and stories by authors with a reputation outside of the silent theatre. Ben Ames Williams is the author of this interesting tale of romance, love and adventure, which was published in a popular weekly magazine, and adapted to the screen by A. S. Le Vino of the Metro scenario staff.

The production has been given a wealth of luxurious settings for the interiors of the fashionable homes of the elite, and nothing to make the picture a success has been overlooked by Harry L. Franklin, the director.

The story deals with the exciting life of one Thomas Wentworth Duncan, familiarly known as Tom Duncan, and played by Hamilton.

Naomi Childers, as Mr. Hamilton's leading woman, has a stronger and more important part in this picture than in anything which she has ever done on the screen.

The balance of the cast includes William V. Hong, Harry Carter, Herbert Pryor, Frank Hayes, Stanley Sanford and Mrs. Louis.

Many Daring Feats Shown in New Universal Serial

SOME of the most unusual and daring feats ever enacted before the picture camera are included in the action of the Universal serial, "Elmo—The Mighty," and featuring Elmo Lincoln and Grace Cunard.

The early episodes bring out numerous thrillers in which Mr. Lincoln does not play a part. The action of the first three episodes, for the most part, takes place in the wooded hills of California where a big lumbering syndicate is seeking control of valuable timber lands patroled by Captain Howard Armstrong, a forest ranger and former army officer.

Miss Cunard is seen as Lucile Gray, a daughter of a wealthy man and a former Red Cross nurse who met Captain Armstrong on the battlefields and who recognizing him in the woods, renews old acquaintances with him. The leading characters are introduced in the first episode and from the start the serial picks up speed and interest.

Tossing men about like flour sacks, Mr. Lincoln clearly demonstrates his strength and in addition he is called upon to do dramatic acting and daring riding. One of the thrillers introduced in the early episodes is the daring motorcycle riding of James Cole who is cast as the Masked Rider.

"Elmo—the Mighty," now nearing completion at Universal City where Henry McRae is directing the action, is from the script provided by William E. Wing and Joe Brandt. It is expected that this serial will be ready for release the second week of July.

Costly Sets for Capitol Comedies.

"Smiling Bill" Parson's way of doing business on a lavish scale is reflected in his Capitol Comedies, which are fast winning for him the reputation of being one of the world's greatest comedians. Every one of his productions is elaborately mounted.

Particularly is this true of his newest Capitol Comedy, "The Midnight Alarm," the third adventure in his Go-Get-'Em Potts series. For the theatre scenes in which Leander Potts and his Frivolous Frolickers revel, "Smiling Bill" rented one of the largest playhouses in Los Angeles for four days. To lend realism to several scenes on the stage, Parsons combed the theatrical colony on the Coast for thirty girls to take part in the dancing which is one of the big features of "The Midnight Alarm."

Perhaps the costliest scene in the production is the incident in a Hollywood hotel, which "Smiling Bill" also rented for the occasion.

Issues Special Publicity on Home-Coming Fleet.

In line with its new policy of suppyling exhibitors of "Our Teddy," the authorized Roosevelt picture, with feature stories tying up scenes in the picture with striking events of the day, the special service department of McClure Productions, Inc is preparing for bookers of the Roosevelt film a story called "The Home-Coming Atlantic Fleet Foreshadowed in 'Our Teddy'," in connection with the arrival of 103 warships in the port of New York.

The popularity and usefulness of this special McClure feature story service among exhibitors is attested by the numerous requests for reprints and additional stories that come into the McClure office.

Margaret Marsh
Bright star of Oliver's serial, "The Carter Case," hands herewith her latest picture down to the future.

Goldwyn Buys Faversham's "Lord and Lady Algy"

"LORD AND LADY ALGY," a William Faversham Broadway success, is the latest of the popular hits which Goldwyn has purchased. Work on the play has been started at Culver City, and the release of the finished picture will interest every exhibitor in the country. Tom Moore will play the leading role. The author of the play is R. C. Carton.

While the play was a most intriguing vehicle on the spoken stage, opportunities for kaleidescopic scenic effects in the story make it even more adaptable for screen production. The story centers around the interrupted romance of Lord and Lady Algernon Chetland, his Lordship's passion for betting on the races, the social aspirations of Brabazon Tudway, the soap magnate, and the efforts of the Hon. Crosby Jethro to worm into a liaison with Lady Algy.

Never was there a photoplay with so many interesting characters, and Goldwyn stars have been cast with admirable facility, and effectiveness in the production. Tom Moore shows to particular advantage as Lord Algernon, the younger son of the Duke of Droneborough, and out of favor with his father because of his sporting proclivities. Moore's personal sportsmanlike bearing fits this character well.

"Just Squaw" Is Ready.

In selecting the new series of motion pictures, which Robertson-Cole will introduce with "Just Squaw," Miss Michelena picked three stories that contained every essential of dramatic success—Love intrigue, sacrifice, suffering, tenseness and mystery.

"Just Squaw" is essentially a melodrama, with the great West as its setting. It is an appealing story of the striving of a supposed half-breed girl to overcome the obstacles of blood.

Miss Michelena was accorded superb support in "Just Squaw." Andrew Robson as Snake LeGal gives a performance that might well be a model for Western bad men. Albert Morrison, William Pike, and D. Missoras are others who contribute bits to "Just Squaw," that will help to establish it as one of the premier Western dramas of the past year.

"Modern Husbands" Has Strong Appeal for Women

THE LOVE PIRATE" will be introduced to screen fans in Henry B. Walthall's "Modern Husbands," which will be released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual.

To women especially will this picture advance a strong appeal. The subject dealt with is one which many families of today have to contend with.

It is a story centering about a he-vampire, who breaks up temporarily one family and almost succeeds in wrecking a second one.

Walthall has surrounded himself with a number of players who were particularly well suited for this type of photoplay. The star himself has a role that should meet with sympathetic favor, for it shows him as a wealthy New York stock broker, whose home is broken up by a love pirate. Then, after losing his fortune he is driven through many vicissitudes, until eventually, happiness comes to him.

Ethel Fleming is cast as Julia Duane, wife of Stephen (Walthall) who plays the game according to pseudo society code, and has "to pay the piper."

To Neil Hardin was accorded the unsympathetic character of Bert Brockwell, the love pirate.

Melbourne MacDowell is seen as Jonathan Cosgrove, a prosperous diamond merchant and Clare DuBrey is cast as his wife, a society favorite. Olga Gray completed the support as Cleo, an adventuress.

Louis Bennison Completes "The Road Called Straight"

LOUIS BENNISON, famous on stage and screen for his delightful and true-to-life portrayals of Western cowboys, has just completed his newest Betzwood production, "The Road Called Straight," a fast-moving, full-of-action drama of the plains, which presents the handsome star as his most natural self.

Never have the remarkable talents of the smiling cowboy star been taxed as they are in the new vehicle, which offers him endless opportunities for skilful dramatic acting, for daredevil riding and for his inimitable style of comedy. Though intensely dramatic, "The Road Called Straight" is not without moments that require the star to be at his best as a funmaker.

"The Road Called Straight" is the work of Wilson Bayley, also author of Louis Bennison's first screen starring vehicle, "Oh, Johnny!" As his leading woman Bennison has beautiful and talented Ormi Hawley. Others in his support are Henry Mortimer, Burton Churchill, Jane Adler and John Daly Murphy. The picture will be released by Goldwyn May 11.

Make Bessie Love Film in Tree Country.

Vitagraph's next Bessie Love picture, the name of which will be announced shortly, has been filmed for the greater part in the vicinity of Eureka, Cal. This is in the midst of the giant tree portion of the State and forms a wonderful setting for the photoplay, which is a lumber camp story.

The scenario for the picture was written by Rida Johnson Young, especially for Miss Love and is being directed by David Smith. Wallace McDonald and Otto Lederer are in the supporting cast.

New Leading Man for June Elvidge.

Allan Edwards is leading man for June Elvidge in her next picture which she is making for World Film Corporation. Arthur Ashley started out to be the male lead, but was compelled to retire through an injury he suffered while taking the principal part in a rough-and-tumble fight called for in the scenario.

A Kiss While the Fairies Watch Is a Kiss de Luxe.

Say we, after seeing the above scene from Frank Hall's special, "A House Divided," a J. Stuart Blackton production, with Herbert Rawlinson and Sylvia Breamer.

"Our Teddy" Producers Plan Aid for Victory Loan

THE willingness of the picture industry to co-operate with the Government in its patriotic endeavors has again been demonstrated. The Treasury Department has accepted officially the offer of McClure Productions, Inc. to carry out a plan whereby exhibitors of "Our Teddy," the authorized Roosevelt picture, will be able to render valuable service in the Victory Liberty Loan campaign.

Recently the editorial research department of McClure Productions, Inc., in connection with its promotion work for "Our Teddy," came across in Colonel Roosevelt's speeches several striking passages dealing with Liberty Loan drives. It occurred to them at once that this would be extremely valuable publicity for the Government in the present campaign.

The producers of "Our Teddy" expressed these thoughts in a letter to Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, and offered to furnish the quotations from Colonel Roosevelt to exhibitors of the Roosevelt picture. The following reply was received from Frank R. Wilson, director of publicity for the Treasury Department:

"Thank you very much for your letter to Secretary Glass, forwarding extracts from the speeches of Theodore Roosevelt. We are very glad to make use of this in our publicity campaign in behalf of the Victory Liberty Loan."

Roosevelt's Message to the People.

Some extracts from Roosevelt's speeches, to be used in the Victory Loan drive follow:

"Long after this war is over, we shall continue in the struggle to achieve liberty for all mankind. To do it effectively, we must bind ourselves together as a nation and there is no surer bond between a man and his country than that he shall be a bondholder of his country."

"To own bonds of the United States is a badge of honor."

"There should be Liberty Bonds in every home in America."

"I myself have invested in these bonds. There is every reason for buying them. The patriotic reason is enough. But, in addition, there is offered the best security in the world, backed by the credit of the Government and people of the United States."

"The outstanding and fundamental need of the Government, without which nothing can be accomplished, is money, in large sums and small."

"Let us introduce into the work of peace something of the spirit our soldiers introduced into the work of war."

"I hope you farmers will enlist in this field with a will. Make it a people's loan. Make the terms 'bondholders' and 'people' interchangeable."

"It is the duty of every man and of every woman in this country who can possibly afford to do so to buy Bonds.

"All should do their bit in subscribing to this loan. Wall Street has been criticized many times. They call them bondholders. If the people of this country don't accept these bonds, Wall Street will. Let us people get them first!"

Public Wants More Chaplin Releases.

A letter recently written by J. B. Stout, owner of Stout's Theatre, in Danville, Ky., regarding Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms," illustrates how the public appetite for this star has been whetted by the slowness of his releases.

Recently Mr. Stout was induced by Lee L. Goldberg, of the Big Feature Rights Corporation, to play "Shoulder Arms" for a return engagement. From this letter one may well deduce that he did as well with it or better than during the original engagement.

Mr. Stout wrote: "For your information, when we repeated 'Shoulder Arms' we did some business. As you know, I don't like return dates, but this one went over, and I want 'A Dog's Life' for Saturday, April 12. I will take my hat off to 'Shoulder Arms.' I made more money on that picture than on lots of those so-called big pictures for which I paid fabulous prices."

MacLean Supports Dorothy Dalton.

Douglas MacLean, one of the most popular of the younger leading men, supports Dorothy Dalton in her newest Paramount picture "The Homebreaker," produced under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince. This story is said to be one of the cleverest conceptions of John Lynch, and R. Cecil Smith did the scenario with accustomed skill. Miss Dalton appears as a traveling saleswoman who breaks up the scheme to two crooks to mulct her employers.

Edwin Stevens, a well-known star of the screen, light opera, vaudeville and the original star of "The Devil" on the legitimate stage, appears in a highly effective role.

William Desmond Has Straight Dramatic Role

EVER since William Desmond, the Jesse D. Hampton star, has appeared in Robertson-Cole features released through Exhibitors Mutual, he has played in the lighter type of photoplay. "Life's a Funny Proposition," "The Prodigal Liar" and "Whitewashed Walls" have gone over strongly. Motion picture enthusiasts have come to regard Desmond purely as a comedian. Desmond is going to prove the fallacy of this belief, however, when his next picture, "The Mints of Hell," just completed, is released.

"The Mints of Hell" will be totally unlike anything Desmond has ever attempted. It is a rattling drama of the Yukon, with snow stuff. Jesse D. Hampton, the producer built an entire town at Truckee, high up in the Sierras, near the Nevada line, and waited patiently for the snow to come. When the carpenters finished their job, there wasn't a speck of snow on the ground. Five times the company went to Truckee on tips from the weather bureau, but on none of the trips did the scheduled storms arrive. Finally a blizzard did hit Truckee. Nearly six feet of snow fell, and after wallowing in the mighty white for two weeks, the company obtained some wonderful backgrounds.

"The Mints of Hell" is by James B. Hendryx, and was made into screen form by George Elwood Jenks. Park Frame directed the production.

William Desmond appears as Dan Burke, a loveable, two fisted comer from the outside who blows in his money so cheerfully that he is suspected of having a stake hidden somewhere.

Bill Weed, owner of the Bed Rock Saloon, an easy going, big hearted cuss, who runs a straight game and is everyone's friend is played by Edward Jobson.

Gaston Chaudiare, a silent man from the Valley of Mystery and who possesses a secret cache of strange, flat gold, is enacted by Charles French.

Vivian Riche, charming leading woman, is seen as Alina Chaudiare, a romantic girl. Jack Richardson has his usual bad man role as Clay Hibbing, a "mining broker." Frank Lanning has another important character role to perform in Maung, a half wit of the Valley of Mystery, who knows where the flat gold is hidden.

J. J. Franz, Tom O'Brien, Mrs. A. Costa and Walter Perry are others in the cast supporting Desmond, who have prominent roles.

There are many incidents to stir red blooded film enthusiasts in the production.

Greek Consul Praises Marion Davies Film.

Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, Greek consul and prominent St. Louis exhibitor, who has been in New York for a few days, has gone on record as saying that the Marion Davies films, as shown by him to his patrons in St. Louis, have gone over bigger than any other pictures booked this season. He declares that Marion Davies is a big drawing card in St. Louis and throughout the middle West.

Mr. Pasmezoglu is president of the Congress Amusement Company and the Mozart Amusement Company, operating several Missouri picture houses.

Miss Davies invited Mr. Pasmezoglu to the Paragon studio, which C. F. Zittel leased for her new picture, and he spent a day watching the star work on her latest production.

Dorothy Gish Has Climbed High.

It is less than nine months since Dorothy Gish started work on the first picture of her own Paramount series. The progress made in those nine months, is said to have surpassed the most sanguine expectations of everyone connected with her productions.

Exhibitor's reports on "Battling Jane," gave Dorothy a reception that marked her success. When "The Hope Chest" found its way to the screens they increased the number of adjectives and stretched out the bookings. And "Boots" was received in such a way that J. A. Partington, of the Imperial Theatre in San Francisco, decided to keep it one more day and ended by holding it a whole week more

"Greased Lightning" Is a Smooth-Running Vehicle

IF any vehicle afforded Charles Ray, Thomas H. Ince's star in Paramount pictures, has been more fitted to run smoothly than his forthcoming picture, "Greased Lightning," which is released April 20, it would be hard to discover it according to the producers. Certainly it has speed, action, ginger, character and comedy galore, judging from all reports from the West. Julien Josephson wrote the story, Jerome Storm directed, and Chester Lyons was the cameraman.

Wanda Hawley was chosen as leading woman. There is a fine supporting cast and the picture from every angle will please the followers of Charles Ray to the last degree.

Of course there is strong love interest, but the most exciting events are those concerned with the exploits of Andy Fletcher, the village blacksmith and inventor, whose Little Giant Potato Slicer is the dream of his life.

The rural type suits Charles Ray well. In this picture he is the country youth to perfection. Many of the scenes of this picture were made at the Lasky studio and still others on a location where there was plenty of room for Mr. Ray to operate his cantankerous buzz wagon.

Robert McKim is the villain, as is his usual wont. Willis Marks, Bert Woodruff, John P. Lockney and Otto Hoffman all have important characterizations.

Select Title for New Century Comedy.

"Frisky Lions and Wicked Husbands" is the title selected for the Century comedy to be released by Universal in May. This comedy is the second of a special series of animal-Century comedies being produced at the L-Ko studios by Vin Moore. Dot Farley and Charles Dorety have the leading parts in this release. The story of the comedy is one of love mixed with some thrilling and exceedingly humorous adventures with lions, monkies and a number of more or less wild men and women. The comedy is in two reels.

"Rustling a Bride" Is a Western Story.

"Rustling a Bride" is the title of Lila Lee's new Paramount picture which is scheduled for release April 27. The story and scenario were written by Edith M. Kennedy and the picture was directed by Irvin Willat.

The picture stars the young actress as a lonely Eastern girl, Emily, who lives with her aged grandmother. Nick McCredie, a cowboy, finds her name on the fly leaf of a school book at Coyote Junction and for a joke writes her a letter, but encloses the photograph of his handsome friend, Pen Walton.

Monte Blue plays the leading male role, that of Nick McCredie, and L. J. Shunway portrays the character of the malicious Walton.

David Belasco Play for Theda Bara.

"La Belle Russe," one of David Belasco's celebrated plays, picture rights to which the Fox Film Corporation has acquired, has been adapted for the screen by Charles J. Brabin, who is also directing it. The picture is being filmed at one of the Fox studios in Fort Lee, N. J., with Theda Bara as the star. It marks a radical departure from the type of plays Miss Bara has been enacting.

Looks Like a Blacksmith

Does Charles Ray in his coming Paramount, "Greased Lightning," whose title makes us think immediately of plumbers.

"Blinding Trail" Is Story of Life in a Lumber Camp

A STORY of life and adventure in a snow covered lumber camp is the vehicle for Monroe Salisbury's most recent Universal Special Attraction, "The Blinding Trail" scheduled for release shortly. The film play brings out the miracle of regaining lost vision and of a man's learning that though his wife has proved unfaithful that one member of his household has remained loyal and sacrificing through many darkened months.

Stuart Paton and John B. Clymer are the authors, and Paul Powell has produced the story in six reels.

"The Blinding Trail" was photographed almost entirely in the snow covered mountain regions near Pine Crest, Cal. The Salisbury company was forced to go to Flagstaff, Ariz., and to three different cities in California before locations where snow sufficient to permit sledding could be found. Claire Anderson is seen as Helen, the unfaithful wife, and Helen Jerome Eddy is cast as Adele. Alfred Allen, Arthur Maud and John Cook also have prominent parts in the production.

Goldwyn Gets New Basil King Story.

Basil King, whose novel "The Spreading Dawn" was the medium of Jane Cowl's debut in Goldwyn pictures, is soon to follow with another of his Saturday Evening Post pictures under Goldwyn direction. "The City of Comrades," a striking story of double life, will be released by Goldwyn, with Tom Moore in the leading role, early in the fall, following its publication in book form by Harper & Brothers this month.

The capture of another work by Basil King, the author of "The Inner Shrine," is only another step in the policy Goldwyn Pictures has mapped out to produce the very best that contemporary novelists and dramatists and short-story writers are able to turn out.

Corinne Griffith's Next Is "Thin Ice."

Corinne Griffith's next Vitagraph feature will be entitled "Thin Ice." It is an original scenario by Corporal Shannon Fife and is a society drama of the type that Miss Griffith has appeared in to such advantage heretofore. It is being directed by Tom Mills and the supporting cast includes L. Rogers Lytton, Charles Kent, Eulalie Jensen, Henry G. Sell, Walter Miller, Alice Terry, Jack McLean and Walter Horton.

A Serious Serial Seance.

"Hell on Earth" Has Cast of Well-Known Players

MANY well-known names are included in the final selection of the cast for Select's coming attraction, "Hell on Earth," in which Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey will be starred. Preliminary work on the production has been started. The interiors are being made at the Biograph studio in New York.

In addition to Sergeant Empey, who will play the part of "Jack Duncan," the cast includes Evelyn Martin, Marguerite Courtot, Betty Blythe, Sallie Crute, Charles A. Stevenson, William Dunn, Frederick Buckley, Lilla May Lowry, Harry Lee, Frank Noroross, Eugene Strong, Arthur Donaldson, Joseph J. Donahue, Betty Hutchinson, William H. Stucky, Edward Elkas, Roland Osborne and Victor A. Stewart.

Evelyn Martin has the role opposite Sergeant Empey, that of "Lucy Duncan." Miss Martin is one of the most beautiful women of the spoken stage, and she has recently developed into an unusually accomplished screen actress.

Marguerite Courtot, who is cast for the part of "Fanny Bruce" is another whose name is well known to screen patrons.

Betty Blythe is a Comstock and Gest stage star, having been seen in many spoken successes under their management. Her screen career includes "So Long, Letty," "Experience," "Who Knows?" "His Own People," and many others, including "Over the Top."

Another whose name is equally familiar to stage and screen patrons is Sallie Crute. Miss Crute made her stage debut in "The Deep Purple." She was also on the spoken stage with Douglas Fairbanks, before the latter became a screen star.

Charles A. Stevenson, who has the distinguished role of "Mr. Lowring" is one of the best known character men on the stage. He is at present playing an important part with Norman Trevor in "Toby's Bow" at the Comedy in New York.

"Hell on Earth" is an original story by Sergeant Empey, but contrary to general opinion it is not a war play, nor a play in any way dealing with scenes or incidents of the great war. It is being directed by Wilfrid North.

"Cannibals" Still Making Records.

After playing to three record breaking weeks at the Randolph Theatre in Chicago, Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas," released by Robertson-Cole, through Exhibitors Mutual have been held over for another week by Jones, Linick & Schaefer.

Crandall Books "Suspense" for His Metropolitan

FRANK G. HALL'S series of 10-20-30 releases are not confined to the programs of the smaller houses as the rentals would seem to indicate. The series has reached the screen of many of the largest first-run houses as the following letter from Harry Crandall, owner of seven of the largest theatres in Washington, D. C., will testify. Mr. Crandall after showing one of Mr. Hall's 10-20-30 series at his Crandall Theatre and later giving "Suspense," starring Mollie King, first run at his Metropolitan Theatre, wrote W. A. Busch, branch manager Independent Sales Corporation and the Film Clearing House, at Washington, as follows:

"When I signed for your 10-20-30 service, I had no open time in my theatres, but I felt that this plan should be encouraged and figured that I could use some of the shows at my Crandall Theatre, and could afford to shelve the rest. But I have been agreeably surprised at the pictures we have been getting and have used them all at all of my theatres, often times shelving other program shows to make way for the 10-20-30 series.

"I have just viewed your picture, 'Suspense' starring Mollie King and find it so good that we are going to use it first-run in our Metropolitan, as you know to be, one of Washington's largest theatres. We think it better than many we have run here and too good for our small Crandall Theatre."

Mr. Crandall, in addition to giving "Suspense" a run at his largest Washington house gave another of the 10-20-30 series, "A Woman's Experience," starring Mary Boland, an extra day at his Knickerbocker Theatre, uptown.

Tsuru Aoki Is Starred in "The Courageous Coward"

TSURU AOKI (Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa) is again seen in a featured part with her husband, in "The Courageous Coward," produced by the Haworth Pictures Corporation and released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual.

Tsuru blossoms out into a full fledged American girl in the coming Hayakawa attraction, which was written by Tom Geraghty and whipped into scenario form by Frances Guinan.

Mrs. Hayakawa adopts the Occidental clothing and incidentally the niceties which every American woman wants.

Hayakawa has a number of other notable players supporting him. George Hernandez is accorded the role of Big Bill Kirby, leader of San Francisco's Chinatown politics. Francis J. McDonald, as Tom Kirby, son of the politician, is another who gives a living characterization of the part entrusted him.

Toyo Fujita plays the part of a prominent Japanese lawyer, while Buddy Post as Cupid, creates a popular role.

William Worthington, who has directed all of Hayakawa's productions under the Haworth banner, did his customary splendid work with "The Courageous Coward."

Praises Studio Print of Anita Stewart's Mary Regan

HARRY WEISS, manager of the Central Film Service, of Chicago, saw the studio print of "Mary Regan," third of the Anita Stewart special feature attractions to be distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, screened in the projection room of the Rothacker plant there, before the work of conforming the negative was started, and sent the following wire to the home office in New York:

"You can take it from me that 'Mary Regan' is some picture as I saw it. It is undoubtedly the best production we have released so far. Mr. Mayer's telegram commending it was modest."

The story of "Mary Regan" is from the five-edition novel by Le Roy Scott, peer of American writers of detective and mystery fiction. It describes the romance of Mary Regan, a denizen of the aristocracy of the shadow world, and Robert Clifford, a New York detective. Miss Stewart, in the role of Mary Regan, is a girl who uses her natural charms and her wits to win luxury and prosperity from "big business" while it indulges itself in "big pleasure."

Walsh Has McCutcheon Story.

No sooner had George Walsh returned from Palm Beach and finished the final scenes of "Help! Help! Police!" than he began preparing to begin work on another rapid action comedy-drama. This is "The Seventh Person," an original story, written by Benjamin F. McCutcheon, brother of George Barr McCutcheon, the novelist, and John T. McCutcheon, the cartoonist. Edward Dillon will direct.

"The Third Degree" Ready for Release.

The stage is set—or it would be more proper to say thousands of screens are ready—for the release of Vitagraph's big Alice Joyce production of Charles Klein's "The Third Degree." The release of this picture will be heralded by a big billboard campaign, national in scope.

"The Third Degree" was produced under the direction of Tom Terriss and Miss Joyce's supporting cast includes Gladden James, Anders Randolf, (Mrs. De Wolf) Hedda Hopper, L. Rogers Lytton, Herbert Evans, George Backus, J. P. Wade and L. O. McGuire.

Strong Mystery Element Runs Thru "The Law of Man"

THE LAW OF MAN," Enid Bennett's new Paramount picture, which is scheduled for release April 27, was written by John Lynch, one of the most imaginative of story tellers, and it is said that in this story he has constructed an extraordinarily interesting mystery story. This picture was originally titled "Nemesis." Fred Niblo directed the production under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. The scenario was written by Ella Stuart Carson.

The story deals with the adventures of a girl, and orphan, who decides to make her own way in the world as a sculptor.

For the staging of the courtroom scenes the company went to Los Angeles, where the criminal court room was secured. An interesting fact is that instead of hiring actors to take the minor courtroom parts, the real clerks, bailiffs and other employes were prevailed upon to act their parts before the camera.

Niles Welch is leading man, and others prominent in the cast are Andrew Robson, Dorcas Matthews and Donald MacDonald.

"Help! Help! Police!" Walsh's Latest.

Described as a rapid action comedy, full of thrills and unusual stunts, "Help! Help! Police!" the current William Fox release starring George Walsh, is said to be the best picture so far made by the athletic whirlwind.

The scenes are laid in Palm Beach, and the picture itself was filmed there. The film was directed by Edward Dillon.

"The Turn in the Road" Doing Big Business

"THE TURN IN THE ROAD," the Brentwood special released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual, is gaining weekly in popularity.

The latest honor accorded this production is a two weeks' run at San Francisco and Seattle. During the week of March 30 this picture held the screen at the Rialto in San Francisco and throughout the week did a big business. It was not so much the matter of business as the entertainment it furnished his patrons that led George Mann, manager of the Rialto, to apply for a second week's booking, beginning April 6.

John Hemmerick, of Seattle, was so impressed with the picture when he saw it the first time that he booked it as a first run feature, and his judgment was so thoroughly vindicated by his biggest week's box office figures in months that he continued the production for another seven days stay.

The Stanley Booking Corporation has listed the play as a coming attraction in every one of its eighty houses throughout Pennsylvania. In West Philadelphia, the leading theatre of the section, The Nirdlinger, will house the picture for an entire week while the Comerford at Scranton will run it for an entire week, also.

An exceptional fact in connection with the San Francisco showing is that the Mission Theatre and the Princess Theatre booked it for a week each after the two weeks' run.

Last week, the feature held the screen at the New Theatre in Baltimore and there met with the same approval that has marked its appearance everywhere.

In the Boston territory, two prints are booked solid until June 25.

In Detroit and Cleveland, where the production has played for seven days each, hundreds of persons who had never gone to motion picture theatres viewed this offering.

"A House Divided" Gets Trade and Press Showing

A HOUSE DIVIDED," the J. Stuart Blackton special production, the United States and Canadian rights to which were acquired last week by Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation, for distribution through the Film Clearing House, Inc., as a special, was shown to members of the daily and trade press this week at the Independent Sales' private projection room, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. The reviewers for the trade and daily press signified their approval of this Blackton production by their unanimity in the assertion that it presents the best of the independent productions made by Commodore Blackton.

The action of the story is laid in London and concerns the London social set as exemplified by those moving in the same social whirl with the titled nobility. A member of the House of Lords is one of the principal characters and his marriage with a girl years younger than himself and her infatuation for a younger member of Parliament, afford the basic plot material for the development of one of the most dramatic photoplays ever screened. Sylvia Breamer, Herbert Rawlinson, William Humphreys and Sally Crute have the principal roles. The original production was in seven reels. Mr. Hall decided that a stronger and more actionable drama would result from cutting with the result that the Independent Sales will release it in six reels.

"Humanity" to Get Indiana Premiere.

"The Heart of Humanity," Allen Holubar's Jewel superdrama will be given its premiere showing in Indianapolis May 5 according to the announcement of Manager Abbott, of the Universal's Indianapolis exchange. On that day the film will begin an indefinite engagement at English's Opera House, one of the largest theatres in Indiana and will be presented in the same big way it was offered in New York, Chicago. Minneapolis, Los Angeles, San Francisco and other leading cities. Richard Sachsel, a well known Mid-Western tenor has been engaged by Mr. Abbott to sing the ballad "Heart of Humanity" in connection with the film showing. The production will be offered at prices ranging from twenty-five cents to one dollar.

Says "Daddy Long Legs" Is Mary Pickford's Best Work

IT IS the best picture I have ever made, and I consider it is Mary Pickford's best endeavor."

This is the opinion of Marshal Neilan, after reviewing a completed studio print of "Daddy Long Legs," first of Miss Pickford's special feature attractions to be distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and which he directed.

Several California exhibitors and representatives of First National who have seen parts or all of it screened have been extraordinarily enthusiastic in their recommendations of it as the greatest work Miss Pickford ever has done.

"Daddy Long Legs" is the story for which Miss Pickford paid $40,000. It has become a stage classic because of its phenomenal success in play form. The original story by Jean Webster already is in its advanced editions in book form. Miss Pickford has the role of Judy, the "orphant" girl, who is taken from the children's home by a wealthy man and sent to "a boarding school for young ladies." The only condition upon which this philanthropy is bestowed is that he remain unknown to Judy. This is the beginning of a romance which develops from a ridiculous homage into a serious attack of "heart trouble," both for Judy and the mysterious benefactor whom she addresses, in her letters on personal conduct, as "Daddy Long Legs."

Big Thrill in "Red Glove" Episode.

"A Leap for Life" is the title of the ninth episode of "The Red Glove," the current Universal serial starring Marie Walcamp. In this episode a majority of the action takes place between The Blue Chip, the mountain inn which Billie has known as home, and the city, where a fortune and a home with the rich Halsteads, administrators to her estate, await her. Billie leaps from a falling derrick and lands on the roof of a hotel, crawls down and off a ledge with the aid of a rope thrown to her as Wiley and the Vulture leave from below.

The tenth episode bearing the title "Out of Death's Shadow" introduces several new characters and starts the action in the city where Billie accepts the home with the Halsteads and obtains part of her fortune.

Hearst News Records Big Views.

Some unusual pictures of the Eiffel Tower in Paris and scenes taken around the Trocadero and other sections of the metropolis near the great tower, pictures showing General Pershing addressing thousands of soldiers who fought in the battle of the Marne, following a review at Angernach-on-the-Rhine, Germany, scenes showing the final target practice of the Atlantic fleet at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and the arrival of the fleet in New York following a speedy dash Northward, views of the return of Porto Rican soldiers who guarded the Panama Canal during the war to San Juan, and their reception by the populace are among the most important views in Hearst News No. 16, released on April 14.

Nazimova's Newest.
The talented Metro star who will be seen soon in "The Red Lantern."

Charles Miller to Start First Special Next Week

CHARLES MILLER, who signed recently with Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation, to produce a series of special productions for Independent's program of special releases, will commence work on the first of the series at the Bacon-Backer studio next week. Mr. Miller has under consideration three novels, all by well-known authors, the screen rights to one of which he will purchase within the week. The three stories under consideration present the three big dramatic foundations—melodrama, straight and comedy drama. Mr. Miller is undecided as to the one he will give to the public as the first of his series of six specials.

Albert Cowles will assist Mr. Miller in the direction of the productions. Mr. Cowles will start casting at the Bacon-Backer studio as soon as Mr. Miller decides on one of the three scripts he has under consideration. Samuel L. Rothapfel who has been using the Bacon-Backer studio for the past several weeks in producing his first Rothapfel Unit Programme, will finish this week, after which the Miller Company will take possession.

Sympathy Dominates in Billie Rhodes' "Love Call"

ANYONE who loves a good fight is going to revel in "The Love Call," Billie Rhodes' next feature, released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual. This newest National production is one that abounds with the most appealing picture essential—sympathy. From the outset, when Kid Allen, played by Billie Rhodes, sees her father shot down in cold blood, and then grasping an unfired pistol from his clenched hand, avenges his murder, no audience can refrain from taking the keenest interest in the youngster.

All through the entire five reels she retains this sympathy, thanks to the nature of the story written by Marjorie Benton Cooke, which was made into screen form by E. Magnus Ingleton and Louis Chaudet. "The Love Call" originally was written in novel form, and then appeared as a serial in many of the principal dailies throughout the United States.

There is a real thrill in every reel. The production is rich in humor and snap, and the direction by Louis Chaudet is of his customary high standard.

Among Independent Producers

Conducted by C. S. SEWELL

Zion Company Completes Sholom Aleichem Picture

THE first Sholom Aleichem picture, "Khavah," produced by Zion Films Inc., starring Alice Hastings, has just been finished under the direction of Charles E. Davenport. It is announced that under ordinary circumstances, the production would have taken at least seven weeks to complete, but due to the desire of several exhibitors to book the picture, the cast worked day and night, with the result that the filming was completed in a little over five weeks.

Work of assembling and cutting is proceeding under Mr. Davenport's direction, while the titling and editing will be done by Nat Dorfman, and it is expected that a private showing will be held within a few days.

The story is said to be an unusaul one filled with tense dramatic moments as well as humorous bits from the pen of this well known Russian writer, Sholom Aleichem, whose work has been likened to that of Mark Twain. Negotiations are under way for the presentation of this picture in a Broadway playhouse.

Oliver's Poster Compaign Causes Increased Bookings

PLANS carried out by Oliver Films, Inc., for the intensive exploitation of "The Carter Case," a Craig Kennedy serial starring Herbert Rawlinson and Margaret Marsh, produced under the supervision of Harry Grossman, are said to have resulted in a big demand by exhibitors to book this chapter photoplay for their theatres.

It is claimed by Mr. Grossman that the release of the first episode simultaneously with the appearance on a large number of billboards of spectacular pictorial posters, has had the effect of stimulating popular demand for "The Carter Case" to such an extent that a large number of exhibitors, many of whom never ran serials before, have secured for their theatres this serial based on popular scientific detective stories.

Many exchanges report such heavy bookings that they are forced to order extra prints. "The Carter Case" is now begun showing at many of the leading theatres from Maine to Texas.

Territorial Quickly Sells Rights to Jester Comedies

TERRITORIAL rights to the new series of Jester Comedies are rapidly being disposed of by the Territorial Sales Corporation, 1600 Broadway, New York, handling these subjects.

The method of distribution was announced only a short time ago, but already many applications for rights have been received and several contracts with exchanges have been signed, guaranteeing two pictures a month.

When the method of distribution was decided upon, prints of the first three releases, "In the Wild West," "Peace and Riot" and "The Tenderfoot," were shipped for inspection. Tangible returns in the shape of contracts quickly materialized after the exchange men saw the quality of the comedies and that it was possible to get an assured supply.

The series consists of two reel subjects. The stories of the different comedies are in no way related, and it is not necessary to have seen the first in order to enjoy the second; and so on.

Twede Dan is seen in all of these comedies, which are being produced under the personal sunpervision of William Steiner.

Comedy Relief Provided in "Virtuous Men."

In addition to the punches and spectacular scenes, "Virtuous Men," a Ralph Ince Film Attraction, starring E. K. Lincoln, also possesses a vein of comedy, which relieves the tension of the melodramatic scenes.

Danny Hayes, in the character of "Hick" Hogan handles the humorous situations, while additional laughs are gained by the use of effective comedy subtitles.

Many Territories Sold on Gale Henry Comedies

THE Bulls Eye Film Corporation in No. 729 Seventh avenue, New York, which controls the Billy West and Gale Henry comedies, announces the rapid sale of territory on the Gale Henry subjects.

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service, of Cleveland, Ohio, was in New York last week adding new items to his Cleveland service, and after signing for the Gale Henry productions expressed himself as highly gratified with his purchases.

Charnas will release his Gale Henry subjects every alternate week, and other state rights buyers are making similar arrangements. Charnas controls the Ohio and Michigan rights.

Other territory has been sold as follows: Interstate Films, Inc., for New York State; R. D. Marson Attraction Company, Boston, for Massachusetts; Masterpiece Film Corp., for Eastern Pennsylvania; Bee Hive Exchange, for Southern Illinois and Indiana; Canadian Film Service, for Western Canada; E. & H. Film Distributing Company for Georgia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina; Capital Film Service, Inc., for Washington, D. C., Maryland, Delaware and Virginia; Liberty Film Renting Co., Western Pennsylvania.

Varied Backgrounds Used for "The White Heather"

THE title of Maurice Tourneur's newest production, "The White Heather," is said to have aroused widespread interest.

This picture is adapted from a Drury Lane melodrama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton. Indirectly, the title comes from the good luck flower of the Scotch highlands, the white heather, yet Scotland is the background for but a minor part of the story. The action centers around the recovery of a marriage record from the hulk of a destroyed yacht, called "The White Heather." The big scenes of the melodrama take place at the bottom of the sea, where the hero and the villain, in the costumes of deep sea divers, fight to the death.

Much of the story centers in London, revolving between the financial district and the slums. In the scenes "on change" Mr. Tourneur employed a large number of players, while the underworld scenes are announced as providing remarkable film studies in light, shade and balance.

The few scenes in the Scotch highlands are among the sheep herders of the uplands. There are also striking scenes among the upper class of Scotch nobility.

The cast of "The White Heather," include H. E. Herbert, little Ben Alexander, the child who scored in "The Turn of the Road," and "Hearts of the World," Ralph Graves, Mabel Ballin, Jack Gilbert and Spottiswood Aitken.

The releasing arrangements will shortly be announced by Hiller and Wilk, Inc., New York representatives of the Maurice Tourneur Productions.

More Territories Sold on Frohman Feature

The Frohman Amusement Corporation reports that Richards and Flynn of Kansas City have signed a contract for the six part production, "Once to Every Man," for Kansas and Missouri. Richards & Flynn, prominent state rights buyers in the Middle West, and in addition to their interest in the state rights exchanges, control a circuit of theatres in Kansas and Missouri. It is said to be their intention to book "Once to Every Man" in their own theatres first, conducting a special publicity campaign in every city and town in which the picture is played.

Moore to Present "Virtuous Men" at His Rialto

TOM MOORE, president of the Moore Features Corporation and owner of the million dollar Rialto Theatre in Washington, D. C., has made arrangements with Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin of S-L Pictures for the initial public presentation of "Virtuous Men." This production is the initial Ralph Ince Film Attraction, starring E. K. Lincoln and was personally directed by Ralph Ince.

Mr. Moore is also a member of the First National Exhibitors Circuit and a franchise holder for that organization in his territory, and following the showing of "Virtuous Men" in New York on April 6, he wired a request for its inaugural public presentation. This picture will be presented at his Rialto Theatre for a run commencing Sunday April 20.

An attractive lobby display has been arranged for this presentation, comprising among other things the original oil paintings of E. K. Lincoln, together with scenes from the play, painted by Clarence F. Underwood, R. G. Morgan, Gustav Michelson, and others. It is planned to have a number of men prominent in public life in Washington attend the opening performance.

It is said that "Virtuous Men" is the first independent production to have its inaugural public presentation at the Rialto Theatre in Washington.

Warners to State Right Government Health Film

THE United States Government has enlisted the screen drama in behalf of a nation wide campaign against venereal disease being carried on by the Public Health Service, a division of the Treasury Department.

Recently before a number of officials of the department of which Surgeon General Blue is the head, the Warner brothers held a private showing of their production, "Open Your Eyes," at the Knickerbocker Theatre, in Washington.

This production has been prepared under the supervision and with the co-operation of the U. S. Public Health Service.

The showing was a success, receiving the endorsement and acceptance of the department. Those present are said to have been agreeably surprised and very pleased with the delicate manner in which a diffcult problem had been transformed into a romantic and interesting story.

This picture will be released as an official picture made especially for the U. S. Public Health Service. The seal of the department will be carried on the advertising and publicity matter, only it is announced that the department will lend its cooperation toward wide publicity and initiate a campaign in every community where the picture is to be shown, working with the individual exhibitor. The State Board of Health will join in this propaganda.

Warner Bros. feel that in return for the co-operation from the Government they want to select with the greatest care in every territory the parties who will handle "Open Your Eyes" on a state rights basis, so as to secure its proper presentation and greatest possible showing.

Star of "The Carter Case" Designs Puzzling Novelty

OLIVER FILMS, INC., are arranging to supply exhibitors who have booked "The Carter Case" with novelty puzzle card, for distribution among their patrons. This novelty is said to have been originated by Herbert Rawlinson, co-starring with Margaret Marsh in the screen presentation based on the Craig Kennedy mystery stories. It consists of a card bearing the words, "Who Is Avion"; this character being Craig Kennedy's arch enemy in the serial. By placing the card in a solution of salt and water a picture of the mysterious air terror, "Avion," appears in place of a large question mark on the face of the card.

This card is particularly appropriate, as it represents the mystery that Mr. Rawlinson, in the principal role, is called upon to solve in "The Carter Case," and Harry Grossman, general manager of Oliver Films, was so impressed with this novelty, first shown by the detective-hero to a few friends at a dinner celebrating the completion of the serial, that he immediately arranged for its distribution among exhibitors.

Arrow Will Distribute "Masked Rider" Serial

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, has announced that his company has acquired the rights to the United States for "The Masked Rider," a western serial, featuring Harry Meyers, Ruth Stonehouse and Paul Panzer.

It is a western serial produced by William Steiner and is said to contain a thrill in every foot of film and with a plot which holds the interest from one episode to another. Aubrey Kennedy wrote and directed "The Masked Rider." He also directed "The Witching Hour," a six reel feature and in addition has had the direction of several other features and serials.

A special advertising campaign has been arranged to exploit "The Masked Rider."

Rialto, Washington, Where "Virtuous Men" Will Have First Public Showing.
S-L has selected Moore's million-dollar house for the premiere of its feature starring E. K. Lincoln.

The Face in the Fire
Being none other than that of Herbert Rawlinson, star of Oliver's serial, "The Carter Case."

Frohman Company Finishes First Two Guinan Westerns

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation have received word from their West Coast studio that "South of Santa Fe" and "The She Wolf," the first two of the twenty-six two reel western dramas, featuring Texas Guinan, have been finished, and that work is now progressing on the third picture, the title of which is yet undecided.

Work has also been begun on the Mack Swain Comedies, known as Poppy Comedies. The first is now in the hands of the cutter and Mr. Swain is at work on his second picture.

Mr. William L. Sherrill, president of the company, and Mr. Jesse J. Goldburg, the general manager, expect to leave for New York the end of this week. They are bringing with them the first prints of the Texas Guinan Western pictures, and the first two Poppy Comedies, which will be shown to the trade at a time and place to be announced later.

Work Begun on New Francis Ford Serial.
Director Francis Ford started this week on the first episode of his new serial, which takes place on an island off the Mexican coast. Elsie VanName, who is collaborating with Mr. Ford on the story, promises there will be many thrills and as much excitement and mystery as was contained in the former Ford serials. Principals in the company besides Director Ford, who again plays the leading role of Phil Kelley, a scientific detective, are Rosemary Theby, leading lady, Elsie VanName, Doris Dare, Pete Gerard, Nigel DeBullier, Mark Fenton, Phil Ford, Jack Lawton, V. Olivo, Jerry Ash and Johnny Thwaites, camera man.

Pittsburgh Company in Market for Film.
Max W. Herring, organizer of the Exhibitors Film Company, located at 402 Cameraphone Building, 347 Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, announces that his company is in the market for state rights pictures for the territory of West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania.

W. B. Mack

W. B. Mack's Screen Debut Occurs in "Virtuous Men"

A PROMINENT member of the cast of "Virtuous Men," the initial Ralph Ince Film Attraction, produced by S-L Pictures, is W. B. Mack, who is seen as Mocket, a fanatical inventor, in this production starring E. K. Lincoln.

Mr. Mack is well known as an actor on the speaking stage, and this marks his screen debut. He will be remembered for his excellent portrayal of Jimmie Carson in "Within The Law" and also has to his credit many years of experience in the Shakesperian drama and in support of productions with Mrs. Fiske.

"Virtuous Men" also marks the initial screen appearance of two other stage players, Clara Joel and Irving Brooks. Miss Joel played the leading feminine role with Mr. Mack in "Within The Law," while Mr. Brooks has appeared in a number of stage productions.

State Rights Sales Reported This Week

THE Victory Film Manufacturing Company reports the sale of rights on "The Triumph of Venus," for Iowa and Nebraska, to Phil Goldstone of the Sterling Film Corporation, Omaha.

Francis Ford Building Own Studio.

Announcement is made that work has already been started on the new Francis Ford Studio at Sunset Boulevard and Gower st., Los Angeles. If the stage and buildings are completed on schedule time, Director Ford will start work on his own stage by May 1, and expects to give a studio dance about the end of this month.

Christie Two-Reeler Has a Pre-Release Showing

THE first of the Christie two-reel specials, "Sallie's Blighted Career," was given a pre-release showing at the California Theatre in Los Angeles during the week of April 7. Although the picture will not be released until April 20, a print was rushed through for the California, immediately after Al E. Christie had completed the cutting and titling.

Favorable reviews were made by the Los Angeles critics, including Anthony Anderson in The Times, Florence Lawrence in The Examiner and Gertrude Price in The Record. The Examiner says: "Fay Tincher's coin-spot socks are an amusing incident in a film which was lively, humorous and best of all based on a strenuous plot," while the Record says: "Fay Tincher in 'Sally's Blighted Career' with thirty Christie beauties, is a gloom dispelling riot."

Oliver Executive Pleased with "Carter Case" Results

WITH the completion by Oliver Films, Inc., of its first production, "The Carter Case," a Craig Kennedy serial starring Herbert Rawlinson and Margaret Marsh, I. Oliver, the president, has finished the first lap of what he declares will be a strong and persistent race to reach the pinnacle of photoplay presentation of constantly increasing excellence and widening appeal. The results obtained with this serial, which gave to the scientific detective stories of Arthur B. Reeve feature settings and an unusual cast, are said to have surpassed Mr. Oliver's expectations and justified his opinion that striving for artistic perfection with popular favor leads to big box-office success.

In the choice of material for future productions Mr. Oliver proposes to take another step forward. It is his opinion that the thing the public wanted last month or last year is not necessarily what it will want tomorrow, no matter how differently it is dressed. Therefore he intends to try something new each time, keeping in mind that the fundamental appeal of true art remains the same.

Spectacular Ship Launching in Initial S-L Production

ONE of the spectacular moments in "Virtuous Men," the first Ralph Ince Film Attraction, is the launching of one of the largest American ships made during the past year. These scenes were secured by Director Ince at the Sun Shipbuilding Company's yards in Chester, Pa., Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin having made arrangements with S. Leonard Mason, of the shipbuilding company for permission to film the launching of this vessel.

On the appointed day, E. K. Lincoln the star of "Virtuous Men," Clara Joel, Grace Darling and others in the cast went to Chester and took part in the ceremonies, and in the presence of several hundred people, including several notables, Miss Darling christened the vessel, and several cameramen secured pictures of the scenes which form a prominent part in this production.

Clarendon Co. Completing First Comedy.

The K. B. Clarendon Comedies, Inc., is now putting the finishing touches on its first comedy to which the working title of "Ship Ahoy" has been given. Alice LaMont and Sammy Burns are the featured players, and the production is being made at the studio of the company, located at College Point, Long Island. The productions of this organization will be two reels in length and one will be issued each month.

Romayne Announces New Feature.

Romayne Superfilms, located in the Marsh-Strong Building, Los Angeles, are offering on a state rights basis "The Sage Brush League," a five reel western baseball comedy, featuring Myrtle Sterling, who appears in the character of Myrtle Montgomery Warde, First Baseman. This production is now being cut and titled and will soon be ready for distribution.

The company announces that a fine line of pictorial paper consisting of two styles of one sheets, two three sheets, one six sheet and one twenty-four sheet has been ordered for use in connection with this production.

Exclusive Offers Tom Mix Single-Reelers.

Exclusive Features, Inc., 126 West 46th Street, New York, announces it is ready to re-issue a series of fourteen single reel western comedies featuring Tom Mix. This series was selected from a number of single reel Tom Mix negatives produced by Selig Polyscope Co. An advertising campaign in the trade papers will shortly begin by Exclusive Features on these productions.

Sidelights and Reflections

AMONG the communications that have been printed in this journal from exhibitors during the last month was one from Fred C. Seegart, manager of the Regent Theatre, Milwaukee. One sentence of Mr. Seegart's letter is of particular interest to the review department of all motion picture trade papers:

"Unfair criticisms in trade journals do not worry me. I don't bite on them any more. I have found entirely too often that my views of a feature and theirs do not agree, and for that reason I take them as they come, and pay no attention to them."

The word unfair admits of more than one construction. A criticism, if not honestly written, may be unfair either to the producer or to the exhibitor. Even when honestly written there will still remain to a greater or lesser degree, readers that will not agree with it. All pictures do not succeed both artistically and financially in all places where they are shown. Every person who sees one of the generally admitted big hits of the business does not leave the theatre in a thoroughly satisfied frame of mind. With pictures of average merit, which make up the most of the exhibitor's programs, this class of spectators is much larger in proportion.

The statement, "I have found entirely too often that my views of a feature and theirs do not agree," will, in most cases, turn out to be an honest difference of opinion. It is only necessary to read the exhibitor reports that appear in some of the trade papers to understand the honest differences of opinion on the merits of a picture that exists among exhibitors themselves. Also to realize the impossibility of an exhibitor trying to tell if a certain picture will please his patrons because an exhibitor in Kokomo writes in that such a release packed his house and delighted his public and an exhibitor in Little Rock sends in word that he showed the same picture with exactly the opposite results.

Local conditions, the ability of the exhibitor to gauge the taste of his patrons and to exploit the picture in advance must be known before another exhibitor can get anything approaching a practical line on what the same picture, properly handled, will do in his theatre.

After all, making money out of a moving picture theatre is up to the showmanship of the exhibitor. The trade journals put him in possession of all the essential facts necessary for the selection and exploitation of his programs. Being show business, the element of chance always has a share in determining the amount of the box office returns, but the better the exhibitor's showmanship the bigger his profits.

"A Man of Honor"

Harold Lockwood Has Lead in a Sunshine-Filled Screen Classic Picture.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE is an atmosphere of tropic sunlight and a pleasing saltiness of fluttering seaweed in most of the scenes of "A Man of Honor," a five-reel Screen Classic with the late Harold Lockwood in the leading role. An island in the Carribean Sea is its chief background and as shown in the picture fits the story well. Bessie Eyton takes the heroine's role. This girl, with her masterful father, played by Stanton Heck, and the hero, are the three characters about whom the struggle takes place. The unscrupulous president of the company exploiting the tropic isle, once the rendezvous of pirates, wants his manager (Lockwood) to manipulate the yearly reports so he can juggle the stock. The manager fights for the stockholders, whether he is fired or not.

This attraction will go well everywhere. It might, in one or two incidences, have been more dramatically constructed; but the story holds well and the film is certainly successful in giving the lights and shadows of the tropics. It also has a clear insight into the get-rich-quick methods of some corporation heads. An attractive picture it surely is.

Cast.

David Smith.....Harold Lockwood
Christabel Beaumont.....Bessie Eyton
Christopher Beaumont.....Stanton Heck
Valentine.....William Clifford
Rogers.....Bert Starkey
O'Brien.....Gordon MacGregor
Mortimer Gregg.....Pomeroy Cannon

Story by Henry Kitchell Webster.
Scenario by Fred J. Balshofer.
Directed by Fred J. Balshofer.

The Story.

In the Metro picture, "A Man of Honor," the opening scene shows a tropic island incorporated by get-rich-quick schemers who think it is no good, but are selling stock in it. The manager is making glowing reports which his assistant manager half believes in.

The manager died and his assistant, David Smith, taking his place, has been warned of the methods of the financiers. His reports also are glowing, but they are true. When the directors find that the island is making big returns on the investment, they and especially Christopher Beaumont, the president, want the reports to be changed so that they can get back the stock at a low figure. Beaumont's letters do not bring results, so he goes to the island himself and takes his daughter.

Smith and the girl take an interest in each other, but the young man will not give in to the crooked demands of Beaumont and tells him that he is working and will still work for the stockholders. Beaumont fires Smith, who puts him under arrest on the island. A terrible storm arises and Smith proves his heroism before the girl. She finds a pirate treasure and leaves it to Smith. Beaumont and his party escape and return to New York. Smith sells the treasure and puts a controlling block of stock in the hands of the girl. Her father sees that his schemes are stopped and gives in with good grace.

Advertising Angles: Make full use of Lockwood's name. Also boom the fact that this is from a novel by Henry Kitchell Webster. Appeal to his large following as well as to Lockwood's admirers, and make a strong appeal. Then make a splash on stock company transactions. Use big heads such as "Don't buy that oil stock," adding until the reader has seen the inside of stock company promotions. Work heavily upon this angle and tell that this story shows how an honest man defeated the swindlers' ends. You can make this story sell itself if you work hard on this angle.

"The Roaring Road"

Paramount Presents Wallace Reid in a Story of Sensational Incident in Motor Racing.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

A STORY of incident, depending largely for its material upon the speeding of motor cars on the race-track and against a fast train, "The Roaring Road," is too disjointed to be classified as drama, though it contains an interesting and humorous clash of character between a spirited young auto salesman, played by Wallace Reid, and an equally spirited old employer, admirably portrayed by Theodore Roberts. The sensational feature of the Paramount production is a marvelously well depicted race between the lover in a racing car and the father kidnapping his own daughter in a fast express from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Some explanatory subtitles enhance the effect. Frequent lapses in story interest up to the race and the forcing of situations for the hero's benefit cause it to drag at intervals, but the final race itself compensates, as it is taken from new and attractive viewpoints and fine camera work makes it thrillingly realistic.

Cast.

The Story.

"Toodles" Waldron, an auto salesman in "The Roaring Road," who works for a sporty old automobile distributor named Ward, has racing ambitions and is in love with Ward's daughter. The old man does not propose to give her up for five years and he over-reaches himself in an attempt to stimulate the young salesman by feigned complaints. They part company, but Ward is in despair when three racing machines are scrapped in a railroad wreck. "Toodles" buys the scraps and reassembles one complete car with the aid of his mechanician. With this car he wins an important race, and holds up Ward for a large increase of pay. But few days remain for a record to be broken between Los Angeles and San Francisco, and Ward plots to have it won. He arranges with the mechanician to release "Toodles" from jail, where he is locked up for speeding. Ward then kidnaps his own daughter, and the young man attempts a daring rescue. By this ingenious method, "Toodles" is fired to break the record. He wins the girl as well.

ANOTHER highly enjoyable comedy-drama is here presented in screen form, entitled "Three Green Eyes." It is enacted by a pleasing cast of players, including many of the leading performers for World-Pictures. The photoplay, which was adapted by Wallace C. Clifton from "a famous old play," probably Sardou's "A Scrap of Paper," exerts a direct pull upon the interest from start to finish.

There is a generous intermingling of humor and drama. The action centers

The Story.

A love affair exists between Lucille Vale and a young architect, Paul Arden, but the girl's widowed mother wants her to marry money. The mother urges the suit of a wealthy mill owner, Allen Granat, and finally prevails upon Lucille to accept him. But before her marriage Lucille writes a letter to Paul, asking him to follow her to New York and save her from the unwelcome match.

Paul is thrown from a horse and injured, being taken care of in the home of an entomologist, Thomas Wiggan, who has a son named Johnny. The latter is in love with Marion Vale, Lucille's younger sister. Two years pass, and during all this time the letter has remained in a hiding place devised by Lucille and Paul.

Lucille and her husband, whom she now loves devotedly, return from abroad and the husband unwittingly employs Paul to make some changes in their house. Paul meets Lucille and makes ardent love to her, but relents when he finds she loves Granat. They then set out, after preliminary demonstrations of jealousy on Granat's part, to recover the missing letter and its turning up at some later time. The efforts to do this furnish much amusing and dramatic action. Two other love affairs develop in addition to the original one at the beginning.

Your printer or the oculist may have some eye cuts you can use as the basis for a poster in green ink. ## "The Jungle Trail"

William Farnum Finds Mysterious City in African Wilds.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

WHEN the Fox company sets out to picturize the splendid and mysterious it generally gets there and in "The Jungle Trail," a five-reel film, and surely a box office attraction, it accomplishes its aim most remarkably. William Farnum has the role of hero who breaks through all kinds of difficulties and dangers. Director Richard Stanton seems not quite so sure of his parlor scenes as he is in pictures that show a lion hunt with a tribe of warriors in full cry, a village in the jungle —pictures full of the splendor and mystery; best of all, a city lost in the African wilds and a semi-civilized people who have never heard of a white man and think him a god. The temples of this city, its busy streets and especially the shrine of the terrible god of war, dim and full of shadows and with fires behind the statue so that it has bright eyes, will make the picture remembered long.

Its African scenes make the picture big. All its other faults can safely be overlooked.

The Story.

The hero of the Fox picture, "The Jungle Trail," is Robert Morgan, a man of modest means and in love with Mary Lamar, a young woman whose mother worships riches. Philip Garson, worth millions, is the choice of the girl's mother, but she loves Morgan. Morgan has long wanted to see jungle life. Garson gives him a chance to win a fortune by going to Africa. Two guides are sent with him and instructed, under a threat, to see that he dies in the jungle.

In the wild lands Morgan has won the regard of the chief and the villainous guides dare not kill him outright. They put a snake in his bed, but he discovers it. They bribe a band of blacks to kill him in his grass hut. It is set on fire, but he crawls out. Escaping without cartridges, he wades through a pool full of crocodiles and after long wanderings faints at the edge of a land governed by a semi-civilized people who have never heard of a white man.

One of the temple virgins, Wanada, finds him and brings him to her father, the high priest. Her lover, Haja, has reached the city first and when Morgan is brought in he is condemned to die as an infidel. He succeeds in pulling up the stakes which bind him in the fires and they now think him the god of strength, and he has the freedom of the temple. Homesick, he tells Wanada of his love for a white girl and for his mother in America. She helps him steal the jewels of the god of war. It is a terrible thing to be caught at and while the two are before the shrine, Haja comes. Morgan slips behind the statue. Wanada pretends to be praying. Wanada moves aside, Haja bends down to pray. Morgan exerting his strength upsets the statue crushing Haja. He and Wanada walk quietly out and with Wanada's brother escape to America, where he discomfits the villain and marries the girl who has never ceased to mourn for him.

AGREEABLE and of amiable simplicity, "A Man and His Money" is as good-natured as its leading character, a hard-riding polo player, a hard-drinking young rounder and an all-round spendthrift, whose conversion is out of the ordinary. It depends neither upon the fine girl to whom he is engaged, nor upon his going dead broke before coming to his senses, but upon a moment of manly self-disgust. He undertakes his own reformation, but in the same cheerful manner shown when making a fool of himself. In this well-staged Goldwyn production Tom Moore fits his role to perfection, and Seena Owen responds quite as capably to that of a society girl of dignity and character, but she has been induced to show a warm interest in the spendthrift after discarding him, making it plain that it is only a question of time when she will renew the engagement she has broken, thus seriously weakening the slender thread of curiosity as to the outcome on which sustained interest depends. This is plainly a fault in handling a story otherwise well constructed and pleasing enough to suit the average spectator.

Harry Lathrop, spendthrift of cheery response to almost any self-indulgent demands on his inherited fortune, and the hero of "A Man and His Money," commits a crowning indiscretion in carousing at a time when he has a dinner engagement and is to escort his fiancee, Betty Dalrymple. He quits his dissipated crowd under the influence of liquor and commits the unforgivable offense of appearing before his refined fiancee ridiculously drunk. She discards him forever. He returns to his dissolute companions and continues the debauch in his own well-appointed house, but the excess ignites a spark of manhood in him, and he arranges with his attorney to advance no more funds for a year. He will cure himself. His adventures culminate in him obtaining a job cleaning the pet dogs of Betty's aunt, where that young lady chances to be visiting. ## "The Follies Girl"

Olive Thomas in Five-Part Triangle Production Makes the Best of Scant Opportunities.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE story of "The Follies Girl," written by W. Carey Wonderley, covers a situation which could have been worked into a comedy-drama of no mean quality had it been placed in hands more skilled in the shaping of the picture. The production was made by the S. A. Lynch Enterprises for the Triangle program with pretty Olive Thomas in the title role. While it holds the interest, and will undoubtedly be acceptable in a theatre which can supply it with the proper settings, musically and otherwise, judged on the basis of the well-made production it is faulty. Situations are passed over in a superficial manner without getting the most out of them. The action is jerky and suffers from monotony; and once or twice scenes are stretched considerably beyond their legitimate length. Olive Thomas holds her own in the opportunities afforded her. Claire McDowell, except for the fact that at times she is inclined to slightly overact, does an excellent bit of character work. Wallace MacDonald is a manly Ned. William V. Mong, in the rather difficult role of Edward Woodruff, is effective.

Story by W. Carey Wonderly.
Directed by Jack Dillon.
Photographer, Steve Norton.

The Story.

The theme of the "Follies Girl" covers a ruse on the part of the family attorney to bring about the recovery of Edward Woodruff by introducing a granddaughter whose existence was unknown to him. The old man, worried over a daughter who died without forgiving him for an early wrong, and a grandson who failed to walk in the way he would have him go, has gradually fallen into a state of nervous illness. A young woman introduced into the household in the face of relatives who wait patiently for the end and the inheritance of a fortune is a member of "The Follies." She plays her part well, spreads her youthful buoyancy over the old man's woes, coaxing him back to partial health. The attempt of Nina Leffingwell, a distant relative, to shuffle the cards in such a way that herself, her brother and her cousin, whom she means to marry will be beneficiaries of Woodruff's will, gives opportunity for considerable detail of the comedy-drama order. The "Follies Girl" turns out to be the wife of the grandson Ned. A tiny baby coming on the scene cements more securely the friendship between the old man and the young wife, and entirely outdoes the best-laid plans of the plotting relatives.

"Blackie's Redemption"

Human Courage and Resolution Well Pictured by Bert Lytell and Cast in Metro Film.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE new Metro attraction, "Blackie's Redemption," five reels, is a specially worthy picture by reason of the excellent acting with which its story, and especially its characters, are made real and understandable. Its central theme is human courage and fortitude in face of all kinds of difficulties. The notable thing about it is the different angles from which it looks into the heart and brain experiences of Blackie and of the warden of the prison. These two indominitable men are consistent throughout the picture and the well-knit plot gives a particularly good story so ably acted by the whole cast that it is sure to excite enthusiasm. It is an attraction that ought not to be missed.

Some may think that the best character drawing in the story is the warden by Joseph Kilgour. The quality of Mr. Kilgour's work is widely known. Bert Lytell, as the prisoner, is all that could be desired. Alice Lake, as Blackie's sweetheart, also stands out. The backgrounds are wonderfully photographed and are full of interest. The direction and general handling of the picture are fine.

The Story.

The hero of "Blackie's Redemption," a Metro picture, is a crook so clever that no one can "get" him. He, Blackie, has determined to go straight. The "Count," a cowardly crook, cracks a safe and comes unbidden to Blackie's supper of farewell on the eve of his marriage to Mary, a worthy girl. The police hear of the robbery, come to the eating place and search everyone. The "Count" slips a pearl pin in Blackie's pocket and this is found. Blackie promises to get the "Count."

Blackie is brought before the warden, who knows him, and warns him that there is going to be trouble if he tries any insubordination. Blackie knows his only chance of escape is to get into the hospital and so eats lye for months. Blackie does escape and the warden cleverly traces him to a house near a lumber company. By a quickly contrived ruse he gets the drop on the warden, who never flinches. Blackie hasn't the heart to kill a brave man in cold blood and the warden lets him slip through. Blackie learns that the "Count" is about to rob the safe of the lumber company and works it so that the rascal is captured and sent up. Blackie and Mary are last seen on a steamer going to Honolulu.

"The Unknown Love"

Six-Reel Perret-Pathe Production Features Doris Cassinelli and E. K. Lincoln in War Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN this six-part subject, written and produced by Leonce Perret and released by Pathe, entitled "The Unknown Love," is presented a story of the great war. It abounds in battle scenes and the plot interest is but a thin thread connecting the various characters together. It is excellently done, from a photographic standpoint, and contains many ingenious novelties in the way of artistic settings, character poses, and descriptive pictorial bits. It is the type of production that should be greatly appreciated by returning soldiers and others who have been trained in American camps. For the general public the story interest will perhaps seem rather slim, but it is of good human quality and the war scenes are none of them of a repellant type.

The outstanding feature of this production is undoubtedly to be found in the intimate touches describing life on the battlefields of France. The plot is not strong enough to rank the picture with the major screen productions of the war, but the battle scenes develop many striking incidents and the subject has considerable value in this respect. The love story is delicate and of pleasing character, though it lacks any great depth of feeling.

The Story.

Doris Parker is a young girl living at a pretty lake resort with her father, John Parker, a retired American sea captain. She is beloved by Captain Jack Tims, who has propoed to her many times, but she does not return his affection.

Doris hears a friend reading a letter from France, in which the friend's lover says his pal, Harry Townsend, never gets any letters. Doris determines to play godmother to Townsend and writes him immediately. The scenes shift to the battlefields of France and show the arrival of Doris' first letter, to which Townsend at once replies. Later, in the course of the correspondence Townsend, as a joke, mails the photograph of a friend to Doris, pretending it is his own.

Townsend is seriously wounded during an action and Doris is notified. She determines to go to France in company with Captain Jack Tims, who reluctantly consents to take her. Captain Jack is himself killed during the trip, in a fight with a submarine.

Doris finds Townsend in the American hospital at Tours and learns of his deception with the photograph. But she had fallen in love with the soul in his letters and not with the portrait, so she readily forgives him. The epilogue contains many patriotic tableau effects taken in America.

Reviewed by William J. Reilly.

EARLE WILLIAMS, in Vitagraph's picturization of "The Usurper," in which the late Nat Goodwin won such success on the stage, has built for himself one of his strongest and best characterizations. He displays an evident enthusiasm in the part and a zest betokening a large amount of interest in the role of Maddox, the American who leases and occupies the English estate of the girl he loves. He puts over the American initiative and aggressiveness in a live manner and throughout the picture displays a marked energy.

his promise, and more so, since he leases her estate through his lawyer and stipulates that her family shall remain in charge of the premises. Arriving in England with his sister, Maddox finds Beatrice engaged to Sir George Trenery, whom she does not know is a rotter, Sir George having betrayed Margaret Quentin, a maid in the employ of the Clive house. Margaret's father has made an attack on Trenery, who uses this situation to force Margaret into silence. Maddox persuades Margaret to tell Beatrice the truth, but Margaret fails at the last moment and Beatrice thinks Maddox is seeking to win her favor by maligning Trenery. She plans to elope with Trenery, but Maddox prevents it by leading her into a haunted tower. Quentin is discovered there and he clears up the whole situation. ## "Bare Fists"

P. A. Powers Presents Harry Carey in Six-Reel Subject of Characteristic Interest.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE episode in the life of "Cheyenne Harry," the character so frequently portrayed by Harry Carey, which is shown in this number is not so intense in action as many of them have been. Yet from the moment the subject, entitled "Bare Fists," opens, it carries the attention well. It unfolds a tale of the real West, quite human of its kind and unadorned by any flashy complexities. The plot is simple and comparatively obvious, but Cheyenne Harry has a certain way with him and the reviewer must confess to a strong liking for it. This is undoubtedly a subject in which the personality of the principal player dominates the plot, which might have failed in less skilful hands.

The admirable direction given the picture by Jack Ford is another thing in its favor. There are some excellent scenic effects, depicting wide areas of the Western country, and dashing cowboys and moving herds of cattle give a constant sense of life and action. The story develops a touch of heart interest at various points, and the theme of mother love form a basis for this. The final reel is swifter in action and gives the production a satisfying climax.

The Story.

Cheyenne Harry is the son of the marshal of Hays City, a border town in which lawless deeds are common. The story of "Bare Fists" opens with a sudden call upon the marshal to put a stop to a saloon row. The father says he is ready to go alone, but Harry elects to go with him, despite his mother's fears for his safety. In the effort to suppress the outbreak, Harry's father is killed and Harry avenges his death by killing two of the slayers.

Following this tragedy, Harry's mother exacts a promise from the youth never to carry a gun again. He reluctantly gives this promise, swearing to it on the Bible. Later, after an altercation with some cattle thieves, he wants his gun again, but respects his promise and goes after them bare handed.

In the course of time, Boone Travis, who is a rival of Harry for the love of a beautiful girl of the plains named Conchita, murders a man in cold blood and fastens the crime upon Harry. Though the latter never carries a gun, it is made to appear that he did so, and he is sentenced to death. Before the execution, the sheriff permits Harry to go to his mother for the last time, the sheriff accompanying him. On the return trip from this affecting visit, Harry learns that his brother Bud has been branded by cattle thieves. He breaks away from the sheriff, punishes the thieves and incidentally clears himself of the suspicion that has been attached to him.

"The Delicious Little Devil"

Six-Reel Universal Subject, Presented by Carl Laemmle, Features Mae Murray.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

AN Irish comedy with a cabaret setting is found in this six-reel Universal subject, "The Delicious Little Devil." But it is not typical Irish comedy, as we have seen it for years on the stage, with horseplay predominating. The humor of this number is delightfully fresh and pleasing and the character work good. Neither is the cabaret feature the tiresome thing it became sometime back, but a natural setting for the entertaining story. There are a few minor "shocks" in this, such as the bathing scene, but it is all done with delicacy and humor; it will pass readily with sophisticated audiences, but may need toning down in spots for others.

Mae Murray is vivacious and appealing in the role of Mary McGuire. She plays with freedom and has no trouble in carrying the interest, once the enjoyable plot gets into action. She is supported by a good cast. Some very attractive things in the way of settings and general atmosphere have been accomplished by the director, Robert Z. Leonard.

The number as a whole makes a comedy subject of original appeal.

The Story.

Mary McGuire, daughter of Patrick McGuire, a bricklayer who disappeared five years before, after being sent out to buy some needles, finds herself the sole family support. This girl, "The Delicious Little Devil," has to provide for her mother and her uncle, and finally the father returns and she has one more mouth to feed.

Mary reads an advertisement for a solo dancer and hostess, put out by a roadhouse known as "Peach Tree Inn." The pay is large and Mary goes after the job, though she knows little of the demands that may be made upon her. She finds herself in competition with many applicants, but finally lands the job, by sheer nerve, for herself. She pretends to be Gloria De Moin, a notorious dancer who once had an affair with the Duke de Sauterne. In the course of the story Mary falls in love with Jimmie Calhoun, son of a millionaire contractor. The father objects to the match and "frames up" a dinner party to disgust Jimmie with the girl. At this party the Duke de Sauterne and Mary's father and uncle unexpectedly appear. There is a wild chase, in which the Duke tries to overtake Mary, and Jimmie is after the Duke. At the close it develops that Mary's father and Jimmie's were once fellow bricklayers. The Duke proves to be a masquerading crook and after he has been escorted away Mary and Jimmie find no further objections to their wedding.

that is worthy of special study by those interested in producing pictures of the dramatic type.

The story, by Ouida Bergere, lends itself peculiarly well to adaptation, as the time consumed in running off the five reels is just about the time it would take for the events to occur in real life. This gives a single situation, after a few preliminary scenes at the beginning, in which the action continues without break until almost the close. It is a gripping, compelling series of incidents, splendidly enacted by four principals, headed by Fannie Ward, who does some of the best emotional acting she has accomplished for the screen. Paul Willis in the part of Budd is also exceptional as the male juvenile.

Despite the semi-tragic character of the events pictured, the story is one that ends happily and carries a pleasing bit of logic from beginning to end.

Judge Creighton and District Attorney Dexter, during a chess game, get into an altercation about the punishment of criminals. The judge pleads for leniency, but the district attorney says "once a crook, always a crook." Dexter is surprised to find that his pretty young wife agrees with the judge.

That very evening, when the judge goes home, he is attacked and shot by a pair of young safe-crackers. One of the crooks escapes and enters Dexter's home, followed by the police. Dexter's wife recognizes him, calling him by the name "Budd," and the youth pleads with her to hide him. She does this with great difficulty, for the house is searched carefully by her husband and the police.

When the police have gone, Budd attempts to escape, but Dexter wounds him by a shot in the shoulder. The police return quickly and Mary takes her husband to an inner room, where she makes an impassioned plea for the youth, admitting that Budd is her brother, who was taught to steal when but a mere boy. The district attorney consents to do his best. It develops later that Budd's companion fired the shot at Judge Creighton, and was himself afterwards killed by a fall. Judge Creighton's wound proves to be slight and he fully recovers. Budd goes West and makes good.

"A Romany Lass"

Harma Productions Presents Six-Reel English-Made Picture of Strong Cowardice Theme, but of Average Delineation.

HARMA PRODUCTIONS, an English photoplay concern, presents in "A Romany Lass" a picture of average merit. The theme, that of cowardice in a man, has a touch of power in the source of the man's timidity. It gives a cut-back of an African military expedition and the capture of the hero who stands up under the torture of the savages until he is rescued, at which moment his brain snaps. Thereafter it is impossible for him to resent an insult or affront. The picture, however, loses through the obvious in the rest of the story. The "five years later" conclusion could have been omitted.

The story is laid in Scotland. The fields of heather in the gypsy scenes and the quaint architecture give the picture a pleasing freshness. James Knight, Marjorie Villis and Charles Rock take the principal roles.

His father, ashamed of his son's character, is struck by the dominating personality of Rilka, a gypsy queen, who stops with her band on his estate. He thinks if his son marries her that she will make a man out of him. Donald has found Rilka himself. They are married despite the threats of Rovel, a gypsy who thought to have her for himself. Rovel, released from jail, takes Rilka from Donald who is yet too cowardly to effectually protest. Donald's father, wild at his son's timidity, strikes at him with a club and the motion brings back to the boy's mind the torture of the African savages who swung clubs before his face to break his morale. Story by Clare Kummer.
Scenario by Edith Kennedy.
Directed by Walter Edwards.

The Story.

In "The Rescuing Angel" Angela Demming, a vivacious and lovable little bud, while on a visit to her fond uncle in Hawaii, fascinates Joseph Whitley, a misanthropic millionaire; also another gilded youth weighted down with the reponsibility of coming from the noted "Dibble" family. They follow her back to her home when she sails, where a third admirer turns up, one of the boy-and-girl period. She likes them all and loves none of them well enough to enter the perils of matrimony until she discovers that her father is a bankrupt, when she accepts Whitley to rescue her much-loved daddy. There is a runaway ceremony, quickly followed by a quarrel when the groom discovers that he has been made use of, and a prompt attempt on the part of the bride to obtain a divorce when she finds her scheme has failed. In the end, advised by all concerned to leave the newly-made husband who has conducted himself so badly, she shows that she can be as generous as she is capricious and forgives him "after all."

Program and Advertising Phrases: Shirley Mason in Clever Paramount Picture of a Girl Who Accepts and Declines Proposals, Marries and Seeks a Divorce All in One Day.

Sparkling Comedy by Clare Kummer With Dainty Shirley Mason in Leading Roie.

Startling Complications Ensue When Girl Marries Wealth to Save Her Bankrupt Father.

Delightful Comedy Dealing With the Love Affairs of a Lovable Little Girl Sought After by Three Suitors.

Advertising Angles: Unless you have played Miss Mason under other contracts, you will have to identify her to your patrons. Take a little space and do it right. Make capital of the fact that this is taken from a play of the same title by a woman who has a number of stage successes now running. Play up the situation of a young girl with two millionaires to choose from. Hint at the younger swain and then ask which one she married and why. You might make this the basis for a guessing contest in sections where the play has not been seen. Hammer on the question and the stage success of the play and you should sell to advantage.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released April 6.

"The Courageous Coward"

Sessue Hayakawa with Competent Support Gives Interesting Performance of Japanese-American Drama.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE feeling of conviction with which one views the Japanese-American productions of the Haworth Company which are appearing on the program of the Exhibitors Mutual adds considerable pleasure to the entertainment provided by them. The latest addition to the series is "The Courageous Coward," in which an attractive drama again illustrates the various phases of Japanese character and the quaint coyness of the native maidens. It contains several touches of comedy, and steps for a brief space within the pale of melodrama, evidently for the purpose of establishing its climax. The construction of the picture is clean-cut, with its settings (all American) betraying little attempt at the spectacular. Sessue Hayakawa does colorful work, an art in which he is making rapid progress, and his dainty co-star, Tsuru Acki, meets with good success in transforming the Japanese girl into a fashionable American type. George Hernandez and Francis MacDonald are also noticeable for competent characterization, and Toyo Fujita handles well a minor role which affords him few opportunities.

The Story.

The plot of "The Courageous Coward" can be told in a few words. It covers the love story of an American-born Japanese and a Japanese girl who comes to America to visit her uncle and to cultivate her voice. Shortly after the arrival of Rei, the young law student Suki goes away to college. News comes to Rei of his success with American sports and of his mingling with American society. With the natural desire of youth to look pleasing in the eyes of the loved one, she immediately sets about to convert herself into an up-to-date American girl. On Suki's return he is disappointed to find the change in Rei, and also to discover that she is being escorted about by Tom Kirby, the son of a rich politician, who has also caused her to listen to his tale of infatuation.

On the eve of an elopement the young man kills one of his father's gambling house servants, and Suki, now district attorney, suddenly finds himself confronted with the confession of Rei's lover, while he is prosecuting the wrong man. In keeping the young man's secret he allows himself to be displaced as district attorney and branded as a coward. Finally Tom, in a heroic mood, makes his confession public, and Suki is rewarded by being employed for the defendant. He also wins the love of Rei.

Publicity Points.

A Japanese who sacrifices his good name for the sake of others finds it a paying game when he is acclaimed the hero of the situation and winner of the stakes.

"Fine feathers make fine birds," and so the little Japanese maiden who longed to be "like American girl" becomes the central figure in a transformation scene.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Unique Phases of Japanese Character and Quaint Coyness of Japanese Girl Delightfully Illustrated.

Pleasing Romance of a Native Japanese Girl and a Japanese Born in America.

Thrilling Story of an American-born Japanese Who Jeopordized His Good Name to Save Others and Was Finally Acclaimed a Hero.

How the Adoption of American Customs and Costumes by Japanese Girl Nearly Wrecked Two Lives.

Two Japanese Stars, Sessue Hayakawa and Tsuru Aoki, in Pleasing Photoplay of Japanese-American Life.

Advertising Angles: As the leading characters represent Japs in America, there should be no special attempt to give Oriental "atmosphere." Your audiences would be deceived by Japanese decorations in the lobby; so why try to fool your public? Play up Sessue Hayakawa in towns where he is known—for there he has a fine reputation as a good actor. In towns where he is new there will be the extra attraction of novelty and a star who will "make good" all promises.

Advertising Aids: Two designs, each one and three sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three-column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.

Released in April.

COMMENTS

Fox Film Corporation.

THE COW'S HUSBAND (Mutt and Jeff Comedy), Mar. 30.—This is made largely of new stuff and will make a house full of laughter. It is one of the best Mutt and Jeffs in a long while.

MUTT THE MUT TRAINER (Mutt and Jeff Comedy), April 6.—No one can see these pictures and not get a good laugh. This one is decidedly lively and is almost as good as "The Cow's Husband"—it's bully too.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE TIGER WORSHIPPERS, April 20.—Chapter 1 of "The Tiger's Trail," in three reels. This introduces the heroine and hero approaching a Western town on board a train. The former, on alighting from the train, is set upon by members of an outlaw gang, but the hero saves her. The instalment sets forth in a clear way the mystery of the slips of paper, and the "Pact of Three." It gets into a good melodramatic swing and also introduces "Tiger Face," the man of mystery.

THE GLOWING EYES (Pathe), April 27.—Chapter 2 of "The Tiger's Trail." This develops further the mystery of the "Pact of Three." The heroine has two of the slips of paper in her possession and covetous hands on all sides are after them. The whereabouts of these slips is a difficult matter to follow, but as the story proceeds will no doubt clear up. There are many melodramatic episodes, and the instalment closes with the heroine facing death from a creeping tarantula.

RING UP THE CURTAIN (Rolin-Pathe, April 27.—A knockabout comedy, featuring Harold Lloyd, assisted by Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. This pictures the arrival of a theatrical troupe, traveling by foot, in a small town. Harold is a scene-shifter, and releases a live snake from one of the trunks. The snake will bring more smiles than shudders, no doubt. The number on the whole is quite amusing.

PATHE REVIEW, No. 9. May 4.—Tinted views taken along a river valley in France are opening features of this number. "The Busy Bee," is a series of interesting views of bee culture, with some close-ups of the insects at work in the comb. An analysis of tennis playing, by the Ultra-rapid camera; hunting the hippopotamus, and caring for babies are other features of decided interest.

YOUNG MR. JAZZ, (Pathe),—One of the funniest of recent subjects featuring Harold Lloyd. The opening scenes are on the beach, where Harold lays court to the daughter of an unwilling father. Later there are some good burlesque scenes in a bowery cafe, where the runaway pair mingle with some crooks in their efforts to escape.

Universal Film Company.

HOW'S YOUR HUSBAND (Star).—Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appear as young married men in this. Each induces the other's wife to buy a birthday present for his own better half. Some amusing complications follow. The interrupted duel is a good feature of this number.

THE GHOST GIRL.—An excellent comedy number of the better sort, by Patricia Foulds, which features Donna Drew, Martha Mattox, Fred Montague, Jessie Piatt, Claire Du Brey, Carson Ferguson and Victor Rothman. This tells of a pretty miss, expelled from a girls' school, who goes in for a harmless adventure. She poses as a slum girl and is taken in tow by a snobbish society girl, who at first befriends and then tries to impose upon her. The story contains lots of humor, is attractively staged, and the cast is unusually pleasing. A desirable number.

HE WAS NO LADY, Jan. 27.—A number featuring Bob Vernon and Marcia Moore as the young couple. The father wants the girl to marry a duke. The young man poses as a cabaret girl and compromises the father, who is sportily inclined, thus gaining his consent. The photography is uneven, and the number one of about average strength.

KITCHEN POLICE (Star Comedy).—A pleasing comedy subject, picturing Eddie and Lee as two young married men who are rejected for military service for physical reasons. They take jobs on a farm, with their wives, and some amusing adventures follow. At the close they are accepted just as peace comes.

UNIVERSAL ## ON THE FIRING LINE

The U. S. Government selected the Universal Motion Picture camera for the exclusive use of the military operators during the war. No other motion picture camera was accorded such distinction, as the Universal is the only camera embodying the special features of compactness, strength and mechanical excellence needed for the trying work of recording military operations under war conditions.

Under the most trying tests to which a motion picture camera has ever been put the Universal performed creditably every time.

The Universal is the ideal, in fact, it is the only motion picture camera for the explorer, traveler and those making educational pictures where compactness is such a prime consideration. Martin Johnson's famous Cannibal Isle pictures were made with a Universal.

It is light in weight; there are no bulky protruding parts. It is easy to operate, quick to load and set up. One master gear operates all moving parts in perfect unity.

The Universal is built to stand the roughest, hardest usage to which a moving picture camera can be put. Write for descriptive booklet and prices.

An Announcement

OUR ACTIVITIES for the past year have been nearly 100 per cent. devoted to war production of vital importance to the government, compelling us to discontinue regular manufacture in practically all of our lines.

The cessation of hostilities has now enabled us to begin the readjustment to a peace production basis. While this adjustment must be gradual, we are pressing it with all possible speed in order to satisfy the requirements of our normal trade at an early date.

We appreciate the patience and understanding with which our patrons have reacted to the situation and trust they may continue to exercise such consideration until our manufacturing facilities are once more on a pre-war footing.

Would You Believe It Possible to Change This Sign in 20 Minutes?

Look at the sign in the picture. Seems as permanent as any sign could be—raised, snow-white letters on a dark background, 24-hour display, because the raised white letters stand out in the daytime as well as at night.

But this sign can be changed in minutes where the ordinary sign takes hours.

It is an Oplex interchangeable sign. Each character is mounted on a metal panel which fits into the frame. All that is necessary is to take out one set of letters and put in another. No lamps or wiring to be changed.

This coupon will bring you full information in regard to Oplex interchangeable signs or any of the Oplex designs

Use the Westinghouse Mazda Lamp for Motion Picture Projection and note the great improvement in the clearness, color tone and steadiness of your pictures.

It requires but one adjustment. You can forget all about "craters."

No carbon dust—lessened fire risks—and one-half the current consumption of arc-light projection of equal brilliance and throw.

The Westinghouse Mazda Lamp can be used in all Mazda lamphouses and adapters now on the market for standard motion picture machines.

"MISS ARIZONA"

A Gripping Western Five-Reel Picture
Featuring that Popular "Tomboy" Star

GERTRUDE BONDHILL

With JAMES O'NEIL and a Strong Supporting Cast

"Miss Arizona" is a stirring five-reel Western feature, full of action, with a story that carries through. Gertrude Bondhill is a star who can ride a horse and shoot a gun as well as any man. She is a star who has been on the speaking stage and who has earned the special commendation of President Wilson. She makes a special appeal to all lovers of the true West. If you want a Western story that is full of life from the first to the last foot of film, with a punch in every reel, "Miss Arizona" will fill the bill. It's a Western feature with a star who knows how to captivate your audiences and does it at every showing of this splendid picture. Gertrude Bondhill is the "tomboy" of the screen.

"MR. DE MILLE now has the most notable stock company that the dramatic world has seen since Augustin Daly. It is the most adroit and the most constructive advance in motion pictures in two years."—Julian Johnson in Photoplay.

Elliott Dexter, Gloria Swanson, Theodore Roberts, Wanda Hawley, Raymond Hatton, Tom Forman, Jack Holt, Sylvia Ashton—these are the members of that "most notable" stock company who appear in "For Better, For Worse."

With such players, with a production that throbs with human and heart interest, with all the wealth of detail and splendor of luxury that go with the name of DeMille, and with this great director at his greatest and best—

Just Imagine!

IMAGINE a husband helping his wife to elope with another man! He didn't want to lose her either. But he knew a thing or two about women.

Imagine Marguerite Clark as the erring heroine of this sparkling comedy and you can easily picture the crowds that will flock to "Let's Elope."

Marguerite Clark in a big stage success will make "Let's Elope" a sure-fire box-office money-maker.

This production, first and foremost, features the charm of Marguerite Clark, one of the best-loved stars in motion pictures.

It also features a brilliant story of real life that rocks with laughter and queer twists of delicious comedy.

Adapted from "The Naughty Wife," Fred Jackson's noted stage hit, and built on the unfailing drawing power of Marguerite Clark, "Let's Elope" is certain to make you scads of money.

It's worth all the punch and power you can put in your advertising. It's worth an extended run. Go to it—hard!

W.W. Hodkinson Is Not "Coming Back"—He's Never Been Away!

All the time, in an industry that has shifted like the sands of the sea, W. W. Hodkinson has stood rock solid in one position. He has watched chaos and ruin pile up for producers who resorted to shifty practices.

He has seen the desertion of his fundamental, sound principles make the nation's exhibitors actual or potential enemies of the producers. During all these days he has not flinched or moved away from his sound position.

During this same period he has been building a silent-working machine of tremendous power. He has been building an organization with a heart and brain. This organization, more than a year in the making, is now beginning to work on its broader lines.

Times and conditions have changed in the picture industry. Immediately ahead of all of us there is revolution—as dramatic a revolution as the one that continues to rock red Russia.

Underneath almost everything there is a granite base. W. W. Hodkinson has had a granite base from the day he entered the motion picture business as an exhibitor eleven years ago.

Many things are going to happen in the motion picture industry between now and September!

now controls four great lines of product.
will have upwards of thirty productions for the year beginning April 20.
sells pictures singly under contract on their individual merits.

Seven Keys To Patronage.

A "special" picture does not mean an extra half reel or reel of footage and some excitable but barely usable publicity—though many exhibitors have bought such types of pictures under forced draught advertising.

A "special" production must have
1 a great story. It can be an original story, but it is usually bigger if made
2 from a great play or novel. It must have behind it the reputation of
3 a great author. It must be made by

These elements make a special.

Measured by these standards of excellence, we announce to the exhibitors of the nation that "As a Man Thinks" is a special production of unusual quality and strength and of determined - in - advance drawing power at the ticket seller's window.

Also, it is a special in a sales sense: You can buy it singly from any Hodkinson representative without tying yourself up under contract for any other Hodkinson product. # THE BOOM

The only state rights special attraction that hits what every American is thinking about and does it in a way that U. S. officials say solves the problem of our grand country's greatest menace. "Sensational" doesn't describe it! Overpowering stock exchange, strike, ball room, slum, court room and factory scenes. Every phase of modern American life startlingly pictured in a way that will jam theatres for week and two-week runs! Wall Street, High Society, Pitiful Poverty—everything exposed in this great box office attraction, which moreover is a wonderful love story, full of well-set-up men and beautiful women, with Walthall heading the cast. The first special by the "Tarzan" people since "Tarzan!" Wire:

STARS TO AID NAVY IN LOAN CAMPAIGN

Each One of Fifteen Women Players Is Assigned to a Battleship—Keen Competition Is Promised

IN line with the activities of the industry in behalf of the Victory Liberty Loan, the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their last meeting voted their full co-operation and have tendered to Rear Admiral T. J. Cowie, of the Navy Victory Loan Committee, the services of fifteen of the biggest motion picture stars to assist in sending the navy quota of the Victory Loan subscriptions "over the top." The exact manner in which the stars will aid in the Loan drive is explained by a telegram sent to Rear Admiral Cowie.

"It has been decided to tender to you fifteen of the leading stars of the motion picture world which we wish you would assign one to each of the superdreadnoughts of the navy," says the message. Each of these stars will be sponsor for the battleship to which she is assigned and she will devote what time she can spare to soliciting subscriptions to Victory Bonds, such bonds to be credited to the record of the ship. We are in hope that the star who succeeds in securing for her ship the largest subscription may be publicly thanked or otherwise suitably rewarded by you."

Acting on Admiral Cowie's suggestion, the following assignments were made by lot to the various ships: Arizona, Clara Kimball Young; Idaho, Billie Burke; Pennsylvania, Anita Stewart; Utah, Elsie Ferguson; Arkansas, Alice Joyce; New Mexico, Pearl White; Oklahoma, June Caprice; Mississippi, Madge Kennedy; Wyoming, Geraldine Farrar; Delaware, Marguerite Clark; Nevada, Norma Talmadge; New York, Florence Reed; Texas, Mary Pickford; Florida, Mabel Normand; North Dakota, Theda Bara.

Constance Talmadge with First National, Is Rumor

ALTHOUGH no announcement has been made by either Select Pictures or First National, rumors are in circulation to the effect that Constance Talmadge, who is working under a contract with Select, will become affiliated with First National in the fall.

Miss Talmadge's contract with Select calls for a term extending considerably beyond the coming fall, but according to Joseph M. Schenck, the star's manager, the contract was signed by Mrs. Talmadge when Constance was a minor, and is now void. Miss Talmadge reached her majority on April 19.

A letter from the Moving Picture World's correspondent in Salt Lake City brings the news that during a brief visit to Salt Lake last week, Miss Talmadge was served with a summons out of the United States District Court. Attorneys with whom she consulted during her stay refused to divulge the details of the matter. It was intimated that the litigation, on coming to pass, would be either in California or New York.

The appearance of Harry I. Garson, independent producer and owner of "The Unpardonable Sin," at the same hotel at the same time Miss Talmadge stopped there, gave rise to a wealth of rumors concerning her future plans.

Terry Ramsaye Resigns as Publicity Director

TERRY RAMSAYE has resigned as director of publicity for the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, effective as early as a successor can be installed. Mr. Ramsaye is leaving for the South on a vacation of some weeks and on his return will divide his attentions between Kinograms, a news reel in which he is interested, and his writing of frivolous fiction.

"Purely business and for business purposes," was his statement of the matter. "Kinograms is growing and needs more attention. Also spring is here."

Mr. Ramsaye went to the theatres from the motion picture producing and distributing field. In the last few months he has edited a number of official pictures for the Government. Incidentally he has retitled many of the pictures shown at the Rivoli and Rialto.

Arthur Kane Retires as Select's General Manager

ARTHUR S. KANE, general manager of Select Pictures Corporation since its formation August 1, 1917, is leaving that company. Immediately after the recent deal by which the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation retired from ownership in Select, figuring began between Lewis J. Selznick and Mr. Kane to re-engage him after his contract expired next August to direct the exchange system of Select Pictures.

Early last week Mr. Kane informed Mr. Selznick he had decided to try his fortune in another enterprise. It was agreed to make no announcement until the arrival here Monday, April 21, of the Select branch managers from all parts of the country, when it was felt matters could be better explained to them. As his closing duties Mr. Kane conducted the conferences of managers which took place at the Hotel Astor the first three days of this week.

"A week ago I decided my future activity," said Mr. Kane on Monday. "Plans are complete. They will be made known in due course. But I have not taken a vacation for five or six years and the first thing I am going to do is to go away for thirty days to ride, drive, fish and play golf. Soon after my return I shall have an announcement to make that will, I believe, be of interest."

Picture Concerns Continue to Incorporate in New York

Albany, April 21.

LIKE mushrooms, motion picture concerns continue to spring up overnight in New York State, and each day finds them incorporating with Secretary of State Hugo. The latest additions include one in which Countess Floria de Martinprey is named as one of the incorporators. The company is to bear the name of The Countess Floria Film Corporation, beginning business on $25,000 and, in addition to the Countess, including George W. and W. A. Colbey. Others incorporating in the past few days are the S. L. K. Serial Corporation, $25,000; S. S. Krellberg, Harry Lewis and F. L. Dear; The C. E. Shurtleff Company, $25,000, with C. E. Shurtleff, Thomas McMahon and William E. Atkinson, all of New York, as organizers. The Neptune Screen Department, $50,000, was incorporated by Arthur W. Haab, Edward W. Wasserman and William S. Smart of New York. The It's-Up-To-You Film Company was also incorporated at $10,000 by A. E. Root, H. E. Edmond and P. A. Zirzelmann.

Blackton to Resume Production May 1.

J. Stuart Blackton is rapidly completing his plans for even greater production activity in the next few months and will resume his megaphone in his own studios in Brooklyn May 1. His assistant, Jack Martin, and the studio staff are getting sets ready for the first scenes of his new production, title and theme of which are still held secret.

Robert Gordon, signed by wire by Mr. Blackton, has arrived from Califronia, to play the featured leading man's role with Sylvia Breamer.

Broadway to Close for Alterations.

After next Sunday night's performance of pictures at the Broadway Theatre the house will go over to the management of B. S. Moss and be closed for extensive alterations preliminary to its formal opening under the new regime on Friday night, May 2. The opening attraction will be "The Unpardonable Sin," the subject written by Major Rupert Hughes and starring Blanche Sweet.

SLACER CENSORSHIP BILL SMOTHERED

Death of New York's Proposed Law Efficiently Aided by Senator Walker's Political Strategy

POLITICAL strategy was responsible to a large measure in smothering the Slacer censorship bill, which died in committee in the closing hours of the Legislature last Saturday evening. It appears that the bill was revived in the Assembly last week by Speaker Thaddeus Sweet, who has had a rather favorable leaning towards censorship for the last year or two, and who has said on various occasions that he was favorable to such a measure. The bill was passed in the Assembly without much trouble and sent to the Senate where it was advanced to third reading with reference and apparently was on its road to ultimate passage. An alarm call hurriedly sent forth by the opposing forces to the bill resulted in Frederick H. Elliott, Arthur Friend and others hurrying here from New York.

Senator Walker Helps Kill Bill.

When things looked worst, Senator James Walker came to the aid of the opposing forces and so cleverly did he handle the situation that the bill was recommitted to one of the Senate committees at the eleventh hour, and at a time when, with the rush and confusion, there was little or no chance of bringing it back on the floor of the upper house.

It appears that Senator Sage, an advocate of the bill, secured sufficient votes to send it to a third reading. Senator Walker was out of the room at the time. When Mr. Elliott and others rushed to him for his assistance, he waited until Mr. Sage and one or two others were temporarily absent from the Senate, and then quietly ascertaining that he could muster sufficient Democratic votes to send the bill back into committee, he made his play, stating that an unfair advantage had been taken of his absence, and with votes to spare the bill went to its death.

GRANT.

Harry Rapf to Manage the Selznick Studios

HARRY RAPF has been appointed by President Lewis J. Selznick as general manager of the Selznick Studios, in which capacity he will be associated with Production Manager Myron Selznick.

Mr. Rapf is well known to exhibitors not only as a producer but as a showman. Before entering the motion picture business as an independent producer he was in the theatrical business, and the same knowledge which he gained in over twenty years as an exhibitor of stage plays he has employed in the production of pictures.

As a producer Mr. Rapf has the box office angle. His record of successful screen productions include "The Master Hand," "The Devil's Toy," "His Brother's Wife," "Flower of Faith," "The Silent Master," "The Mad Lover," "The Great Love," "Wanted for Murder" and "Sins of the Children."

D. C. McClellan Is Dead.

D. C. McClellan, Twin City sales manager for Vitagraph, died April 11 at his home, 814 Ellwood avenue, Minneapolis, from pneumonia He had been ill only a few days.

Mr. McClellan was born at El Paso, Ill., October 14, 1881. He was educated in the public schools at Pekin, Ill. In 1914 Mr. McClellan came to Minneapolis and had been engaged in the moving picture business here since that time. He formerly operated theatres in Illinois and has also owned and managed moving picture houses in Minneapolis.

Local 306 I. A. T. S. E. Will Raise Initiation Fee $25

THROUGH M. J. Rotker, corresponding secretary of Local 306, I. A. T. S. E., comes the announcement that beginning June 1, its initiation fee will be raised from $75 to $100.

Any projectionist who is thinking of affiliating with the union through Local 306 would do well to do so before June 1 and thus affect a saving of $25. This increase in the initiation fee has no companion raise in monthly dues as they remain the same as at present.

Local 306 is completing plans for the attendance of its delegates at the annual convention of I. A. T. S. E. in Ottawa in May, at which session it will take an active part.

Talmadge Sisters Arrive from Coast.

Constance Talmadge, her mother, and her sister, Natalie, are now in New York, having arrived from the Coast Friday, April 18, to visit Norma Talmadge. As Saturday was Constance's birthday, a surprise party was tendered her by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schenck at the St. Regis Hotel, where a birthday dinner for twenty was served, followed by a theatre party, and winding up with another party at the Midnight Frolic on the New Amsterdam Roof. Among those present were Joseph M. Schenck and Norma Talmadge, Mrs. Talmadge, Constance and Natalie Talmadge, Irving Berlin, Edmund Goulding, Miss Mercita Esmonde, Miss Beulah Livingstone, Miss Anita Loos, Miss Ethel Gray Terry, John Emerson, Alfred Newman and Lieutenant Von Hoffman.

Salt Lake Rebates Tax for Influenza Months

MEETING the demand of the theatre managers of Salt Lake City, the city commission has rebated two months theatre license tax for the time the show houses were closed during the Spanish influenza epidemic last fall. Fourteen theatres were allowed rebates including every show house in the city which was operating at that time. They include the American, the Broadway, the Empire, the Isis, the Liberty, Pantages, the Paramount-Empress, the Cozy, the Photoplay, the Princess, the Salt Lake, the Strand, the Orpheum and the Wilkes.

Those theatres which had paid their 1919 license tax were granted actual rebates while the houses which had not paid their new license tax will receive credits upon this year's license in lieu of the rebates. The rebates paid amounted to $91.75 and the credits to $213.05, making a total of $304.80.

The matter had been under advisement by the commission for several weeks, and upon final consideration it was decided by the commissioners that the manager's contention was fair in view of the fact that they had cooperated in every possible way to aid during the epidemic and in view of the further fact that stores were not made to close during the epidemic and the theatres probably suffered out of proportion to other lines of business called upon to pay a license tax.

Must Pay Tax on Tickets for Children.

An interpretation of the new theatre tax law has just been received in Salt Lake City from Washington. It is to the effect that the same tax as is collected from adults must be paid for theatre tickets purchased for children under 12 years of age. Wherever children under this age are admitted free there is no tax, it is pointed out. This has been a debatable question in Salt Lake and the managers are happy to have it settled.

Alice Brady Completes Her Contract with Select

AT the end of this week Alice Brady will have finished her contract with Select. This contract will not be renewed, it is stated. Miss Brady's motion picture plans for the immediate future have not yet been determined. She is at present considering a number of offers, several of which are understood to be unusual to a degree.

Miss Brady, of course, continues her stage work, and is now approaching her 300th performance in "Forever After," at the Playhouse. As a star of the spoken drama, Miss Brady has scored a success that has few parallels in the annals of the American stage. In her first year as a star she has not only won a personal triumph, but is playing a solid season on Broadway. In her work as a legitimate star, she has won a degree of popularity comparable to that which is hers as a star of the screen. Alice Brady's notable success in "Forever After," in addition to the popularity which already was hers through the medium of the screen, has made her name a box office magnet of great power.

J. A. Koerpel Is Appointed Goldwyn's Seattle Manager

J. A. KOERPEL will remain in Seattle as an exchange manager after all. The announcement which appeared in the Moving Picture World two weeks ago to the effect that he had resigned his position as Seattle manager for World to enter the field of exporting was correct, but when Mr. Aronson, Western division manager for Goldwyn, hurried up from San Francisco and painted to Mr. Koerpel all the glories of a position as manager of the Goldwyn office, Koerpel could not resist the lure of the film game. He is now ensconced in the private office of the manager in the Seattle Goldwyn headquarters.

Mr. Koerpel has not only been active in the organization of film men, but has worked on the last two Liberty Loan drives. He has been appointed to take charge of the film publicity end of the Victory Loan for this entire district.

NEW YORK'S SUNDAY BILL SIGNED

Governor Smith Declares Previous Law Was Ambiguous —Says Minority Have No Right to Impose Their Will on Public—Exhibitors Conduct Long and Winning Campaign

GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH, of New York, has signed the Sunday motion picture bill. Cities and villages can now decide through their individual governing bodies as to whether or not they desire motion picture shows after 2 o'clock Sunday afternoons. The fight of years was concluded in the Executive Chamber Saturday afternoon, April 19, when with strokes of his pen Governor Smith signed this bill and a companion measure which legalizes and permits Sunday baseball. The victory is one of the greatest in the history of the motion picture industry in this state. Other states, looking to New York, will undoubtedly follow the example which has been set.

"The present law on the question of Sunday motion picture shows is more or less ambiguous," said Governor Smith, "and its proper construction has been a matter of doubt. Under conflicting decisions of the Appellate Divisions in the various departments of this state the exhibition of motion pictures on Sundays has been held in some sections to be a violation of the law and in others that it was not. Neither party seems to have dared to put the question to a hazard of the decision of the Court of Appeals and by obtaining the judgment of the Court of last resort establish a uniformity of judicial holding on this subject.

Public Opinion Has Been Strong on Subject.

"Still further, in those departments where there has been a ruling against the legality of the exhibition of motion pictures on Sunday, public opinion has been so strong on the subject in favor of the exhibition of motion pictures that the law as interpreted by the Appellate Division in many localities has not been in force. It stands as one of those disregarded statutes the inefficiency of which brings into disrepute the entire body of our prohibiting laws. In addition to the reasons which I have urged and which appeal to me for the approval of the bill empowering the various municipalities of the state to act upon the subject in regard to baseball, and which apply also to moving pictures, there exists the further argument that it is desirable that the uncertainty of the present statute, both as to construction and enforcement be removed. This result can be attained by the enactment into law of this bill and so I accordingly approve it.

Governor Receives Many Letters.

"I have received hundreds of communications from citizens both advocating and opposing the measure, and I recognize that the feeling upon this subject is very deep and that the action which I am taking in the matter will be viewed with very great interest by a substantial portion of our citizens.

"For this reason, I have given this subject my most careful consideration, not only since the hearing on the bill but since its first introduction, when it became probable that the matter would ultimately come before me for determination.

"I realize that a very substantial portion of our people most conscientiously oppose permission to indulge in recreation or sports of any kind on Sunday. I respect them for their opinions and I believe that in those opinions they are entirely conscientious.

Sunday Partisans Good Citizens.

"On the other hand I know that a great many advocate the measure and believe in reasonable recreation and amusement on Sunday, and who consider that it is that species of rest which somes from change of thought and change of activity, and that they are equally good citizens of the commonwealth, and that their opinions are entitled to equal weight.

"After a thorough consideration of the matter, I am of the firm opinion that those members of a community who oppose all recreation and amusement on Sunday, or at least the sort permitted by this amendatory bill, have no right, in law or in morals, where they constitute a minority of a community, to impose their views upon the majority, who disagree with them, and who prohibit the latter from exercising rights and privileges to which they deem themselves to be entitled, the exercise of which will in no wise interfere with the orderly and proper observance of the day of rest by those desiring to refrain from attending amusements.

Majority May Prevent Exhibitions.

"On the other hand, this bill provides that where a majority of the community, as represented in its local Legislative body, is opposed to Sunday motion picture shows, such amusement is prohibited in such locality. If representative government is what we claim and believe it to be, the action of the local Legislative body will properly reflect, in each instance, the wish of the majority of the citizens themselves.

"The witnessing of motion pictures, either with or without an admission fee, is a most harmless diversion. It is in no sense deteriorating to the moral fibre of the witnesses. Well to do people can and do on Sunday pursue their amusements with entire impunity and under the protection of the laws. Our golf courses are crowded, our highways are thronged with automobilists seeking on Sunday the change of scene and the beneficial effects resulting therefrom. The activities of a poor man along this line are necessarily restricted by the limit of his means.

No Invasion of Minority's Rights.

"Some form of relaxation on Sunday is almost imperative and certainly most beneficial in the cases of that great mass of our people who during the six week days are employed in confining occupations. I cannot think that if the sentiment of the majority of any community, as represented by its duly elected officials, is in favor of permitting, under such restrictions and regulations as they may see fit to impose, the enjoyment of this very harmless amusement on Sunday, the rights of the minority are in any wise invaded.

"I believe that before any class of our citizens should be given the right to impose their views upon this question on which people so widely and conscientiously differ, upon those who disagree with them, they should, at least, represent the sentiment of the majority in their respective communities. And so, I am letting the communities of this State, have the right to decide the question for themselves."

Organization Turned the Trick.

The victory really dates back in its inception to last fall, when the motion picture exhibitors of this State started a campaign which was carried on during the succeeding months in every city. So actively was the campaign waged that Buffalo sent petitions bearing the names of over 225,000 people favoring Sunday movies to its respective senators and assemblymen. Rochester contributed 85,000 names to petitions and Syracuse 55,000. Queries were sent to every city of over 20,000 in the entire United States where picture shows are open on Sundays and the replies received added fuel to the campaign. Organization really turned the truck. Eighty per cent. of the theatres in this State backed the movement to a finish.

The Governor's final attitude on the measure was watched with much interest. In some one of those unmistakable ways, which always exist and which are untraceable, word was circulated through the Capitol last Friday that the Governor had decided to sign the Sunday motion picture bill.

Expect Early Action on Opening.

Just what Albany will do in a movement to provide Sunday shows for this city seems more or less uncertain at the present time. George Roberts, who is at the head of the local league, has said recently that matters would be permitted to drift until next fall, and that in the meantime the city would be sounded out as to its sentiment. In view of the fact that the neighboring city of Troy has Sunday movies and attracts many hundreds each week from this city it is reasonable to believe that the local aldermen will permit the theatres here to open on Sundays.

Other cities about the State, judging from the reports which are already reaching the State Conference of Mayors, headquarters of which are located here, will take early action through their governing bodies toward opening the motion picture houses.

BROOKLYN SHOWMEN HAIL SUNDAY BILL

Exhibitor Meeting Plans Dinner to "Triumvirate" of Cohen-Berman-O'Reilly—"Fit to Win" Assailed

WHAT'S in a pen? Well, it all depends. If the pen is one of the three with which Governor Smith signed the Sunday moving picture bill for New York, and if the pen is presented to you in appreciation of your tireless labor in working for the passage of the measure, than there is a whole lot more to the pen than an ordinary quill.

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors League, S. I. Berman, its secretary, and Charles O'Reilly, one of its strongest organizers and supporters, were the proud recipients Monday, April 21, of the historic pens which registered Governor Smith's signature to the bill giving the Empire State Sunday motion picture.

The Exhibitors League of Brooklyn met at midnight on April 19 to conduct its usual monthly session and to celebrate the passage of the Sunday bill which the Governor had just signed that afternoon. The meeting went into the little hours as the showmen of Brooklyn paid tribute to the work of their three champions and then went on to put their stamp of disapproval on "Fit to Win," the picture sponsored by Public Health.

Sydney S. Cohen
Lead New York State Exhibitors' League to Sunday victory.

To Give Dinner to Trio.

A dinner to Messrs. Cohen, O'Reilly and Berman was put under way with a burst of enthusiasm on the motion of John Manheimer. William Brandt, president of the Brooklyn league, is at the head of the committee arranging the dinner, which will probably be held at the Commodore. Not only the exhibitors of Brooklyn, but those of all the boroughs of New York will gather to eat and pay tribute to the work of the three men, to whom more than to any other individuals is due the victory of Sunday pictures in the state.

Tribute will be paid at the dinner to the memory of the late Mayor Gaynor, to whom is ascribed the fact that Sunday motion pictures were permitted on sufferance in New York City. A bust of Mayor Gaynor will be presented to the city by the exhibitors in grateful recognition of his friendship and support.

Practically every exhibitor at the Brooklyn meeting spoke on the work done by Messrs. Cohen, Berman, and O'Reilly, popularly called the "triumvirate." The State Exhibitors League, which recently extended its scope and power by a sweeping reform of its constitution, particularly in reference to membership, was shown in President Cohen's report to have effected this year what the producing end of the industry was unable to do last year, namely, secure the passage of the Sunday bill.

The trips made through the state by S. I. Berman, according to Mr. Cohen, had a great deal to do with the organization of the exhibitors and their backing of the work at Albany. Mr. Berman's "flying trips" were made to cities and towns where organization was lacking, and he never came away from such a community without leaving an organized lot of enthusiasm behind him.

Charles O'Reilly, whose Irish sense of government and administration was invaluable in New York and Albany, heartily commended the part taken by Rochester in the fight for Sunday pictures.

Rochester a Hundred Per Cent. Town.

"Rochester is a hundred per cent. town," said Mr. O'Reilly. "It delivered every one of its five assemblymen, and one of its senators, and the other senator, although ill and unable to vote, expressed his favorable attitude toward the measure, and all these men voted against us last year. Every Rochester exhibitor is a member of the State League.

"Although I value most highly the pen which I have received from Governor Smith, I am going to present mine to the picture showmen of Rochester. Theye're a fine lot, and the industry should be proud of them."

Condemn "Fit to Win."

The Brooklyn Exhibitors League then went on record condemning "Fit to Win," the public health picture which the government showed in the cantonments under the title "Fit to Fight."

"The film has served its purpose," said John Manheimer. "The government now has nothing to do with it. It is being exploited by the individuals who bought it from the government, and they are using the government literature for backing."

Picture Not Shown by Exhibitor.

Although the picture was shown at a Brooklyn house, it was pointed out that it was not the theatre of an exhibitor but a combination house which devotes most of its time to stage attractions.

Not a single exhibitor at the meeting spoke in favor of the picture. A letter from William Brandt to Commissioner of Licenses Gilchrist was read, in which Mr. Brandt offered to the latter in the name of the Brooklyn League, his thanks and support for his efforts in securing an injunction against the public exhibition of the film. Mr. Cohen added that the State League had also officially condemned the film in a letter to Mr. Gilchrist.

The meeting on motion then went on record "condemning salacious films and particularly the film entitled 'Fit to Win'." The motion stated further "that the public health officials be requested to withdraw this picture from public exhibition, and if this cannot be done to withdraw its official sanction therefrom; that a copy of this resolution be sent to the United States authorities at Washington, to the district attorney of the county to Deputy Police Commissioner Mrs. O'Grady and to Comissioner of Licenses Gilchrist, offering to the latter our full and hearty support in his endeavor to prevent this and similar films from being shown on the screen."

League Will Carry on Work.

A telegram from Mr. Cohen shows that the New York State Exhibitors League is carrying on the work in connection with the interests of the showmen. In addition to its successful fight for Sunday showings the League was able to halt in the Senate the passage of the Slacer censorship bill which had passed the House. The work of the League, according to Mr. Cohen, will now be concentrated on the opening of the remainder of the State where Sunday pictures are banned.

SUE TO KEEP CENSOR OFF "FIT TO WIN"

Seek Through Injunction to Forbid Commissioner Gilchrist from Interfering with Its Showing

A CAMPAIGN to insure the exhibition of the film entitled "Fit to Win," originally produced for the use of the War Department with the approval of the United States Public Health Service for exhibition in the army cantonments in this country and in France, has been launched with the support of the army authorities and with the filing of a suit in the United States District Court, to enjoin John F. Gilchrist, Commissioner of the Department of Licenses, New York, from interfering with the exhibition of the film.

When the film was exhibited at the Grand Opera House in Brooklyn recently, Commissioner Gilchrist is alleged to have assumed the prerogative of public censor and notified the owners of the leading motion picture theatres in the city that if they showed the film in their playhouses it would be deemed sufficient cause for the revocation of their licenses.

Commissioner Must Show Cause.

The action of Commissioner Gilchrist is alleged to be illegal and unlawful, and Isaac Silverman, who recently acquired the rights to the film throughout the country, obtained an order from Judge Augustus N. Hand directing Commissioner Gilchrist to show cause why he shall not be enjoined from interfering with the exhibition of the film.

The film was produced with the hope and expectation of elevating the morals of the men in the service, and many army officials are of the opinion that its exhibition accomplished highly successful results and the film has received the indorsement not only of army officials, but of prominent members of the medical profession and many clergymen.

Has Been Found Valuable.

"The film 'Fit to Win' in its original form is being used to good advantage in the army," says Meritten Ireland, Surgeon General, "and it is high time that the general public should receive the benefit of its information and clear teachings. I regard motion pictures, next to newspapers, to be the most rapid and effective way of telling the people what needs to be done."

Edith Roberts Joins L-Ko Forces.

Edith Roberts, who has been featured in Bluebird productions recently and who has for the past few weeks been seen in several stage plays on the Pacific Coast, has joined the L-Ko Komedy Company forces and will be featured in forthcoming two-reel comedy productions. Miss Roberts's first screen work was in comedy. She was seen in support of Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran for a time and then took up feature work.

Billie Burke Opens Big Loan Drive at Capital

WHO'LL take the first bonds?" asked Billie Burke of the crowd of 50,000 that assembled at the steps of the south steps of the Treasury at Washington on noon last Monday to attend the opening ceremonies of the Capital's Victory Liberty Loan drive.

Admiral Sims, who commanded the American fleet in European waters during the war, was among those present. People fought to go forward, but the admiral was on the job and reached Miss Burke before anybody else could. "I will," he cried. And he did. Admiral Sims, it will be recalled, was asked when America declared war when he could have the navy ready for action. "It's ready now," he said. And it was.

Nobody minded playing second fiddle to the admiral, and for a long time afterward the famous Paramount star was busy selling bonds, helping Washington off to a good start toward its quota of $20,307,000.

At the personal request of Frank R. Wilson, in charge of publicity for the Victory Loan, Miss Burke, the Paramount star, agreed to come to Washington to open the drive. She arrived in the Capital Sunday afternoon.

Josie Sedgwick Now with Universal.

Josie Sedgwick, sister of Eileen Sedgwick who will be remembered as Eddie Polo's leading woman in "The Lure of the Circus," has been added to the Universal Western drama forces. Josie Sedgwick, has been seen in numerous Triangle releases. Miss Sedgwick will first be seen in "Hate Everlastin'" opposite Pete Morrison, which will be produced by George Holt.

Many War Films Ready for the News Weeklies

THE War Department has announced that in the near future there will be available for use in the news weeklies films showing American troops in all the varied phases of training, fighting and occupation, which were made in Europe by officers and men of the Signal Corps of the Army.

Representatives of all the companies making news weekly films viewed the first showing of official Signal Corps films last week at the projection room of the International Film Service, in New York. Subsequent showings will be held weekly or oftener.

"The war pictures thus made available have never before been shown to the public," declared the War Department in announcing the completion of these films. "The films already in the possession of the War Department and not yet shown in public, are sufficient to furnish all the war scenes which the news weeklies can use for some months to come and additional material is still being received from Europe, including pictures from the Army of Occupation in Germany and from Russia."

Frank Currier Marries.

Frank Currier, affectionately known as Metro's grand old man because of his long association with Metro in parts of old men, but who is not so old, was married to Miss Mabel Olms, an English dancer. For many years Miss Mabel Olms had made her home in America, and she and Frank Currier were friends. Then Mr. Currier was stricken with a dangerous illness and Miss Olms had him brought to her home, where she nursed him back to health.

At that time Frank Currier was the organ grinder in the stage production of "The Poor Little Rich Girl," with Viola Dana, but on his convalescence he came to California. After he became established in motion pictures he sent East for Miss Olms to come to Los Angeles, and when she arrived he persuaded her to marry him.

H. M. Gaylord Made Deputy.

H. M. Gaylord, former assistant to Deputy Commissioner B. C. Keith, has been appointed deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to succeed Mr Keith, who resigned April 15.

Mr. Gaylord entered the service of the Treasury Department in 1905, coming to this city from Bristol, Conn. He has advanced rapidly, filling in succession a number of important positions and has a very comprehensive knowledge of the revenue laws and the needs of taxpayers.

Erects Big Sign on "Salome."

A painting thirty feet high, representing a scene in ancient Judea, confronted everybody who went near Gordon's Olympia Theatre, Boston, during the run of the Theda Bara production "Salome." Topping this huge cut-out was another big cut-out showing Miss Bara looking over the city.

This was one of many exploitation devices used by N. H. Gordon, owner of Gordon's Olympia, during the two weeks' run of the Bara spectacle.

GEORGE SMITH SAILING FOR LONDON

Vitagraph's English General Manager Returns with Perfected Plans for Company's Expansion

GEORGE H. SMITH, general manager of the Vitagraph Company in London, England, arrived in New York again this week on his way home. Mr. Smith sails for Europe on Satuday, having perfected arrangements for a remarkable expansion of Vitagraph's foreign business, now that war conditions make a resumption of normal business possible.

Mr. Smith's last trip to America was in December, 1916, but his whole time in the United States on the occasion of that visit was scarcely a week. His present trip has embraced almost two months and he journeyed all the way out to Vitagraph's Hollywood studio and participated in the reunion of the Smith family in Santa Barbara.

Mr. Smith said that the picture business in England was never in a more flourishing condition.

Big Business for Theatres.

"The entire amusement business in England is better than it has been in years. We have a vast floating population in the big English centers. Troops and civilians from all over the world are traveling through England, hotels are crowded and picture theatres are doing the biggest business in their history.

"A big boom is coming for Vitagraph, and it was mainly for the sake of speeding up negatives for shipment abroad and for the closing of contracts for the company's export business that I came to America.

"When I get back to London we are going to initiate a big campaign. We are going to install American booking methods throughout our organization on the other side and I am going to have my rental manager make a trip to America to study at first hand the rental methods employed here by Vitagraph.

London Office Resumes Pre-War Status.

"Before the outbreak of the war, and particularly up to the time of America's participation in it, we did a truly phenomenal export business through our London office. We covered the entire Eastern Hemisphere with Vitagraph product, and I dare say that no company has as big a representation in the Far East as Vitagraph had.

"When the war came, and particularly when America entered the war, the exportation of negatives was so limited that our export business naturally could not keep apace with the demand. Now that normal conditions are in sight once more, the London office will again take over the exportation of Vitagraph pictures to the Eastern Hemisphere.

"We have closed a number of important contracts for Vitagraph productions, serials and two-reel comedies that will give the product of our company a remarkable representation in the Eastern Hemisphere, and within the next six months I look to see a bigger Vitagraph export business than at any time in the company's history.

Did Big War Business in England.

"Even during the war years we have done a remarkable business in the United Kingdom with the big Vitagraph specials, 'Over the Top,' 'The Common Cause' and 'Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation.' 'The Battle Cry of Peace' we released in England under the name of 'The Americans' Home,' and what the picture did stands as one of the achievements of the cinema business in England.

George H. Smith is a brother of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company. His visit offered him the opportunity of participating in the reunion of the Smith family, which occurred out in Santa Barbara about April 1.

George H. Smith
General manager of Vitagraph's London office.

Mrs. Drew Wants Scripts.

Stories in synopsis form for two-reel comedies of the familiar Drew type are still wanted by the V. B. K. Film Corp., 220 West Forty-second street, and are wanted very badly at the present moment. Mrs. Sidney Drew will continue to produce two-reel stories for the Paramount program, adhering to the original lines, and as she has always looked after the scenario end the stories will be unchanged in their general style. The full synopsis only is wanted. Full continuities will not be considered.

Tate to Assist James Cruze.

Cullem B. Tate, who just returned from France after over a year's service in the Camouflage Corps, will be assistant director to James Cruze in the production of Wallace Reid's new picture, "You're Fired," on which work was begun last week at the Lasky Hollywood studio.

Mr. Tate was employed at the studio for several years before he enlisted.

Charlie Takes the Pastry
From the Green Room Magazine, of Sydney, Australia.

The Very Well-Known Cake Goes to Charlie Chaplin

FOR several years past the Green Room Magazine of Sydney, Australia, has given a huge cake to the most popular screen or stage star appearing in that country during the year. Heretofore, women stars have always been the lucky recipients of the pastry, but this year, by a popular vote of the people, the cake was awarded to Charlie.

The cake, covered with an icing that represented a decorative relief map of the Australian continent, arrived at the studio on Chaplin's birthday, April 16, and was shared by the comedian with the kiddies of a Los Angeles children's home.

Universal Engages Winter Hall.

Winter Hall, who has been seen in a number of Cecil B. DeMille productions, and who was more recently seen opposite Helen Jerome Eddy in "The Turn in the Road," has ben engaged by Universal to support Dorothy Phillips in her next Universal drama now being produced at the West Coast studios by Allen J. Holubar. Simultaneously with the announcement of Mr. Hall's addition to the supporting cast comes word that Maxine Elliott Hicks, well known to Broadway theatregoers because of her many appearances on the stage in juvenile roles, has also been given a prominent part in Miss Phillips' production. Other members of the Phillips cast are William Stowell, Robert C. Andersen, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Thurston Hall and Margaret Mann.

Ernest Dench Leaves for England.

President George Julian Houtain, of Gray Seal Productions, announces the resignation of Ernest A. Dench as publicity director. Mr. Dench left Saturday, April 26, on an extended trip to England in the interests of Gray Seal Productions.

FIRST NATIONALS HOLD CONVENTION

Second Annual Gathering Brings Exchange Managers Into New York to Devise New Method for Co-operation—With One Exception Entire Board of Directors Is Re-elected, with James D. Williams Again Chosen as Circuit Manager

AT the Hotel Astor matters First National centered and seethed from Easter Sunday until Wednesday evening, April 23, when the second annual convention of franchise owners in the First National Exhibitors' Circuit was held. Coincident with these sessions the managers of the circuit met in their first conclave. In both divisions the delegates worked continuously for three days, stopping only for luncheon and dinner, the social features being also interspersed with such matters of business as might be openly discussed.

Announcements of importance to franchise holders and picture showmen who serve the public with First National attractions were made during the three days' session. Marshall Neilan will begin work on a series of special features in July, the first issue being promised for an early date in October. Charles Ray has been placed under contract to become a First National star January 1 next, meanwhile finishing off his present engagement with Thomas H. Ince by making eight releases between now and the end of the current year.

Paid Up Capital Stock Increased.

The capital stock was increased from $50,000 to $150,000, the additional allotments being subscribed to immediately. The election of officers and directors resulted in only one change in the directorate. At the personal request of Walter F. Hayes, he was replaced on the board by Ralph Clark, of New York, other interests demanding Mr. Hayes' undivided attention. James D. Williams was re-elected manager of First National for another year and Harry Schwalbe continues as secretary-treasurer.

The exchange managers decided to form the First National Sales Club and to meet with the franchise holders in subsequent annual conventions here in New York. James D. Williams was elected president of the exchange men's organization, with Harry Weiss, of Chicago, secretary.

It was determined that a "house organ" should be published as essential to the efficacy of the Sales Club, and to this end C. L. Yearsley was made publisher and Earl Hudson editor of the "booster" sheet to be published at weekly intevals and bearing the message of co-operation that has built up the First National to its present enviable station in the film market.

Exchange Men Form Sales Club.

It is a striking tribute to Mr. Williams that he was chosen to head the Sales Club without consulting him. Likewise did the exchange managers express their appreciation of the help Messrs. Yearsley and Hudson have given them in insisting upon their running the new publication. When Lieut. Jim Anderson made these announcement on behalf of his co-workers he declared that the exchange men demanded these men and would not countenance any declinations.

While "work" was the slogan of the joint conventions, "play" was not entirely eliminated; but the delegates stayed under the shelter of their own hotel roof to gambol at two luncheons and two dinners, the Tuesday evening meal really being worthy of classification as a banquet, when both exchange managers and franchise owners assembled in the Belvidere Room to eat, to listen to several felicitous addresses and to be entertained by professional singers delegated by Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, publishers of several vocal numbers that are based on the titles of First National Film features.

James D. Williams Greatly Popular.

Here it was that James D. Williams came in for the presentation of a massive silver cup, a tribute from the exchange managers. The inscription on the beautiful token tells the whole story: "To Our Dynamo." Lieut. James Anderson, on behalf of the exchange managers, made the presentation speech, while Harry Weiss presented the cup. There was an impelling note of sincerity and earnestness in Lieutenant Jim's tribute to Mr. Williams, and in acknowledging his personal gratitude for the gift the manager of the First National voiced the appreciation of the franchise owners for the concerted efforts of the exchange managers, who have worked enthusiastically in building up, in a little more than a year, a business of the importance and influence in the trade First National has achieved.

Delegations Join in Banqueting.

During the early period of banqueting, Col. Fred Levy, of Louisville, held the gavel and interjected a spirit of convivial brightness into the occasion by his conspicuously easy and magnetic methods and manners. Later on President Lieber assumed command only to impress the spirit of earnestness that pervaded the convention by calling the franchise holders into an evening session, but not until the menu had been disposed of and the banquet had reached its happy conclusion.

It was conspicuously noticable that the First Nationalites had come here to get down to business and dispose of matters swiftly and thoroughly. What happened in the meetings of the franchise holders is not of record, but the exchange managers met forenoon, afternoon and evening in sessions that are declared to have been inspired by the co-operative spirit that has brought First National to the front in speedy order.

Trade newspaper men got their only

"peek" at the franchise holders during the banquet, but at two luncheons and one memorable dinner they listened to frequently interjected addresses by various men big in First National affairs and thus learned that while the exchange men were pegging away with the work in hand their employers were equally industrious in threshing out the weighty matters that came before them. The irrevocable impression was gained that the well known "busy bee" is a laggard and wastrel in comparison to First Nationalites from top to bottom.

Arabian Nights Modernized.

Monday noon the "press gang" was first introduced to the exchange men at a luncheon served with Lieut. Jim Anderson at the head of the table. Monday evening C. L. Yearsley chaperoned exchange managers and newspaper men through a dinner of memorable portent. What was eaten tasted good and what was said listened like pages from the manuscript of unpublished fairy tales. Sides ached, ribs rocked and the lid of laughter rattled as the risibles of the assembled company hit the ceiling and rebounded over and over again. It was after midnight before all those adepts at their game had told all they knew about the film business. There was another luncheon Tuesday noon, with food prepared at a different range, traveling one block to Moore's chop house being the only departure from an otherwise strictly Hotel Astor location.

Finishing off this story is a detailed time table of events and subjects discussed during the convention. These interludes were staged solely by the exchange managers while their bosses delved into even more weighty subjects on another floor of the hotel. There was still a third section of the Astor beside the meeting room reserved for the convenience of First Nationalites—the press room, where Earl Hudson and his obliging assistant, Mr. O'Connor, were in supreme control. Here the newspaper men fared well at the hands of Messrs. Yearsley and Hudson.

High Praise for Yearsley and Hudson.

These two marvels of efficiency acquitted themselves with ease and grace throughout the convention. It was Yearsley and Hudson who piloted, plotted and schemed to keep the "going" smooth and easy for the exchange men and their bosses. And it is a matter worthy of record in imperishable print that First National, in every unit of the organization, appreciates the efficiency of its publicity experts. Time and again were Yearsley and Hudson singled out specifically in speeches by both exchange men and franchise holders as subjects of praise for their demonstrated skill and efficiency.

Franchise Holders in Attendance.

Franchise holders in attendance, headed by the directorate, included, besides Manager James D. Williams, Robert Liebler, Indianapolis, president; Harry Schwalbe, Philadelphia, secretary-treasurer; E. H. Hulsey, Dallas; J. G. von Herberg, Seattle; T. L. Tally, Los Angeles; Aaron Jones, Chicago, and R. H. Clark, New York. Directors: Fred Dahnken, San Francisco; F. V. Fisher, Seattle; M. P. Dewees, Vancouver; William H. Swanson, Salt Lake; Harry T. Nolan, Denver; Mr. Schulin, Winnipeg; M. L. Finkelstein, Minneapolis; Tom Saxe, Milwaukee; A. H. Blank, Omaha; William Sievers, St. Louis; N. J. Flynn, Kansas City; Nathan Ascher, Chicago; Col. Fred Levy, Louisville; E. V. Richards, New Orleans; E. Mandelbaum, Cleveland; A. L. Freedman, Cleveland; A. C. Barbian, Akron; John Kunsky, Detroit; E. I. Church, Paterson; George N. Trendle, Detroit; Jacob Fabian, Paterson; L. D. Beggs, Canada; J. B. Clark, Pittsburgh; Tom Moore, Washington; R. D. Craver, Charlotte, N. C.; Frank Ferrandini, Richmond; H. Brouse, Winnipeg, and B. F. Staples, Ottawa.

Exchange Managers on Hand.

Twenty three exchange managers assembled. They were: Harry Weiss, Chicago, Boyd Cunningham, Washington; W. E. Lusk, Cleveland; C. R. Beacham, Atlanta; James Skirboll, Pittsburgh; A. C. Seery, Chicago; L. Bickel, Dallas; Jack Brainard, Oklahoma City; H. J. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee; J. F. Cubberly, Minneapolis; Harry Scott, Detroit; Lieut. Jim Anderson, Richmond; Lee Goldberg, Louisville; Tom Spry, Boston; J. H. Von Tilzer, New York; Mr. Faukner, New Jersey; W. J. Heenan, Philadelphia; F. A. Fischer, Seattle; Floyd Brown, Indianapolis; Jacob Fabian, New Jersey; Mr. Sueringer, New Orleans; E. V. Richards, Jr., New Orleans, and Percy Smith, Buffalo.

Goldwyn Moves its Main Office to Fifth Avenue

THE main offices of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will be moved on Saturday April 26 from 16 East 42d street to the eighth floor of the Winfield Building at 469 Fifth avenue.

No greater commentary on the growth of the Goldwyn organization can be made than the fact that within the two and one-half years of its existence it has been necessary to more than double the floor space required for the transaction of its business. Whereas, at 16 East 42d street, only five thousand square feet were occupied by this growing concern, at the new quarters something more than ten thousand square feet will be occupied.

The Winfield building, of course, will only be used for the main offices. The foreign and exchange offices of Goldwyn comprising over 7,000 square feet, will continue to be at 509 Fifth avenue, and the warehouse at 14th street, ten thousand square feet in area will remain in the same place.

A new arrangement of offices will be made on removal to the Winfield building. Apart from the offices of the six Goldwyn executives, which will be partitioned off and private, all departments will be out in the open, forming an expanse of several hundred desks.

Elaine Hammerstein Is Selznick's Third Star

SELZNICK Pictures Corporation announces it has secured the exclusive services of Elaine Hammerstein. She becomes the third star under the Selznick banner. Miss Hammerstein is to start work shortly.

Miss Hammerstein is the daughter of Arthur Hammerstein, the theatrical producer, and a great granddaughter of the famous Oscar. She made her first appearance upon the legitimate stage at the tender age of five. Her first picture was "The Face in the Moonlight."

1919 WILL BE REMARKABLE IN BUILDING

Report Shows Construction Work to Cost Total of Nearly Two Billions—Over 300 Picture Projects

THE United States Department of Labor in a report through its Division of Public Works and Construction Development predicts that the year of 1919 will prove one of the greatest in American history for building and construction work.

Contracts let in March show conclusively that building is getting under way despite the talk of high prices. The March record is better for 1919 than for any other year since 1911, excepting 1917, when Government construction made the record abnormal. From a study based on 6,446 building projects known to have been contemplated at the signing of the armistice, involving a cost of $1,892,275,000, the Department of Labor concludes that 50 per cent. of these projects are yet to be started.

A questionnaire was sent in February to the builders of these 6,446 projects, of which 2,882 are public undertakings, 78 being Federal, 279 State, 593 county and 1,932 municipal. In general terms, high prices of material, wage scales and difficulty in financing are the chief obstacles to building as shown by the tabulation of the questionnaire information. Conflicting statements from the same state, however, show that sectional and local conditions are the determining factors rather than a general and widespread rule. For instance, 42 Ohio builders claim a shortage of material, while 163 specifically state there is no material shortage.

The Moving Picture World, through its own building department, has catalogued over 300 moving picture theatre projects in building and remodeling during the past six weeks, showing the motion picture industry is booming ahead with the best of prospects.

Modern Flatbush Theatre Will Cost Half Million

A THEATRE which promises to be one of the finest in New York State will be erected at Flatbush and Albemarle Road in Brooklyn by a syndicate headed by John Manheimer. The completion of the building, work on which will start June 1, will mean the expenditure of half a million dollars.

Plans have already been drawn for the house, which will be a combination theatre, with a main auditorium seating 3,000. A revolving stage, a large waiting room designed to obviate the congested lobby, and an automobile parking space for the use of the patrons are some of the features of the new theatre which will be known as the Albemarle.

The transfer of the property owned by the Borden Condensed Milk Company involved one of the biggest real estate transactions in Flatbush for a number of years.

John Manheimer, who heads the syndicate building the Albermarle, is the owner of the Park Theatre and one of the pioneers of the Mutual Film Corporation. Speaking of his plans, Mr. Manheimer said: "There can be no doubt as to the success of this project. The demand for good, clean entertainment in Flatbush greatly exceeds its present supply.

"One of the many features of the new theatre will be an immense assembly hall on the second floor for public assemblies, balls and banquets in this section. This feature will be welcomed by the residents of Flatbush, as heretofore there has been no place of public assembly for them."

Swanson Interests Plan a New $750,000 Theatre

PLANS for a new theatre building to cost $750,000 are being prepared, according to announcement which has been made by W. H. Swanson interests in Salt Lake City. The new theatre is to be built on Main street, though as yet the exact site has not been announced. Mr. Swanson now owns three theatres here, the American, the Liberty and the Strand.

Several years ago the property of the old St. Paul's Episcopal church, Fourth South and Main streets, was purchased by Mr. Swanson. The property lies across Main street from the Newhouse hotel, one of the leading hotels of the city. Whether this is to be the site of the new showhouse, however, is a matter which can only be conjectured at the present time.

It is reported that ground will be broken for the new theatre at once. The plans have been made in Denver and Mr. Swanson is reported to have left that city for New York to complete arrangements for the new Salt Lake City theatre. It is said to be the plans of the Swanson interests to erect a theatre which will not only have facilities for motion pictures but which also can accommodate the largest road shows.

MANY NEW HOUSES FOR CALIFORNIA

San Francisco Reports Outlook So Promising Plans Are Being Made for Biggest Business Ever

PROJECTS for new theatres in San Francisco and the territory served by local film exchanges are cropping up in numbers that insure a tremendous amount of building work of this kind in the near future. While construction costs are still above the normal, builders are preparing to have work rushed, so promising is the outlook in the amusement field. Contracts are now being let for several new houses and by mid-summer work on many of these will be in full swing.

Several new theatres are being planned for the downtown district in San Francisco, although promoters of these have not made formal announcements to this effort. The property at Eddy and Mason streets, where the Tivoli Opera House was located at the time of the great fire in 1906, has been taken over by a concern having a chain of theatres on the Pacific Coast and work will be commenced shortly on the erection of a large theatre with an entrance near Market street. Negotiations are under way for a transfer of the Prager department store property at Jones and Market streets to theatre interests. A consummation of this deal and the erection of a theatre would place Film Row in the heart of the amusement district.

Plan House for Santa Cruz.

Plans are being prepared by Reid Brothers, San Francisco architects, for a 2,000-seat house to be erected at Santa Cruz, Cal., for F. D. Hihn, who has leased it to Kahn & Greenfield. These same architects are working on plans for a 1,500-seat house to be erected at San Rafael, a suburb of San Francisco. This theatre, which will cost about $125,000, has been leased to Max Blumenfeld and Sam Gordon for a period of twenty years. Plans are also being prepared for a large theatre to be erected at Merced by Charles H. Douglass, of the Elite Theatre and associates. Voters of Tulare have voted bonds in the sum of $60,000 for the construction of a municipal auditorium that may be used for the showing of moving pictures, and a similar structure is being planned for Porterville.

From Honolulu comes word that the Consolidated Amusement Company, of which Joe Cohen is the head, plans the erection of a theatre at Bethel and Pauahi streets at an estimated cost of $150,000.

Enea Brothers are erecting a new moving picture house with a seating capacity of 1,500 at Pittsburgh, Cal., and will name this the California. The construction of a $100,000 theatre at Turlock is being planned, but this project has not reached a definite stage.

CHURCH.

Philadelphia to Have Two New Theatres at $350,000

PLANS have been started for two of the largest and best equipped moving picture theatres in Philadelphia, the cost of both to aggregate $350,000. H. Child Hogens is the architect for both structures.

One of the houses will be located in Frankford, on Frankford avenue, near Oxford, and will have a seating capacity of 2,500. A pipe organ costing $25,000 will be installed and the total cost of the theatre will be $150,000, according to the owner, William Freihofer.

The other house will be erected in the northern section of the city at Germantown and Lehigh avenues, and when completed will surpass any in the vicinity. The seating capacity will be 3,500. The interior wall will be covered with satin tapestry, and a pipe organ costing $30,000 will be another feature.

Work has already started on E. A. Johnson's $80,000 theatre on West Canon Perdido street, Santa Barbara, Cal. The house will seat over 1,000. There will be no balcony, but a saucer-shaped floor will gvie the best possible view of the screen.

The pipe organ is being planned to cost $30,000. A unique feature will be a tunnel exit leading from the center of the floor. Mr. Johnson's new house will be devoted exclusively to moving pictures.

SELECT CHIEFS HOLD CONVENTION

Hotel Astor Scene of Conclave of Branch Managers and Home Officials Who Outline Vigorous Year's Campaign and Wedge In Attractive Social Program

RIGHT on the heels of Lewis J. Selznick's acquisition of 100 per cent. control of Select Pictures, and the removal of the entire Selznick Pictures forces from their West Coast studios, under Myron Selznick, came the week's convention of Select Pictures Corporation branch managers and home officials at the Hotel Astor, beginning Monday, April 21.

All of which, added to the many actual social and business happenings of the convention, points to the fact that Select is selecting the big things at which to drive during the coming year.

The big announcements at the close of Tuesday's session were those made by Lewis J. Selznick when he stated that Sam E. Morris is to be Select's general manager, succeeding Arthur S. Kane, resigned, and that Charles Rogers will be director of sales, a new and important office in the organization. There will be no delay in the assumption by these two officials of their new duties. They will don the harness of their offices on April 28.

Promotion from Ranks Select Policy.

In connection with his announcement Mr. Selznick made the statement that promotion from the ranks will be the policy of his organization in the future. He pointed out the importance which he attaches to the progressive advancement of live members of Select.

"A man," he said, "cannot stand still. He must either go forward or go backward. The man who retrogrades naturally passes out of sight. The man who shows himself capable of advance will be given opportunities. I want to make it plain that there is no limit to the height to which a man working for Select can raise himself if he refuses to rest contented at each level of his attainment."

As early as last Monday the Select managers began to arrive in New York, and by Monday morning all were on hand. The first informal meeting was held in Select's home office at 729 Seventh avenue, where the visiting managers took turns in wringing Lewis J. Selznick's hand, in congratulation on his acquisition of complete control of Select.

Starting off with a handshaking fest, the day wound up with a cabaret party at Reisenweber's, while wedged in between were a lunch, a dinner and a theatre party at the Criterion, where "Three Wise Fools" entertained.

Business Talk on Tuesday.

Tuesday's session of the convention opened in the College Room of the Astor at 10 A. M. It was a purely business meeting, and the discussion centered about salesmanship and plans for the balance of the season. In addition to the branch managers, the meeting was attended by Joe Unger, general manager of Select's Canadian branch. Mr. O'Laughlin, of the Montreal branch; Phil Selznick, of Cleveland; Dave Selznick, of Boston; assistant general manager, J. J. Rotchford; Bedell, of Chicago; Safier, of Boston; purchasing agent, C. C. Ryan; Walter J. Porgis, E. R. Durham, B. L. Faralla, G. M. Sheppard, treasurer, Morris Kahn; general manager, Arthur S. Kane; Lester Adler, and publicity manager, Vivian M. Moses.

Salesmanship was the topic at the third day's session of the conference. The meeting opened with a request for a general discussion of sales policy and the method of interesting the disinterested exhibitor. A number of valuable facts were set forth by the various managers relative to the methods employed in their respective offices.

Vigorous and Thorough Discussion.

Mr. Kane asked for opinions regarding the policy of various managers, which resulted in a frank and open discussion. Matters of Select policy, service and pictures were talked about thoroughly.

At 1:30 P. M. the session adjourned. After a group picture on the roof of the Astor, luncheon was indulged in until

Lewis J. Selznick.
President of Select Pictures.

3 o'clock, when the afternoon meeting took up the subjects of the morning conclave.

The acquisition of Olive Thomas and Eugene O'Brien as Selznick stars and the distribution of their features through Select gave rise to an enthusiastic outline of a vigorous campaign during the course of the convention.

Wednesday night the party saw "Lightnin'" at the Gaiety, which was followed by an after-theatre party at the Ziegfeld Frolic.

Sophie Tucker Entertains.

Sophie Tucker, the attraction at Reisenweber's on Monday night, sang a few of her best songs for the Select party and made a number of complimentary remarks about Olive Thomas, Eugene O'Brien, Lewis J. and Myron Selznick.

Those in the party included the following Select branch managers: Henry Siegel, New York; M. Milder, Philadelphia; Charles R. Rogers, Boston; S. S. Webster, Buffalo; V. P. Whitaker, Washington; Leo F. Levison, Pittsburgh; Sam E. Morris, Cleveland; Harry H. Hicks, Cincinnati; James O. Kent, Detroit; Fred C. Aiken, Chicago; J. C. Ragland, St. Louis; C. W. Taylor, Omaha; A. H. McLaughlin, Kansas City; H. A. Rathner, Minneapolis; T. O. Tuttle, Atlanta; H. G. Till, New Orleans; C. C. Ezell, Dallas; H. E. Lotz, Los Angeles; H. L. Knappen, San Francisco, and Albert W. Eden, Seattle.

The others were Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Blank, of Des Moines; Harry Rapf, Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, Mr. Finklestein, of St. Paul and Minneapolis; assistant branch manager Bedell, and Mrs. Bedell, of Chicago; Phil Selznick, Cleveland, salesman; D. J. Selznick, assistant branch manager, of Boston; Edith Koch, private secretary to Lewis J. Selznick; Myron Selznick, president of Selznick Pictures; David Selznick, secretary of Selznick Pictures, and Haward Selznick.

Morris and Rogers Are from Ranks.

Sam E. Morris and Charles Rogers, who were the center of Tuesday's big announcements, both illustrate Mr. Selznick's contention that the best men rise from the ranks. A few years ago when Lewis J. Selznick was vice-president and general manager of World Film, Mr. Morris worked his way to the position of manager of World's Cleveland Exchange. Later when Mr. Selznick founded his own company, he installed Mr. Morris as treasurer of Selznick Enterprises. When Select was formed Mr. Morris was given the title of East Central general manager, with jurisdiction over Detroit, Cincinnati and Cleveland.

Charles R. Rogers joined Select when it was founded in 1917, being appointed to the post of Buffalo branch manager. Shortly after, Buffalo became known as one of Select's leading exchanges. Mr. Rogers was then made New England manager, while now he is advanced to the new position of Director of Sales.

Thursday morning was devoted to an exchange of opinions concerning the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic.

A short business session Thursday afternoon in the College Room of the Astor closed the convention.

Selznick Stars Travel to Dance.

Olive Thomas and Eugene O'Brien, Selznick Pictures stars, accompanied by Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, Myron Selznick, David Selznick, Charles R. Rogers, director of sales, and Morris Safier, of Select's Boston exchange, left New York Thursday afternoon for Providence to attend the moving picture ball in the Armory Thursday night. The members of the party were the guests of Governor Beekman, of Rhode Island. The proceeds of the ball will be given to the Fund for the Fatherless Children of France.

Salute and Hail to A Brace of Regulars.

THERE was an unusually interesting and intelligent assemblage of bright young men segregated on one of the floors of Keen's Chop House (advt.) on Saturday afternoon preceding Easter to welcome to our city Ben Grimm, who lately returned to the staff of Moving Picture World, and Charles R. Condon, who was visiting our city and his sister Mabel at the time.

The occasion gave the two lads proof that although they were long absent, answering the call of their country, that the "tradepaper gang" and an elect number of the P. A. fraternity had not forgotten them. Also the event furnished opportunity for many shafts of wit and wisdom to pass over and through the heads of the assembled congestion of brains.

Pete Smith, general press representative of Famous Players-Lasky (advt.) made the best speech of the hour. Said Pete:

"What will you have?" and in answer the bunch ran up a bill for pretty close to $8, which is hereby certified against a possible bulge in Pete's "swindle sheet." That a good time was had by all we vouch.

Better still, ask: Laurence Reid, Jerome Beatty, Arthur Northam, C. S. Sewell, Alfred J. Chalmers, Peter Milne, Ben H. Grimm, James L. Hoff, R. C. McElravey, Charles E. Hastings, Louis R. When Universal and Finkelstein & Ruben cast up accounts as the result of a change J. L. For five months Johnston has been 'turning out crisp, film-selling publicity from Universal's home office, where, under Tarkington Baker, he has scored an enviable record.

His stuff counts in effectiveness without useless waste of space and Finkelstein & Ruben are entitled to congratulations for the move they have made in taking Johnston back to his own home town to do their advertising and publicity. For some time the new F. & R. publicist edited Amusements in Minneapolis and acted as Twin City correspondent for Moving Picture World. With work to do in both Minneapolis and St. Paul, Johnston has a chance to develop his ideas and unquestioned ability.

"But, Joe," finally broke in Patterson, "I've booked the picture for a week in my house."

She discovered, in a quiet corner of the bag a sheet of paper bearing a list of telephone numbers with names, strange to her, set opposite. On arriving in our city, wifey called every number and asked the woman who, in each instance, answered the phone to join Mr. Soandso at dinner. ## New York Exhibitors Show Teamwork

NEW YORK STATE has a Sunday local option law. The measure permitting municipal governing bodies to sanction motion picture performances after 2 o'clock Sunday afternoons was signed by Governor Smith on April 19. The act was the culmination of a campaign waged along progressive lines by the exhibitors of New York. At the head of the picture showmen striving for the triumph of majority rule were Sydney S. Cohen, president of the State Exhibitors' League; Samuel I. Berman, its secretary, and Charles O'Reilly. Their work has been energetic and intelligent. They discarded old lines. They organized first and talked afterward; and when there was talking to be done, before legislative committees or the Governor, they avoided the employment as speakers of too many men directly connected with the industry.

So ends a situation in the Empire State that has been a menace in those communities where Sunday pictures were condoned, rather than permitted. As the Governor truly said in his memorandum accompanying the signing of the bill, "neither party seems to have dared to put the question to a hazard of the decision of the Court of Appeals and by obtaining the judgment of the court of last resort establish a uniformity of judicial holding on this subject."

As an indication of the vigor with which the picture showmen attacked the difficult task of upsetting deep-rooted prejudice, it is necessary only to mention the accomplishment of the Buffalonians who secured 225,000 signatures to favoring petitions. Then there was Rochester, a "hundred per cent. town," the five assemblymen and one voting Senator of which all were recorded in favor of the measure.

New York has done well. It has set a mark for other states to shoot at—and it will be strange if some of these, with the example of the Empire State before them, do not register a bullseye. It all reminds of the remark of Joseph H. Choate, years ago, following a decision by the United States Supreme Court that a certain income tax measure was unconstitutional: "It just goes to show that some things may be done as well as others."

The World and "Bolshevism on Trial"

IN its issue of April 19 the MOVING PICTURE WORLD printed a page article entitled "Bolshevik Play Has Big Points." The aim of the writer was to indicate to the exhibitor how in the exploitation of "Bolshevism on Trial," he could increase his receipts.

The writer in question was strongly of the belief that the picture contained a message and that it should be shown as widely as possible. In his zeal to accomplish this end he suggested the use of means plainly not in the interest of public order.

We regret the publication.

It afforded opportunity for exploitation by professional spokesmen for discontent.

It did not reflect the attitude of the WORLD as maintained throughout the twelve years of its existence.

Inspired by eagerness but not by heat crowds may storm a box office without public danger resulting. In a production containing a theme upon which feeling runs high, however, exhibitors are bound to use every care to avoid arousing the passions of their clientele or of their townspeople.

The WORLD will continue to be an advocate of sane showmanship.

The "Service" We Give to Exhibitors

IN a majority of instances picture showmen of today are men who have gained "showmanship" either in the business they now follow or in other branches of theatrical entertainment. There are others, however, who are just coming into management or ownership of picture houses—and to this element among our subscribers it seems fitting that something should be said of the "service" MOVING PICTURE WORLD gives to its readers.

Two-thirds of the matter printed in our pages, week after week, year in and year out, is "service" in some form. The other third may be broadly classified as "news" that, in itself, is largely "service" in that it keeps our readers posted on what is happening throughout the industry—bringing into isolated towns the assembled news of the business in which our subscribers are engaged.

In various departments are segregated material either written by our own staff or submitted by the publicity departments of manufacturers and distributors for the benefit of showmen who "play" the pictures specifically referred to. Many of the departments are explicit in their designation. In other pages we print "interviews" that, at first glance, may not seem to be anything but "personal publicity." But a moment's thought will give the lead to live wire exhibitors—will carry those interviews into the local papers to center attraction on the particular star or attraction at the time the individual showman is offering to the public the picture which the interview concerns. All that needs be done is to insert the name of the theatre and playing date of the attraction, add "credit" at the end of the article to MOVING PICTURE WORLD and your newspaper has an article especially written to exploit, for the benefit of our exhibitor-subscribers, the attraction that is booked to sell tickets.

Our paper is full of "publicity." The exhibitor who combines thought and action can keep his local newspapers supplied with all the "reading notices" they need print to give theatres a proper showing. By using this publicity to accompany the advertising paid for by the picture showmen our subscribers can get the price of their subscription returned to them every week. By applying the pages of MOVING PICTURE WORLD to the exploitation of his theatre and attractions picture showmen will discover that their investment in a subscription is value returned and multiplied over and over again.

Film Conventions Increase Efficiency

CAPTAINS of the film industry follow the lead of other great commercial institutions in holding conventions of their sales forces—and they do well. Meeting their fellow-workers face to face makes for a better understanding throughout the time that shall ensue until they meet again. Letter-writing is the only long-distance expression we have for real personal characteristics. We may think we know a man by his letter—but we are sure we know him better when we meet face to face.

Two prominent distributing concerns assembled their sales forces in New York for Easter week. The First National, being more grounded on co-operative lines than Select, also convened as franchise holders. The "big guns" of both organizations enjoyed the great advantage of having their many sales managers all together in one room, where they could talk over the affairs of their organization with mutual authority and receptiveness.

So firmly do First National's sales heads believe in the convention idea that they resolved, as a body, to pay their own way to New York next year, if needs be, that they may get together at least once a year for the co-operative "boost." No doubt every exchange manager throughout the country would benefit himself and increase his efficiency if he might meet his co-workers all in a bunch at least once a year.

The more conventions the better for the industry as a whole.

California Doing Its Share of Theatre Building

THE theatre building boom has struck California. Word just received from San Francisco tells of several houses being planned for the downtown district, one of these to be at Eddy and Mason streets, with an entrance on Market street. Other large theatres are slated for Santa Cruz, San Rafael, Merced, Tulare, Porterville, Pittsburgh and Turlock. Honolulu is to have a $150,000 house.

Little San Rafael, a town across the bay from San Francisco, will have a structure costing $125,000. Its lessees will be Max Blumenfeld and Sam Gordon, the latter one of the pioneer exhibitors of the Bay City. The Tulare house will be in the form of a municipal auditorium, for which the residents have voted bonds to the amount of $60,000.

Down in Santa Barbara, E. A. Johnson is building a theatre costing $80,000 and seating over 1,000. There will also be a pipe organ costing $30,000.

Statistics compiled in Washington show that the building record for the country for last March is the best since 1911, with the exception, of course, of last year, when the total was high owing to excessive Government construction. It is estimated that of projects contemplated at the time of the signing of the armistice and involving an expenditure of nearly two billions, probably one-half are yet to be started.

Upward Business Trend

IRREFUTABLE proof that the motion picture business right now is on the threshold of its most prosperous period is contained in Paramount-Artcraft's analysis of box-office values, the chart of which appears on another page of this issue. The diagram gives facts and figures which cannot lie—and in this particular case what applies to Paramount and Artcraft pictures applies to all pictures.

The chart's line sags with the period of the winter of 1918; it curves down when the draft comes along. It follows the country's economic and sentimental convulsions accurately. And since the armistice was signed the line has been climbing steadily upward.

Coupled with the fact that the present finds more theatres being built than ever before, this upward trend of business augurs that we may look for big things. As a film man said to us: "The country just now is amusement crazy. Why, it's almost impossible to get a ticket for the circus in New York now—even on a school day!"

The country is enjoying a reaction from its war worries and, just as during the dark period the people of America were whole-hearted in their worries, so now are they whole-hearted in seeking amusement.

Fox Strikes Human Chord

WILLIAM FOX'S announcement that his organization is going to use the battlefields of France for backgrounds of modern dramas is of interest to more than the motion picture industry. Some two millions of our men were "Over There," but the hearts of many more than two million were there for a long time—and many hearts are still there, although the flesh is here. Mr. Fox proves himself a master psychologist with this move.

It is a known fact that Verdun, Chateau-Thierry, the Argonne, the Hindenburg Line will remain shell-torn stretches for a long time, and in using the screen as a method of carrying the millions to the scenes that are burned into their being, the producer will strike a human chord.

When Rights to Play Include Film Rights

THE United States Court of Appeals has decided that in the absence of a specific reservation in a contract between a playwright and a producer, the screen rights to a stage subject pass to the producer. The decision affected the photoplay rights to the popular "Peg o' My Heart," and was against J. Hartley Manners and in favor of Oliver Morosco. There was a dissenting opinion, and the case may be carried to the United States Supreme Court.

MOVIES PROPOSE HELP FOR CHURCHES

Rochester Theatre Men Not Competing with Lord on Sundays, but Want to Advertise Ministers' Sermons

AMONG the prominent Rochester figures in the fight for Sunday movies is John J. McInerney, an attorney of state-wide reputation and a silver-tongued orator of considerable fame. He was present and fighting at all of the legislative hearings held in Albany and between times busied himself with ways and means to crush the enemy, or rather to heap coals of fire on the opposition.

At each hearing at the capitol, it has been a matter of conjecture as to what "Mac" was about to spring on those within sound of his voice. A few weeks ago he startled the session and floored his ministerial opponents, by the stinging rebuke that "Hell was doing business before the movies came."

At one of the final sessions, when the ministers and alleged reform workers bewailed that Sunday was a day that should be given to the Lord, and otherwise intimated that the movies would compete with them and the Lord, to their mutual disadvantage, "Mac" sprung to life and denied it. He said that the theatre managers would see to it that the shows did not compete with the Lord, and would actually assist the churches by boosting them on the screen.

He explained that the theatres in Rochester and other places, were prepared to run slides and trailers announcing the Sunday services, sermon topics and other notes suggested by the ministers, all without any charge for the use of the screen. "And," continued "Mac," "we won't ask the ministers to reciprocate by advertising our shows from the pulpit. We are liberal and fair-minded; can they say the same?"

Pathe Executive Resigns to Become Film Exporter

MANUEL RAMIREZ - TORRES, identified with Pathe for thirteen years and with a record for tenure of service with one organization unique in the motion picture business, has resigned as manager of the scenario department to enter the film export business. Mr. Ramirez has organized the Selection Film Service, Inc., and has secured the agency for the Pathe films for the West Indies, and in addition will handle the Select product for that territory. He plans to widen his field of operations at a later date.

Mr. Ramirez is popular among his fellow Pathe employes. He was born in Porto Rico in 1881 and came to the United States in 1904. His first position in this country was a translator and stenographer with Pathe. He has been the directing mind in many of Pathe's departments. In 1916 he was elected director of Pathe Exchange, Inc., an office he has held ever since.

"Doc," as he is familiarly called in the Pathe offices, has a very wide and valuable acquaintance among exhibitors in the West Indies, which will be of great use to him in his new business. Furthermore, being a Porto Rican born, he understands the viewpoint and tastes of Americans of Spanish descent.

Archainbaud Engaged by Capellani.

George Archainbaud, identified for a number of years as a director for the World Film Corporation, has been placed under contract with the Albert Capellani Productions, Inc., to direct for them. Mr. Archainbaud, who has just secured his release from the army where he served as a lieutenant in the field artillery, has already started work on his first subject, a comedy-drama co-starring Creighton Hale and June Caprice, which will follow "Oh Boy" and be released through Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Say Loan Work Is Used as Guise for Sunday Campaign

AT the recent Presbyterian ministers' meeting in Philadelphia it was charged that under the guise of campaigning for the Victory Loan, the motion picture men were conducting propaganda work for Sunday motion pictures. Despite the threat of the ministers to withdraw from the Victory Loan campaign and withhold their support if the Sunday motion pictures were continued, the Loan Committee has not as yet canceled Sunday showing of pictures. Frank W. Buhler, chairman of the committee, said that he would not enter into any controversy with the ministers as it was his intention of going right ahead with his original plans. A Victory Loan campaign, with the aid of appropriate motion pictures, is at present being conducted in several theatres in Philadelphia every Sunday although it does not meet with the approval of the ministers.

Personal and Otherwise

THE lobby of the Hotel Astor was swarming with live ones—those who were attending the First National and Select conventions and those who were there to meet and greet them. From the South we met Percy Wells, of Wilmington, N. C.; E. V. Richards, general manager, and Bill Garringer, assistant manager of the Saenger Amusement Company, of New Orleans, representing seventy theatres beyond the Mason and Dixie line. These three with their wives came in a little party of their own and were the guests of the Typhoon Fan Company. All of them gave glowing accounts of the prosperity of the South, declaring that it surely was coming into its own.

Mr. Wells says: "Wilmington is booming, the establishment by the Government of two concrete shipyards has brought at least three thousand families into the city, aggregating ten thousand persons. There are no Sunday movies in Wilmington, but we have been granted the Sunday privilege at our seaside park on the outskirts of the city, including the privileges of Sunday pictures."

R. D. Craver, from Charlotte, N. C., who represents a chain of several theatres in the South, was in a happy state of mind over the prosperous conditions and the hopeful aspect of affairs in his territory. "Don't fail to attend the North Carolina Exhibitors' Convention this fall, we will take you around and let you see for yourself," he said.

Tom Saxe, of Minneapolis, who is largely interested in theatres in Minnesota and Wisconsin, reported business excellent, but he feels apprehensive about the censorship question in Wisconsin. He says the situation is grave, and it is time that the National Association should awake to the conditions that confront the industry in that state if pending legislation becomes law.

Edward Schiller, Loew's Southern representative, was seen circulating in the Astor lobby among the many out of town representatives of the First National and the Select.

A. W. Moses, he of the vicelike grip, who has been a Select salesman in northern New York for the past two years, has been promoted to manager of Select's Buffalo office.

W. A. Northam, of London, who has been in New York for the past two months representing several English manufacturers, will give a special trade showing of a number of English made pictures on the New York Roof beginning May 6, lasting four days. The object of this showing is to give a relative and comparative estimate of pictures made abroad to the demand of the American market.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, his wife, contemplates a few weeks' visit to their Maryland estate and a vacation at Atlantic City before resuming their work before the camera.

Francis X. Bushman Signed by Morosco.

The screen may lose the services of Francis X. Bushman through the contract he lately signed with Oliver Morosco to be presented on the dramatic stage. The name of the piece in which he will first appear under the Morosco management is not announced. Neither is it just now disclosed whether or not Beverly Bayne will appear with Bushman behind the footlights. Mr. Bushman will make his debut as a Morosco star here in New York early in the next season.

League Wants Unit Organization.

Letters have been sent out by the Exhibitors' League of Maryland to all organizations in Baltimore relative to the forming of a unit body of all local bodies which are interested in the progress and welfare of the city. It is stated that the members of the league feel assured that the support of the screen in promoting vital measures could be successfully launched. They are asking the opinions of the city organizations on the matter.

Syd Chaplin Is Flying High.

During the past few days Syd Chaplin has been testing out the air above New York and the harbor with his latest type flying machines. He has been above ground on several different occasions and will fly to Atlantic City for the week-end. Brother Charlie will be here in a few days, Syd preceding him with his airplane.

Box Office Analysis of Paramount and Artcraft Films Indicates General Upward Trend of Business

ANALYSIS of box office values of all Paramount and Artcraft pictures produced during the past year, made by the production department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and based on reports from first-run exhibitors in all sections of the country, shows not only a steady upward trend of the drawing power and qualities of the pictures themselves, but the remarkable fluidity with which box office receipts respond to general national conditions in business and industrial life.

Analysis from the receipts themselves shows that in the three months' period, December, 1918, to February, 1919, only six subjects did not qualify as "good," which was the average classification of the entire output in the nine months preceding December, 1918.

Chart Covers 39 Films in Three-Month Period.

The last three months' period shown in the chart covers 39 releases as compared with 90 releases in the preceding nine months. The average classification of the 90 releases is "good" and of the 39 releases "very good," and within 3 per cent. of "great." The 90 releases included ten "record" features. The 39 releases included 11 "record" features, comprising one Griffith, one De Mille, one Hart, one Ferguson, one Ray, one Fairbanks, one Washburn, two Gish and two Reid subjects. "Record" productions are those reaching a percentage of 97½, or practically universal box office success.

That the exhibitor's business is now entering into a period of the very greatest prosperity that has ever been experienced, is indicated by the zigzag line of the chart.

Low Point Winter of 1918.

The low point at the beginning of the line marks the end of the "heatless days and lightless nights" period of the winter of 1918. The line rises at the end of that period until the next draft, when it sags. It recovers strength, gaining steadily until the succeeding draft and the influenza epidemic put a general crimp in business, when it sags to the date of the signing of the armistice. From that point it rises very sharply, and with added gains after each temporary decline of a point or two.

A careful study of the zig-zag lines will convince the exhibitor that right now he is in the beginning of the best business period he has ever experienced.

Keeping Tabs on Releases.

Lawton Launches Big Advertising on Fox Film

FITCHBURG, MASS., is a city of 40,000 to 50,000 people—an ideal town for a motion picture showman. There the live exhibitor can make his theatre's name a household word if he takes the trouble to exploit his productions in the proper way.

A. B. Lawton, of Shea's Theatre, Fitchburg, when he booked "Cleopatra" for a week launched the biggest exploitation campaign Fitchburg ever had seen.

In the first place, he "spread" in the Fitchburg newspaper, using big advertising displays. On the strength of this advertising alone he obtained considerable reading-matter publicity, because he has made it a point to cultivate the city editors of Fitchburg's papers.

Then he got 2,000 heralds from the Fox Film Corporation's exchange in Boston, and on the opening day of the engagement had the name "Cleopatra" flying all over the city. Besides these heralds, he got the following publicity aids from the Fox Boston office: Fifty one-sheets, twenty-five three-sheets, ten six-sheets, four twenty-four-sheets, one hundred window cards, a slide, one set of 8x10 photograpns, two sets 11x14 photos, two sets 22x28 photos and a number of striking framed paintings of Theda Bara and scenes in "Cleopatra."

Besides this he had a big two-horse wagon, covered with a huge display of "Cleopatra" paper, on the principal streets of the city for the entire week.

The result was that the production played to capacity every day for the whole week, and Mr. Lawton made the biggest clean-up in the history of his house.

$4,756,057 Is Amount of February Ticket Tax

ADMISSION taxes paid for the month of February amounted to $4,756,057.52, according to a report just made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, an increase of $1,047,754.47 over the collections of February, 1918, which amounted to $3,708,303.05. The collection of this sum brings the total admission taxes for the first eight months of the current fiscal year to $29,839,945.28.

Taxes collected on theatres, circuses, and other places of amusement during February amounted to $15,995.48, an increase of more than $5,000 over the $10,846.61 collected in February, 1918.

Other taxes collected during the month, which the motion picture industry helped to pay, were freight $8,638,833.21; express, $1,337,865.50; personal transportation, $4,968,423.31; seats, berths and similar accommodations, $323,550.16; telegraph and telephone messages, $1,367,862.05.

Total collections for the month were $129,164,716.79, and for the period from July 1, 1918, to February 28, 1919, $1,084,485,708.10.

Canton Consular Report Shows Pictures Popular

ACCORDING to the consular report of Albert W. Pontius, United State Counsul at Canton, China, the number of motion picture theatres in that city now totals over ten. The Southern Palace, seating 1,000 and equipped with chairs of the latest design, was recently opened at Wing Hon road, and is due to eclipse all other establishments in the city. It has a stage for professional or amateur dramatic performances.

The Sun Company, a big foreign goods department store, has reserved a section of its building for a photoplay house. The Kwongchow Cinematograph Show at Sup Pat Po, a popular street in the western suburb of Canton, is being reconstructed with the idea of increasing its capacity to over 1,000. There are also theatres in Fatshan and Kongmoon catering to Chinese patronage exclusively.

The prices of admission range from 60 cents local currency or 48 cents gold to 6 cents local currency or 4.8 cents gold. The average receipts are from $800 to $900 weekly in each theatre. A provincial tax of $150 monthly is levied on each house. The Canton theatres secure their films from three Hongkong firms, Pathe Phono-Cinema-China, Victoria Cinematograph and R. Basa, 8 Des Voeux road.

New Owners' Corporation Organized in Northwest

THE Theatre Owners Corporation perfected its organization at a meeting of twenty-five prominent moving picture theatre proprietors of the Northwest in Minneapolis. Assets of the members already enrolled are placed at $2,000,000 and it is announced that the new concern is out to buy some of the best film productions in the open market.

The following officers were elected: President, Thomas Furniss, Duluth; vice president, John McCarthy, of McCarthy Bros., operating a string of theatres at Fargo, Grand Forks, N. D., and Watertown, S. D.; secretary-treasurer, Williams Hays, Fairmont, Minn. Louis Coen, formerly in charge of the Minneapolis Universal branch, has been selected as general manager.

Membership in the company, according to Mr. Coen, will be limited to forty exhibitors of this territory. The first purchase of a film by this concern for distribution in the Northwest was "Mickey," the Mabel Normand production, which is now playing an indefinite run at the Minneapolis New Lyric.

The picture played to steadily growing crowds on the first three days of its run and indications are that it is going to be a big box office success at the Lyric.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Los Angeles Scribe Is Cast as One of a Pair of Fast Traveling Nuts, but Luke Gets There

By Giebler

SAWTELLE, the place where you change for the car line that passes the Brentwood Country Club, is 45 minutes and 65 cents round trip from Los Angeles.

I do not think that cigarettes are good for growing boys, but I am glad that Luke, a youth who lives in Sawtelle, smokes them. If Luke didn't have the tack habit I would not have been able to eat lunch with the Brentwood players, sympathize with Nancy Chase when a horse stepped on her foot, see Zasu Pitts act, or write this installment of Rubbernecking with the usual dash and spirit.

Here is how Luke busted into the plot.

Cars Haven't Enough Patience.

The Palisade car that connects with the beach lines at Sawtelle sticks around the junction with the utmost patience waiting for the beach car to bring it passengers, but no sooner does the foot of a passenger from the beach car strike the ground than the little car arranges to be gone. Its bell rings, its motor throbs, and its trolley pole pulsates with impatience.

It will not even wait long enough for a chap to listen to a lady giving the conductor of the beach car a piece of her mind for stopping his car where she has to light on a pile of dirt thrown up alongside of the track by some Mexican revolutionists who are working on the railroad between revolutions.

Finding an Unlost Jitney.

Another car would not be along for 30 minutes, and after it came along it would take another 30 minutes to get out to the Club. I must find quicker transportation or be everlastingly late. I would go up to the village and find a jitney.

But no jitneys were to be had. Every automobile with the exception of Luke's car had gone to the soldier parade back in the city. Luke was on the verge of going himself. He was also on the verge of lighting a cigarette.

Fast Cars for Fast Places.

The second devoted to the pernicious paper pipe habit saved the day. I burst upon the scene just in time. I talked to Luke with tears in my eyes and 50 cents in my palm. Luke wanted to go elsewhere, but he yielded.

"All right," he said, "if you don't mind riding kind o' fast."

Luke's car is what is known as a speedster, one of those cute little affairs with the seat about two inches from the floor, that allows you to sit with your chin on your knees nice and comfy or, if you don't care for scenery, to lie down on your back and look up at the sky.

I had thought to remonstrate with Luke about smoking cigarettes, to tell him how they stunted the mind and withered the imagination. But I didn't. Luke's imagination needs a little withering.

He was a wild and weird driver. I held converse with him only once during the trip. I saved up enough breath to scream the question: "Aren't you afraid we'll get pinched?"

And the Cops Would Have Been Right.

"No!" Luke roared back. "We're on the Ascot Speedway. The cop'll think we're a couple of nuts trying out a new racer."

We were a couple of nuts—I'll tell the world we were—but I'll say this much for Luke, he got me there on time.

I was out of the machine, into the Sun Room of the Country Club, had said "Hello" to King Vidor and apologized to S. P. Trood for being late, and was inserting a grateful spoonful of soup into my system within eight minutes after Luke had given his little car the gas back in Sawtelle.

I don't know how far we traveled, and I don't want to know. I'd be scared yet if I knew how fast that kid slipped that speedster over the road.

The little party was given to celebrate the shooting of the last scenes of the Brentwood players' new film, "Better Times," and it was a pleasant little party. There was food for the mind as well as provender for the system.

President Haynes Talks.

Mr. Trood made some pleasing remarks; King Vidor spoke of the upward trend in picture making. Lloyd Haynes, president of the company, talked of his belief in the story with a heart, a soul, and a message. He said that the story was relied upon to hold the audience and should receive the first consideration, and that the players should be cast purely on a basis of their fitness to depict the parts they were to portray, and that if a story required two or three, or even half a dozen stars, they should be put in the parts.

A. W. B. Hodges, one of the owners in the corporation, spoke of pictures that help, themes with practical suggestions that may be carried home and applied in the daily life of the people who see the stories worked out on the screen.

All of the company was there.

What's in a Name?

Zasu Pitts, who did not get her weird name because of her fondness for a popular brand of ginger snaps, as many suppose, but because two aunts had to be remembered at christening time, and the difficulty was solved by taking the last two letters from Aunt Eliza's name and the first two letters from Aunt Susan's name and giving them to the helpless child.

David Butler, who is playing the lead opposite Miss Pitts in the "Better Times" film; Jack MacDonald, who, as Ezra Scroggs, the heavy, has to drown himself in the lake; George Hackathorn, leading juvenile; Ola Cronk, Hugh Fay, Billy de Vaull, Aileen Manning and Nancy Chase, Willard Barrows, treasurer, and James W. Hum, secretary of the Brentwood corporation, were all there.

Visit Surgeon After Lunch.

King Vidor brought his wife, Florence Vidor, and his secretary, Sara Mason; and of course Billy Thornly, cameraman, and his assistant, Dick Morgan, and Technichian Kendall were on hand.

On the Left Six Little Maids from (Riding) School Have Just Stopped for Their Picture.
On the right the Brentwood bunch appears in a scene of much eat-mosphere around the w.k. banquet board.

After lunch we all went over to the magnificent residence of Dr. C. P. Thomas, one of the most prominent surgeons on the Pacific Coast, who had loaned his estate for location purposes because he and Hodges and Haynes happened to belong to the same golf club.

Scenes were shot here, in the house, on the lawn; and half a dozen extra girls, pupils of a riding academy, showed up on horseback, and more scenes were taken with Zasu Pitts trying to act as if she did not know how to ride and getting away with it to such an extent that she had to do some real riding to convince everybody that she did know how to do the most correct thing in the equestrienne line.

Big Doings at Great Western Studios.

Then Zasu and the girls posed under a big pepper tree and had their pictures taken for Rubbernecking.

It looked like a day, and I thought I was going straight home, but as I passed the Great Western Studios on Sunset Boulevard, I heard sounds of strife and went in.

I'm glad I did, too, because I've always wanted to see Henry McRae in action. I used to see Henry out at Universal City, where he was supervising director, but I never saw him actually handling a scene.

Mr. McRae is making a big 18-episode serial with Elmo Lincoln and Grace Cunard in the leads, and is directing the stuff in person.

William E. Wing wrote the serial, and he is helping to put it on, and to judge from the scene they made while I was there, it is going to be some serial. Billy Wing says they only got eight or nine punches in the first episodes, but they are going better now.

No More Punches After July 1.

They got a punch in the scene they made while I was there, and they almost made me take a dive into an empty tank carpeted with rich, juicy mud when they shot off some kind of gas that was supposed to put Elmo Lincoln and Grace Cunard out of business.

They had already gassed Elmo and Grace in a scene before I got there, and Elmo had knocked out the Chink that pressed the button to set off the stuff, but that wasn't enough. The Chinaman comes to life and gasses them some more.

It would seem that I have been sticking around studios long enough not to be surprised at anything, but I am still skittish, and when that stuff went off with an awful bang and terrible smoke, I took a couple of hasty steps and found myself on the edge of the tank.

Stood on Brink of the Punch-Maker.

I am so undecided about things at times. I knew I didn't want to fall in that tank, but there I stood wavering and ducking and making little bows to the mud till someone grabbed me by the coattail and pulled me back.

In addition to Mr. Lincoln and Miss Cunard, Frederick Starr, Ivar McFadden, Madge Hunt, Virginia Craft and Chai Hong, a real Celestial, have all got important parts in the serial.

Tommy Gubbins, the only American I ever saw who can speak Chinese, is used to act as interpreter for the large number of Chinamen that are in the action. The serial is not laid in China, however, but in this country, and deals with the lumber interests of the Northwest.

CORNELIUS WILL BE ON ACTIVE STAFF

Michigan Capitalist Will Give to Exhibitors Mutual Benefit of Experience as an Exhibitor

IT is announced by William J. Clark, president of Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation, that H. C. Cornelius, of Grand Rapids, vice president and secretary of the company, will take an active part in the management of Exhibitors Mutual.

Mr. Cornelius has been the active head of the Wolverine Brass Works at Grand Rapids and is heavily interested in other western Michigan industrial and financial concerns. He has been associated with Mr. Clark in the ownership of Consolidated Theatres, Inc., of Grand Rapids and was one of the group of Grand Rapids capitalists who purchased control of the Mutual Film Corporation last November and reorganized it as Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation.

The association of Mr. Cornelius with the active management of Exhibitors Mutual is a result of the rapid development of the company since the first of the year. Business has grown with such tremendous rapidity that Mr. Clark asked Mr. Cornelius to so arrange his business affairs in the West that he could devote most of his time to Exhibitors Mutual and make his headquarters in New York.

Like Mr. Clark, Mr. Cornelius is a practical exhibitor, the part owner in a string of eight theatres in Grand Rapids. He has been closely associated in the management of theatres and thoroughly familiar with the problems of the exhibitor.

Ontario Towns May Prohibit Picture Theatres Near Church

ONE of the amendments to the Theatres and Cinematographs' Act for the Province of Ontario provides that the council of a municipal corporation may pass a by-law prohibiting the erection of any theatre within 200 feet of a church or place of worship.

This change is a result of the argument which was offered against the erection of the Danforth Avenue Theatre, near Danforth and Broadview avenues, Toronto, by Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen. This theatre, which is not yet finished, is almost back to back with a church on the next street and the clergymen of the district protested against the location of the house on the selected site. There was nothing to prevent the use of the property for the purpose under existing laws.

Director Frank Lloyd Signs with Goldwyn

FRANK LLOYD, one of the oldest and at the same time one of the youngest directors in motion pictures, has signed a contract with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and will begin work soon on a new Rex Beach production for Goldwyn. By competent critics Floyd is considered a foremost dramatic director. His acquisition by Samuel Goldwyn is only another step in the policy which is being closely adhered to by Goldwyn executives to build up a producing organization second to none in motion pictures.

Exhibitors know this director best by the names of the pictures he has produced. He made his own adaptation of "Les Miserables" and "A Tale of Two Cities," bringing to bear upon them all the knowledge of life and art which his varied and productive career had brought to him. The Bastille, of which he could find no satisfactory picture extant, was recreated as a result of his own researches. Other pictures that stand after his name are "The Price of Silence," "American Methods," "When a Man Sees Red," "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail."

Seeks Aid of Hart for Loan.

Urgent requests from J. W. Rhine, chairman of the committee on speakers for the Philadelphia drive for the Victory Liberty Loan, April 21 to May 10, and from H. G. Christensen, secretary of the Forum Committee on the Chicago campaign for the issue, that Williams S. Hart, the Artcraft star, take part in the campaign in those cities, were regretfully declined by the actor because of work on his pictures and owing to the fact that he will do some special work on the loan in Los Angeles and San Francisco, in all probability.

Governor Indorses "Bolshevism on Trial."

Declaring that Select's "Bolshevism on Trial" is a very timely production and that he hopes it will be successful, Calvin Coolidge, Governor of Massachusetts, last week placed his stamp of approval on the picture.

In a letter to Charles R. Rogers, New England manager for Select, Governor Coolidge said: "I think the idea of the film, 'Bolshevism on Trial,' is very timely. We surely need to educate our people along the lines that your picture depicts. I hope it will be very successful."

Barach Back from War.

Nat Barach, manager of the Indianapolis branch of World Pictures previous to the entrance of America into the world war, has been honorably discharged from the army, after nine months' fighting in Europe, and within twenty-four hours after receiving his discharge was en route back to Indianapolis to resume his former position. Mr. Barach enlisted shortly after the United States declared war and, after a number of months in training camps in this country, was early last spring shipped across with a consignment of other Indiana soldiers.

COLLEGE REPUDIATES THE DIRECTOR

Mr. Dolan, of Ranger, Texas, Declares He Never Has Seen a Picturization of University Life That Was Not "Positively Disgusting"—World Man Coincides

By William J. Reilly

FROM the bleak, lonely, dollar-wearied oil fields of Texas emanated a wail last week. Across this our continent it ranged, crying like the voice of Lost Legions, until it settled down in our luxurious editorial suite like a traveler who has found the unfrequented bourne and throws himself upon its virgin soil with a vast sense of rest.

Yea, Brother Dolan, your cry will no longer range the wastes looking for a stone whereupon to lay its wearied head. We have hearkened to it and we take up the burden with all the zeal of the zealots and the patriarchs.

'Tis even so, Brother in the Bondage, the college man has been and is sadly abused by the moving picture. The directors to a man seem to have agreed to a common portrayal of the youth who haunts the campus of American college and university for four years or more—or less. When the script calls for a college picture the director orders the "art" man to get a batch of red ties, purple socks, beribboned dumbbells, and for the part of the college man gets his casting "artist" to look up a character actor man whose soul is past rebelling against the idea of a turned up hat and ditto trousers.

Mr. Dolan Appeals to M. P. World.

John R. Dolan, of Ranger, Texas, dear reader, spent five years within the classic walls and upon the beautiful campus of a big Eastern university. Never in his life has he seen a picturization of college life that was anything but ridiculous and "positively disgusting." Neither could his college friends ransack their memories and bring forth a recollection of a picture that did justice to the sons of Alma Mater.

The indignity, injustice, and horror of it all palled upon Mr. Dolan, until within his very spirit there fomented the cry that wailed last week to the most fitting source of correction, the M. P. World. Being the most recent addition to the staff as the representative of the college man, the writer was intrusted with the task of sending Mr. Dolan's cry unto the many corners of the trade.

"When," asks Mr. Dolan, "are we going to be able to witness a picture of the college variety without having our sense of the true conditions shoved into the background and in their place substituted a mis-conception that can be nothing but an aggravation to any one who has spent so short a time as a month in one of our country's realms of learning?"

Few Bold Strokes Not Enough.

That's a question we cheerfully pass on to the director. The trouble with the directing species is that it has fallen into the error so often committed by temporary college life, namely, that of thinking it can be done with a few bold strokes. That's what our friend, Robert C. Brooks, expert on Swiss government, and professor of Political Science at Swarthmore College, once said. And Prof. Brooks, whose initials were made by the students into "Relentless Commotion," ought to know, for he was chairman of the Absence Committee which never did believe in the maxim that "absence makes the heart grow fonder." The stude who because of "cuts" went to the well-known carpet with the Absence Committee usually specified to a loving fraternity brother his favorite brand of gardenia before entering the dread chamber.

So Doc Brooks must be right. The director thinks the portrayal of the college man may be done by a few bold strokes. He takes his palette of colors, daubs a vermillion sock here, a purple tie there, a saffron hat there again, and lo! the thing is done: the college man stands there as he is not—triumphantly aglow.

Enter Football and Baby Ribbons.

Well, that in itself would not be so bad. But that arch-enemy of the sheepskin, the director, does not stop there. He brings the hero into his room—but we will let Mr. Dolan take up the tale here. "What a revelation," articulates Mr. Dolan, "this scene always is to anyone who has ever even paid a visit to a college! The room is invariably decorated with an assortment of gymnastic paraphernalia held in place by the daintiest of little ribbons. After mooning at some feminine photograph for some time the hero dashes off to play football. Do massive football stars and baby ribbons harmonize psychologically?"

No, Mr. Dolan, even the writer whose faculty loved him only well enough to keep him four years with his head bowed to the classic grindstone—even the writer can say there's no harmony there.

Emerges Mudless from Scrimmages.

But that isn't the worst crime the director has committed. He has, to the writer's knowledge, brought a star through a grueling football game without even a hair disturbed, without a bit of mud or dust on his jersey, without the sign of a scratch or bruise on his face. A picture filmed on the campus of the University of Virginia did that. If Virginia only knew!

Well, we'll meet all these directors later on, Mr. Dolan—below deck—"where it's always double drill and no canteen." They'll be wearing ties before which all the Bolsheviki in Hades will be cringing in unadulterated horror. And the color of the socks they wear will be so audible as to put din in the ears of those talking-in-the-movie pets whom a kind hearer will have rendered deaf as punishment. And the directors and stars who mangled the glorious game of football while on earth will be tackling a red hot, cast-iron tackling dummy under the "personal supervision" of real directors, college men who hit the line for Alma Mater in their undergraduate days.

Vengeance Awaits the Director.

And suppose the needed reform doesn't materialize in due time? Suppose Mr. Director continues to paint his pet with vermillion and saffron? What if trousers still go up to the knees, and hats still turn up in front, and pennants flock from all quarters of the property rooms to the "college" sets? What if the crew men——

Well, Mr. Director, your blood be upon your head. It wouldn't surprise us if the thousands of college men, alumni and undergraduates banded together in a classic Kollege Klu Klux Klan, and harassed your tribe until you gave an intelligent portrayal of their kind. All the sophomore avenging societies, all the massively membered eating clubs, all the secret societies would amalgamate and form a common Revenge Ritual made from their own choicest bits that would make you, Mr. Director, sit up nights and lose flesh by the inch.

And on the other hand, just suppose you gave as much study to a college picture as you did to getting the detail of Egyptian costumes of the second century B. C. It'd surprise you, how sick you'd turn thereafter at the sight of baby ribbon. Maybe you'd find a wealth of idea for stories. And if you want to see—and hear—a college man emote, don't give him a female photograph to moon over, but just go to Swarthmore and ask a Monk what his opinion of the Devil is. It'd really surprise you—and the professor of Dead and Living Languages as well.

Undergraduate Not Easily Portrayed.

Mr. Director, we refer you again to our friend Doc Brooks. Doc says, "For my own part, after teaching for twenty year, it seems extremely difficult to characterize the undergraduate world. Experience has taught me that the students are the most variegated and inconsistent, as well as the most lovable species under the sun. They reflect all the virtues, somewhat magnified, and all the vices, somewhat diminished, of the American life of which they are a part."

The director does well when he "shoots" a scene in the quadrangle, showing the "boys" tinkling their banjos and mandolins. But he rarely waits for the succeeding acts. If he did, he would see a window on the quad go up, a head appear, and he would hear the proprietor of a senior-fraternity-brother voice bellow, "Hey, you Travis! come up out of that. People'd think you passed physics at mid-years." And if he'd waited a while longer, he would have seen some of the same lads bury little Travis under the poppies of Flanders.

"Old Ponce de Leon sought in vain the fountain of eternal youth. Many a college professor has found it in close contact and co-operation with an American student body." If Prof. Brooks could find it, Mr. Director, don't you think there's a chance for some young, new ideas on your part?

MOROSCO WINS "PEG O' MY HEART" SUIT

Judge Mayer Decides Producer of a Play Gets Film Rights Unless Contract Reserves Them

THE decision of Judge Julius M. Mayer, holding that in the absence of a specific reservation in a contract between a playwright and a producer with respect to title to the motion picture rights of a play the film rights pass to the producer, has been sustained by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

This important question was raised in a suit instituted by J. Hartley Manners, author of the play entitled "Peg o' My Heart," against Oliver Morosco in which the playwright sought to enjoin the producer from exercising further ownership of the producing rights, including the film rights to the production, which are expected to prove very valuable.

Manners contended that he had merely granted a license to the producer to present the play on the legitimate stage for a limited period of five years; that this license did not include the motion picture rights, and that the license was revocable under certain conditions.

Producer Gets Absolute Title.

"A motion picture performance is a stage representation of the play and violative of the rights of an owner of the exclusive right of production," declared Judge Manton, who wrote the prevailing opinion which was concurred in by Judge Hough, which holds that absolute title to the production passed to the producer and that no revocation exists.

"It seems inconceivable that the parties intended to reserve to the appellant (Manners) the right of production in motion picture form when they gave no such expression of reservation in the language of the contract, and particularly when the language employed indicated a comprehensive grant of all producing rights," continued Judge Manton.

However, the decision may not definitely establish the law on the question, as Judge Ward wrote a dissenting opinion and unless the case is carried to the Supreme Court of the United States for a final determination of the issues, the law will not be well settled on the question.

A Dissenting Opinion.

"The grant in the contract under consideration is of an exclusive right 'to produce and represent' a play," declared Judge Ward. "There has been no judicial construction of any of these words so as to make them technical without reference to the terms of some particular contract."

Hodkinson Organization Freshening Up Man-Power

AS a preliminary to a most vigorous sales campaign and policy of regional exploitation for the benefit of exhibitors, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, through its sales department, has effected changes or reorganizations in a number of its regional representations within the past two weeks.

Announcement is made of the appointment of the following Hodkinson representatives, all of the men named being ready and installed to work in close co-operation with the exhibitors of their territories:

Atlanta, E. L. Byers. Mr. Byers is well known throughout South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, which states comprise his territory; Albany, H. R. Wimsatt; Buffalo, H. LaMott LeVay; Boston, W. H. Dunbar; Detroit, D. Leo Dennison; Indianapolis, J. C. Mack; Salt Lake City, D. E. Schayer; Washington, Rudolph Berger. Mr. Berger succeeds E. C. Stembler and the Washington office is divorced from the jurisdiction of Philadelphia.

The Hodkinson offices in Philadelphia are manned by Charles E. Henschel; Pittsburgh, by C. E. Moore; Chicago, by E. C. Fielder, assisted by E. S. Rowley. Mr. Fielder also has jurisdiction over Cleveland, with D. W. Phillips as assistant. Kansas City is handled by P. C. Wreath, who previously has had jurisdiction over St Louis. This latter office is now placed upon an independent footing.

Army and Navy Quartet Returns to Metro Staff

FOUR different branches of the service were represented in the last four of Metro's boys to return to the office, including light field artillery, infantry, naval aviation and the regular navy.

The occasion of the discharge of the last man was fittingly observed by a novel dinner which was tendered to the boys by the Metro officials at Healy's, Broadway and 66th Street, New York.

One of the four boys was fortunate to get overseas. He is Private Herbert Kaufman, who went across with the 52d Pioneer Infantry. He says he saw enough of La Belle France between August 1, 1918, and February 1, 1919, to last him a lifetime.

The other fellow in olive drab was Corporal William Theall, of the 307th Field Artillery, organized at Camp Dix. Theall is a very much disappointed young man for having been kept on this side of the pond during "the period of the emergency."

John Joseph Bowen enlisted in the navy in May at Pelham Bay. After two months of training he was transferred to the marine basin, where he volunteered his services as a diver until he received a Valentine in the shape of a release on February 14.

The fourth member is Robert Ellsworth, who enlisted as second-class seaman at Pelham Bay, was transferred to naval aviation branch at L. C. M., at Charleston, S. C., and discharged December 9, 1918.

Metro's Army-Navy Quartet.

Hodkinson's Open Booking Meets Immediate Favor

THERE have been two immediately recognizable results of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation's policy of wide open booking, which not only permits but prefers to sell all of its productions singly on the basis of their individual merits.

First, exhibitors large and small have welcomed this decision with the larger exhibitors of the country for the first new production released through the Hodkinson mechanism, the Artco-Harry Raver-Augustus Thomas production, "As a Man Thinks," starring Leah Baird and directed by George Irving.

In closing for a booking of his solid Washington, D. C., chain of theatres, Harry M. Crandall, the big Washington exhibitor said: "If you were offering me 'As a Man Thinks' as a part of a series of pictures, I would find it difficult and perhaps impossible to play this big production, not because I do not want it, but because my previous and existing contracts would not permit my taking on at this period of the year a volume of additional pictures. I do not mean by this that I am committing myself to a full-fledged approval of wide open bookings, for there are many conditions within the trade that must be adjusted before I would wish to wholly approve the system."

Talbot's America Theatre, Denver, on the heels of a liberal advertising campaign, leads off in the Denver territory with the heaviest exploitation on "As a Man Thinks" that its proprietor has given any picture in the past six months, and at the same time Talbot gives an unequivocal endorsement of the policy of an open booking that permits him to take big productions singly.

Germans Mutilated "Berlin" Film.

Representatives of the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., in Chile, have instituted suit against a number of Germans in Valparaiso for damage done to a print of "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin." When the production was being shown at Santiago recently a messenger who was carrying the film to a theatre from the exchange was attacked by a number of German sympathizers, considerably bruised by rough handling and the film which he was carrying mutilated. One reel of the photoplay was stolen and the remaining reels cut in many places.

KARZAS BACK FROM OBSERVATION TRIP

Woodlawn Theatre's Managing Director to Increase Seating Capacity to 5,000—Gleaned Ideas in East

ANDREW KARZAS, managing director of the Woodlawn Theatre Company, and Henry L. Newhouse, Chicago's leading architect in the building of moving picture theatres, returned to Chicago recently after a trip of two weeks, during which Pittsburgh, Washington, New York and Boston were visited. As was announced some time ago in these columns, the trip was undertaken for the purpose of ascertaining by personal observation and investigation just what advancement had been made in the building of modern picture houses and in the presentation of pictures.

In Pittsburgh it was found that the Grand, owned by Harry Davis, America's pioneer exhibitor, is a big, modern house with a seating capacity of 2,500. It was built by Architect Crance, of Detroit, and is largely patronized. An orchestra of fifteen pieces plays the musical accompaniment.

Joe Skirboll, some years ago special representative of Metro in the Middle West, and now Pittsburgh manager for First National, who has known Mr. Karzas for some time, took the visitors under his care and conducted them through the city, visiting the various houses on the Clarke & Roland circuit. All these theatres were doing fine business at good admission prices.

Good Entrance in Washington's Palace.

After a day in Pittsburgh, the visitors departed for Washington, D. C. There they visited the Loew's Palace and Alhambra, seating, respectively, 2,700 and 00. Mr. Karzas describes the Palace s "a beautiful, magnificent house, modrn in every particular." What impressed Mr. Newhouse and him most vas the lobby which leads to both the alcony and the main floor. Arriving t a certain point in this lobby the isitor has the choice of walking up even steps to reach the balcony, or valking down about eight to reach the nain floor. The psychologic effect produced on the mind of the patron is to go up to the balcony rather than down o the main floor, which naturally leads o the filling of both the main floor and he balcony.

Every theatre owner knows that patrons of picture theatres usually prefer to wait for the succeeding show rather than go up to the balcony in ordinarily conducted houses unless there s considerable difference in the price of seats.

The Palace has a magnificent orchestra of twenty-five pieces, and Mr. Karzas praises the beautiful light effects employed during the presentation. He pronounces it a thoroughly well-managed house, with admissions of 25 and 75 cents.

The Metropolitan, the Regent and Moore's Rialto were also visited in Washington. These houses seat, respectively, 2,000, 1,500 and 2,000. As at the Palace, these houses are showing weekly run programs, finely selected, to capacity, at 25 and 35 cents. The Palace, Metropolitan, Regent and Rialto are all modern houses erected within the past two years.

New York Theatres Visited.

In New York all the modern picture theatres were visited and Marcus Loew was kind enough to conduct the visitors in his auto to the Victoria, on 125th street, and to the Metropolitan, in Brooklyn, two of the theatres on his big circuit. Karzas and Newhouse are of the opinion—and they declare it enthusiastically—that the Metropolitan is the largest and most modern picture theatre in the East, or anywhere east of the Rockies. They intend to visit San Francisco and Los Angeles soon, so must hold the West out of consideration until they see the latest modern picture theatres there. Loew's Metropolitan seats 4,000 people.

Of course, while in New York, the visitors went to the Rialto, the Strand and the Rivoli, as all Chicagoans do when in the metropolis. They also paid a visit to the Capitol, at 51st Street and Broadway, which is now under construction and will be completed some time in June. This house will seat 4,500 people.

Business Booming in Boston.

In Boston the visitors found business prosperous, but that the theatres are not so modern as those of New York or Washington, either in point of construction or in the manner of presenting pictures.

In the matter of moving picture presentation, after recounting the experiences of his trip, Mr. Karzas is of the belief that Messrs. Balaban & Katz, at the Riviera, Chicago, are presenting pictures equally as well as any of the best houses in the East, not excluding New York.

Mr. Karzas expresses the belief, owing to what he has seen during his trip, that the day has passed for a one-day or two-day run for pictures. All the big houses in the East are running weekly programs, at advanced prices, as high as 35 and 50 cents, while on Broadway, New York, the price runs as high as $1.

The reader can estimate for himself what an overhead saving there will be, both for the producer and the exhibitor, when weekly runs or longer, for programs, are the established rule in all important picture houses in the country.

Woodlawn Soon to Seat 5,000.

Mr. Karzas tells me that by making the Eastern trip he has discovered it is possible for him to increase the seating capacity of the Woodlawn Theatre from 2,000 to 5,000. And this he intends to do as soon as Architect Newhouse completes the plans. It is part of the new plans to build a balcony that will seat 1,700 people; also to enlarge the main floor so that it will seat 3,300 people, intead of 2,000. A new stage will also be included in the plans.

The plans will provide that the balcony be approached without using steps. This will be done by building an inclined way from the entrance to the balcony itself. This is a distance of 150 feet, so that the incline will have a raise of about one foot in ten feet and can be comfortably traversed by old and young.

The enlargement of the Woodlawn, it is estimated, will cost about $600,000. Before making a final decision on the new plans, Mr. Karzas and Mr. Newhouse will visit San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The Increased Federal Seating Tax.

The Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance notified its members about three weeks ago that the increased Federal seating capacity tax has been in force since January 1, this year. Prior to that date the tax was as follows: $50 per year for picture theatres with a seating capacity up to 500; $75 for theatres with 500 to 800 seats, and $100 for those with over 800. The tax was made payable July 1 of each year since it was put in effect.

The increased Federal seating tax, which is just double the former tax, must be paid for the six months beginning January 1, 1919, and on July 1, 1919, it must be paid in advance for the year ending June 30, 1920.

Last week the Allied Amusement Association also sent out written notices to its members to the same effect.

Pathe Exchange Director Talks of New Sales Plan

F. C. QUIMBY, director of Pathe exchanges, came into the city from New York Monday, April 14, and after a few hours' stop left for Kansas City, Mo., and St. Louis, returning to Chicago the following Wednesday and remaining until Sunday, when he returned to New York, accompanied by Al. Roche, owner and producer of the Lloyd comedies.

When seen here he first referred to the excellent business conditions at the Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago offices, which he said have never been so prosperous as now, the volume of business in each being about twice that of a year ago.

Mr. Quimby explained that the object of his trip was to assist in introducing the new feature sales plan for the handling of the Capellani productions and the new specials in which Frank Keenan is featured. An exclusive sales organization has been formed which will devote its entire activities to the exploitation of the new Pathe features under the direction of Tom North, who is feature sales manager.

New Feature Sales Organization.

Under the new plan, which took effect April 1, the regular Pathe sales organization will have charge of all Pathe releases, such as Pathe News serials, comedies, etc., while the new feature sales organization will attend exclusively to the new Pathe features. This arrangement was necessary owing to the largely increased volume of business within the past year, which made it impossible for the regular sales force to give it the necessary attention and at the same time to render efficient cooperation and aid to exhibitors.

In addition, Mr. Quimby stated that Pathe took over last week the releasing of "Topics of the Day," compiled by Literary Digest, and that the films will be handled by the regular office forces.

Continuing, he let me know that one of the biggest problems which Pathe has been working on for some time past is connected with distribution, and he is confident that plans have been made which will benefit and satisfy exhibitors, and also solve several recent problems which have come up.

Tendency to Run Big Features.

Mr. Quimby next drew attention to the fact that there is among exhibitors at the present time a growing tendency to run big features as long as they continue to draw paying business. He said that in the immediate past many big productions have been closed after a week's run, while the business was still large and all indications pointed to successful business for two more weeks. He believes that untold money has been wasted in this way, because exhibitors have failed to continue the run of certain pictures to their full drawing strength.

He cited as an example the case of "Common Clay," which played to fine business for three weeks at Gordon's Olympia in Boston. Mr. Gordon realized the possibilities of long runs for features which will stand the test. His receipts, in this instance, for the third week, compared very favorably with those for the first and second weeks. Mr. Quimby holds that, in a large city, the people have not the opportunity to see the big features in one week's time.

At the close of our conversation, Mr. Quimby again reverted to Pathe's distribution plan by saying: "There is no question that the exhibitor will profit by the new plans for distribution. These plans stand for economy all the way through and the exhibitor will be a partner in the economical benefits that will be obtained.

Echoes from the American Studios.

"Murdering Midnight" is the title of the new Wm. Russell subject that will succeed "Some Liar." The original title was "The Signet of Sheba," by Stephen Fox, who has written most of the Russell photoplays. R. R. Nehls, American's general manager, has been devoting close attention to the editing of this feature to its proper length, as it has a little overfootage and yet every foot seems to be essential.

State of Illinois Roused by Buck Censor Bill

THE Illinois censorship bill, which has passed the Senate and is now up in the House for action, is arousing widespread interest throughout the state among the people who find in moving pictures their chief relaxation from labor, both of brain and hand. The press of the state is voicing the views of the great multitude of people whose lives have been brightened and benefited by moving pictures. One of the strongest editorials yet published in any Illinois paper appeared in a recent issue of the Rockford Republic, and it is given here in full so that it may be read by exhibitors in all parts of the country:

The state movie censorship bill has passed the Senate. It is up to the house at Springfield for action. The Senate has done its duty, as it often does, by passing the buck to the larger and more patient house of representatives. The Assemblymen may be so numerically strong that they will have the courage to do with the bill what the Senate should have had the courage to do—kill it.

Movies a Clean Art

There is no vital or lasting need for movie censorship. Of all the arts, the cinema art is making the most rapid progress, outgrowing youthful excesses and exuberances in a surprisingly few years, coming to manhood's estate, on the whole a clean art, sure to become more so as people's taste demands it. We have seen repeatedly the product of the censorship's fallibility in Pennsylvania and Ohio and we come away from the experience with no desire to see the farce repeated in Illinois.

It is simply too much power to put into the hands of one man, or a commission of men, the telling Illinois with its millions of people just what it may see and what it may not see in the movie realm. Movies are near kin to newspapers. Already they are being used for propaganda, for education, for calls to patriotic service. Th are performing some of the functions to a few years ago the sole prerogati of the newspaper.

Censorship Holds Dangerous Possibiliti

What an opportunity, under censorsh for the shaping by factionalism of t message of the picture houses! What chance for the politician to get a gr upon a great, potent new art, for his ov unholy purpose! As we now see censo ship, if we were a politician we wou favor the proposed movie censorship b with enthusiasm. And if we were t great film producers, if the Illinois b passed, we would just say good-bye the state.

Censorship suggests to the Americ everything that connects itself with t tyrannies and oppressions of the o world. Where there is a free press the is freedom. If once Illinois puts the fil art under censorship, a very dangero step will have been taken towards impo ing a censorship upon the newspaper. T obvious procedure would be to begin the cartoons, the comics, the features the newspapers. And honest advocat of movie censorship will tell you that t next step may be to correct what th think are the excesses and abuses newspaper art.

Censorship Has Vicious Tendency

Censorship has a vicious tendenc When it starts to run the bases, it do not stop short of the home plate, unle the outraged bleachers rush down a throw the whole team out of the diamon

Censorship is greedy. It represents t presumption of legislation that it is go for the world to be kept in swaddlin clothes, that it's a dangerous thing grow up, to play, to work, to fall in lov to marry and to have children.

Make it as plausible as you will, censo ship is a denial of maturity, a hatred reality, a side-stepping of experience, curse that no self-respecting state whi is not bound by tradition and prude should accept in any form, for even a da except under the necessities of a gre war such as has just come to an end.

Universal and Jewel Notes.

Sidney Goldman has resumed the pos tion of general manager of Jewel pro ductions for Illinois and Indiana, wit headquarters, as formerly, in the Con sumers Building, with Universal. As sociated with Mr. Goldman are Cha Miller and Phil Dunis.

A. E. Rosenberg, formerly sales re resentative of Universal in Chicago, ha been given charge of Universal roa salesmen out of this city.

Bank Winter, old-time minstrel an author of the well known songs "Whit Wings" and "I'll Be True," as well as o many other popular songs of thirt years ago, has been appointed manage of the road show of "The Heart of Hu manity," out of Milwaukee. His daugh ter, Winona Winter, is the well-know musical comedy star of that name, an his daughter-in-law, Hattsteadt Winter is a popular concert singer.

Resumes Management of E. A. R

Balboa Studios Sold.

C. M. Furey, formerly of Portland, Oregon, and Williams S. Forsythe, of New York, have purchased on behalf of the Master Pictures Corporation, the real estate, studios and all other property formerly owned by the Balboa Film Company at Sixth street and Alamitos avenue, Long Beach. One hundred and ten thousand dollars was the sum involved in the transaction.

F. C. Delano of Los Angeles, representing the creditors of the Balboa Company, made the sale. H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer, brothers, comprised the Balboa corporation, which went bankrupt several months ago. Furey and Forsythe announced that they will organize a company and begin the production of pictures within two months.

Francis Ford Building a Studio.

Francis Ford, film producer and star, is building a studio at Sunset Avenue and Gower Street in Hollywood, where he intends to be making pictures by the first of May. An informal dance is being planned as a sort of house warming to open the studio for business.

Employment Fees Abridged.

The Motion Picture Producers' Service Exchange of Los Angeles, will not be allowed hereafter to charge a fee to any applicant sent out on motion picture work unless the employment furnished lasts seven days or more, according to a ruling received by H. A. Cable, deputy state labor commissioner of the Southern district, from the labor commissioner at San Francisco.

Cleo Madison Organizes Company.

Cleo Madison, who arrived on the west coast from New York a few days ago, has organized her own company to produce pictures, has secured studio space, and preparations are already under way to make a picture entitled "The Red Serpent." Juan de la Cruze will be seen in the leading male role, and the rest of the cast will be announced within a few days.

Miss Madison was for several years one of the leading stars of the Universal program, and shortly after leaving Universal was to have appeared in film productions under the management of Isadore Bernstein, but for some reason these plans were not carried out. It is nearly two years now since Miss Madison has appeared in a picture.

Gordon-Francis.

Robert Gordon and Alma Francis were married on March 25, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Francis, in Hollywood. Robert Gordon, who played the part of Huck Finn with Jack Pickford in the Tom Sawyer pictures and one of the leading roles in "Missing," enlisted in the army just after that production was finished, and has recently been discharged from service. He has signed a long term contract with J. Stuart Blackton, and will leave in a few days with his bride for New York to work in the Blackton studios in the east.

Mrs. Gordon will retain her professional name, Alma Francis, and upon her arrival in New York immediately will begin rehearsals in one of Adolph Friml's new musical comedies. Miss Francis played opposite Julian Eltinge in the film production that was made under the Balshofer management here last summer.

To Establish Air Line.

Sidney Chaplin, motion picture and airplane promoter, has closed a deal with William Wrigley, Jr., for an exclusive ten year franchise for a commercial airplane and seaplane landing on Catalina Island, thereby laying the foundation for what will probably be the first commercial air line in the world. Mr. Chaplin intends to go soon to New York to purchase airplanes and seaplanes equipped with Liberty motors, of five and ten passenger capacity. He will establish a school to train flyers on Catalina Island, for which purpose machines of lighter type will be used.

Mack Off For New York.

Willard Mack, playwright and husband of Pauline Frederick, who has been ill for several weeks, left last week for New York, where he will immediately begin rehearsals for a new play under the management of A. H. Woods. Miss Frederick will remain in California to make several productions for Goldwyn. In the event of her return to the stage in the fall, Miss Frederick will continue to produce pictures under her Goldwyn contract at the eastern studios of that company.

Lehrman Acquitted.

Henry Lehrman, former producer of Sunshine comedies, who was accused of having caused the disappearance of a film worth $32,000 from the vault of the Fox Film Company some time ago, was acquitted and the case dismissed by Judge Craig when it came up for trial.

New Theatre at Monrovia.

A motion picture theatre which has just been completed at Monrovia, Cal., has been opened for business. The house has a seating capacity of 500, a fire-proof projecting room and one of the most modern makes of projecting machines. The theatre has triple lighting circuit with rheostat for dimming and other electrical effects, and a modern ventilating system.

Warde Addresses M. P. D. A.

Frederick Warde, star of the Mission Play at San Gabriel, made an address

H. B. Warner in "The Man Who Turned White" Isn't Afraid of the Dyeing Process.
Nor Is He Afraid to Die, as the Scene at the Right from His Exhibitors-Mutual Feature Shows.

before the members of the Motion Picture Directors Association at the Hotel Alexandria one evening recently.

New Manager For Victory.

Harry P. Caulfield, formerly connected with the management of the Garrick Theatre, became manager of the Victory Theatre on April 13.

Three Keenan Subjects Completed.

Frank Keenan has completed the third of a series of eight feature productions for Pathe at the Brunton studios. The three productions are: "The Master Man," with a political theme; "The Gates of Brass," in which Mr. Keenan depicts a gambler and promoter; and "The Tide Book," a tale of the shipping industry. Jack Cunningham prepared the scenarios for these productions, and Ernest C. Warde directed.

Ruth Allen Has Returned.

Ruth S. Allen, head of the manuscript sales department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, has returned from a month's stay in New York, where she went to close negotiations with a number of authors and photo-playwrights for stories.

New B. B. Feature.

Studio Shots

LILA LEE has returned from Truckee, where scenes were made for "The Daughter of the Wolf," a Paramount picture. Monte Blue, who was to have been her leading man, was taken with pneumonia just before the company left, and Elliott Dexter was given the part.

Dorothy Dalton has just left for New York City, where she will work in pictures demanding eastern settings.

Lois Wilson will be leading woman for Dustin Farnum in his coming production.

The all-star cast supporting Dorothy Phillips in "The Right to Happiness" includes Thurston Hall, Stanhope Wheatcroft, William Stowell, Robert Andersen, Margaret Mann, Hector Sarno, Alma Bennett and Henry Barrows.

Katherine MacDonald has finished her first production, "The Thunderbolt" and will soon begin her second, "The Bleeders," from a story by Margery Land May, under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Margarita Fisher, star of American productions, has filed a suit for divorce from her husband, Harry Pollard.

Al Jennings, motion picture star and producer, has been requested by a large publishing company to write the history of his life for publication.

Frank Lloyd has been engaged as director of Goldwyn pictures by Samuel Goldwyn.

Charlie Chaplin celebrated his thirtieth birthday on April 16.

Because of continued unsettled conditions in Europe Billy Parsons and his wife, Billie Rhodes, have not been able to secure passports. They will go to Honolulu instead, and make several films in that part of the country.

Mabel Normand, who has been ill for the past week, is recovering and will soon be back at work at Goldwyn.

Charles Ray and his company are in San Francisco.

Work has been begun on the third large stage to be built at the Ince studio in Culver City. The new stage will be used exclusively for sets demanding artificial lighting.

"Rowdy Ann" is the title of the second Christie Special comedy featuring Fay Tincher. Katherine Lewis, Eddie Barry, Harry Depp and Patricia Palmer play leading parts.

Harry Carey returned to Los Angeles on April 15th for a short stopover, before resuming his personal appearance tour along the west coast.

Jack MacDonald, who has finished his work in the Brentwood production, "Better Times," will support Jack Pickford in a new picture.

Sessue Hayakawa has begun the filming of a picture, "Only a Nigger," an East Indian romance, without a leading woman. He is making the scenes in which the heroine does not appear while looking for a film actress who possesses the talent and beauty necessary for the part.

Jane and Katherine Lee, and their mother, Mrs. Irene Lee, have gone back to New York.

Lillian Gish has made a trip to San Francisco to participate in the opening of the Victory Loan campaign. At the close of the ceremony two thousand pigeons, collected from all parts of the Twelfth Federal Reserve District, were released from a monster cage by Miss Gish.

Almost the entire movie population of Los Angeles attended the first showing of Harry I. Garson's production, "The Unpardonable Sin," at the Kinema Theatre.

Alice Joyce has arrived in town and departed before the end of the week in company with her little daughter, Alice Mary Moore, who has been visiting her father, Tom Moore. Miss Joyce will continue her motion picture work in Vitagraph's eastern studios.

Wallace Irwin's new story, "The Blooming Angel," has been purchased as a starring vehicle for Charles Ray.

Tom Mix and his company have returned from San Francisco, where they went in search of exteriors for "The Romance of Cow Hollow."

Elbert Hubbard was a visitor at Universal City last week, and watched Jim Corbett work out a scene in "The Midnight Man."

Mme. Alla Nazimova left for New York on April 15 in company with her husband, Charles Bryant, and Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro, to attend to business connected with future productions for the Metro program.

Frank Keenan celebrated his birthday April 8. Apart from admitting that he was past thirty, Keenan emulated the women film stars by keeping to himself the number of birthdays that have passed since his thirtieth.

John Gilbert is working in a Sessue Hayakawa picture under way at Brunton.

Marguerite Clark arrived in Los Angeles last week in company with her husband, Lieut. H. Palmerson Williams. Miss Clark will make several pictures requiring western setting during the coming months at the Lasky plant.

The Aerial Circus to be held in Los Angeles in connection with the Victory Loan campaign will be quartered at the private field belonging to Cecil B. De Mille in Hollywood. Mr. De Mille, who is an aviator himself, readily granted the use of his field.

Frank Keenan entertained a party of forty at the Brunton studios on the evening of April 10 with a private showing of "The Gates of Brass," his latest film to be finished for the Pathe program.

Dorothy Gish, who has completed her contract with Paramount, leaves for New York in a few days.

Prosperity is on the rise in Filmland. Texas Guinan, Marie Walcamp, Wallace Reid, George Melford, Norman Manning and Little Virginia Lee Corbin have all purchased new cars within the past few weeks.

Mary Anderson is working in a picture for the Morgan Feature Film Company at the Horsley studios under the direction of Fred Kelsey.

James J. Corbett umpired the first baseball game of the season at Washington Park, which was opened by William G. McAdoo, who pitched the first ball, and Douglas Fairbanks, who caught it.

William Morris, manager of the Harry Lauder American tour, was entertained by his old friends, Charlie Chaplin and Alf Reeves, at the Chaplin studio while he was in Los Angeles last week.

Clara Kimball Young paid $250 in settlement of a claim for injuries to the seventeen-year-old boy who was hurt by her automobile several weeks ago. Miss Young was not in her machine when the accident occurred.

Fritzi Brunette Sustains Bruises in Studio Accident

MITCHELL LEWIS' weight, combined with his strength, and a pair of weak hinges on the door of a studio backwoods cabin, were the cause of an accident last week which resulted in a temporary postponement of work on Mr. Lewis' Select picture, "The Gulf Between."

The accident, which involved Fritzi Brunette, Mr. Lewis' leading woman, occurred during the filming of a studio scene. A big situation in the production is a thirty-mile chase with a dog team which ends in a lonely cabin where Mr. Lewis, as Jacques, rescues a girl from two tough characters.

The cabin in the studio was built for strength, but it had one weak spot, the hinges on the door. The girl and the two characters were supposed to be in the cabin waiting for the rescue. At the proper moment Lewis rushed up to the cabin door and flung his entire weight against it. It withheld the first shock. The second time Mr. Lewis lunged against the door with greater force. The hinges snapped and the door fell in, pinning Miss Brunette to the floor and knocking her unconscious.

She was considerably bruised, and for a time it was feared that she had suffered internal injuries, but later reports stated there were no serious consequences.

Cubberley Succeeds Pearson at First National Exchange

E. R. PEARSON has resigned as manager of the Minneapolis First National exchange, and Fred Cubberley, manager of the Minneapolis branch of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the last two months, has been appointed his successor.

Mr. Pearson has been with the Minneapolis First National exchange since it was established. He was one of the best known and most popular exchange managers in the Northwest. Mr. Cubberley was for more than two years assistant manager of the Minneapolis Paramount Artcraft office under C. L. Peavey, who has been transferred to Chicago.

J. W. Allen, special representative of the Famous Players Lasky Corporation, has arrived in Minneapolis and will be in charge of the local office until a successor to Mr. Cubberley has been chosen.

PICTURE BUSINESS GOOD IN DIXIE

Nat Bregstein, Moving Picture World Commissioner, Continues His Travels in the Southland, Discovering Prosperity in Birmingham, Mobile and New Orleans

WE CONTINUE the reports Nat Bregstein has rendered on conditions and picture activities in the South. In recent issues we have published his statements on territory leading from Richmond to Atlanta and in this installment are recorded his findings in Birmingham, Mobile and New Orleans.

During his travels Bregstein's chief purpose has been to extend the subscription circulation of Moving Picture World and it is gratifying to record that he has everywhere been received with courtesy—and orders for subscriptions. The standing and repute of Moving Picture World seems to be well established and maintained in the Southland in equal proportion with other sections of the country.

The Situation in Birmingham.

Odeon Two No. 1 and Odeon Two No. 2 are two theatres in Birmingham with two entrances, and run by two different parties. Odeon Two No. 1, with a seating capacity of 350 with admission price of 10 cents, recently raised its price from 5 cents and is getting a good business. H. A. Rensford is the manager.

The other Odeon Two, No. 2, run by Marvin Wise, has a seating capacity 250 and also charges 10 cents. This house is also getting good business. It uses Fox, Universal and special attractions. There is still another Odeon Two in town run by Mr. King.

The Mudd-Colly Amusement Company control three theatres—the Rialto seating 500, with admission price of 20 cents; the Princess, a second run house, seating 400, admission price 10 cents, and the Trianon seats 600, admission price 20 cents. This concern uses Select, Goldwyn, World, Mutual, etc. All theatres are doing well.

Another house in the congested section of the town run by H. Hurry caters to the colored folk, seats 490, admission price of 10 cents. It is one of the prettiest houses the traveler has ever seen catering to a colored population.

Down in Mobile.

Some of the exhibitors in Mobile are not satisfied with retailing movies, but are going in the wholesale business, selling coupons. For instance Mr. King, proprietor of the Crown Theatre, a house seating 500 issues a coupon for five 10 cent admissions and also issues another ticket for $1.25 worth of seats. Mr. King says recently in addition to the regular city license of $225 the exhibitor must pay (an ordinance has been passed which makes him pay) $10 a day extra if the admission price is 25 cents or over.

J. Shimkowitz is another Mobile exhibitor who is issuing coupons. He runs the Queen Theatre, a 260 seater with admission price of 15 cents. He uses Fox, Bluebird and Pathe. Mr. Frankel runs the Crescent Theatre, seating 300. This is a 5 cent house. Miss Luck owns the Empire, a house seating 500, with admission price of 10 and 15 cents.

Montgomery's Four Theatres.

Montgomery, Ala., has four theatres in the movie line. The Empire, seating 952, has an admission price of 15 cents. This house has an eight-piece orchestra and uses Select, Goldwyn and Fox-Standard.

The three other houses are the Plaza, Colonial and Strand. All of the theatres are owned by the Strand Amusement Corporation, under the supervision of Mr. Wilby, general manager.

Covering the Crescent City.

New Orleans has a number of suburban houses pretty much scattered throughout the city. The Hippodrome (run by J. Brennon), a house seating 1,000, uses mostly Fox. Nat Ehrlich's Isis Theatre seats 632 on an admission price of 5 and 10 cents. It uses Paramount, Select and Universal.

Mr. Jacobs runs the Prytanna which seats 750, with an admission price 5 and 10 cents. The Poplar seats 500; admission 5 and 10 cents; uses Paramount, Select, Goldwyn and First National. Jake Miller owns the Empire, a 500 seat combination house, musical comedy and pictures; admission 10 and 15 cents; uses everything.

Mr. Febacher, of Wonderland, seating 234, has a nickel house giving a one hour show. He intends to increase his seating capacity shortly. Maurice Bair's Napoleon Theatre seats 1,500 with an admission price of 5 and 10 cents.

Good Business Is the Rule.

Ben J. Piazza, manager of the Palace Theatre, seating 2,300 with an admission of 10 to 25 cents, runs Keith vaudeville and pictures. This house uses Fox first run; World Pictures and Mutual. It has an eight piece orchestra.

We interviewed with Mr. Pearce, of the Pearce Amusement Company, who own and operate five theatres—the Newcomb seating 400, admission 5 cents; the Bijou Dream, seating 440, admission 5 cents; the Rialto, seating 350, admission 10 cents; the Trianon, seating 500, admission 10 cents; the Tudor, seating 700 admission from 10 to 25 cents. Mr. Pearce reports remarkably good business for all theatres.

Large Capacities and Good Shows.

At Loew's Crescent Theatre, seating 1,600, Manager Kattman says business is great. This house is open all summer. Sobel, Richards & Shear control three theatres—the Washington, seating 900 admission 5 and 10 cents; Fine Arts, seating 750, admission 5 and 10 cents and the Carrollton, seating 700, admission, 5 and 10 cents. This concern uses Universal, Pathe, Paramount, Goldwyn and Select. Mr. Shear reports good business for all theatres.

Mae Murray's Beseeching the Parrot Not to Fly Away. You See, She's "The Delicious Little Devil."
And, of course, you can't blame the parrot in this, his first appearance with Universal.

The Strand Theatre is in a class by itself. It has a sixteen piece orchestra, seats 1,500 on an admission price 10 and 39 cents. It is the most up-to-date house and is controlled by the Saenger Circuit. Foster Olroyd, the manager, holds lenten services in the theatre on Sundays. This theatre gets a select patronage, and judging by the music the shows and the atmosphere of the house in general it deserves it.

Among N. O. Exchanges.

At the Pathe office J. B. Dumdestre, Jr. is manager, a position he has held about five years. He reports good business. W. W. Hodkinson has a representative here, Max Heine, who says "Fighting Through" is holding its own. American Film Company also has a representative in this office—Louis S. Collier.

At the Select office H. G. Till, manager, has been in charge about one year. He says the South is in great shape and expects a big year. The Saenger Circuit booked Marion Davies in "The Belle of New York" and Mitchell Lewis in "The Code of the Yukon" for the entire circuit. At the Vitagraph office Frank P. Bryon is manager, and says the serial "The Man of Might" is going great. One of the boys setting the pace at this office is A. P. Dessonnes.

Two Women Exchange Managers.

At the World office Miss Sessions is manager. She has been here four years and reports "The Better 'Ole" going big in her territory. The Fox office just moved into a building at No. 723 Poydras and was just installing a new vault at the time of my visit. W. E. Condell, formerly manager of the George Kleine office is one of the Fox salesmen now. Another man in the sales force doing good business is C. S. McMillan, a former insurance man. "Everything going along as usual in the Fox office," says Mr. Allan S. Moritz, the manager.

The Metro and the First National are in one office on Poydras Street. C. J. Bryant is the manager and says "Virtuous Wives" is going strong; also "Eye for Eye." While in this office I met A. Levey, representative of the Stewart estate in Cleveland. He runs a theatre in Pensacola, Fla., seating 1,000. He was then on his way to Mobile with a view to finding a location for a 2,000 house. The General Film Company has F. E. Dillard as manager. He came here from Atlanta last December. At the Goldwyn office Miss Bak is manager. She has been with Goldwyn for some time and reports excellent business for this office.

Boasts Two Supply Houses.

At the Southern Triangle office J. W. Pope is manager and everybody looks busy. At the Paramount office H. F. Wilkes is manager. He says A. W. Plues, formerly manager of Vitagraph, now in harness for Paramount, will cover Louisianna and Eastern Arkansas.

The H. K. Barnett Theatre Supply Co. opened for business about five weeks ago. They are situated right in the film centre. Another supply house is run by George Vivirito. His place has been established about six years and handles Simplexes and Powers for Louisiana, Mississippi and a part of Florida. Amongst the recent installations are two new Simplex, Type S., at the Strand; also two Simplex at the Raceland Theatre, Raceland, La.

Philipp Organizes Producing Company.

Adolf Philipp, the playwright, has organized The Adolf Philipp Film Corporation for the purpose of producing pictures.

Mr. Philipp will appear himself in several of his stories. Negotiations for a New York studio are now on. The first picture is expected to be started on May 15.

Geraghty Writing Western Series for Clifford Bruce

TOM J. GERAGHTY, who recently reached New York with a sheaf of scenarios for some of the leading stars, is returning West with commissions to write several others, among the number being one for Clifford Bruce, whose work in leading and stellar roles for Metro, Fox and other companies has long been popular with the motion picture public.

One of the purposes of Mr. Geraghty's visit to New York was to secure the services of a star for a series of productions which will be constructed around a character of the husky-heroic, romantic type such as Mr. Bruce best portrays.

That time cannot wither nor custom stale the possibilities of the West as a theme for the photoplayer is Mr. Geraghty's opinion, provided the vehicle possesses sufficient originality. He points to the success of W. S. Hart and William Farnum as the best demonstration of this theory.

"The success of these two stars is the best evidence that the 'Western' type of drama is still in its prime, provided, of course, it is adequately produced. There is also a dearth of actors capable of bringing to leading parts the so-called 'husky-heroic' and romantic qualities in which the screen public delights. This is perhaps the reason why the 'Western' for a time seemed to be falling off in popularity.

"Concerning the proposed series, I can only say now that while each picture will be entirely Western in its ensemble, many novelties and thrills will be introduced which will be distinctly new."

"Red Lantern" Due in New York.

Saturday morning, April 26, a print of Nazimova's "The Red Lantern" will reach New York and the local office staff will give the new Metro feature their first look at it before passing the reels along to the laboratory.

CLEVELAND TRADE ISSUES NEW RULES

Regulations Drawn Up by Board of Managers of Chamber of Commerce Go Into Effect May 4

THE Board of Motion Picture Managers of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce has adopted a set of rules to govern dealings with exhibitors. They become effective May 4, 1919. Among them are the following:

The exhibitor pays transportation charges. No more film shipped C. O. D. to any one. No verbal agreements held as binding. Booking changes must be in writing 14 days prior to play date. No film may be held after play date. Fourteen days after contract is signed, exchanges can set play dates for films if same are not specified by exhibitor.

The board is formed to solve the common problems of exchanges and exhibitors and to adjust complaints made by or against the various exchanges and exhibitors. The board is organized to protect both the exhibitor and the exchange. It wishes all exhibitors to file complaints whenever they feel that they have been unjustly treated by exchanges.

A committee has been appointed to handle complaints, upon which Emery Downs, of the Knickerbocker Theatre and Moe Horwitz, of the Fountain Theatre, have consented to serve. Exhibitors have the right to appear in person before this committee or they may submit any correspondence they desire.

Members of the Board.

The board is composed of Select, Universal, Vitagraph, Inc., Goldwyn, Standard, Famous Players-Lasky, Triangle, First National Exhibitors, Masterpiece, World, Metro, Pathe, W. W. Hodkinson, Film Clearing House, Star Film Service, United Picture Theatres, Mutual Exhibitors, Argus and Sterling.

Talk About Neutrality! Creighton Hale's the Acme of It.
What else could he be between Zena Keefe and June Caprice? These three stars appear in Albert Capellani's Pathe "Oh, Boy!"

WATCH WEST CHESTER'S WRINKLES

Anciently Settled Town with Much Local Color and One Skyscraper Has Three Showmen Who Will Stage Battle to Win Out in Farmer Community Patronage

SOME day when your eye is just aching to be filled with a bunch of handsome scenery, take a trip to the Quaker town of West Chester, Pennsylvania, climb to the top of its one and only six-story skyscraper and from there watch the town flash and sparkle in its setting among the checkered fields and the green, rolling hills of Chester County.

Beware the Elevator Man.

The greybearded elevator man who operates the one and only elevator in the one and only skyscraper will immediately recognize you as a stranger and before you reach the sixth floor he will have told you how the weather has behaved since the days of the Civil War, and will give you, besides, "Today in history" as it was five, ten, fifteen, twenty, and twenty-five years ago. If you give him a cue on the Big Blizzard, he'll ride you up and down the elevator until his chest is freed of the experiences he himself went through during those days when sleighs had to be driven along the tops of the worm fences and it took a week to dig a path from the house to the barn.

Or, if you aren't satisfied with scenery as it strikes you from a distance, once you have reached the roof of the One and Only, take a little jaunt out through Marshallton way to the country of the Brandywine where Washington and Howe made meadow and woods resound to the roar of cannon in 1777. If Chester County's combination of rolling hill, cloud, verdant field and winding stream does not satisfy your poetic eye, it's time your favorite specialist earned another thousand by giving your optics the onceover twice.

Town Is Inclined to Conservatism.

Since you are a moving picture man, the fact that West Chester, a town of some 15,000 persons, has three theatres operating and in full bloom, will appeal to your spirit of showmanship. Your jaunt through the country will have convinced you that the town has a rich farmer patronage from which to draw, and besides a number of little hamlets that nestle along the highways that before the days of railroads were the traffic arteries of the country.

You will find on inquiry that West Chester has a school patronage coming from a High School of 800 students, a large percentage of which comes from the rural districts; a State Normal School of 1,500 students, and Darlington Seminary for Girls, with several hundred resident pupils.

You will discover also that the whole community is inclined to conservatism as it is an old, well-settled, residential town, with no large industrial element to stir it from its apathy. The three theatres, the Opera House, Idlehour, and Rialto, therefore, have a difficult task in their advertising and stunting

Opry House Known of Old.

The Opera House, the oldest and largest of the three houses, is managed by F. J. Meyer for a company of local stockholders. It has for years been used as the scene of the presentation of legitimate attractions. It is here the bloodhounds pursued 'Liza and here the villain received his rich quota of hisses in the 10-20-30. The house was remodeled last winter and the seating capacity raised from 800 to 1,000.

Mr. Meyer still brings the big road shows to West Chester, and runs his prices up as high as $2. The farmers in the surrounding district swarm into town for these plays. They never reserve seats in advance, as they stay at home when the weather is bad. But let the weather be good, and every hitching post on Gay and High streets will be occupied by the old grey mare or the 1919 Packard.

The Opera House will be remodeled in front this year, and an incline will replace the steps and long corridor leading to the house proper.

Idlehour Pleasantly Named.

The Idlehour, a block and a half from the Opera House, is owned by William H. Leslie and leased by James B. Bowker, the efficient young manager who talked to the World man as he made change for his afternoon patrons. The Idlehour uses the Paramount program and Select pictures almost exclusively. It seats 600, and like the other two houses, charges ten and fifteen cents admission.

"The conservative nature of this town makes advertising a difficult problem," said Mr. Bowker. "The Local News is a fine paper and it reaches every home in Chester County, but it will not give the theatres any aid in the way of publicity for pictures. You can't 'stunt' any picture or the conservatism of the town will be offended. Co-operation with the stores in town is a dead letter."

Mr. Leslie, the owner of the Idlehour property, has a little house in Lenni of 225 capacity, which he is holding as a training camp for his boy, now in France.

Rialto Brings Real Competition.

The Rialto, owned and managed by William A. and Thomas J. Brown, is but two doors removed from the Idlehour, and is the theatre which has put fight into the competition in West Chester. The Rialto, which seats 700, opened on February 22 after a lapse of five months due to the death of James A. Brown who built the theatre in 1916. The Brown brothers, determined to do things on a big scale, installed a $10,000 Wurlitzer organ, have been doing excellent business since their opening and have the town talking.

The Rialto is the only one of the three theatres which can boast of an organ, upholstered seats and ultra-modern construction. It runs five acts of vaudeville on Tuesday and Saturday, together with a feature picture.

Some of the West Chester folk say there is not room for three theatres, while others are of contrary opinion. The fact is that West Chester, which has nothing at all to do with Chester, is the heart of a thickly settled farming district, with a host of small communities from which to draw and there is plenty of room for three exhibitors if they use the right kind of advertising methods.

Gladys Leslie Parts the Curtains Between the Two Scenes from "A Stitch in Time" to Say "Good Morning."
She Is in Evening Dress, You Say? Well, Vitagraph Doesn't Prevent Her from Saying "Good Morning" in the Evening.

One of the three theatres is bound to grasp the situation in a short while because the limited patronage of the town does not now permit three full houses a night. One theatre is poorly patronized every evening. One showman is bound to swear that he will make his house supreme, and will use brain matter and printer's ink to make it so.

Which one of the three will it be? Which one will make his theatre the magnet, drawing patrons consistently from Marshallton, Embreeville, Mortonville, Malvern, Paoli, Guthrieville, Chadd's Ford, Milltown, Brandywine Summit, and even Kennet Square, Toughkennamon and Oxford? The fight promises to be a lesson in showmanship. Who will win? Watch Meyer, Bowker, and the Brown brothers of West Chester, and you'll get some pointers on advertising.

REILLY.

BIG GOLDWYN LOAN FILM AGAIN FREE

"The Story of the Biggest Game Every Played" Brought Up to Date Is Offered to Exhibitors Without Charge

ONCE more Goldwyn takes a part in the drive for a successful Government loan. Goldwyn's contributions in the previous Liberty Loan campaigns will be remembered by all. It was the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation which, among other contributions, launched that startling bond-selling photo-drama, "The Story of the Biggest Game Ever Played," in which every Goldwyn star took part. It was Goldwyn that produced Geraldine Farrar in "The Bonds That Tie," an additional photographic contribution to the Sales force of Uncle Sam.

And now Goldwyn comes to the front with a program that will go a long way toward "putting over" the present Victory Loan. Out in Culver City, Madge Kennedy, Pauline Frederick, Geraldine Farrar, Tom Moore, Mabel Normand and numerous other Goldwyn stars, are bending their individual efforts to sell Government bonds. All sorts of devices on the part of these screen stars are being resorted to for the purpose of winning the public to this most important post-bellum money drive. Goldwyn directors and idea-men are coaching their crew on the necessary tactics to pursue and the necessary vantage points from which bonds may be disposed of through the aid of magic names and magic personalities.

But the Goldwyn distributing offices are making the main Victory Loan drive on the part of the photoplay magnates. Once more "The Story of the Biggest Game Ever Played," is being distributed free to exhibitors who are kind enough to offer their co-operation. New captions and lines and other variations have been introduced to make the picture entirely a story of the immediate hour.

Express Tied Up by Strike; Send Films by Aeroplane

EXCHANGE managers have been inconvenienced by a general strike of Canadian express company employes in practically all the centres of the Dominion. Those who went out included drivers, station clerks and messengers, and they want better pay, shorter hours and improved working conditions. Various methods of transplanting film shipments quickly have been used and the company is making the best of the situation in an effort to help the film interests.

For a stunt, one Toronto exchange, the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Pathe distributors, delivered a box of films to Manager Swanwick, of the Princess Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, forty miles from Toronto by aeroplane. The films were delivered in forty minutes by a Toronto aviator, A. E. Parsons, thirty-two minutes of the time being consumed in the actual flight between the cities.

This was the first time on record in Canada that moving picture films had been shipped by aerial express.

World-Picture Press Book Ready for Novelty Film

FOR the exploitation of "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," Lee Kugel director of World-Pictures publicity, has prepared a special press book In compiling the work, Mr. Krugel has kept in mind the resources of the exhibitor whose theatre is located in a community or city where it is impossible for him to secure such advertising material as may be readily obtained in the larger centers of population.

The Herbert M. Dawley novelty is approached from many angles and in both press notices and prepared advertisements the best exploitation points are enlarged upon. There are no impossible "stunts" suggested, but advertising ideas are offered that will admit of the fullest exploitation for the feature. Short paragraphs and longer stories for newspapers and programs are ready prepared, and advertisements of many designs and sizes are listed.

"These are not press agents' ravings" is the caption preceding the publicity text—and then follows what is claimed to be truthful statements concerning the strange creatures represented in "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain." These pictures lately concluded an engagement at the New York Rivoli and are now being generally booked through World-Picture exchanges.

Palisade Laboratories Get Big Contract.

A contract has been entered into between Bech, Van Siclen & Company, Inc., and the Palisade Film Laboratories, Inc., according to an announcement by L. C. Wheeler, manager of the export department of films for the former concern, which will aggregate many hundreds of thousands of dollars in the course of the year.

"We are buying foreign rights for superior productions," said Mr. Wheeler, "and our chain of distribution circles the globe. It is our desire to issue the very best prints that can possibly be made, and we believe that we have accomplished this end by contracting with the Palisade laboratory to do our work.

"We made a thorough inspection of the plant and were agreeably surprised at the splendid equipment and the excellence of the working forces."

Protest Poster Charge by Exchanges.

The Canadian Motion Picture Association of Montreal has protested against the charge of seven and one-half per cent. imposed by exchanges for posters, heralds, slides and other accessories. The exhibitors are called upon to pay this item whether they use the paper or not. The exchanges are considering the matter, it is stated, but they point out that they are required to pay for the extras and they are entitled to collect from the exhibitors. An adjustment may be arranged.

Night Service at Montreal Exchanges.

Montreal exchanges have decided to provide all-night service for local and district exhibitors as a result of an agitation on the part of the theatre men for such an arrangement. The exchanges are arranging to have a clerk on duty at each office for the receipt of films from theatres after regular performances.

MOTION PICTURE ENGINEERS MEET

Society Has Three-Day Session in Philadelphia—Technical Men's Papers Read—Prizma's New Process Described—Further Opinions on Slow-Burning Film

THE semi-annual meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers was held in Philadelphia on April 14, 15 and 16. The three-day session was a full one, and the meeting was the most enthusiastic yet. Owing to an attack of the "flu," which laid the chairman of the papers committee low for several weeks, the papers were less numerous than usual. The sessions were enlivened by most excellent, interesting and instructive addresses by Dana Pierce, Chairman Electrical Committee National Fire Prevention Association; Washington Devereaux, Chief Electrical Inspector Philadelphia Board of Fire Underwriters; Frank J. Rembusch, Secretary Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and Dr. Dudley, of the Wisconsin State University Board of Visual Education, now engaged in assisting in preparing Government films.

Interesting Papers Read.

Papers were read as follows: "White Light for Motion Picture Photography," by Wm. Roy Mott, National Carbon Company laboratories.

This paper was profusely illustrated with stereopticon slides, and contained much matter of more than ordinary interest and value to the industry. Mr. Mott is past master of his subject and his subject is the carbon arc.

"Attachments for Cinematographic Cameras" was the subject of a paper by Carl Gregory. This paper held very great interest, even for us who, not being well posted on the photographic end of things, could not appreciate all its points.

"Some Phases of the Optical System of the Projector," by F. H. Richardson, was extensively discussed by Dr. Herman Kellner, of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, who made blackboard drawings to illustrate his points and gave a demonstration with a small apparatus in which he mounted a corrected and un-corrected condenser. Dr. Kellner agreed with the reader of the paper in the points made therein, but suggested a different remedy for the light losses pointed out. Dr. Henry Phelps Gage, of the Corning Glass Works, also discussed certain phases of the matter brought out in Mr. Richardson's paper, illustrating same with stereopticon slides. What might be termed the combined paper of Richardson, Kellner and Gage were extensively discussed by Messrs. Allison, Jenkins, Burrows, Will C. Smith and Mr. Glover.

New Prizma Process Discussed.

"Adding Color to Motion," by William V. D. Kelly, Prizma Inc., proved to be a headliner in the programme because, aside from the interest centering in Prizma just now, Mr. Kelly described, for the first time, the new "Additive Process," which is Prizma's latest contribution to the art of color photography. The paper was illustrated by Prizma films showing details of the new process.

These various papers will be printed in the proceedings of the Society and will thus be made available to all.

Reports were had from several committees and for the first time there was evidence of real committee activity. Heretofore only the electrical devices committee had really done anything worth while, but now both the committee on optics, and the projection machine committee have come to life. President Campe has worked faithfully, Secretary Gillette has done his work well, and Treasurer Smith seems to be accumulating wealth on behalf of the society. The membership committee has accomplished much, and the society is in first class shape in every way. It has become a power for good and its dictum now is generally respected by the industry.

Society in Healthy Condition.

Dead indeed must be that one who can attend one of its meetings without reaping genuine benefit. Those who are eligible to membership would do exceedingly well to get into the fold. The society is now financially and numerically a going concern. A. C. Roebuck, chairman of the membership committee, said: "We are no longer in need of either members or finance. It would therefore be well that we be a bit selective and admit only those men or firms who can be of benefit to the society as an engineering body."

The matter of special narrow-width, slow-burning standard was again discussed, but no action was taken.

The society adopted a resolution addressed to the Government requesting that, in the interest of safety, as well as for the moral effect, all films in future put out by it be printed on slow burning stock, commonly known as non-flam. In course of discussion the point was brought out that non-flam stock is about 80 per cent. that of common stock. It was also made plain that the slow-burning stock would probably always cost more to manufacture than ordinary stock. Dana Pierce, of the Underwriters Laboratories, made it clear that the underwriters had no intention of receding in any degree from the safeguards set up for portable projectors.

Two Factions in Slow-Burning Matter.

There are two distinct factions in the slow-burning film matter. One is of the opinion the special narrow width standard for portable projectors, already adopted by the society, ought to stand. The other is the opinion that the society should work for the adoption of slow burning film for all purposes, finally ending by the total elimination of ordinary inflammable film.

Against this latter is the fact, made quite clear at the meeting, that sufficient slow-burning film stock to supply the entire industry could not at present be had, nor could it be had for a considerable period of time, to which must be added its comparative low efficiency (80 per cent.) and higher cost.

Tuesday evening there was a banquet which was one of the most thoroughly enjoyable affairs ever.

Altogether the meeting was a decided success from any and every point of view. The next meeting will be held in Pittsburgh in the fall.

Those in Attendance.

Among those in attendance were George Perkins, Perkins Electric Company; George A. Blair, Eastman Kodak Company; Dr. Henry Phelps Gage, Corning Glass Works; Frank Rembusch, secretary Motion Picture Exhibitors' League; Dr. Herman Kellner, Bausch & Lomb Optical Company; H. H. Cudmore, Argus Lamp and Appliance Company, Cleveland; William C. Hubbard, Cooper-Hewitt Electric Company, New York City; W. R. Mott, Research Laboratories, National Carbon Company, Cleveland; A. C. Roebuck, Enterprise Optical Company, Chicago; A. F. Victor, Victor Anamatograph Company, Davenport, Iowa; F. H. Richardson Moving Picture World, J. C. Moulton, Fort Wayne Electric Company, New York office; Bernard DeVry, DeVry Corporation, Chicago; R. P. Burrows, National Lamp Works, Cleveland; C. Francis Jenkins, Washington, D. C.; Will C. Smith, Nicholas Power Company, New York City; E. K. Gillette, Motion Picture News; Harry M. R. Glover, Gundlach Manhattan Optical Company; W. B. Cook, Pathescope Company, New York City; Max Mayer, Max Wohl Company, New York City, and J. H. Hertner, Hertner Electric Company, Cleveland.

"MIDNIGHT ROMANCE" PRESS BOOK PULLS

Manager H. M. Thomas, of Omaha's Big Rialto, Uses Every Ad. in Sheet on Anita Stewart Picture

H. M. THOMAS, manager of the big Rialto Theatre, Omaha, recently opened a press book sent him, advertising a picture he was to play. Mr. Thomas ripped off the wrapping, gave the sheet a glance, and whizzed it through the air, swearing softly as it phlopped against the wall.

"There's a press sheet!" he exclaimed, pointing to the dilapidated ruin lying on the floor. "It is supposed to tell me how to advertise my picture. If I use the ideas in that press sheet it will cure bunions, it will cure a cold, it will clean the streets, it will give my ticket girls prostration, it will wear the floor off my lobby, it will break down my seats with the crowds—yes-s-s-s-s-s it will!"

"Why do they waste their money?" inquired Thomas. "And even if they have got plenty of money why do they waste my time? I read press sheets. I have to read press sheets. That is why my eyes are turning glassy; my hair turning gray; my ears are drooping and my teeth falling out. I have to read press sheets. I am going to the sanitarium—just because I have to read press sheets."

Thereupon Showman Thomas started out on a long rigmarole concerning press sheets. Some, he said, were good—fairly good; others were impossible.

Thomas an Able Judge.

Now, Thomas is an original advertiser. His ideas have won him fame. He doesn't have to depend upon press sheets; he can write press sheets for himself, if he has to. Certainly he can write advertisements for himself. He generally does, and they draw the crowds. But he grows sad as he thinks of the effort that might have been saved if only press sheets were what they should be.

Suddenly the interviewer spied something. "Here's an ad of yours which, I'll bet thirteen cents was taken from a press sheet," he said. "Look. Now come clean." There it was. An ad, a big, glaring, well written, convincing ad, taken from a press sheet.

Thomas looked. A gleam of joy came into his eye. He grinned. Life was interesting, once more.

"Yeh, boy. I said some press sheets were good. That one is. Remember when we knocked 'em dead with 'Virtuous Wives?' Well, some of those ads were from the press sheet.

"'The Midnight Romance' is another. I guess I used just about every ad in that press sheet. Say, I wish every one was like that. You know what I mean—nifty, attractive, striking, got the punch."

He pointed to this ad; then to that one, in another evening paper. He drew a press sheet from his desk and pointed to the copy from which his ads of the afternoon had been taken. He talked earnestly, enthusiastically, interestingly. He was all wrapped up in his subject. He pointed to the pictures in the press book and to the notation, "Talk to the women in your ads."

Takes Press Book's Advice.

"Did I talk to the women in my ads?" he said. "Did I! Boy, every woman in town came to see that picture, or was prevented for some reason that she could not avoid. Think of it—a woman wrote the story, a woman directed it, a woman star, and I suppose a woman turned the crank of the camera.

"Think of the pretty gowns! And Anita Stewart is a woman's actress anyway. This is her second picture in my house, and they've got to stop selling tickets downstairs in a few minutes. I booked the picture for five days, and I had to hold it over for two more days or be mobbed."

Again he turned to the press sheet, and he raved some more. Some day, he hoped, every press sheet would be as good for their pictures as this one was for the picture he was advertising.

Press Books Arouse Comment.

Down at the A. H. Blank Enterprises headquarters, First National Circuit franchise holders for Iowa and Nebraska, Manager C. E. Holan said, "Press sheets? Oh, yes, our press sheets arouse frequent comment. But so do our pictures." Mr. Holan recalled days when he was exchange manager for other film companies. No, he said, he did not recall enthusiastic appreciation of the press sheets issued by those companies. He coyly admitted his press sheets are the best on the market, but he wouldn't talk about them enough—he insisted on referring to a big indefinite looking book, and saying it told the story of how Anita Stewart's latest picture is booking like wildfire throughout the Middle West.

Seadeek Goes to Siberia with Films for Soldiers

JESSE SEADEEK, of Rochester, N. Y., and well known in moving picture circles there, sailed from Vancouver, Canada, on April 19 for Vladivostok, Siberia, as a representative of the Community Moving Picture Bureau. Accompanying him were six operators and fifty projection machines, together with various other equipment, and miles of film which will be exhibited to the Allied armies now in Siberia, under the auspices of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A.

Arriving in Vladivostok, the party will first organize the exhibition of pictures for the men there. Following this the picture service will be extended along that thin ribbon of civilization which crosses lake Baikal and runs overland along the line of the Trans-Siberian Railroad. It is understood that the party will be the first to exhibit films in this part of Asia.

Leslie Martin, director of the service for Asia, sailed with the party.

Foreign Rights to Zane Grey Films Secured by Brockliss

SIDNEY BARRETT, president of the J. Frank Brockliss Company, has purchased the entire foreign right of "Desert Gold," the special production now being made of Zane Grey's novel by the author's own company, together with the rights of all other books by this writer which are to be picturized in this manner, according to an announcement made this week by C. A. Weeks, secretary and treasurer of the Zane Grey Pictures, Inc.

The acquisition of the foreign right of this series, which are to be distributed in America by the W. W. Hodkinson Company, is in line with the recently announced policy of the Brockliss company to eliminate star and program pictures from their offerings, and handle only productions of special merit and magnitude.

Steve M. Farrar Married.

Steve M. Farrar, of the Casino, El Dorado and the Orpheum, Harrisburg, Ill., has found time in spite of his double duty, to get married, and on April 1 was united to Miss Minnie Talbot at Cairo, Ill. If Steve is as good a husband as he is advertising hustler, we reserve the usual custom and congratulate the bride, for Steve is one of our best little crowd getters.

RIALTO CELEBRATES THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Managing Director Riesenfeld Gives Special Program During Theatre's Birthday Week

A MOST appropriate and pleasing program is presented at the Rialto, New York, this week, in honor of that theatre's third anniversary. Managing Director Hugo Riesenfeld has so harmonized his entertainment as to make the anniversary program one that stands out even in the Rialto's record. So much already has been said about the Rialto's superfluity.

The show opens with Franz Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody," rendered in all its wierd symphony by the Rialto orchestra, conducted by Mr. Riesenfeld and Nat W. Finston. The overture is replete with the spirit of the nomad, and all the lure of a gypsy's life is brought out in the music. This is heightened by a Czimbalom solo played by Bela Nyary.

Short Subjects First.

First on the screen is seen the Rialto Magazine and "Silk Hat Harry" cartoon. This reel is followed by a contralto solo, "Mighty Lak' a Rose," sung by Julia Henry. The fourth number is an excellent Robert C. Bruce-Educational scenic, titled "The Wolf of the Tetons," which brings the viewer to the western rim of the Jackson Hole in Wyoming.

The quartette from "Rigoletto" is sung by Ann Rosner, Mme. Pascova, Martin Brefer and Edoardo Albano.

The feature photoplay is William S. Hart's "The Money Corral," an Artcraft production which was written and directed by William S. Hart. The Hart picture is followed by a Charlie Chaplan revival, "The Adventurer."

The program closes with the "Hallelujah Chorus," played on the organ by Arthur Depew.

Goldwyn to Return May 1.

Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, will return to the executive offices in New York about May 1 from an extended stay at the Goldwyn studios at Culver City, Cal.

News from the Goldwyn chief executive indicates that no effort will be spared to acquire the finest literary material available suitable for picture production for the coming season. After a long period of observation of the Goldwyn studios in operation and a study of the ever changing development of the art of the motion picture, Mr. Goldwyn brings with him a definite idea of the scope and direction of the company's plans for the coming season.

Mrs. O'Grady Fails to Meet Advertisers

FIFTH Deputy Police Commissioner Ellen O'Grady failed to appear at the weekly meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., Thursday, April 24, in response to the association's invitation to be present and amplify the statements embodied in her recently published tirade about the alleged immorality of motion pictures. On motion, the association unanimously voiced its appreciation of the work of Harry Reichenbach and N. T. Granlund, who constituted the special committee appointed to handle the matter. Bert Adler and Joseph L. Kelley were added to the committee, which was continued in office, and empowered to take care of the publicity which may be necessitated by the situation.

Mr. Kinney, of the staff of Editor and Publisher, was present and addressed the members on the attitude of newspaper publishers in the matter of publicity for motion pictures. Mr. Kinney contented himself with explaining this attitude as he found it, and his remarks provoked a spirited discussion which brought out many valuable suggestions.

The following were elected to membership: C. C. Pettijohn, of Exhibitors Mutual; H. P. Diggs, Independent Sales Corporation; Joseph L. Kelley, Rothapfel Pictures Corporation, and Kenneth MacGowan, Goldwyn.

SIGNAL CORPS OVERSEAS FILMS ON SALE

War Department Exhibits Official Pictures for Benefit of the Press and News Weeklies

AN exhibition of official war pictures made in Europe by the Signal Corps of the army was given in the projection room of the International Film Service, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, on Tuesday, April 22. The showing was held for the purpose of disposing of 6,715 feet of film to the news weekly men, a number of whom were present along with members of the press.

The film shown is only a small portion of the vast amount stored away in the archives of the War Department, and covers the activities of about ten different American divisions, including pictures of France, Belgium, Germany and Russia. Panoramic views of "No Man's Land" and other devastated areas contain undeniable proof of the great struggle. Pictures of positions captured and many incidents in connection with American participation in the war from port to occupation of enemy territory are to be seen.

A group of interesting scenes were taken with the 332d Infantry in Italy in the area including Ipplis, Brazzano and the village of Cormons. The entry of the French into Brussels, a visit of King George V to Paris in November, 1918, and the evacuated German lines showing huts, postoffice headquarters, machine gun nests and other evidences of Hun occupation are scenes which will hold interest. Pictures of many famous personages of the war also are included.

It is announced that official pictures will be shown periodically in New York, probably at the Army Building, Thirty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, for the convenience of film producers and distributors who may desire to make purchases.

Walthall to Appear in Six Pictures Made by Pioneer

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed between Smiling Billy Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation, and M. H. Hoffman, general manager of the Pioneer Film Corporation, by which Harry B. Walthall will appear in a series of six productions to be made by the latter company.

This deal marks the entry of the Pioneer company into the production field, and is in accordance with its announced policy of supplying exhibitors with high class features.

The stories of the pictures in which Mr. Walthall will appear will be especially chosen for him, and great care is being taken to select only those which will be best suited to him and show his talents to the best advantage. A number of manuscripts have already been read, and announcement will soon be made as to the name and nature of the first production to be made under this arrangement, which was consummated on Mr. Parsons' recent trip to the East.

It is announced that supporting casts will be carefully selected, types and ability being given more consideration than names, and that a director who has many successes to his credit will handle the details of production.

LAEMMLE SEES A BRIGHT PATH AHEAD

President of Big U. Finds Exhibitors Sorry Houses Are Not Bigger—Some Coming Features

RETURNING to New York after crossing the continent twice, conferring with exhibitors and exchangemen in several cities and studying conditions in various sections, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, is satisfied that 1919 will be a banner year for exhibitors and producers alike. Also Mr. Laemmle is convinced that 1919 will see even greater Universal success than 1918, which was acknowledged a banner year for the Big U.

"Everywhere I went I found business booming," said Mr. Laemmle. "Exhibitors who told me last summer that if things did not improve rapidly they would have to go out of business, told me on my present trip that their only fear at present was that their theatres weren't large enough.

"In Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Seattle, Omaha, Salt Lake and other cities exhibitors are enjoying a record business," said Mr. Laemmle.

Mr. Laemmle stated that no effort or expense is being spared to make every film coming from Universal City the best on the market. He also stated in announcing its recent sales and distribution policy, Universal made the exhibitors a promise that each Universal picture would be produced and exploited without limitations. He says Universal will make good.

Some Coming Universal Plays.

Allen Holubar is now producing another super-drama bearing the working title, "The Right to Happiness," which, being timely and cleverly constructed, Mr. Laemmle expects to become another "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," and a worthy successor to "The Heart of Humanity." In this picture Dorothy Phillips will play a dual role. William Stowell, Robert C. Anderson, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Thurston Hall, Winter Hall, Margaret Mann and Maxine Elliott Hicks are among the principal players of the drama.

Mr. Laemmle is loud in his praise of "Prairie Gold," Mary MacLaren's latest completed production, from Sinclair Lewis' story of the same title. Not only does the Universal executive believe that this is Miss MacLaren's best screen work, but also one of the best stories and one of the most cleverly directed film plays ever produced at Universal City. Monroe Salisbury's next Universal picture, "The Open Road," directed by Rupert Julian, has also been highly praised by Mr. Laemmle. The Universal executive states also that Eric von Stroheim's production, now being completed under the working title of "The Pinnacle," will prove a distinct surprise to exhibitors.

Select Officials Honor Arthur Kane.

A pleasant interruption to the routine of business occurred during the afternoon session of Select's conference of branch managers at the Astor Hotel, April 23, when Arthur S. Kane was the recipient of a testimonial presented to him by members of the Select organization. It took shape in the form of an unusually handsome watch of platinum, incrusted with diamonds and inscribed with Mr. Kane's initials. The gift was presented by the incoming general manager, Sam E. Morris.

Mr. Morris spoke of the very high regard and warm affection in which Mr. Kane is held by all members of the Select organization. Mr. Kane was much touched by this great evidence of the esteem in which he is held by his associates of the past two years. Mr. Selznick then made a few appropriate remarks.

Southeastern Exhibitors in Clash with Exchanges

THE exchanges of Atlanta and exhibitors in that territory are in a clash over the matter of prepayment of rentals. The exchanges demand cash in advance without any exceptions and the showmen are in many instances objecting. Matters came to an issue Sunday, April 13, when W. C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion Theatre, Atlanta, called into session exhibitors for six states and organized the Southeastern Theatre Managers' Association, of which Mr. Patterson was made president.

The exchange managers of Atlanta are all members of the Trade Board, with the exception of First National, United Pictures and Exhibitors Mutual. The demands of the Trade Board became effective March 31 and despite numerous conferences the exhibitors believed that the only means of combatting the distributing agencies was to form their own association.

Showmen's Committee In New York.

Last Monday, April 21, Mr. Patterson, George Warner, of Columbus, Ga.; Percy Wells, of Wilmington, N. C., and E. A. Schiller, of Atlanta, came to New York as an executive committee, with power to act, the purpose of their trip being to arrange with the home offices of the various distributing concerns for a definite understanding and abrogation, if possible, of some objectionable rules of the Atlanta Trade Board.

The outcome is undecided as we go to press, and, meanwhile, showmen served by Atlanta exchanges are in most cases abiding by the Trade Board's demands. It is asserted on behalf of all participants that there are two sides to a question that may now be definitely threshed out by the chief executives and the showmen's committee.

Woody To Take Vacation.

J. S. Woody, who has resigned as general sales manager for Select, will indulge in a much-needed vacation before announcing his future plans.

WILL SHOW CHURCHES VALUE OF FILM

Brady Choosing Picture Program for Methodist Convention To Be at Columbus June 20-July 13

IT is desired to demonstrate to church people everywhere the vast ethical and educational values of the motion pictures. The managers of the coming celebration of the founding of missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal Church to be held in Columbus, June 20 to July 13, have asked and have been promised the co-operation of producers. A screen program has been planned for the occasion.

"The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry," said its president, William A. Brady, "has received an invitation through Dr. Christian F. Reisner, executive secretary of the Methodist Minute Men, for a representation of the film industry at their mission's anniversary. The association has instructed me to accept the invitation and set about plans at once.

"I understand from Dr. Reisner that 200,000 people are expected in Columbus, and over a million dollars will be spent in building a program and arranging a mission exhibition. Hundreds of natives are to be brought from India, China and Japan and a pageant of 7,000 participants is in preparation.

"They are to have a stereopticon throwing a picture 100 feet square, and seats for 75,000. It is in connection with this phase of the affair that our aid was asked.

"Personally, I am more than glad of the chance to demonstrate what has long been apparent not only to the laity, but to broad guage churchmen as well, namely, that in the screen lies a most potent agency for the furtherance of religious teachings. But there are many who cannot see this. By a curious prejudice against motion pictures in any form, clergymen have heretofore failed to avail themselves of one of the greatest educational forces of our time. There are an infinite number of subjects which lend themselves to treatment holding an essentially ethical significance. It is this point which I hope we may bring out beyond controversy at the Methodist convocation."

"Movies in Home" Means New Theatre for Norwich

MOVIES in the home" are coming in reality to Norwich, N. Y., but the transformation of the home into a motion picture theatre will, in this instance, cost $40,000. Dr. W. E. Hartigan's residence on East Main street is being razed, and it is understood that C. H. Latham will build a modern photoplay house on the site.

Mr. Latham, on being questioned as to his plans, said he was not ready to give out any news, but that he would make a public statement later. The rumor has been going for some time that there would be another moving picture theatre in Norwich. The new house will have conveniences for vaudeville.

STRAND HAS FIFTH ANNIVERSARY WEEK

Manager Joseph L. Plunkett of Broadway Picture House Has Arranged Novel Program for the Event

FIVE years ago this month the first of the splendid theatres devoted to the showing of the finest examples of the motion picture art, combined with a musical setting supplied by a full symphony orchestra and other features of a high-class musical nature, was opened at the corner of Broadway and Forty-seventh street, New York. The fifth anniversary week program at the Strand Theater, arranged by Director Joseph L. Plunkett, aside from the customary numbers, has a novelty that served to remind the patrons of the house what a fine record has been made with its list of stars since the opening.

"A Trip Through the Strand," the number is called. It shows the inside workings of the theatre in all its departments. The spectator is taken into the office of Moe Mark, president and general manager of the Strand Company, which built and owns the theater, and introduced to him. Then follows introductions to Director Plunkett, Conductor Carl Edouarde, House Manager Jones, Director of Publicity J. Victor Wilson and others of the house staff. A comprehensive outline is included of how a program is worked out and run off by the entire working force of the theatre.

Mary Pickford Feature Is Headliner.

Mary Pickford in "Captain Kidd, Jr.," is the headline feature, and ten other numbers are given. The overture, "The Spirit of the Elements," has a scenic setting that is elaborate and beautiful. It shows a volcanic eruption with an accompanying storm. This is followed by a change in the elements and calm sunset as a shepherd leads his flock home to the sound of the Angelus. "The Lost Chord," artistically sung by the Strand Ladies' Octette, also has an unusually impressive scenic background. "The Girl in the Bubble" is another interesting novelty. One of Max Fleisher's delightfully humorous "Out of the Inkwell" cartoons, a remarkable Outing-Chester wild animal scene called "Cameraing Through Africa," and a new Briggs comedy, "Skinny's School and Scandal," are other numbers.

$35,000 Fire in Pathe's Salt Lake City Exchange

THE Pathe Exchange, 64 Exchange place, Salt Lake City, was completely gutted by fire Thursday morning, April 17, with an attendant loss of not less than $35,000, according to the estimate of Branch Manager W. A. Calkins. The fire started in the film vault. Two persons were slightly injured—Miss Helen Tinges and David Orlander. About 1,300 reels of film were destroyed and the office equipment was burned to a cinder.

But for the prompt and efficient work of the fire department, the Vitagraph exchange also would have been destroyed. In appreciation of the department's work, F. A. Wagner, local manager for Vitagraph, on behalf of the company, presented a check of $50 to Fire Chief W. H. Bywater for the firemen's relief fund.

Girls Get Slight Burns.

Several of the nine girls employed in the Pathe office narrowly escaped being trapped by the flames. The flames caught Miss Tinges, burning her slightly about the neck and shoulders. Several others received slight burns, but only Miss Tinges and David Orlander were treated at the city emergency hospital. Their injuries are not serious. Had Manager Calkins been at his desk when the explosion occurred he would probably have been killed, since the falling wall completely demolished the desk. As luck would have it he was in front of the office and was uninjured. Every reel of film in the place was completely destroyed. It was fortunate that about 500 reels of the latest films were out at the time and were thus saved. It is not believed that any appreciable amount of insurance was carried. It appears not improbable that a tightly wound reel may have ignited from spontaneous combustion.

The Pathe exchange was immediately tendered the temporary use of films by other exchanges pending the receipt of new ones from Denver. Mr. Calkins has moved his office temporarily to the office of the Super Film Attractions, 52 Exchange place. A new supply of films was received from Denver Friday, and the exchange is now enabled to handle its business as usual.

Originator of "Better 'Ole" Discussed by Newspaperman

AT a luncheon to Washington, D. C., newspaper men, given by Manager R. B. Smeltzer, of World Film, and Bert Adler, exploiting "The Better 'Ole," when that picture opened a two-week run at the Leader Theatre in the Capital, there came up a question that broke up the program for the film men, uttered by one of the movie editors present. "Did Bairnsfather go to London some months before the war in an endeavor to succeed as a caricaturist?" was the query.

The query was brand new. The published stories had it that the young Australian had not the faintest idea that he was destined to become the great portrayer of the funny side of the war. Success had come to him "quite by accident."

Bairnsfather, according to the version accepted, drew a few pictures of trench life to while away time at the front. He had always "made pictures" for pastime, but never by way of professional effort. These pictures from the trenches fell into the hands of the London Bystander, which insisted upon publishing them.

Newspapers have given publicity to this story, but according to the interrogators at the luncheon the account is—just interesting. It is not distinguished by its accuracy. At least, the Washington movie writers, who claimed they had the "inside dope," said that months before the war started Bairnsfather journeyed to London for no other purpose than to earn a livelihood as cartoonist. The story of the "lucky hit" in the trenches was flouted utterly.

New House Organ by Simplex Distributor.

The Yale Theatre Supply Company of Kansas City, Mo., Simplex distributors for Kansas, Oklahoma and part of Missouri, have just issued their first house organ, called the Yale Quarterly Bulletin. The copy at hand shows an unusually high quality type set up on a very high grade paper.

C. D. Struble, editor of the Yale Quarterly Bulletin, is to be congratulated upon his progressiveness in getting up such a business-like looking piece of publicity.

ROTHAPFEL'S UNIT IDEA PROGRESSING

Distinctiveness in Every Detail His Goal—Announces Some Features of First Program

SAMUEL L. ROTHAPFEL'S first objective, following quality of production and detailed artistry in his Unit Program, is distinctiveness in product and personnel of characters. The very foundation upon which his Unit Program rests, the idea—and the realization of this idea—both are distinctive. But distinction in the idea alone, is far from satisfying Mr. Rothapfel's aim. Distinction in every detail is his goal. The Rothapfel idea of art in motion pictures has been impressed upon the millions, particular in his manner of exhibiting, and standing head and shoulders above everything, the Rothapfel idea of musical accompaniment has sounded a note new to the art of giving soulful expression to the silent drama.

These attributes are not air-castles. They have been realized. They stand on their merits. They have been expected. They have been approved. In entering the producing field, Mr. Rothapfel is incorporating all these ideas, the fruition of years of experimentation and success, into his Unit Program. The public has yet to pass on its merits. He only asks that he be given consideration; that the public wait and judge for itself.

Massenet's "Elegie" is used as a basis for a very interesting number. With the music as a background, a short allegory on life and happiness is presented. It is entitled "The Final Hour." This, in a way, symbolizes the theme of the main feature, "False Gods," which follows.

Comedy Written by Hobart.

The comedy was written by George V. Hobart, one of America's best known playwrights. Mr. Hobart wrote the script from a suggestion offered by Mr. Rothapfel. In the cast are Helen Weir, Yvonne Sheldon, Templar Saxe, Walter McEwan, A. J. Herbert and Eugene Acker. The feature number on the program is a screen version of a play by a well known author. Mr. Rothapfel personally supervised these productions. The players are decidedly popular and have by their many appearances in the silent drama proved that they are entitled to the name of star.

The magazine number on the first program has been assembled and contains subjects including scenes taken by Sergt. Owens, U. S. Marine Corps, exclusively for Mr. Rothapfel. These scenes show the veterans of the battle of Chateau Thierry and the famous trench scene with Sergt. Dan Daly in person, said to be the most decorated hero of the war. One of the magazine numbers gives a description by the editor of "Everybody's Magazine" of the Marines at Belleau Wood. This magazine number is entirely away from the conventional news reel and is novel in every respect.

"Japanese Nightingale" Answer Filed.

The sale of the motion pictue rights to the play entitled "A Japanese Nightingale" to Darcey & Wolford, Inc., was made with the kowledge and consent of the Protective Amusement Company, according to an answer filed in the United States District Court by Patrick J. Casey.

The Protective Amusement Company, which was organized by Klaw & Erlanger to buy and sell the film rights to theatrical productions, is seeking to enjoin Pathe Exchange, Inc., Darcey & Wolford, Inc., and Mr. Casey, who is vice-president of the Protective Amusement Company, from exhibiting the photoplay on the ground that the defendant Casey was not duly authorized to dispose of the film rights.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., filed an answer to the complaint recently setting up the purchase of the motion picture rights to the play from Darcey & Wolford, Inc.

E. M. Porter Plans Western Trip.

E. M. Porter, general manager of the Precision Machine Company, builders of Simplex Projectors, is planning an extensive trip this week which will carry him far westward, and in swinging around the circle will bring him in contact with many of the Simplex distributors who are awaiting the newest Simplex improvement.

"Women Who Win" Gets Another Royal Player

"WOMEN WHO WIN," the great six-reel photoplay in which Her Majesty Queen Mary, Her Royal Highness The Crown Princess of Sweden and Princess Patricia of Connaught took a definite part, has a further interest. Her Majesty Queen Alexandra consented to take a part in this drama and the scene was photographed in the conservatory of Marlborough House, April 4. The artistes who appeared before Her Majesty Queen Alexandra were Phyllis Villiers and Mary Dibley.

Also included in this scene was Her Royal Highness Princess Victoria, who took a great interest in it.

Also included in this picture with Her Majesty was Miss K. Belt, the organizer from Women's Service, who has done so much to make this picture a success.

This picture will soon be shown to the trade.

The story was written by Almaz Stout, the chairman of the Society of Lady Journalists. The producers are Percy Nash, and Fred Durrant. The selling rights for the world are owned by T. H. Davidson, 171 Wardour street, London, W. I.

Ernest Shipman to Manage Shipman Curwood Pictures

ERNEST SHIPMAN has signed a two years' contract with Canadian Photoplays, Limited, of Calgary, as business manager of the film productions of James Oliver Curwood. Nell Shipman will be the star of the company.

James Oliver Curwood has given the Canadian company a two years' option on all his published and unpublished stories.

The first production founded upon Curwood's "Wapi, the Walrus," which ran serially in a popular monthly magazine, is now nearing completion at the Brunton studios. The snow scenes were "shot" on Lesser Slave Lake, eighty miles north of the fifty-fifth parallel, and at thirty degrees below zero.

David Hartford is the director, and in a long cast of notables are Ronald Byron, Wheeler Oakman, Wellington Playter, Charles Arling. Dal Clawson and Joseph Walker stand sponsors for the photography. Mr. Curwood spent a month "on location" supervising the correctness of the scenes.

A whaler frozen in the ice, a great fighting dane, the North West Royal Mounted, and over a third of the picture shown in the long Arctic night are some of the features.

The project demands such concentration of management that Ernest Shipman has disposed of all other picture interests and will devote his exclusive time to Canadian Photoplays, Limited. The offices established at 17 West Forty-fourth street, New York, will be retained for the use of the Canadian company.

Changes in Universal Press Staff.

John W. Krafft, formerly connected with the Indianapolis Star, is the latest addition to the publicity forces in the New York home offices. Mr. Krafft, a feature writer in Indianapolis, will take charge of the Universal Bulletin, a weekly publicity service, and the exhibitors press book service. M. Lowell Cash, also a former Indianapolis newspaperman, and for the past eight weeks publicity representative of the New York Universal Exchange, has been selected to succeed J. L. Johnston, in the home office publicity department. Mr. Johnston recently resigned to take over publicity and advertising work for the Finkelstein & Rubin theatrical circuit of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Fred E. Baer has been selected to succeed Mr. Cash at the New York Universal exchange.

Carey Film at the Broadway.

Following a week of big business with Mae Murray's recent Universal Special Attraction, "The Delicious Little Devil," the Broadway Theatre, New York, began a week's showing of Harry Carey's latest Universal release "Bare Fists" on Sunday, April 20.

"DEATH VALLEY" THEATRES PROSPER

Oregon Territory Familiarly Known by This Sobriquet Feels Business Impetus—Hill Expanding

DEATH Valley to the front! This may be doubted by a lot of road men who have made this district of Oregon in the good old days, but the fact nevertheless remains. Travelers invading the Willamette Valley are getting the business as they never have before. True, the prices the Oregon exhibitors are paying for service are right down to rock bottom, but they are booking service and that's a big consolation and a lot more than they did in wartimes.

A recent trip south from Portland finds the theatres in the district in question open on an average of five nights a week. There is a prospect of additional show days now that the boys are coming home and the "flu" scares are over.

Rental Prices Practically Nothing.

"Death Valley" theatres are paying no prices for service, the road men say, and New York home offices not having a thorough knowledge of the true situation, should not expect too much of their representatives on the price question in this district. The low film rental is due to the lack of competition in most of the Williamette Valley towns. They are "one man towns." South from Portland such are Hillsboro, Forest Grove, Newberg, Silverton, Mt. Angel, Woodburn, Lebanon, Albany, Corvallis, McMinnville, Dallas, Sheridan, Independence, Eugene, Cottage Grove, Harrisburg, which is at the lower end of the Valley.

C. F. Hill, former manager of the Goldwyn Company and now head of the Globe Theatres Company, controls the situation in Albany, has the biggest house in Roseburg and the new Rialto in Medford. Rumors are that Mr. Hill's company plans a new theatre in Grants Pass which will give him a complete string of houses down the valley and incidentally the key to the film buying question. That Mr. Hill is going after the business strong in his towns is indicated by the installation of a new organ in Albany and improvements in his other theatre. L. J. Percy, of the Medford firm of Moran and Percy, managers the Antlers in Roseburg for Mr. Hill and A. J. Moran manages the Rialto in Medford.

Nelson and Henkle, who control the situation in Independence, are planning to expand.

Scenarist Gains Salary Verdict in Appeals Court

A VERDICT for $1,600 against the World Film Corporation and in favor of Virginia Tyler Hudson, scenario writer, was handed down in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on April 17. In January, 1918, at the time of the reorganization of the World Film Corporation and when William A. Brady retired as Director-General, Miss Hudson, who had been in charge of all of the scenario work for the corporation, was released with nineteen weeks of a year's contract still to run.

She sued for $1,900 salary and won a verdict with costs in the City Court. On appeal by the World Film Corporation, this verdict was affirmed in the Supreme Court. The World Film Corporation again appealed to the Appellate Division.

The Appellate Division reduced the verdict by $300 because of three weeks spent by Miss Hudson in a local hospital at the time of the reorganization of the company. The validity of the contract was sustained. Miss Hudson is the wife of Grant L. Brightman, a New York newspaper man.

Dorothy Dalton Comes East to Make Big Production

DOROTHY DALTON, Thomas H. Ince's Paramount star, slipped into New York recently quite unheralded except for the announcement, made some weeks ago from California, that her trip to the East was contemplated. Miss Dalton was accompanied on her journey by her parents and maid and is stopping at the Hotel Algonquin.

Mr. Ince has sent Miss Dalton to New York to do what, it is said, will be the most sensational picture of her career before the camera.

The picture is to be a veritable de luxe production, it is said, and will have as locales New York and Paris—hence the advisability of doing it in an Eastern setting. It is to be highly dramatic, dealing with the Apaches of the French capital and with people in the higher strata of both cities.

Seabury Out of Organization.

W. M. Seabury announces that he is no longer connected with the Film Clearing House, the Independent Sales Corporation, the Rothapfel Picture Corporation or any other enterprise with which these companies are now affiliated.

Mr. Seabury says it is a pleasure for him to express publicly his best wishes for the continued success of his friends and associates in the companies named. He is devoting his time to his professional duties.

Rowley to Build in Ranger.

Announcement has been made by E. H. Rowley, one of the owners of the R. and R. picture shows of West Texas, that he has closed a contract for the location of a moving picture theatre at Ranger, the town made famous by the discovery of oil, and will soon have it in operation. This gives the R. and R. interests movie houses at Abilene, San Angelo, Sweetwater, Hillsboro, Ranger and a number of other Texan towns.

SIMPLEX NOTES EDUCATIONAL INTEREST

Installations Outside of Theatres Include Schools, Universities, Clubs and Factories

A GLANCE through the records of Simplex installations made in fields other than theatrical, again calls attention to the fact that many of the leading colleges, industrial plants and institutions are now using moving pictures in connection with their several activities. And a report from a Simplex official informs us that elaborate plans are being outlined which will embrace the educational field, which is now open and in a receptive condition for an absolutely fireproof machine.

The list of Simplex installations includes the following: Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala.; Stanford University, Pala Alto, Cal.; University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.; Purdue University, Indiana University, Lafayette , Ind.; Drake University, Des Moines, Ia.; Cornell College, Ithaca, N. Y.; Harvard Medical School, Cambridge, Mass.; Harvard University, Class 1917-1918-1919; Stevens' Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J.; Bushwick High School, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Washington Irving High School, New York City; Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y.; State University, Albany, N. Y.; St. John's College, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Ohio Northern University, Hardin, O.; Ohio State University, Columbus, O.; United States Indian School, Carlisle, Pa.; Norwich University, Northfield, Vt.; University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.; Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.; Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.; Du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, Wilmington, Pa.; John Wanamaker, New York City and Philadelphia, Pa.; Biltmore Hotel, New York City; Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, Reading, Pa.; John Stetson Hat Company, Philadelphia; Automobile Club of America, New York City; Museum of Natural History, New York City; Art Museum, Detroit, Mich.; Polyclinic Hospital, New York City; Ohio State Penitentiary, Columbus, O.; State Prison, Sing Sing, N. Y.

Educational Films in Liverpool.

We are indebted to the Bioscope for the information that the Birkenhead Institute (Liverpool, England) is doing pioneer work in definite form of making the film educationally useful. In conjunction with the Education Committee, the institute has secured the permission of the Licensing Justices for a special afternoon session for school children in a large theatre from which adults will be excluded. The films to be shown are "Serbia at the Outbreak of the War," "A Tour Through Japan," "Aviation," "With Our American Allies," "The Preparation of Hemp," and "Nature Studies," beginning with "The Life of a Crab." It is significantly asked "Why does not London follow suit?"

On this side of the Atlantic we hope that not only London or New York will follow suit, but also all the United States. This method of using a nearby theatre is one that has been advocated by the educational department of the Moving Picture World for several years. There is little doubt that when the school and picture authorities thus begin to work together many antipathies will be eradicated and many forward moves will be made.

"Sunshine and Shadows."

The Post-Van Scoy scenic picture, "Sunshine and Shadows," exhibited at the Rivoli theatre the week of April 6, consists of a collection of beautiful scenes gathered from everywhere. It includes views of waterfalls which suggest Yosemite, and winter scenes wherein the frivolity of the waters is stayed by the hand of Jack Frost. Great banks of ice and snow as found in mountainous regions, and other scenes of beauty are included. What might be considered the feature of the picture is a scene in which the spray blown from a waterfall resembles slender lines of smoke. The picture presents a laboratorial fault which should be corrected. This consists of a lack of judgment and delicacy in tinting. For instance the scene following a subtitle which poetically suggests brown waters and golden bubbles, should not be tinted a vivid blue. The eye naturally looks for sepia tints.

"A Palestine Pilgrimage."

The latest release of the Rothacker Outdoor Series appearing on the Exhibitors Mutual program is "A Palestine Pilgrimage," an educational subject of value to Bible students and others. The picture is of special interest at the present time, according to the subtitlist, who suggests that while the Peace Conference is talking about presenting Palestine to the Jews and the Jews are wondering what they will do with it when they get it, we take advantage of the opportunity to run over and give it the "once over." The first stop is at the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem on the spot where Jesus was born, and from here we go to the shores of the Sea of Gallilee, unchanged since the days when He wandered there with His disciples. The ancient City of Tiberius comes next, viewed from above and later from its streets, showing the poverty and general misery of the Moslem rule, with interesting types of its inhabitants. The closing scenes of the picture center about the wonderful old ruins of Baalbek, whose history is a sealed book.

"How the Telephone Talks."

In release No. 6113 of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, Lyle Goldman, of the Bray studios, has presented a graphic description of the manner in which sound is transmitted over a wire by means of the telephone. This he has done by with the aid of animated drawings which show how the sound wave produced by the human voice enters the mouth piece of the transmitter and vibrates a diaphram which in turn compresses and releases a mass of loose carbon granules. Through these carbon granules the electric current is constantly passing and the current fluctuates exactly with the vibration of the diaphram. The receiver is equipped with an electro-magnet and a diaphram, and the electro-magnet is seen to attract and release the diaphram in exact harmony with the electric current fluctuations, the diaphram thus reproducing the tone. An excellent educational picture.

"Camping in the Great Northwest."

With a million or more acres of forest, mountain and lake land to roam about in, it is small wonder that Oregon is the chosen place for the lover of the great out-doors.

To this wild country Wm. L. Finley, of the Oregon Fish and Game Commission, leads us in release 6113 of Paramount-Bray Pictograph, and here he shows us the wonders that benevolent Dame Nature has lavished on this garden spot.

In the grey of the morning mists the party sets out from the city and soon are winding through forest trails to a rushing river. Here trout are waiting the fisherman's fly and in no time at all enough for the whole party are caught.

A few miles farther on we come to a water-fall that for sheer beauty cannot be surpassed.

And so from forest to stream and from stream to lake and mountain the great State of Oregon unfolds her loveliness by means of the camera.

"The Eagle and the Fawn."

A one-reel release of the Educational Films Corporation of America, "The Eagle and the Fawn," is a drama enacted by Crow Indians. The slender story tells of the romance of a youthful Indian pair, and links together illustrations of various customs of the Crow Indians. The story shows a young brave named Eagle suing for the hand of a beautiful Indian maiden called Fawn. Fawn's father, chief of the tribe, refuses the hand of his daughter until Eagle has proved himself an able huntsman. To win the longed for reward Eagle takes to the plains and before long returns with splendid trophies of the hunt and is pronounced deserving of the "feather in his cap," which characterizes the head dress of the Indian brave. The chief value of the picture is its splendid revelation of the tribal customs of the Crow Indians.

Brockliss Buys Rights to All Augustus Thomas Films

SIDNEY GARRETT, president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., film exporters, closed a contract for world's rights except the United States and Canada, for the entire series of six Augustus Thomas feature photoplays, the first of which "As A Man Thinks," is soon to be released by Harry Raver, of Four Star Pictures, under the new Raver plan of production, involving co-operative equality between producer, author, star and director.

This important series of productions will be distributed throughout America by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation through the Pathe system of offices. "As A Man Thinks" will be the first production to go out under the new Hodkinson sales policy of unrestricted open booking.

In discussing this contract Mr. Garrett declared his conviction that the public has come to regard the value of a photoplay with a great author's name attached to is, as infinitely superior to that which carries the name of a star only.

"I have seen Mr. Thomas' first play of the new series, 'As a Man Thinks,'" said Mr. Garrett. "I may say that there is not a single defect in the production. It is a splendid drama splendidly visualized.

SEE PICTURES AS THE ONLY AMUSEMENT

Vaudeville Stars Touring Texas Declare Poor Railroad Service Threaten Death Blow to "Legitimate"

WITHIN the next year or so moving pictures will be the only form of amusement in the theatrical field, according to the opinion of several prominent vaudeville stars in Dallas during the past few weeks.

The popularity of the "legitimate" stage has been on the decline ever since the advent of the silent drama, and now, so stage people declare, poor railroad service and lack of co-operation on the part of business interests threaten to deal the death blow to their profession.

"Theatrical people are imposed on by every one—merchants, hotel keepers and the railroads," says Mme. Albertina Rasch, internationally known as an opera ballerina and now appearing on the Interstate Amusement Circuit.

"The railroads perhaps have done more to discourage threatrical activity than anything else," she continues. "Transportation was bad enough under private ownership, but under the present Government control, where the responsibility may be shifted from one man to another indefinitely, conditions are abominable.

May Have to Go Abroad.

"We are forced to depend on the prompt arrival of our scenery in order to carry on our business, but no consideration is made of that. Under present ruling baggage does not have to go on the same train that the passenger rides on, and consequently I have lost hundreds of dollars because of the non-arrival of costumes and scenery.

"If the thing keeps up I shall have to go abroad where the cities are closer together and engagements longer, or open a school of dancing in New York."

Valerie Bergere, well known for her vaudeville playlets, also fears that road tours will soon have to be abandoned.

"In order to come here from the North to play my four weeks on this circuit," said Miss Bergere, "I had to pay $350 excess baggage charges on scenery that was terribly handled en route.

"Government ownership has simply eaten all profits so that things are at a crisis in regard to the future of traveling theatrical companies. Delays of several hours are frequent and, as is well known, scenery is perishable. Each loading and unloading puts it just that much nearer discard.

No Co-operation from Hotels.

"Hotels have refused to make reservations or accommodations in advance," continues Miss Bergere, "and often when we get into cities we are unable to find places to stay. Hotel keepers know we are transients and have no effective means of retaliation and therefore we are overcharged. Immediate action must be taken or the theatrical business will soon be a thing of the past."

Dozens of stars have declared that the issue is near the crisis and that developments are expected soon. Members of the theatrical profession are planning to leave the stage in droves at the end of the present season.

Mildred Considine with Mary Pickford.

Mildred Considine, scenario writer, arrived in Los Angeles from Chicago recently to become Mary Pickford's scenarioist. Having assisted in the titling of "Daddy Long Legs," she is now working on a story, the idea for which was supplied by Miss Pickford.

Miss Considine has furnished most of the well known stars with stories. Last year she wrote the adaptation of "Ghosts of Yesterday" for Norma Talmadge, "Common Clay" for Fannie Ward, "Romance of the Underworld" for Catherine Calvert, "Framing Framers" for Triangle, in which Charles Gunn was starred, and "All Wrong" for Bryant Washburn. Previously she wrote the adaption of thirty-two reels of the "Jimmie Dale Series."

Overlap.

OVERLAP your program. If your bill runs from Suñday to the following Saturday, inclusive, and your program is issued on a Saturday, give that day as well as the following Saturday. Then get the programs around early and you may get some matinee business and assuredly will make something on the night. Remind them of the current attraction and you should make more than enough to pay the printer, but say "Tonight, Saturday," and the date and have the "tonight" big, for that is what you have to sell. Most managers seem to think that if they announce each feature once, they are doing all they can, but if you come out with a double slam for Saturday, you are bound to make some extra business. In many houses the program will be lost before Saturday comes and there is no data on the attraction for that night, where often the family might be drawn out if again reminded of some special feature.

"Some Ad."

The Strand, Harriman, Pa., sends in a full sixes with the comment, "Some ad. eh?" and we echo the "some," for it is doing something to take nearly a full page when your own town is too small to have a newspaper and you have to advertise in a nearby town, but this is what the Strand did. is an adaptation of the Bleich idea, with the larger half given to the launching of the serial. The usual daily space runs from five to seven inches or more, single column. We wish the management would explain what one of these daily advertisement means when it says "First show 6:30 sharp. Second show 8:30. Admission by prize fight tickets only." That's a new one. The house also gets out a four or six page program for local use. The six pager carries two pages of local trade advertising, but this apparently is not always used, though we would imagine that merchants would welcome a chance to reach the local folks direct.

Back Stenciled.

Here is something that seems to be new. Charles H. Ryan, of the Garfield, Chicago, uses a stencil instead of a rubber stamp to imprint his envelope backs with a special announcement. We do not know how he does it, but presume that he has a tray of stencils made up and uses the single trayful over and over. The imprint looks better than a rubber stamp would, for as a rule it is not easy to rubber stamp envelopes quickly and get a good impression without blurring. The stencil works much better. It would be best to keep this off the face of the envelope to prevent its being confounded with the address, but on the back it will gain immediate attention.

Mr. Chenoweth Again.

H. A. Chenoweth has been away from this department so long that perhaps you've forgotten him, but he is still managing the Strand, Westfield, Mass., for the Goldstein Brothers, and getting out a 9 by 12 three day program in default of a handy daily paper. We show two of these, one with a rather involved schedule. He is showing "Fit to Fight," a propaganda picture which seems to be cleaning up in the New England states. This is shown in the afternoon and after the regular night show, to men only, no admission being charged. In between he has a Girls' Club Benefit, rather an odd mix. His regular show shows both, "Arizona" and "The Bells," a double program of some weight, but these features are not played up in the Tuesday showing, though "Arizona" is made the feature on the Monday bill. It is a good substitute for newspaper work if you have no newspaper, but it does not equal the daily where there is one.

A House Organ.

Verner Hicks, of the Family, Marion, Ill., sends in some issues of his house organ which was started with the new year. He explains that it is all machine work, and that for the first three issues he had to use news stock. It would not matter if he used news stock right along, if he gives them something to read. Make the program readable and you do not have to worry about the stock, and Mr. Hicks splits about 50-50 with the patron in the matter of text and scatters the stuff so that you have to read it all to get the "pure reading." This is a good idea, and we think that the fans keep and read the sheet. The cut shows the inside pages and the front, giving a general idea. The sheet is the usual 5 by 8. Mr Hicks writes:

> I am enclosing copies of a little sheet we are putting out for this theatre. As you will note, this is dated Sunday, and we distribute 2,000 of these every Sunday morning, as I believe this day is one of the best days to get advertising matter read. This is not a Sunday show town however. I am short a copy of the first issue, and am sorry that I had to use ordinary news stock for the first three issues. The use of white paper improves the appearance considerably. You will note I am carrying no advertising, that is from outsiders. Press work is not always perfect. The entire job is machine set, and the program for the week would probably look better if hand set, using a different style type.
> Note your comments on Herrin, Ill., Hippodrome advertising, issue of March 1, regarding getting a quarter for an attraction in Southern Illinois towns. Will say that this is not done very often, and when we raise over regular admission price of 10 and 15 cents, we hear an awful noise. However, we ran "The Great Love" two days in this town at 35 cents, including tax, and I have never heard of a kick. Others were afraid to ask it in these small towns, I believe: I used an orchestra on this special and did a big business.

Also will say that we are now arranging to build a large modern theatre, which will be known as the Hippodrome, and which will be owned and controlled by the owner of this theatre and the owner of the Hippodrome at Herrin. Another large house will be built at Murphysboro to seat about 1,500, this will give us three large modern houses in good towns and close together.

Distributing the program on Sunday morning is a capital idea. It is worth a lot more than the extra trouble it costs, for as Mr. Hicks says, the people then have time for reading. But we think that he would do well to increase the size of the sheet, take trade advertising and make a profit on the direct printing, with the money it draws all velvet. It can be done with a well edited sheet—and this is well done.

An Envelope Novelty.

The Third Street Theatre, Easton, Pa., took the Roosevelt film for an entire week; which is going some for a town that size, but it had it exclusive and pulled the lid off the publicity. The cut shows a specially printed envelope, brown ink being used. It made a striking display and was better than had it been printed up with a display advertisement, for the people will open the envelope to see why the picture should be outside. The Third Street is coming into form again.

Dayton Doings.

The Dayton Theatre, Dayton, Ohio, seems to have reformed on the matter of hand lettering, and though it still musses up the titles and stars with eccentric lettering, there is type to carry the real talk. The display at the left is a two sixteens while the other is a three fourteens. The longer display is the regular length plus the underline, which is added to the drawn design and then hooked up with rule. The rule can be dropped and the design run by itself as in the display at the right, when thought necessary. Here is the way Mark Gates handles the reissue question in another display:

Special Announcement.

Great paintings, exquisite music and good books do not lose their charm, and though the art of motion photography is young there are available many gems of photo-plays that comparatively few have seen. The management of the Dayton has decided to run, from time to time, a brand new print of one of these old masters as an extra added attraction. This will in no way interfere with the showing of the best obtainable first runs of the highest class motion pictures. The first of these revivals is now being shown, Charles Spencer Chaplin in "A Night In a Show," and its success fully justifies the new policy.

MARK M. GATES,
Managing Director.

This is a double eleven the day following the pictorial advertisement shown above. This announcement is paneled in a 4½ inch box, and is set in twelve point italic only eighteen ems wide in a 23 em space, giving plenty of white margin. The rest of the space is given to the signature and to the announcement of the full bill. Instead of following the announcement of Chaplin, it is given a special division to emphasize the subject and has much greater weight than had the argument been made a part of the regular display. It is in such little points that Mr. Gates wins over the average advertiser. He knows the niceties because he has studied them.

Roosevelt De Luxe.

The De Luxe, of Hutchinson, Kansas, has been using half pages lately to get attractions over. And they are good half pages, too. Here, for instance, is one for the Roosevelt picture with a poor half tone, but a good layout. The strips top and bottom carry vignettes which may be battle scenes or most anything. They are by no means distinct, but they look interesting, and that is all that was intended. A set of three finely executed sketches would have detracted from the main advertisement. As it is, you look at them and they seem to be all right, though you do not know what the deuce they are, so you go read the advertising display instead, and that is what it was intended you should do. We like the tone of the announcement. It does not promise too much, and it will not disappoint.

Here is another display from the De Luxe Theatre, Hutchinson, Kansas. It is only a two sixes, apparently a publicity cut, but it stands well on the page, and the lower silhouettes, first used by the

Ruff Stuff.

Here is the way Ralph Ruffner put over "Virtuous Wives." It is a classy half page, and now that Ruff knows all about New York from oysters to the shimmy dance, he can talk passionately about the evils of the big town. He could tell a lot more than he does in this display, but probably he is afraid of getting in bad with Mrs. Ruff, who did not accompany him on the trip and who has been trying ever since to find out just what he did. This is not like the average Ruffner advertisement, but it is a good one, though only the size saves the lettering of the star and title in the frame. It may be artistic, but smaller than a half page it would be poor work.

Language.

Nixon's Victoria, Baltimore, sings a Te-Deum over "Hoop-la," starting off with "In blessed relief from Battle, Murder and Sudden Death, Hoop-la." Then a little lower down in a single fifteen:

> In blessed relief, we repeat, from the battle, murder and sudden death with which film patrons for a year or more have been lugubriously, morbidity, sadly, sobbingly entertained—Shades of Webster's Unabridged, Roget's Thesaurius and Trench on Words, "entertained!"—Nixon's Victoria presents this week, for the first time in Baltimore, a jovial, joyous, rollicking romance of the sawdust ring, with its ever-young charm of the clowns, the piebald horse, tissue hoops, the flying trapeze, the spangled vaulters, the tulleskirted riding-lady—so like an animated feather-duster—the gorgeous ring master, the Rajah's favorite odalisque in the elephant's howdah, the tang of tan-bark, peanuts, pink lemonade—

"HOOP-LA!"

And then some soul-relieving and heart-uplifting "Yips" for who appears in "Hoop-la" not as Vampire-Lady (sine qua non of the battle, murder and sudden death stuff), nor as Deceived-Lady, nor Woman-with-a-Past-Lady, but only as that most entrancing bit of feminine—a circus girl! For the man who never lost his boyhood heart to one of them has missed half the joy of living.

PERSONAL NOTE—The Manager of the Victoria offers "Hoop-La" not only as a relief to the public, but also as a relief to himself. He believes that the public, no less than the film-theatre, has had a surfeit of horrors and atrocities, as well as of bawdy sensuality and salacity. Or, if not a surfeit, at least as much as is good for them. In the case of the former, the French Tiger Clemenceau may be trusted to settle with the swinish Huns who perpetrated them, even if some squashy, mushy or opportunistic element at the Peace Conference fails in their obligation to humanity.

As for the pestiferous crews from the slums of the theatrical world who smut the screen with loudly-exploited rabelaiseries, the natural, wholsome reaction of the public taste will deal with them in due season. And the reaction will be hastened by just such honest, amiable jollities as

The "personal note" is set in bold face to get a little color into the deep drop, but most of it is eight point Roman. It's a lot of language, but it will appeal to many who are tired of war dramas, and if the house does not have to follow too closely with the stuff it complains of, it is a good advertisement, but it is a bit dangerous to put into words the thoughts of a majority of the patrons until the makers of film get through unloading their war stuff. There is not enough real drama in the market to give one house a triple change a week, every week, and some of the tour stuff must be run. This jubilation will clean up for the circus story, but it will possibly react with the next war play. But we hope that some of the powers that be read this advertisement. It tells how a lot of people feel about certain types of stories they are forced to use.

Keep Fresh.

Don't let your "novelties" grow stale. Paste a poster in the bottom of a barrel and everyone will see it. Not one in ten will look a second time, so get something else for a repeat. Keep changing and you'll keep the crowd with you.

Hook-ups.

Don't use a hook-up only when the press book tells you to. Be on the lookout for opportunities to work in with others. If you hear that the First Baptist Church wants a new organ, or that the Presbyterian Ladies Aid Society is out for funds, let them sell tickets on percentage for you, even if they sell tickets to the people who would come anyway. The fact that you are working in with those institutions will make you more solid with your regular patrons and at the same time you are bound to make some new friends. If you can horn in on some trade display, work for it. If, for example, a certain well known borax company is working your town on an advertising stunt, book in a desert Western and get the stills into the windows along with the borax as being taken "where the borax comes from." Then get them to advertise your picture or at least to distribute your literature along with their own. Work every opening. Don't wait until something is suggested to you.

McCormick's.

S. Barret McCormick had all the chances in the world with Nazimova, and he cleaned up with the striking pictures supplied. Perhaps the best of his colored advertisement is seen in a three nineteens. He took a three fulls, but used the bottom space for a white display for a musical attraction. The half tone does not, of course, give any suggestion of the beauty of this display. The colors used were green, purple and orange. The dominant color is purple and the window panes are orange, shading into green save where the shadow of the dancer falls. A wash of color covers the lettering shown in the text below the cut, and the light thrown through the window. The walls are purple with a caravan of camels in the arch above the window done in purple against an orange background. The bust wrap is green tint with all three colors blending in the loin cloth. Evidently Mr. McCormick shares Mr. Rowland's belief that Nazimova is the star worth while, for he has taken extra space and extra care. The second cut shows a three fifteens and a three thirteens. Here the reverse cut serves to throw the figure into display. For this display Mr. McCormick seems to have written two sets of copy, but he makes his chief appeal with the "Which?" shown in better detail in the third illustration, a three sevens. This is the vital moment of the play and reads the best for advertising purposes. The campaign was unusually well handled, and the best use was made of the good cut material. But Mr. McCormick uses the cuts merely as attractors. He lets them convey their suggestion and then builds up with plenty of talk about the play in general and the problem it presents.

A Colored Three Eighteens Used by Mr. McCormick in His Sunday Advertising.

Watch Your Show.

We heard a manager brag the other day that he did not see one show in ten that he ran on his screen. "I'm out getting schemes for new campaigns," he announced. "I have no time for the show." And yet if he knew his show, he would find it easier to sell tickets. He is out of touch with his house and with his patrons. He must know what he is showing and how it is accepted by the audiences. See your bill through at least once.

Projection Department

Important Notice.

OWING to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive projectionist should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

The Diverging Light Ray.

Well, gentlemen, here we are at last, with the goods. For years some of you have openly sneered at "Richardson's divergent light ray," others have been just plainly skeptical, still others too indifferent to bother with it at all, and it has been only the loyal, progressive few who have had faith sufficient to actually follow our lead in the matter. This department has for several years been telling, mostly to deaf ears, of the huge importance of the matter. It has almost begged unbelievers to give the matter attention. It has failed even to interest the machine manufacturers, who should have been at least enterprising enough to investigate. And now we are here with proof positive, which is going to make you sit up and take notice, whether you want to or not. Forgive us this little crow. We have suffered much from the unbelievers and feel justified in rubbing it in mildly.

For years we have been preaching to you the divergence of the light ray beyond the aperture of the motion picture projector, where the arc light is used as a light source. As to Mazda lamp light source we do not as yet care to make any positive statement. We are inclined to believe that this divergence does not occur with that light source, although the Westinghouse folks set a prismatic condenser 6.5 ins. from the aperture and got the following results: At 3 ins. beyond aperture beam was 40x50 millimeters and the foot candles 38.5 in center and 22.4 at edge. At 5 ins. the ray measured 65x57 mms., wiith 21.7 c. p. in center and 12 at outer edge. So we dunno after all. But anyhow we are not dealing with the Mazda in this article.

As to the arc lamp, our argument is based on accepted practice in practical projection, which places the point of greatest concentration of the condenser beam a bit on the condenser side of the film. It is not our purpose to argue this phase of the matter at this time, except to say that the chief reasons for locating the aperture at this point are found in the resultant loss of light and ghosts on the screen if the point of greatest concentration be advanced appreciably beyond the aperture. Beyond making this statement we will let this phase of the matter rest, in so far as concerns this article, because, regardless of whys and wherefores every projectionist knows that it is true.

And now let us get down to business. The light measurements we shall herewith present were made at the request of this department by both the National Lamp Works laboratories, Cleveland, Ohio, and by the Westinghouse Lamp Works laboratories, Bloomfield, New Jersey. The results were, to all intents and purposes, identical, which serves to prove that no error has been made. We are using the National data because it was the more complete in the matter of fine subdivisions of measurements; also the National measurements were very carefully analyzed for us by R. P. Burrows, of the National Lamp Works Engineering Department. My request was for measurements across the light beam on the projection lens side of the aperture, at 3, 5 and 7 inches, respectively from the aperture, with the condenser at 10 and 18 inches from the aperture.

It would manifestly be impractical to use an arc crater as a source of light, because of the impossibility of maintaining uniform brilliancy for a considerable space of time. The light source decided upon was; an opal glass illuminated by a Mazda projection lamp. Over this glass was placed a metal plate in which was an opening .5 of an inch in diameter. This formed a light source which, for the purpose, perfectly simulated the electric arc crater. The only difference was that the light was very much weaker. Its action was, however, precisely the same, insofar as has to do with the lens system of a projector, as the action of an electric arc crater. This light source was placed in the same position with relation to the condenser that the crater would normally occupy. The whole lineup is shown in Figure A.

Exact Dimension and Shape of Light Ray Three Inches from Aperture, on Projection Lens Side, When Condenser Is 10 Inches from the Aperture.

In Figure B we see the other side of the screen, with the photometer in place. The radial holes in the screen are the holes through which measurements were taken. They correspond to the divisions in the charts here-with submitted. You can thus see how thoroughly the job was done.

| Zone | Area | Avg. F.C. | Lumens | % Total |
| 1 | .0077 | 43.7 | .34 | 5.8 |
| 2 | .062 | 31.4 | 1.95 | 33.6 |
| 3 | .123 | 17.4 | 2.14 | 36.6 |
| 4 | .113 | 6.2 | 1.40 | 24.0 |
| remaining zones | | | | |
| | | Total | 5.83 | 100.00 |

In considering the charts it must be remembered that the total lumens would be many times greater with an arc lamp light source, though the percentages would not be in the slightest degree altered. In other words the difference in relative strength of illumination as between the different zones would be exactly the same. If in a given instance the light flux in Zone 1 (center zone) were ten times stronger, the flux in all other zones would also be ten times stronger. In considering the charts, it must be remembered that they are actual, full size, just exactly as they were made. For instance, in figure 3 the ray is the shape of the aperture opening and is 4⅝ ins. wide by 4 1/16 ins. high. Well, that was precisely the size of the ray at a point seven inches from the aperture, on the projection lens side, with the condenser 10 ins. from the aperture, when the measurements were taken. Do you get the idea? All right, then, we will proceed to consider Figure 1. You will observe that the ray is, under this condition, 2 9/16 ins. wide by 2⅛ ins. high. Note well the condition—condenser 10 inches from aperture, measurements taken 3 ins. from aperture, on projection lens side. In the center you will see a circle just ⅜ of an inch in diameter. This is "Zone No. 1."

| Zone | Area | Avg. F.C. | Lumens | % Total |
| 1 | .0077 | 26.0 | .200 | 3.4 |
| 2 | .062 | 22.0 | 1.40 | 24.0 |
| 3 | .123 | 14.2 | 1.75 | 30.0 |
| 4 | .183 | 6.83 | 1.25 | 21.5 |

| | | Total | 5.83 | |

Exact Shape and Size of Ray Five Inches from Aperture, on Projection Lens Side, with Condenser 10 Inches from Aperture.

Then comes another circle ⅜ of an inch across, which is Zone No. 2, and then a third circle ⅜ of an inch across, Zone No. 3, and so on up to seven zones in figure 3. All zones in all charts are of equal width—⅜ of an inch. Outside Zone No. 3, all charts, you will observe a solid circle. This circle represents approximately that part of the various charts a projection lens 2 ins. in diameter would cover. You will observe that such a lens would cover the first three zones, and NO MORE. Keep that fact firmly fixed in your minds. It is of huge importance.

Beside each chart you will observe a tabulation of results. Study them. They are very enlightening. Examine Figure 1. You will see that the light flux in Zone

| Zone | Area | Avg. F.C. | Lumens | % Total |
|---|---|---|---|---|

| 3 | .123 | 11.4 | 1.40 | 24.0 |
| 4 | .183 | 8.4 | 1.54 | 26.4 |
| 5 | .295 | 5.9 | 1.47 | 25.2 |
| remaining zones | | | .41 | 7.0 |

1 is 43.7 foot candles, and in Zone 2 it averages 31.4 You will also observe that in Zone 4 (outside the field of a 2 inch diameter lens), it only averages 6.2 foot candles. "Huh," we think we hear some of you say, "we can afford to lose that. The light is all in the center!" Not so! Stop a moment and cast your gaze on the percentages of total illumination in the various zones. First zone, for all its high c. p., has only .34 of a lumen, or 5.8% of the total light in the four zones. Zone 2 has 1.95 lumens, or 33.6% of the total. Zone 3 has 2.14 lumens, or 36% of the total and ZONE 4 HAS 1.40 LUMENS, OR 24% OF THE TOTAL LIGHT CONTAINED IN ALL FOUR ZONES.

Exact Size and Shape of Ray Three Inches from Aperture When Condenser Is 18 Inches from Aperture.

Beginning to wake up now, aren't you? Twenty-four per cent. of your light gone to waste (24% of your input wattage, in other words) if a 2 inch diameter lens be used under this condition. Begins to look as though there was something in Richardson's diverging light ray dope, after all, doesn't it? Well, let's hold hands and wander on a bit further. Skipping Figure 2 we will examine Figure 3. Examining its tabulated results we discover the fact that with a two-inch-diameter projection lens we would gather 41.4% of the total light, and LOSE 58.6%. Of course the condition shown in figure 3 is abnormal, in that a condenser is never actually brought quite so close to the aperture. but in many instances you chaps who have persistently refused to bother your heads over such "bunk," are actually wasting mighty nearly 50% of your wattage in the way here shown, and by, in addition, refusal to use the lens charts are actually WASTING MORE THAN HALF YOUR LIGHT, OR HALF YOUR WATTAGE.

In the various charts you will note another thing. Take Figure 3 for instance, the total light flux is the same for all the charts where the condenser distance is ten inches, viz.: 5.83, but you will notice that whereas in Figure 1 this flux in Zone 1 is 43.7 foot candles, in Figure 3 it is only 17.2, proving that as the ray spreads the light flux spreads also, and in all portions of the ray. And so we could go on drawing interesting deductions for pages, but inasmuch as we are going into the matter in much detail in a paper to be read before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which paper will later be published in this department and in their published proceedings, we will not go further, except to present Figures 4, 5 and 6 briefly.

You will observe that the pulling back of the condenser a distance of eight inches has operated to reduce the ray from 2 9/16 x 2 3/16 inches to a trifle less than 1¾ x 1 7/16, so that a 2-inch-diameter projection lens now all but entirely covers the ray. The light flux now is as follows: Zone 1 has 10.8%, Zone 2 has 49.2%, and Zone 3 has 40%. But one thing puzzles us, viz., the total lumens of light have dropped to 1.75. This must, we think, have been due to failure to adjust the light source with relation to the lens for the new condition. It would not effect the percentages of light in the various zones, or in any manner alter the integrity of the results arrived at, but it does raise a question as to just what the cause was.

And thus our case is absolutely proven, and you have again been shown the necessity for studying your lens system. The projectionist cannot, of course, entirely control light loss from the causes herein set forth. The condenser position (distance from aperture) is fixed automatically by the amperage, hence all that can be done at present is to try to use a lens which will cover the ray. This is, however, a makeshift. The real solution is to be found in re-designing of projection lenses so that lenses of all focal lengths (E. F.) will have a fixed back focus, which same must not exceed two or two and a half inches. There is nothing impossible in this. It has already been done by Mr. Sabo. It can be done by all lens manufacturers if they want to do it. If they don't want to do it, then they should be made to do it, because the industry has something to say about a matter of so serious moment.

The whole secret of this seemingly puzzling matter is found in the areas. Take Figure 3 for example. While the light flux in Zone 1 is three times as strong as in Zone 5, the AREA of Zone 5 is .245 of a square foot, whereas that of Zone 1 is only .0077 of a square foot, so that there is many times more light in Zone 5 than there is in Zone 1. The problem then is, how to pick up the light in Zones 4 and 5. A 2.5-inch diameter lens would admit all the light in Zone 4, but none of that in Zone 5, and there are very serious objections to such large diameter

Boylan Reel to Have Tryout.

In response to an inquiry as to what had become of the Boylan Even Tension Reel, which this department examined quite some time ago and thought well of, but which later dropped out of sight, we wrote George R. Collins at his last known address. He is now in Washington, and says he is having a few hundred of the reels made up. We shall be glad to see this reel have a real tryout. It is one of those things which look almost foolishly simple, but which really seems to work. Its vital parts consist of a wooden hub with a round hole about, as nearly as I can remember, two inches in diameter. In this hole is another wooden hub which attaches to the takeup spindle in the usual way. The outer hub, to which is attached the reel sides and which carries the film roll, rides on the inner hub. That is all there is to it. The friction between the two hubs provides the takeup pull, which becomes, of course, slightly heavier as the weight of the film winding on the reel increases. We shall have this reel thoroughly tested out as soon as possible. We already have some evidence that it really works, and works perfectly. If final tests bear this out then this reel, which should cost but little more than ordinary reels, will give a mild, steady takeup pull without any possibility of damage to film; also it will cheapen the projector by making the present takeup tension altogether unnecessary.

BALTIMORE HOUSES WILL CONSOLIDATE

The Bridge and Edmonson Theatres Are To Be Rebuilt at an Expenditure of $25,000

PLANS are now being prepared by architects for the consolidation of the Bridge and Edmondson theatres, located at Edmondson avenue and Pulaski streets, which are operated by the Edmondson Amusement Company, of which Louis Schlichter is the president. Mr. Schlichter is also president of the Exhibitors' League, of Maryland. According to the plans, the two theatres will be entirely rebuilt, and will have a seating capacity of 1,400. The approximate cost, according to Mr. Schlichter, will be about $25,000. An orchestra and an organ will be installed. The projection arrangements will be the best that can be installed, as F. H. Richardson, Projection Editor of the Moving Picture World, was consulted.

Picture Garden Gives Another Benefit.

A third benefit for soldiers and sailors was held at the Picture Garden Theatre, 31 West Lexington street, through the courtesy of Joseph and Harry Blechman, proprietors, on Sunday night, April 13. The affair was held under the auspices of Perseverance Lodge, No. 26, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Music and pictures were furnished for the occasion by the management. A collecting amounting to $57 was taken up.

Maas Is Vitagraph's Assistant Manager.

Louis O. Maas, who for the past several weeks has represented the Vitagraph Company in Baltimore, has been appointed assistant branch manager of the Washington office.

Out-of-Town Building Operations.

Plans have been drawn up by J. B. Collins, for Rose and Seigal, of Alexandria, Va., for a one-story moving picture theatre which will cost approximately $15,000. The structure will measure 40 by 120 feet.

The Masonic Opera House, at Hinton, W. Va., which was recently damaged by fire, is to be rebuilt. U. S. Ellis is the manager.

Hartlove Puts Over Advertising Stunt.

A unique method of advertising his show was used by J. J. Hartlove, manager of the Crescent Theatre, 1110 South Charles street, on Thursday, April 17. He tied up a red glove in a package and dropped it in the vicinity of his theatre, and then advertised in the Baltimore News and American photoplay sections and the Sun "Lost and Found column" that he would give the finder a reward if presented at the box office.

Katherine Kavanaugh Returns Home.

Katherine Kavanaugh, who for some time past has been on the writing staff of the Metro Pictures Corporation in New York, has now returned to her home in Baltimore and will devote her time to free-lance writing. She has opened a studio at 519 North Charles street.

Maine News Notes

Rockland Theatres Incorporate.

THE Rutland Theatres, Inc., of Rockland, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state at Augusta, with $200,000 capital stock, all common, and nothing paid in. The par value is $50, and three shares have been subscribed. Officers are as follows: Carrie L. Fields, Rockland, president and treasurer; E. B. McAllister, clerk, Rockland; directors, Carrie L. Fields, E. B. McAllister and Albert C. Parkard, all of Rockland, and Goldie M. Young, of Thomaston. The company will carry on a general amusement business.

Bangor Opera House Association.

The Bangor Opera House Association has been incorporated for the purpose of building a new opera house on Main street, the site of the old opera house, which was destroyed by fire in January, 1914. The project was given an impetus by the action of the late J. P. Bass, who sold the site to the new corporation in return for 200 shares of stock. A. S. Black, who controls a string of moving picture theatres in Maine will, it is understood, take a lease of the new house. Shares are now being offered to the people of Bangor and eastern Maine.

Verily the "V" stands for Victory—and bills must be paid.

Philadelphia News Letter

Dunlap Takes Over Criterion.

JOHN F. DUNLAP, JR., has taken over the Criterion Theatre, at 1032 North Fourth street, which has been used as a storehouse during the past three years. The theatre has been completely overhauled and repainted and entire new equipment and chairs have been installed. The house will open in a few days, ready for business, as "The Dunlap," and John J. Hanly will be the assistant manager.

Buss Manages Easton Strand.

C. D. Buss, who has just been mustered out of the service, has returned to Easton, and will take over the management of the Strand Theatre, starting May 1. Mr. Buss opened up with the Third Street Theatre six years ago and has also been with the Arrow Film Company, New York. While in Philadelphia recently he contracted for the Triangle Olive Thomas and Taylor Holmes Specials.

O'Keefe Improves Atlantic City House.

Edward J. O'Keefe, the progressive manager of several theatres in Atlantic City, has taken over the Criterion, one of the most popular houses on the Boardwalk. The entire house has been remodeled and redecorated and a handsome new front has been built. A unit orchestral organ has been installed, also 1,700 new upholstered seats. The policy of the house will be year-round program similar to the Cort and City Square theatres.

Court Decides Against Censors.

Granting the petition of the Goldwyn Film Corporation, the Supreme Court has ordered argument on the appeal which the Board of Censors took from the decision of the Court of Common Pleas, allowing public presentation of the film, "The Brand." The Board of Censors condemned the film, which shows a drama of Alaska life by Rex Beach. The Court below decided that the Board acted arbitrarily and abused the power vested in them by condemning the film because of the theme of the story.

Powell and Glenn Entertain Invalids.

C. J. Powell and P. Glenn secured several films from the Triangle and others in order to give a motion picture show at the Sunnyrest Sanitorium, Ancora, N. J., on Sunday, April 6. Hundreds of patients suffering from the last stages of tuberculosis were made happy through the kindness of the above men who gave their personal time and attention to the details of the showing.

Green Represents Triangle.

Joseph J. Green, for many years an exhibitor, showman, state rights buyer and actor is now representing the Triangle Distributing Corporation on the road.

MOE GLANZ STEPS UP ONE MORE RUNG

Former Salesman of Select's Pittsburg Office Is Now Assistant Manager Under L. F. Levison

MOE GLANZ, salesman for the Select Pictures Corporation working out of the Pittsburgh office, has been promoted to the position of assistant to Manager Levison.

Mr. Glanz has earned his promotion through untiring efforts in co-operating with the various exhibitors in this territory, and likewise in securing excellent results for the office he is associated with. He has been associated with the present manager, L. F. Levison, for some time past, having been in his employ with the Pathe Exchanges, Inc., until such time as Mr. Levison took charge of the local office of the Select Pictures Corporation, where Mr. Glanz joined the sales force some two or three weeks later.

A Splendid Theatre for Coraopolis.

William R. Wheat, Jr., exhibitor of Sewickley, has purchased a site in Fifth avenue, Coraopolis, on which he will erect a photoplay house with a seating capacity of 1,000, to cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. Architects are now preparing the plans, and work on the structure will be commenced shortly. The decorations, lighting effects and ventilation system will be of the very latest types.

Work Commences on New Film Building.

Work commenced Tuesday, April 15, on the remodeling of the new film building at 1018 Forbes street, Pittsburgh. It is believed that the work cannot be completed in time for occupancy by the time originally designated—May 1. In case the work is not completed by that time the future occupants of the building will defer the moving date, permission having been granted to do so by the city officials.

Paramount has leased the building, and will sub-let to the Metro, Universal and Pathe exchanges.

Westminster College Installs Powers'.

Westminster College, the United Presbyterian seat of learning at New Wilmington, Pa., has made important improvements in its moving picture equipment, which is a fixed feature of its curriculum. The old Edison machine, which has served for many years, has been replaced by a Powers' 6-B Cameragraph.

Sliter Gives Loyalty Dinner.

Manager Sliter, of the Pittsburgh Exhibitors' Mutual office, tendered a loyalty dinner to the employes of his organization on the Roof Garden of the Chatham Hotel on Tuesday evening, April 15.

Mr. Sliter made a few remarks, talked on loyalty, efficiency and a few of his experiences as roadman, manager, and his travels through Mexico.

Wurlitzer Leases New Quarters.

The Wurlitzer Company, heretofore located in the Century Building, Seventh avenue, has leased the four-story building at 615 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, and is now completely remodeling the same. Freight and passenger elevators are being installed, and other improvements are being made. The company will handle a full line of the Wurlitzer instruments.

Two Additions to Exhibitors Mutual.

Manager Sliter, of the Pittsburgh Exhibitors' Mutual, announces the engagement of Ralph T. Meyers and Theodore Bronstetter for the sales organization. Both Mr. Bronstetter and Mr. Meyers were formerly sales representatives for the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation working out of the Pittsburgh branch.

Two Removes for Bonistall.

F. C. Bonistall, manager of the Pittsburgh Famous Players office, has purchased a fine home in the Knoxville section. He will have two "movings" on his hands about the first of May—the office and his residence.

Holzman Buys Handel.

Harry Handel, of the Handel Theatre, North Side, Pittsburgh, has disposed of that house on April 10 to Samuel Holtzman, a newcomer in the business.

Handel is now on the lookout for a larger house.

Sam Sivitz Returns from Coast.

Sam Sivitz, former publicity manager for the Rowland & Clark theatres, returned from California recently. Sammy was doing publicity work for the Metro on the Coast.

Business Notes and Personal Items.

J. B. Clark, director in the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and Joseph S. Skirboll, manager of the Pittsburgh branch of the organization, were in New York attending the annual meeting of the circuit April 21 and 22.

"The Grain of Dust," controlled by the Craft Exchange, Pittsburgh, was the Easter Week attraction at the Minerva Theatre, Fifth avenue. The East Liberty Cameraphone also played it three days the same week.

William F. Eckbert, Jr., heretofore manager of the Temple Theatre, Lewistown, Pa., has purchased the interest of his partner, Ike Berney, in the house, and is now sole owner and manager of the place.

H. W. Hilewick, of the Duchess Theatre, Delmont, Pa., has been doing some remodeling lately. While he was making improvements he installed new Powers' 6-B machines.

E. M. Steuve, city salesman for the Pittsburgh Paramount office, was called to Cleveland Monday, April 14, by the death of his mother.

Matthew Teplitz, of the Penn Film Service, Pittsburgh, has returned to Pittsburgh from New York, where he spent several days buying new films.

Isaac Guckenheimer, of the Downtown Cameraphone Theatre, Pittsburgh, has returned to the city after a two weeks' business trip in New York.

C. M. Johnson, of the Opera House, Bolliver, Pa., reports that he has broken all records with the Houdini serial.

H. Oxley, of the Grand Theatre, Bradford, Pa., has returned home from a trip to New York.

Sam Wheeler is now working the Pittsburgh trade for the Craft Exchange.

Newspaper Page for "Topics of the Day."

Following the announcement that beginning May 4 Pathe Exchange, Inc., will release weekly "Topics of the Day," selected from the press of the world by the Literary Digest, and produced by Timely Film Production Company, the Funk & Wagnalls Company come forward with another imposing detail in their national campaign of publicity. A daily newspaper is being planned which will appear in the most important of the 4,000 newspapers to be utilized to carry the heading, "Two Million Twinkling Eyes." It will exploit the periodical and at the same time set forward the screen series as a most important feature.

WHOZIT ENJOYS PERSONAL APPEARANCES

The Canine Star of Robert C. Bruce's Scenic Makes His Bow Wow to San Francisco Audiences

THE personal appearance of film stars at San Francisco theatres has become quite the thing of late, but it has remained for Jack Partington, manager of the Imperial, to pull a most unique stunt along this line. He recently booked "Wanderer and Whozit," a late Robert C. Bruce scenic, and arranged for the appearance of Whozit on the stage. Wanderer is the Great Dane that has appeared in many Robert C. Bruce scenics, but Whozit is a dark horse among film stars in the shape of a champion wire hair fox terrier from the kennels of Irving C. Ackerman, of San Francisco, and the property of Marion H. Kohn, head of the Consolidated Film Corporation. The stage set arranged by Manager Partington followed in detail the last scene in the picture, the screen view fading into the stage set showing the beloved Whozit in flesh, blood and whiskers.

Spring Drive On.

E. O. Child, generalissimo of the Pathe staff stationed at San Francisco, has launched a spring drive, leading his forces into the fray in his armored Maxwell sedan. He has made careful plans for a three weeks' campaign in this territory and expects to take all objectives within this time. A large supply of laughing gas has been taken along, and it is expected that the chief work of the lieutenants who follow him will be to point out the dotted lines and garner the signatures. This will be his first extensive trip through the territory since becoming connected with Pathe.

Sign Man Slipped a Cog.

That Dr. Carlos de Mandil, director of the Tivoli Theatre orchestra, is a lion among San Francisco music lovers is not doubted, and he himself suggests that his policy of boycotting the barbers may give him the aspect of the king of beasts, but just where the management of the house gets the idea that Uda Waldrop, the organist, resembles a mouse, is not perfectly clear. However, there must be a reason, since the great electric sign in front of the theatre blazoned forth the information for a full week in the following words:

Dr. Carlos De Mandil
Uda Waldrop
"The Lion and the Mouse"

Meyer J. Cohen Makes New Affiliation.

Meyer J. Cohen, formerly San Francisco manager for George Kleine, but more recently with Sol L. Lesser as special ambassador on the "Mickey" campaign, has been made general publicity manager of the Kinema Theatre Circuit, which has houses at Oakland, Fresno and Los Angeles. He will make his headquarters at the Franklin Theatre, Oakland, which has been taken over by this circuit and which was reopened with a return engagement of "Mickey." Mr. Cohen planned to join a new packing corporation at Sacramento, but at the last moment decided to keep in the film game rather than invade the meat-selling field.

War Heroes Returning.

Sergeant Jack Kraker, formerly of the San Francisco selling staff of Vitagraph, Inc., has landed in this country after months of service in France, and expects to soon secure his release at Camp Kearney. He hopes to engage in his former work at an early date.

Sgt.-Maj. Phil Weinstein, former booker for Metro, is also back in California, and is expected to arrive in San Francisco soon. The Metro management has a place ready for him.

Orchestra Directors Have Inning.

The largest gathering of musicians ever assembled at San Francisco for one orchestral concert played recently in the Exposition Auditorium, two hundred and fifty men taking part. Seven works were presented, each with a different director. Moving picture theatres were well represented with Herman Heller, of the California Theatre Orchestra; Gino Severi, of the Imperial Theatre orchestra, and Dr. Carlos de Mandil, of the Tivoli Opera House, taking part. The innovation was appreciated by a record audience.

Harry L. Knappen Leaves for New York.

Harry L. Knappen, manager of the San Francisco Select branch, has left for New York, to attend a conference of branch managers. The local organization was strengthened just prior to his departure by the addition of Nick Turner to the selling staff. Mr. Turner has had considerable road experience, but of late has been house manager for the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, at Berkeley.

Newton Levi Ends Long Trip.

Newton Levi, Pacific Coast supervisor for Mutual, with headquarters at San Francisco, has returned from a seven weeks' trip that has included visits to all the branches in this territory and one to the headquarters in New York. Upon reaching home he found that Manager W. A. Crank had been meeting with great success in booking "The Turn in the Road."

A New Theatre for Merced.

Plans are being prepared for a theatre building at Merced, Cal., to cost in the neighborhood of $40,000. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,200 and will be equipped for both moving pictures and dramatic productions. It will be built by Charles H. Douglass, manager of the Elite Theatre, and Francis Egan, of Dubuque, Iowa.

Cory Returns from Trip.

M. E. Cory, of the Select staff, returned recently from a trip through the northern part of the state, where he found conditions very promising, with many houses being reopened as a result of renewed industrial activities.

Reel News Without Frills.

The James Tunstead Estate has announced its intention of erecting a theatre at Fourth and A streets, San Rafael, Cal., at an estimated cost of $35,000.

Architect A. W. Cornelius, of San Francisco, has prepared plans for a moving picture house to cost $65,000 to be erected by Enea Bros. at Pittsburg, Cal.

C. D. McComish, of the Peoples Theatre, Colusa, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco, and secured the services of J. Tobias as manager of that house.

The Endert Theatre, of Crescent City, Cal., has purchased considerable new equipment in anticipation of a busy season.

C. Wood, of Rodeo, Cal., is making improvements in his house, and has purchased a Preddey outfit and a new projection machine.

Walter Evans, a pioneer exhibitor of Dinuba, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco, and purchased two Simplex machines and new chairs for the Mission Theatre.

Jos. J. Mahony has transferred the Grand Theatre on Mission street, San Francisco, to Francis I. Mahony.

The Liberty Theatre on Broadway, San Francisco, has been renovated and reopened as the Allies' Theatre. A new organ has been purchased.

Thomas C. Penny has disposed of his interests in the Empire Theatre, Napa, Cal., to L. Kaliski and John P. Knox.

Manager Tucker, of the Liberty Theatre, Healdsburg, Cal., plans to erect a new house there.

Alexander Pezzutti, of the Orpheum Theatre, Crockett, Cal., plans to erect a new theatre on the site of the present house.

George E. Price and Robert Warwick have opened offices at Bakersfield, Cal., in connection with a studio project.

The Youroveta Home & Foreign Trade Co., Inc., of San Francisco, has purchased a moving picture camera and a large quantity of film for use by its Oriental connections.

Charles Ray and Mary Thurman, film stars, and Jimmie Quick, editor of the Photoplay Magazine, were recent visitors in San Francisco.

J. W. Flood plans to transform the Rex ing and erect a new moving picture house.

Wounded Soldiers Enjoy Artcraft Films.

One of the many military hospitals in this country which have been supplied with Paramount and Artcraft pictures for the entertainment of the wounded soldiers in the U. S. A. is the General Hospital No. 13 at Danville, N. Y. Here many an hour of misery was forgotten by the soldier patients by the showings of Paramount and Artcraft pictures, and their minds were taken away from their physical sufferings by discussion of the points raised in their minds by the pictures, according to a letter written to Branch Manager R. C. Fox, of Buffalo, by Waldo A. Amos, field director of the American Red Cross.

Many Repeat Bookings on Anita Stewart Productions

A RATHER unusual evidence of popularity comes to Vitagraph's Anita Stewart productions through the rapidity with which return dates are being booked by exhibitors who have played Vitagraph's first Anita Stewart production, "From Headquarters," and who have booked, but not yet played, the second production, "Two Women."

"From Headquarters" was released on March 10 and it will be remembered that conspicuous among its bookings were the big Metropolitan circuits including Fox, Moss and Poli here in the East and the big chains in the Middle West and the Far West.

"Two Women" is scheduled for release on April 28, yet a great many exhibitors with "Two Women" on their books for showing have already booked a return date on "From Headquarters."

Both "From Headquarters" and "Two Women" were directed by Ralph Ince and were edited by George Randolph Chester. "From Headquarters" is a tense police drama and "Two Women" is a James Oliver Curwood story of an altogether different type from the first Anita Stewart release.

Pathe News Shows Thrilling Air Views for Victory Loan

THE Liberty Loan aerial photography done by the Pathe News has earned high commendation from both Government officials and exhibitors, some of whom declare that the flying views shown in issue No. 30 "have all of the thrill quality of the real serial stuff." The pictures were exclusive.

In the Victory Loan pictures, Secretary Glass is shown sending appeals to the people for the success of the loan via air messenger. A Pathe cameraman in a plane close by was on the job to get every detail of the demonstration. And when the messenger took to the air the Pathe News man was right after him, and showed how thousands of leaflets were dropped on the cities below. The most remarkable feature was the close views of the plane and the movements of the daring operator as he left his seat and tinkered about the speeding plane.

"Our Teddy" Popular in Japan.

The fame of "Our Teddy," the authorized Roosevelt picture, has spread to Japan. A letter was recently received at the McClure offices from Kikuo Kazemi, a leading Tokio exhibitor, stating that scores of requests had come from his patrons and friends for information as to when the screen version of Roosevelt's life was to be shown in the Orient. Kazemi declared that Roosevelt was probably the most popular American in Japan, due chiefly to his broad-minded attitude toward the Japanese immigration disputes when he was President. So great has been the interest aroused in Tokio over the news that a motion picture has been made of Roosevelt's greatest exploits that Kazemi is planning a special lobby display at the Denkikwau Theatre, the largest in Tokio, of "stills" from "Our Teddy" and photographs of the actors taking the chief roles in the picture.

"The Usurper" Is Next Williams Release

Earle Williams' next release, "The Usurper," which Vitagraph has scheduled for release the end of April, was originally produced on the stage by the late Nat Goodwin. It was written by I. N. Morris and the screen version has been directed by James Young.

Mr. Williams' support includes Louise Lovely, Bessie Eyton, Bob Russell, Frank Leigh, Billie Elmer, Jay Morely, Audrey Chapman and Lillian Langdon.

Here You See the Sessue Hayakawa "High Sign"—Grand Rapids Only.
"A Heart in Pawn" Shared the Strand's Screen with "Whitewashed Walls" the Week of April 6, While at the Majestic "Exhibitors-Mutual Week" Was Observed Through "What Every Woman Wants" and Martin Johnson's "Cannibals."

Strong Pictures on Robertson-Cole Schedule

AN imposing array of productions have been completed by various Robertson-Cole units for release through Exhibitors Mutual.

"The Courageous Coward," an eventful play relating the struggle of a man to overcome a supposed act of cowardice but which was really the bravest deed a man could commit for a friend, is the latest Sessue Hayakawa contribution to the Robertson-Cole list of Haworth offerings. Thomas J. Geraghty wrote the story and William Worthington directed.

The National Film Corporation proclaims "The Love Call" upon which Billie Rhodes recently added the finishing touches. Taken from a novel by Majorie Benton Cooke which appeared in serial form in many of the leading newspapers of the country, "The Love Call" is a light comedy drama. The star is seen in a sympathetic role, marked by her undying faith in her father, a retired sea captain who was loved by no one but his "Kid," as Miss Rhodes is known in this production.

Few actors are so hard to fit to stories as is Henry B. Walthall. This actor is of such a distinctive type that it is a rare occasion when a story is written that suits his capabilities. But in "Modern Husbands," which the National Film Corporation has just produced with Walthall, for release by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual, he has a role which was made almost to order for him. The play is probably the strongest in popular appeal that Walthall has been supplied since joining National. The picture was written by Lee Royal, and directed by Francis H. Grandon.

Having recovered from a recent illness contracted after her short visit to New York, Alma Rubens is again back in the Brunton studios preparing her second picture for Robertson-Cole. The production is still unnamed, but it is a story of the Yukon. A select cast has been engaged by the Winsome Stars Corporation to support Miss Rubens.

"The Mints of Hell," the newest Desmond offering, was directed by Park Frame under the supervision of Jesse D. Hampton from a story by James B. Hendryx. Many of the scenes were filmed in the heart of the sierras at Truckee, Cal., and the big snow scenes were taken during a blizzard which left six feet of snow on the ground.

Bessie Barriscale is still devoting all her energies to making "Josselyn's Wife," taken from the novel by Kathleen Norris. Little news has come out of the Brunton studios regarding the production of this story. Miss Barriscale is being directed by Howard Hickman.

Author of "Red Lantern" Praises Screening of Novel

EDITH WHERRY, who wrote the novel, "The Red Lantern," which is the basis for the new Nazimova superproduction, visited the Metro studios to see her story taking shape as a photoplay. She marveled at all she saw and declared it was a revelation to behold the characters—Mahlee, the Eurasian girl, played by Nazimova; Sam Wang, the sinister Boxer leader; the Dowager Empress of China and all the rest—standing before her in the flesh.

"I can see that some alterations have been made in my story in the course of adapting it to the camera," said Miss Wherry, "but the changes have in nowise affected the main incidents, nor the general trend of the narrative. The changes, if anything, have made the story more compact. A few characters have been grouped, which were not so closely related in the book. But the effect of this, I am sure, will be to heighten the interest of the spectator in a motion picture theatre.

"The Pekin street setting is quite the most marvelous thing of its kind that I have ever beheld.

"And the types selected to surround Nazimova bring back vividly my girlhood memories of China. Sam Wang is the Eurasian doctor to the life. To look at him in the flesh—even though his is an actor, in grease paint—and to see several of the low-caste Boxers, fairly made my flesh creep," said Miss Wherry.

Next Norma Talmadge Picture Is "The New Moon"

NORMA TALMADGE'S coming Select picture, "The New Moon," is nearing completion, and with the cutting and titling, which is expected to be finished during the ensuing week, the production will be ready for distribution as a May attraction. "The New Moon" is a Russian story. It was written by H. H. Van Loan, and directed by Chester Withey, who also wrote the scenario.

The story concerns the Russian insurrection and the Nationalization of women. Miss Talmadge has the part of a Russian princess. The picture opens amid a scene of much festivity in the Princess' palace, which is suddenly transformed into a chaos of disorder. A bomb is thrown, killing and injuring many of the guests, including the Princess' mother. It is announced that the Bolshevists have surrounded the Palace, and that the women are ordered to register at the National bureau.

The Princess escapes, leaving her fiance, Prince Michail Koloyar, behind. This role is played by Pedro de Cordova, Miss Talmadge's leading man.

Miss Talmadge is surrounded by a capable cast, including, in addition to Pedro de Cordova, Charles Gerard, who has the role of Theo. Kameneff; Stewart Holmes, who plays Orel Kosloff; Marc McDermott, as Vasili Lazoff; Ethel Kaye, as Masha, and Marguerite Clayton and Harry Sothern in other important parts.

Every detail of the insurrection movement in Russia has been carefully attended. The continuity is even, and the story itself is one of more than average interest.

De Mille's New Artcraft Is Praised at Private View

A PRIVATE view of Cecil B. DeMille's new Artcraft special, "For Better, For Worse," by Edgar Selwyn and Jeanie Macpherson, was given for a half dozen officials and others the other night at the Lasky studio, and the enthusiasm which greeted every compelling moment in the drama is cited as an evidence of the fact that the picture will live up to all promises made for it in advance.

The emotional appeal is big, according to those who witnessed it in a critical capacity and otherwise. The logic is sound, the presentation and acting faultless, and the direction rises clear out of the average class. The production is timely, the problem being one that will be appreciated by every one.

The acting of Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Tom Forman, Wanda Hawley, Theodore Roberts, Raymond Hatton and others is said to be indicative of even greater power than in previous pictures.

A Dogged Expression.
Oh, Far from It! Marion Davies, in Her Select "Getting Mary Married," Doesn't Believe in 'Em.

"Gates of Brass" Regarded by Keenan as His Best

FRANK KEENAN entertained a party of 40 at the Robert Brunton studios, Los Angeles, the evening of April 10 at a pre-view showing of "The Gates of Brass," a five-act drama, in which the actor-producer has the role of "Jim" Blake, tin-horn gambler, afterward J. Hatfield Blake, promoter of shady enterprises, which bring him great wealth, followed by unhappiness and disaster.

The play gives Mr. Keenan ample opportunities to display his versatility as a character actor, and he makes the most of every situation.

Through the drama runs an appealing story of youthful love, in which Lois Wilson, as Margaret Blake, motherless daughter of the gambler, and George Fisher, as "Dick" Wilbur, son of one of Blake's dupes in a crooked mining deal, figure prominently. Others in the cast are Lillian Langdon, Edwin Tilton, Clyde Benson and Tom Bates.

Mr. Keenan regards "The Gates of Brass" his best screen production. The prologue is short and the story that follows is of absorbing interest. It has the convincing ring of truth. The numerous indoor and outdoor scenes are realistically photographed.

Helene Chadwick Has Lead in "Caleb Piper's Girl"

HELENE CHADWICK interprets the title role of "Caleb Piper's Girl," a five-act comedy-drama produced by Astra, which will be released by Pathe on May 18.

Miss Chadwick's portrayal of the absent-minded old bookworm's daughter, upon whose shoulders descends the burden of household maintenance, is quite the best thing she has done for the screen.

The picture is a vivacious comedy-drama. There are some tugs at the heart-strings when we fear that after all her efforts to save the old home her daddy may be evicted by the grasping old villager who has bought up the mortgages, and we are given some touches of dramatic intensity when the rustic lover tries to enforce a marriage by means which are devious and underhanded; but in a general manner of speaking this is a comedy-drama which will provide a solid hour of good entertainment.

Some British Bits in Holmes Travelogue.

The April 20 release of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelogues embodies an interesting trip in England in war time with Mr. Holmes. First, one vists a school devoted to the teaching of cookery to the British Army cooks.

Next comes the tank garage, where one boards a real battle-scarred tank, if it has sufficiently recovered from its wounds, and takes a joy ride. Then one visits one of the big aviation fields, there to see British men and women, and some "Yanks," tuning up, testing and perfecting the huge bombers and the smaller scout and battle planes.

Then the School for War Dogs is visited, and we are shown how these animals were taught to pass through or over barbed wire entanglements, through smoke screens or against rifle-fire.

Lois Wilson

How a Connecticut Manager Played "Courageous Coward"

WALTER GRIFFITH, manager of Poli's Bijou Theatre in New Haven, Conn., for the first time in three years played Sessue Hayakawa in his latest Robertson-Cole release through Exhibitors Mutual entitled "The Courageous Coward" and displayed excellent showmanship in exploitation, in display and in advertising. The Bijou lobby and interior was entirely decorated with Japanese lanterns and Oriental trimmings.

Mr. Griffith did not stop at his lobby in putting over the picture but had his girl ushers in Japanese costume, with Chrysanthemums placed at the side of their heads.

It was a splendid display, and one that created not only increased attendance at the theatre, but also aroused comment on the originality of the decorations. Mr. Griffith is a thorough showman, has been with the Poli Circuit for twelve years, and has gained his success through his original ideas in putting his shows before the public.

Reports from Mr. Griffith as to the merits of "Courageous Coward" are that standing room business prevailed during the three day run at his house.

Natalie Talmadge in "By Right of Conquest" Cast

Natalie Talmadge is now a member of the cast for the next Norma Talmadge production, "By Right of Conquest." Natalie will play "Janie," quite an important part in this story by Arthur Hornblow, editor of the Theatre Magazine. Natalie Talmadge has appeared with both her sisters Norma and Constance, in previous productions.

Edward Jose, the Belgian, has signed a contract with Mr. Schenck to direct the picture. Mr. Jose had a long and successful career on the speaking stage in France.

First of Three Remaining Drew Comedies.

The first of the three Paramount-Drew comedies made by the late Sidney Drew and Mrs. Drew and yet to be released by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is scheduled for April 20. This is "The Amateur Liar," by Albert Payson Terhune.

Request Advance Dates on "The Veiled Adventure"

BRANCH managers in nearly every Select exchange in the country have received numerous requests for advance play dates on Constance Talmadge's current attraction, "The Veiled Adventure." Already first-run showings have been announced for Chicago, Boston and Louisville theatres, including a week at Sig Faller's Bijou Dream in Chicago.

"The Veiled Adventure" is said to be one of the most entertaining pictures Miss Talmadge has ever made, presenting her in a number of widely diversified and amusing roles. The story is a fast-moving comedy plus drama type. First, as a charming debutante, then as the proprietress of a manicure shop, Miss Talmadge finds plenty of opportunity for side-splitting situations.

Harrison Ford is Miss Talmadge's leading man. He is supposed to be a diamond in the rough from Texas, but Miss Talmadge soon massages him into a respectable gentleman of the first water. The other members of the cast are Stanhope Wheatcroft, Vera Doria, Rosita Marstini, T. D. Crittenden, Eddie Sutherland, Margaret Loomis and Vera Sisson.

"The Veiled Adventure" is an original story written especially for Miss Talmadge by Julia Crawford Ivers, who also wrote the scenario. It was directed by Walter Edwards, and the photography is by James C. Van Trees.

Special Aids for "Magdalene" in Chicago.

A special publicity service for the four-week engagement of "The Eternal Magdalene" at the Bandbox Theatre in Chicago's loop district has drawn the attention of the entire city of Chicago to the Goldwyn extra. Quarter and half page display advertisements in the Chicago morning and evening papers, combined with reader publicity in the columns of virtually all of the newspaper screen critics, and endorsements by leading citizens, have focused interest on the picture in an extraordinary fashion.

Among those who have added their words of praise and backing to the exhibition of the picture by Manager John Keans of the Bandbox are Harry B. Miller, prosecuting attorney of Cook County; Wells M. Cook, Harry Fisher, and Edmund K. J. Jarecki, associated judges of the municipal court, and Dr. Anna Dwyer, of the Chicago Morals Commission and Morals Court.

"Eternal Magdalene" Gets Heavy Bookings

Goldwyn announces that receipt of more than 300 contracts on "The Eternal Magdalene," the Goldwyn extra, within the last ten days. The success achieved by the virile drama of compassion at pre-release showings in Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and in several large cities of the East has stimulated bookings.

"'The Eternal Magdalene' opened to capacity business," was the report by wire from John Keane, manager of the Bandbox Theatre, Chicago, where the Goldwyn extra opened a four week's engagement yesterday.

A recent trade showing of the picture in the Minneapolis Goldwyn office resulted in bookings by a score of prominent exhibitors in the Northwest.

Trade showings at the Pittsburgh, Dallas and Atlanta Goldwyn exchanges were also productive of many immediate bookings.

800 Chinese Take Part in "Red Lantern"

The Metro studios in Hollywood, looked like an arsenal after an earthquake when Albert Capellani, Nazimova's director, finished directing the Pekin street battle scenes in "The Red Lantern," the Russian actress's coming superproduction. Eight hundred Chinese were the Boxer "army" and every man jack of them was armed with some sort of weapon.

Big Billboard Campaign on New Vitagraph Serial

VITAGRAPH has perfected its plans for one of the largest billboard campaigns in its history in connection with the release of the Antonio Moreno-Carol Holloway serial, "Perils of Thunder Mountain."

Eight 24-sheet sketches by as many different artists were submitted, and from these the selection for the stand was made. The 24-sheet pictures one of the big thrills in the serial, a novelty not only in the matter of billboarding but likewise a thrill that may well earn for itself the reputation of the most sensational spectacle that the screen has so far witnessed.

The hero and heroine are shown on the roof of a shack being swept away by a mountain torrent toward a waterfall that is sure to annihilate them. The poster is being printed in striking colors and within a few weeks will cover stands from one end of the country to the other.

Vitagraph's billboard campaigns on its serials heretofore have been potent aids in launching these chapter plays and the stand of "Perils of Thunder Mountain" is by far the most enticing of all of Vitagraph's series of 24-sheet smashes.

The serial was written by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady. The serial is in fifteen episodes and is now well under production. Antonio Moreno and Carol Holloway are the stars and R. N. Bradbury and William Baumann are the directors.

"Perils of Thunder Mountain" is a real snow serial. The greater part of the action takes place in the midst of vast reaches of snow. The serial company worked for weeks in Truckee, Cal., and secured some wonderful snow scenes.

Vitagraph counts specially on the snow element in the serial as a summer attraction for it is felt that during the hot months, the production with its beautiful shots of great snow drifts will be a most welcome spectacle for screen followers.

Exhibitors Praise Latest Marion Davies Select Film

MARION DAVIES' latest Select picture, "Getting Mary Married," released early in April, is declared by many exhibitors to be the best picture Miss Davies has ever made. The story was an original one by John Emerson and Anita Loos. It was directed by Allan Dwan.

In no other picture in which Miss Davies has starred has she appeared to such excellent advantage as in this production. Every detail of direction and photoplay has been carefully executed.

One of the many reasons for its success is said to be the naturalness and simplicity of the story, which concerns a likable, every-day girl whose mother dies and leaves her in the care of a wealthy step-father. As interpreted by Miss Davies, the character is perfection in itself. Early in the story she wins the sympathy of the audience, and she holds it until the last minute of a happy and entertaining end.

Exhibitors who have seen "Getting Mary Married" are loud in their praise of Miss Davies' work, and one has characterized it as the finest example of acting he has seen in any picture this year.

First of Emmy Wehlen's New Comedies Listed

THE first of Emmy Wehlen's new series of romantic comedies to be produced under her new contract with Metro will be released May 5, according to an announcement just issued by that firm.

"The Amateur Adventuress" is the title of the play, Metro having retained the name of the original novelette by Thomas Edgelow as published in a popular magazine, from which this comedy of life in a big city was taken.

June Mathis, head of Metro's scenario department, and Luther A. Reed, one of their most capable technicians, collaborated on this screen adaptation of the story.

Surrounded by a notable cast, the former musical comedy star has on more than one occasion during the production of the picture displayed a marked dramatic power of expression which will serve both as a surprise and treat to her followers.

One of Metro's leading directors, Henry Otto, has brought out in Miss Wehlen, an artistic side of her personality which has heretofore lain dormant.

Part of the story is unfolded in the exclusive suburban Larchmont, outside of New York, and for these scenes some of the most beautiful sites in the outlying sections of Hollywood, Cal., have been photographed.

Among the principals in the cast supporting the star are Allan Sears (leading man), Gene Pallette, William V. Mong, Marion Skinner, Lucille Ward, Bonnie Hill and Victor Potel.

Uses "Bolshevism on Trial" Stationery.

Harry H. Hicks, branch manager of Select's Cincinnati exchange, is employing every trick to put over Select's "Bolshevism on Trial." In addition to the advertising matter with which Select branch managers have been supplied by the home office, Manager Hicks has gone one step further by making his letterheads work as well as his salesmen. Every letter that leaves the Cincinnati exchange carries the head and hooked hand of the Bolshevist which Select uses in its trade-paper advertising. This is printed across the full face of the sheet, with a light impression, forming a background of faint red.

Robertson-Cole Buys Three Michelena Productions

THE entire series of three productions, upon which Beatriz Michelena and her own company have been working for more than a year, has been purchased by Robertson-Cole Company. This announcement follows the statement issued by this organization last week to the effect that "Just Squaw," first of the series, had been purchased for release through Exhibitors Mutual.

"Just Squaw" has been made ready for release, and in order there will follow "The Deadline" and "The Spitfire," each a drama of life in the west in the glorious days that unhappily are now but cherished memories.

George Middleton, who directed "Just Squaw" which will shortly be screened for the first time in New York, also handled the reins on "The Deadline" and "The Spitfire."

There will be many distinctive features to make the Michelena contributions to the silent drama noteworthy additions to the high standard for which Robertson-Cole products are noted.

Not the least of these will be the incorporation of a distinctive line of titling. When Director Middleton found he couldn't improve his play, he went ahead and improved the titling. He devised a title upon which the head of the character speaking the lines appears in the upper left hand corner.

"Just Squaw" is expected to give the Michelena series a good start. Combining all the elements of good melodrama with its barrier of blood—the most insurmountable barrier in the world—the picture contains a strong appeal to picture audiences.

The story was written by Earl Snell.

Raises Admission Prices on "Eleventh Commandment"

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT," the Ralph Ince special production released by Exhibitors Mutual, did a big business at 25 cent admission prices in the little city of New Castle, Ind., according to a letter from Guy D. Hammill, manager of the Royal Theatre, New Castle. The picture stars Lucille Lee Stewart.

The picture was built from an original story by Ralph Ince for the Advance Motion Picture corporation, Lee Shubert and Edward Davidow and Arthur Hammerstein, who selected Exhibitors Mutual for its distribution.

It deals with the unwritten eleventh commandment: "Thou shalt marry none but the man thou lovest," with Miss Stewart portraying the role of Dora Chester, a girl who broke the commandment.

Alice Brady's "Redhead" Now Released by Select

ALICE BRADY'S coming Select picture, "Redhead," is now completed and will be ready during the current week for distribution as an April attraction. "Redhead" was adapted for the screen by Charles Maigne from a story by Albert Payson Dowst, which appeared in a recent number of one of the popular magazines. Mr. Maigne also directed the production.

One of the outstanding points of Miss Brady's "Redhead" is the supporting cast which is headed by Conrad Nagel. Mr. Nagel is Miss Brady's leading man in her stage play, "Forever After," which is now in its thirty-second week on Broadway. The other members of the cast are Charles A. Stevenson, Robert Schable, Charles Eldridge and May Brettone.

"Redhead" brings Miss Brady to the screen in an entirely different role. The opening of the story finds her as the star entertainer in one of the fashionable cabarets. Miss Brady sings, dances and flirts, and her latter accomplishment wins for her the love of one of the wealthy patrons. One evening they are married to the tune of a jazz band and the shouts and laughter of their friends. Then comes the rift in the lute which makes one of the most entertaining stories Miss Bray has ever done. There is the inevitable happy ending, but it is arrived at by an entirely new and different road. Comedy and pathos are mingled with exceptional skill.

Christie Makes Scenes Enroute to San Diego

LEAVING Los Angeles, Al E. Christie, together with Bobby Vernon, Ethel Lynne, Eddie Barry, George French, Harry Edwards, and others, took the day boat to San Diego with a schedule of thirty scenes for a coming Christie comedy to make en route. On leaving the studio it was Mr. Christie's intention to begin making pictures before the steamer left San Pedro and conclude only after docking in Los Angeles Harbor, two days later.

On returning to Los Angeles, after this interlude of work on a Christie comedy, Mr. Christie will devote his attention to completing "Rowdy Ann," which is the second of the two-reel Specials, featuring Fay Tincher, Patricia Palmer, Eddie Barry, Harry Depp and Katharine Lewis. The larger part of this special production has been completed and it will be the Special release for the later part of May.

World Has Picturized Riley Poem.

The announcement made by World Pictures that it has taken over the distribution of a picturization of James Whitcomb Riley's famous poem, "Little Orphant Annie," recalls the fact that Riley in writing this poem is credited with having written the greatest money-making poem and the best paid piece of literary work ever published, if one takes into consideration the number of words. With what was paid for the moving picture rights, together with the rights of publication, it brought in more than a thousand dollars a word.

World to Distribute Two-Reel Comedies

WORLD PICTURES announces that they will distribute a number of two-reel comedies made by the Macdon Pictures Corporation. Two of these comedies, "Pardon Me," and "Neptune's Step-Daughter," have been finished, and work is now progressing on the third. The star is Gertrude Selby, who began her picture career as a featured player and later as a star in the L-Ko comedies. Miss Selby was afterwards starred by the Universal in five-reel dramas, following which she was featured by Mack Sennett, under whose direction she appeared in a number of his productions. She was then engaged by William Fox and originated the Sunshine Girl as the star of the Sunshine Comedies.

Supporting Miss Selby is Bobby Connelly, who recently made an outstanding hit in "The Unpardonable Sin." This child, it will be remembered, was starred in a series of pictures called "Sonny Boy." Patsy Do Forest also appears in these comedies. She has been connected with a number of the best known comedy organizations in this country. Lew Marks, who started his career as a comedian in Keystone comedies, appears to advantage in support of Miss Selby.

Frank P. Donovan will direct. Mr. Donovan has produced over a hundred and twenty-five comedies for General, Mutual, Universal and Paramount. Mr. Donovan began his picture career as motion picture editor of the New York Star, later joining the New York Journal and Photoplayers' Magazine.

The Thanhouser studio at New Rochelle has been secured under a long lease by the Macdon Picture Corporation.

Spaniards Like Eddie Polo.

Eddie Polo, Universal's Herculanean star, is rapidly becoming as popular in Spain as the toreadors of old. According to a Spanish film magazine of Barcelona, Polo's work in "The Bull's Eye" has made him a favorite in King Alphonso's country.

According to the magazine, the picture, in Spanish known as "El Blanco Tragico," is playing at a majority of theatres in Spain and " . . . the audiences follow with great interest and admiration the heroic adventures of the great Eddie Polo, who is one of the favorite actors."

Novel Advertising Trailer for Capellani's "Oh, Boy"

AN advance advertising trailer of striking originality has been prepared by Albert Capellani as one of the many seat-selling accessories that will be available to exhibitors in connection with the release of "Oh Boy," the first of the June Caprice-Creighton Hale series for release through the Pathe Exchange, Inc.

While film trailers advertising forthcoming productions can no longer be classed as novelties, the one to be offered to exhibitors booking "Oh Boy," is a distinct novelty. It not only depicts a scene which should register one of the biggest laughs in the picture, but is introduced uniquely by a bill-posting outfit rambling down a street and stopping in front of a huge billboard stand.

The generalissimo of the paste and brush, clambers down from his seat, gazes meditatively at a poster proclaiming Elliot and Comstock's "Oh Boy," the "greatest musical comedy hit of the past decade." He returns to his wagon, and reappears, in a moment, heavily laden, and covers the board with a new twenty-four sheet poster.

"When Doctors Disagree" Is Mabel Normand's Newest

MABEL NORMAND'S new Goldwyn picture, now nearing completion at the Culver City Studios, has the interesting title of "When Doctors Disagree." It is a small town farcical romance, a medium of expression in which her new director, Victor Schertzinger, excels. As a matter of fact, "When Doctors Disagree" gives Miss Normand just a bit wider scope than her previous vehicles have done. As Millie Martin, daughter of the village tightwad, with a thirst for beauty both of person and environment, Miss Normand is asked this time to do more than frolic and fall into scrapes. She must be wistful, appealing and entirely ignorant of the complications in which she finds herself when rushed to a sanatorium for an immediate operation.

Special Stories for Exhibitors.

Supplementing the regular publicity campaign being carried on for "Our Teddy," McClure Productions, Inc., have arranged to supply exhibitors with newspaper stories especially adapted for use in their particular localities. For example, the First National exchange which is distributing the Roosevelt picture in North Dakota has been furnished with stories recalling Colonel Roosevelt's career as a ranch-owner in Medora, North Dakota and pointing out the numerous scenes in which Roosevelt as a Dakota ranchman is depicted on the screen in "Our Teddy." At the same time it is suggested that exhibitors in that state write personal letters to former associates of the Colonel especially ex-Rough Riders, asking their co-operation in exploiting the film. In this way a strong local interest will be stimulated.

Wanda Hawley to Lead for Reid.

Although she has not yet finished "Secret Service," in which she plays the leading feminine role, supporting Captain Robert Warwick, Wanda Hawley has begun work as lead in Wallace Reid's new picture, "You're Fired," which is an adaptation of one of O. Henry's stories, "The Halberdier." James Cruze is directing, from the scenario by Clara G. Kennedy.

Just a 24-Sheet, but It Does Justice to "Just Squaw."
Which is Beatriz Michelena's initial release through Exhibitors Mutual.

"Road Called Straight" Claimed Bennison's Best

GOLDWYN is promising exhibitors everywhere the aggregate of their success with Louis Bennison's first three-star series productions, made by Betzwood Film Company and released through Goldwyn, will be exceeded with "The Road Called Straight," the star's newest production, released May 11.

The producers of this picture set great store by what they call the fulfilment of the Bennison promise. In three previous features, "Oh, Johnny!", "Sandy Burke of the U-Bar-U" and "Speedy Meade," the young cowboy star has given visible evidence that a new screen luminary was in the making; in the fourth he is made. As Al Boyd, uncouth but lovable master of a great Western cattle ranch, who beats at their own game the scheming father and fiance of the girl he loves, Bennison stands revealed as a screen actor without a superior in similar roles. This, coupled with an unusual story, splendid photography, unerring direction, capable titling and many novelties of setting and situation, insures, in the opinion of the producers, a picture wholly worth while.

Big first runs now are being booked for "The Road Called Straight," and reports from Goldwyn's twenty exchanges throughout the country show that exhibitors have arrived at the realization that in Louis Bennison they have a "box office star"—one whose increasing popularity insures a bigger return with each successive appearance.

"The Road Called Straight," written by Wilson Bayley, author of Bennison's first motion picture, "Oh, Johnny!", and directed by Ira M. Lowry, tells an unhackneyed story of love and luck that rings true.

Supporting Bennison in "The Road Called Straight" is an unusually capable cast, headed by beautiful Ormi Hawley, who needs no introduction to picture lovers. The difficult role of Stevens is in the capable hands of Henry Mortimer, long a successful portrayer of stage and screen roles. Burton Churchill plays the father with his accustomed skill and Jane Adler plays the mother. A comedy role falls to John Daly Murphy in the part of the Swiftmore valet.

Cameraphone Opens with Vitagraph.

Vitagraph's production, "The Third Degree," has been booked by the Rowland and Clark Enterprises to open the new Cameraphone Theatre on Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh. The Rowland and Clark Enterprises have taken over the Cameraphone Theatre and are redecorating it so that upon its reopening it will be one of the finest picture houses in the city.

The signing of the Pittsburgh house is a triumph parallel to the Ascher contract in Chicago.

The signing of "The Third Degree" as the opening attraction marks also the signing by Rowland and Clark Enterprises of complete Vitagraph service for the house. The Alice Joyce pictures, the Earle Williams pictures, the Harry T. Morey pictures, the Bessie Love pictures, the Corinne Griffith pictures and the Gladys Leslie pictures will be shown at the Cameraphone regularly, as will the Larry Semon Comedies, and Vitagraph's Big "V" Special Comedies.

Fannie Ward at Best in Pathe's "Cry of the Weak"

THE Cry of the Weak," starring Fannie Ward, the eighth of Pathe's Extra Selected Star Photoplays, released May 8, has earned unanimous praise from reviewers who witnessed a special showing. The picture fully justifies Miss Ward's declaration, before she recently sailed for Europe, that in this story, by Ouïda Bergere, "I have done the best work of my entire career, both on the screen and the spoken stage." She considers it even better than "Common Clay," the success records of which are still steadily increasing. The production was made by Astra Film Corporation.

Ouida Bergere has emphasized in an entertaining manner, without "preaching" or "propaganda," the theory that a great number of the crimes which are committed today are based on vengeanace against the harshness of society, and that many criminals if given the proper opportunity may be reclaimed.

In Miss Ward's support are selected types that exactly fit the characters—Frank Elliott, as District Attorney Dexter; Walt Whitman, as Judge Creighton; Paul Willis, as Budd, and many other capable screen artists.

George Fitzmaurice has achieved one of America's directorial successes, it is said. "The Cry of the Weak" is one of the finest examples of his art. Much of the action takes place at night, and the night scenes are especially good, giving just that amount of weird and uncanny effect to convey the correct "atmosphere" indicated.

Houdini Serial in West May 1.

World Pictures announce that May 1 is the release date for the distribution of the Houdini serial, "The Master Mystery" in the following states: California, Oregon, Washington, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Idaho, Arizona, Montana, Nevada, Minnesota and part of Iowa. Thousands of sheets of paper will be posted exploiting this super feature and, in addition, an intensive newspaper campaign is being conducted. The fact that Houdini has appeared in each of these states both as a vaudeville headliner and as a star of his own company gives a local interest to the serial that ought to make it a successful box office attraction.

"Unknown Love" Heads Pathe Program for April 27

PATHE program for April 27 is strong in feature, serial, comedy and miscellaneous interest, and is headed by Leonce Perret's production, "The Unknown Love," starring Dolores Cassinelli, with E. K. Lincoln. It is released as a Pathe special.

"The Glowing Eyes," Episode No. 2 of "The Tiger's Trail," opens as the heroine, Belle Boyd (Ruth Roland) agrees to tell the Tiger Worshippers where she has hidden her portion of the Pact of Three in order to escape from the Tiger's cage, where they have imprisoned her.

A rollicking, keen satire on life around the modern stage is "Ring Up the Curtain," the Rolin comedy starring Harold Lloyd, with Bebe Daniels and "Snub" Pollard. There are pretty girls in it, and some pretty strenuous knockabout work; but, as in all of these new types of comedy, it is clean, wholesome and full of laughs.

Pathe Review No. 8 has been called a "wonder issue," for, with a combination of the microscope and motion picture camera, it shows the circulation of the blood. Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars gives some highly entertaining studies of the chimpanzee; the Pathe color travel views are of beautiful Japan; sugar-making in Java is shown, and the Novagraph slow-motion pictures have to do with lariat throwing and cowbody stunts.

Pathe News No. 36 is released on April 20, and No. 37 on Saturday, May 3.

Fox's "Pitfalls of Big City" Acclaimed by Exhibitors

FOLLOWING immediately after the trade paper reviewers' unanimous praise of Gladys Brockwell's picture, "Pitfalls of a Big City" as one of the best photoplays of the season, exhibitors throughout the country are adding their statements that the picture is scoring one of the biggest successes yet achieved by this star.

Heavy rain that lasted all day and which was accompanied by a gale failed to keep people away from the Chicago showing of "Pitfalls of a Big City" at the Rose Theatre on the opening day of last week's engagement, according to the Exhibitors Service Bureau of the Fox Film Corporation. While neighboring theatres were doing virtually no business, it is stated that there was a continuous stream of patrons into the Madison street house, where "Pitfalls of a Big City" is booked for two solid weeks.

A preliminary one-day showing on the preceding Sunday at the Boston theatre, Chicago—operated by the owners of the Rose—brought capacity business throughout the day and evening. Manager Harry Miller of the two theatres reports many comments in praise of the picture.

A. Horwitz, owner of the Colonial Theatre, Toledo, is another exhibitor who is enthusiastic in his praise of "Pitfalls."

In the Philadelphia district the same story is told. Exhibitors are unanimous in their praise of the quality and box office value of the picture. Milton Russell, managing the Colonial theatre, Atlantic City, for the Stanley Company of Philadelphia, entered into arrangements for repeat dates on the picture.

Conference Discussions Boost Film.

Bookings of the World feature picture, "What Shall We Do with Him?", have shown a sharp increase during the past week as the result of the country-wide publicity given by the newspapers to the Peace Conference's discussion of the Kaiser's fate. Stories carried by nearly every newspaper in the United States have caused renewed public interest. "What Shall We Do with Him?" tries the Kaiser, sentences him, and carries out the sentence. Exhibitors have been quick to cash in on the picture, which portrays so accurately what is uppermost in the public mind. The people are given a chance to decide whether the verdict is according to their judgment or not by means of voting contests which exhibitors can conduct themselves or through the colmuns of their local newspapers.

Goldwyn Schedules Three Ford Releases for May

THE Ford Educational Weekly, which, under Goldwyn distribution, is now being shown in close to 5,000 theatres throughout the country, throws the "close-up" on three interesting topics in coming issues, Henry Ford's motion picture newspaper, as the weekly is popularly styled, mixing the lighter phases of life with the more serious picturizations. The three new subjects announced for Goldwyn release in May are:

May 4—"Going Up"—Climbing Mount Hood.

May 11—"Can the Poor Fish"—a picturization of the salmon industry.

May 18—"A Wild Goose Chase"—Hunting wild geese with a camera.

All three subjects are vitally interesting and educational. The issue on the exploitation of Mount Hood, depicting as it does the dangers with which the climb is fraught, is certain to interest students and the great majority of the reading public as much as it will mountain explorers themselves. "Can the Poor Fish," the May 11 release, brings the Ford Weekly public in close touch with several Pacific Coast fisheries and hatcheries. "A Wild Goose Chase" depicts a hunt in the wilds of northern Minnesota by a band of Ford cameramen, with wild geese which abound in the mountainous copper country as their objective. Nimrods and others interested in the hunting game will find much to amuse and enlighten them in this Ford Weekly for May 18.

"Cameo Girl" Merges with Capellani.

Dolores Cassinelli, the "Cameo Girl," announces that the Cameo Pictures Corporation, of which she is the head and which was organized to produce a series of special productions in which she was to be starred, has now merged with the Albert Capellani Productions, Inc.

By special arrangement entered into between Miss Cassinelli and Mr. Capellani, Mr. Capellani will personally direct and supervise the productions in which Miss Cassinelli will be starred, and it is stated that these productions will be given the brand name of "Cameo Picture."

Work on the first of the Cassinelli pictures has already been started and as previously announced they will be released through the Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Vivian Martin Begins on "Third Kiss."

Work has been begun at the Morosco studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on "The Third Kiss," in which Vivian Martin is starred. The story was written by Heliodore Tenno, and the scenario is by Edith Kennedy. Robert Vignola is directing.

This is a comedy-drama of considerable heart interest. The plot is elaborate and contains many big situations and surprising twists. Some of the scenes show an amateur theatrical performance given by the people of a settlement in New York's poorer quarter.

Big Booking for "The Common Cause."

Vitagraph reports that J. Stuart Blackton's big production, "The Common Cause" has been booked for an indefinite run at the Palace Theatre, Los Angeles, to open the first week in May.

A big advertising campaign is being put back of "The Common Cause" by the Palace Theatre management and a long run is being provided for.

George Melford.

"Uncle George" has just renewed a contract with Famous Players-Lasky to direct for them for two years.

Tom Moore Has Big Role in "The City of Comrades"

TOM MOORE is in the midst of the production of Basil King's widely read Saturday Evening Post story, "The City of Comrades," obtained for him in the face of strong competitive bidding by Samuel Goldwyn, who has just arrived in Culver City for the purpose of keeping in close touch with the work. The picturization of this novel offers brilliant opportunities not only to the star but to every unit of the Goldwyn producing staff.

For Tom Moore there is the role of Frank Melbury. It is not alone the principal character around which revolves the strong story, but is a psychological study of such power and consistency that it promises to lessen the limitations of the cinema. The entire play, for that matter, concerns people who pass through various phases to a higher development and are as far removed from the conventional figures of the screen as it is possible to imagine. "The City of Comrades" may briefly be described as a drama of regeneration.

Despite the psychological aspect of the drama and its portrayal of steady character building, it is not without thrills and sensational climaxes, the strongest of which occurs is the Halifax disaster, following the collision in the harbor of two steamers laden with explosives.

With a story of this character Goldwyn surrounds Tom Moore with a cast of unusual distinction and finesse. Playing the role of Lovey, second only in importance to that of Frank Melbury, Otto Hoffman makes his first appearance in Goldwyn Pictures after a number of years in Thomas H. Ince successes.

Again Seena Owen finds a part entirely to her liking—she is cast as Regina Barry. Albert Roscoe, lately rendering distinguished services to Theda Bara in "Cleopatra," "Salome" and other plays, returns to a modern role as Dr. Stephen Cantyre. Others in the cast are Mary Warren, Kate Lester, Alec B. Francis and Robert Walker.

Gladys Leslie's Latest Going Strong

For the past few weeks reports have been coming from various quarters of the splendid reception that is being given to Vitagraph's latest Gladys Leslie release, "Miss Dulcie from Dixie."

Vitagraph reports that the production is playing to bigger business than any Gladys Leslie release in the past year.

Screen Magazine Shows Functions of the Heart

UNDER the title of "A Silent Sermon" the Universal Screen Magazine No. 11, shortly to be released, shows the effects of stimulation, over-stimulation and of improper food, upon the heart. To obtain views of the heart performing its duties, the Screen Magazine editor went to a New York experimental laboratory where a frog was cut open before the camera. With the heart of the frog exposed scientists demonstrated what is medically termed "jumping heart," the effect of intoxicants upon the heart, the "normal heart" and the action of the "nervous heart." The picture shows the wonderful organism of the heart and surrounding vessels and structures.

Second to "A Silent Sermon" in interest is an episode dealing with the activities of New York police in tracing, apprehending and classifying criminals. The pictures show how the crook is arrested, brought to the police headquarters, arraigned, sentenced, his Bertillion record made and recorded, also checked against the permanent office record, his photographs for the rogues gallery, his appearance and even his walk recorded.

Pictures of the latest dance steps by Ada May Weeks and Clifton Webb, as introduced in "Listen Lester," a Broadway stage hit, the Whozit Weekly some unusual double exposures, a humorous episode dealing with the servant question and pictures of Jess Willard in training complete the release.

More Beauties for L-Ko Comedies.

The spirit of California summer is being put into comedy production at Universal City these days. At the L-Ko studios President Julius Stern has added over a score of athletic beauties to the roster and a number of new comedians and comediennes have also been signed to appear in coming productions from this center. Edith Roberts, former Bluebird star, is the most recent addition to the L-Ko staff, but among the recruits now at work at the studios are Jean Temple, Iva Roberts, Margaret Draycup, Betty Jamison, Pearl Hutchinson and Gertrude Laneson.

Life's a Tough Proposition "When Doctors Disagree."
But Mabel Normand wants to help all she can in this, her coming Goldwyn.

Production Drive at Metro West Coast Studios

ALL the departments of the Metro studios in Hollywood are running on high gear these days and are fairly humming with the activities resultant with the announcement of the approaching change in the production policy, as adopted and outlined by Metro's president, Richard A. Rowland, in a recent interview.

In addition many new vehicles have been purchased for the use of Viola Dana, May Allison, Emmy Wehlen, Bert Lytell, and Hale Hamilton, from writers whose novels and short stories have come to be recognized for their originality of theme and situations.

Hale Hamilton's Next "Full o' Pep."

All of these favorites are at present engaged in completing productions under the old program release policy, and, after a brief rest, each will, in turn, step into a new robe now being tailored for them by the dramatists of the Metro scenario department.

Hale Hamilton, who has become one of the most popular stars of the silent drama, has smiled his way through the adaptation of Ben Ames Williams' four-part novel "After His Own Heart" and already commenced work on the new Robert F. Hill tale of love and adventure, called "Full o' Pep."

A. S. Le Vino adapted "Full o' Pep" to the screen and Harry L. Franklin, who is Hamilton's regular director, is assisted by James J. Dunne in the production. R. J. Bergquist, one of Metro's most artistic photographers will turn the camera.

Bert Lytell in Circus Story.

A circus story, different from the stereotyped bromides of life under the "big top" has been purchased from William Dudley Pelley for the forceful young Bert Lytell. "One-Thing-at-a-Time O' Day" is the title of Mr. Pelley's story as it appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, which, called to the attention of Maxwell Karger, at once appealed to the director general as a suitable vehicle for his popular star.

The new Lytell picture has been adapted to the silent drama by George D. Baker.

Two San Francisco women, Anne and Alice Duffy, are the dual authors of the next vehicle for the versatile little Viola Dana. "Pliant Patricia" is the name of it, and it is being converted to the screen by June Mathis, from the three-act stage play as originally written by these playwrights. Henry Otto has been selected by Maxwell Karger to direct Miss Dana in this new story.

May Allison as Tired Stenographer.

A delightful story of the adventures of a tired stenographer, will be May Allison's next role, following "His Father's Wife," the story by E. V. Durling, upon which she is now engaged. The new story is called "Free" and is from the pen of that most entertaining writer, Will Irwin, who published his original manuscript in the Saturday Evening Post.

The second of the series of romantic comedy-dramas produced under Emmy Wehlen's new contract with Metro will be a story of society life from a semi-satirical angle, called "Family Trees," and deftly drawn by the pen of the well-known writer, E. Forst.

Mr. Rowland has just returned to New York, leaving Maxwell Karger, his director general, with the weighty burden of supervising the majority of these new productions, and bringing with him the most praiseworthy reports of the development of his stars.

Taylor Holmes' "Taxi" Is a Swift Moving Vehicle

IT IS the unanimous opinion of the staff of Triangle executives who viewed Taylor Holmes' latest comedy at a private showing in their projection room last week, that "Taxi" is the smoothest and most swiftly running vehicle in which their jovial star has ever been presented. "'Taxi' runs swiftly, with a snap and a dash, but why shouldn't it?" remarked Triangle's publicity representative, "for, you see, it's well greased with laughs. And speaking of fuel, Mr. Holmes has surrounded himself with an excellent cast. We're mighty glad to report that both the producers and the distributors are enthusiastic about this third Triangle-Holmes special," he continued. "You see, we determined that each picture produced under our new policy of releasing specials in a series, should be better than its predecessor, and 'Taxi,' scheduled for May 11, is going to do just that."

George Agnew Chamberlain wrote "Taxi," which appeared as a serial story in a popular monthly magazine this winter. According to those who have seen the screen version, it has plenty of pep and action, and a suspense-sustaining plot.

In selecting the cast, the star and Lawrence Windom, the director, consider that they were fortunate in securing the services of Maude Eburne to portray the role of "Sweet Genevieve," the maid-of-all-work at the chauffeur's lodgings. Lillian Hall is Mr. Holmes' leading woman. Irene Tams and Fred Tiden are additional members of the cast.

Taylor Holmes plays Robert Hervey Randolph, of an old New York family, who loses his fortune when the rightful heir, a little girl, is discovered in the back row of the chorus. When Taylor finds her, he sacrifices his income and seeks work as a taxi-driver. As a chauffeur Holmes proves to be altruistic, and future events develop a strong love and mystery plot.

George W. Peters, the cameraman, is credited with excellent photography, picturing night scenes of the bright lights about Times Square and other sections of New York that have been made famous in history and literature.

Start Work on Mary MacLaren's Next.

"The Weaker Vessel" is the tentative title for the newest Universal production starring Mary MacLaren and now being photographed at Universal City under the direction of Paul Powell.

The story of the play as well as the scenario have been prepared by Elmer Ellsworth, Universal staff author. Thurston Hall will head Miss MacLaren's supporting cast. Margaret Loomis, Zoe Rae and Lena Baskette will also be in the cast. The initial scenes are laid in a country village while the final scenes are laid in New York.

Four Famous Players Pictures Under Way in East

WITH four big productions in work or in immediate contemplation, the next few weeks promise to be replete with busy activity at the Eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Catherine Calvert has already started "The Career of Katherine Bush" at the Fifty-sixth street studio and Billie Burke is scheduled to begin "Billeted," the first of her series of Paramount pictures under her new contract, April 28, probably at Fort Lee. Meanwhile, Elsie Ferguson is well along in the production of "The Avalanche," her new Artcraft picture, which George Fitzmaurice is directing, at Fifty-sixth street, and Irene Castle with Director Charles Maigne and her supporting company, will be back from Florida in a couple of weeks to film the interiors for "The Firing Line."

Big Promises for "Career of Katherine Bush."

"The Career of Katherine Bush," scenarized by Katryn Stuart from Elinor Glyn's sensational novel, promises to be one of the big attractions of the year. The story is one of the most widely read of current works of fiction, and Miss Stuart is said to have made an admirable adaptation for the screen.

Directing Miss Calvert is R. William Neill, long one of the "aces" of Thomas H. Ince's directorial staff, who came on from California specially for this production. Previous to joining the Ince forces Mr. Neill was a well-known actor. His first big work in pictures was in association with Mr. Ince in the production of "Civilization," and during the past year or more he has directed many of the productions of Dorothy Dalton and other Ince stars in Paramount pictures.

Billie Burke Home from Vacation.

Billie Burke, just home from a long vacation spent in Florida, is busily engaged in selecting the gowns which she will wear in "Billeted," which starts the latter part of the week. Frances Marion adapted this successful comedy in which Margaret Anglin appeared for nearly a year, first in New York last year and later on tour. The play was written by F. Tennyson-Tesse and H. M. Harwood, the scene being laid in a little New England village.

John S. Robertson will direct. Mr. Robertson has been taking a well earned rest at Atlantic City the past few days, following continuous service of several months in directing Paramount productions starring Miss Burke, John Barrymore and Marguerite Clark.

Rapid Progress on "The Firing Line."

Word comes from Director Charles Maigne that he is making rapid progress with the new Irene Castle picture, "The Firing Line." Miami is the headquarters of the company, but frequent location trips are being taken to Lauderdale, Atlantic Beach and other points. Mr. Maigne and his cameraman, Al Liguori, have been experimenting with some new camera attachments and other mechanical devices and have succeeded in obtaining some perfect fog effects over water which will prove, it is said, a distinct novelty.

"The Fear Woman" Is a Strong, Emotional Drama

PAULINE FREDERICK'S new Goldwyn picture is a drama of purpose and power. Written by Izola Forrester it has the equally interesting title of "The Fear Woman." It is directed by John A. Barry.

Essentially modern in theme, as all the vivid star's Goldwyn pictures have been and will be, it presents Miss Frederick in a role at once electrifying and charming. Not only does she dominate scenes of gripping drama but moments of delightful comedy disclose a new phase of her rich gifts. The story itself is one calculated to bring out the utmost emotional force in the star, for the drama begins with an intensely interesting situation out of which develops one poignant moment after another.

Briefly, "The Fear Woman" relates the story of a sensitive girl who renounces the man she loves because of a fear that possesses her—the fear that she will not be able to conquer an hereditary weakness which would wreck the happiness of any woman. How she does vanquish this shadow, proving to herself that she is the stronger, brings about a succession of episodes at once absorbing and mystifying.

Miss Frederick's cast is in keeping with the importance and dignity of the production. Milton Sills is her leading man. Others are Harry S. Northrup, Emmett King, Walter Hiers and Ernest Pasque.

Universal Speeds Up Its Special Two-Reel Dramas

WORK of producing special two reel Western and railroad dramas at Universal City has been speeded up again. With the Polo series almost completed the other Western companies at the producing center are working overtime to get ahead of their schedule. To make this possible several new players have been added to the rosters of these Western companies.

George Holt, Jack Ford and J. P. McGowan have been directing these productions for the past few weeks, and within a short time Jacques Jaccard will devote his time to short reel subjects. The most recent Holt production is entitled "The Last Outlaw." Ed Jones and Lucille Hutton are featured, and Princess Neola May, a full-blooded Indian girl, is also prominently cast.

Holt is now directing Pete Morrison in a two reeler given the temporary title "Wanted." Magda Lane will be seen opposite Mr. Morrison in this production. Following her work with Eddie Polo in his special series of Western pictures, Helen Gibson will return to either the Ford company or the Holt company.

Alvin J. Neitz, George Higley and Neal Hart are preparing a number of special stories for production as two reel Western subjects within a short time, and it is expected that a fourth company of Western players will be active on the lots shortly.

Polo Working on Eighth "Cyclone Smith" Story

EDDIE POLO is now at work on the eighth picture of his special series of eight two reelers to be released weekly, beginning May 12, under the title "Cyclone Smith Adventure Series."

Polo put the finishing touches on two productions the past week, working under two directors and being supported by two casts. While waiting for Marie Walcamp to recover from injuries received during the filming of the seventeen episode of "The Red Glove," J. P. McGowan produced a Polo story entitled "In the Balance." Alvin J. Neitz, staff author and scenario writer for Universal, provided the story for this drama. Evelyn Selbie, who has been playing the part of Tia Juana in "The Red Glove," and Peggy Aarup, seen in several Universal L-Ko Comedies, are in support of Polo.

Alternating in the various studios Polo virtually completed "Wanted," in which he is supported by Helen Gibson, at the same time "In the Balance" was finished. Jacques Jaccard wrote both story and script for this release and also directed the production. Mr. Jaccard is directing the filming of the last two productions of the special series.

One of the feats of strength Polo introduces during the course of "In the Balance" is that of lifting a pair of hefty burros completely off the ground at one time.

Carey to Start Work Again.

Harry Carey, having completed his personal appearance tour of the principal cities of the West and enjoyed a brief vacation on his ranch in San Fransquito Valley, Cal., is now ready for work before the camera. According to advices from the Pacific Coast studios Carey will begin work on a new six reel production Monday, April 28, under the direction of Jack Ford.

"A Man of Peace," written by Jackson Gregory, will serve Carey as his next Universal vehicle and Director Ford is surrounding the popular Western star with a strong supporting cast. A majority of the scenes for this production will be taken on and near Carey's ranch. H. Tipton Steck has prepared the scenario for Carey's next film play.

Madge Given Big Support in "Leave It to Susan"

MADGE KENNEDY is surrounded by aides hardly less accomplished than herself in "Leave it to Susan," her new Goldwyn picture, scheduled for release May 11. Wallace MacDonald is her leading man.

Walter Hiers, entrusted with an important role, brings talents of a different, but no less interesting, order. Fat and fretful, he revels in the chance to play Horace Peddingham, described as "a milk-fed son of the idle rich." The sight of Walter Hiers dashing at breakneck speed astride a spirited horse is one of the most amusing in the Rex Taylor comedy.

Alfred Hollingsworth plays Miss Kennedy's father with unctuous authority, the role of the railroad magnate known as "old J. O." George Kunkel has a far better opportunity to distinguish himself as Two-Gun Smith in "Leave it to Susan." His many scenes with the star are played with a keen sense of dramatic values.

The only feminine member of the cast besides the star is Anna Hernandez, that expert comedienne. She plays Madge Kennedy's mother in a manner which recalls some of her previous successes. Last, but not least, a quartet of real cowboys add to the excitement and humor of the picture. They are Bill Patton, William McPherson, Tuck Reynolds and Walter Cameron.

Extended Runs for "The Cambric Mask."

Vitagraph's Alice Joyce production, "The Cambric Mask," is proving one of the most satisfactory pictures released by that company in a long time, and the extended runs which it is being given bear evidence of its box-office power. The Hippodrome Theatre in San Francisco, the Dayton Theatre, Dayton, Ohio, and the Adams Theatre in Detroit, have each booked the picture for a week following the successful run of the picture over a similar period at the Rialto Theatre in Washington, D. C., the New Theatre in Baltimore, Md., and others.

"Common Clay" Goes Big on the Gordon Circuit

NATHAN GORDON, the head of the Gordon Brothers' Amusement Company, one of New England's biggest motion picture circuits, is congratulating himself on the manner in which he and A. M. Holah, Boston's Pathe branch manager, "put over" the first-run of "Common Clay," Pathe's seven-reel special feature, at Gordon's Olympia, Boston.

As a proof of the drawing power of this production the management of Gordon's Olympia stated positively that they handled more people during the engagement of "Common Clay" than ever before in the entire history of the house, and that it was necessary daily to give an extra performance to satisfy the crowds during the last two weeks of its run, thereby making it necessary to eliminate the vaudeville part of the bill.

In addition to its three weeks' run at Gordon's Olympia, the picture was booked by the Gordon company for its entire circuit, including the Strand Theatre, Dorchester, for six days; the Strand Theatre, Cambridge, played it six days; the Century Square Theatre, East Boston, played it four days to capacity business; the Broadway Theatre, Chelsea, also a two-day change house, ran "Common Clay" four days to heavy business. In all of these theatres the production will be repeated at an early date.

It is to be regretted that the Gordon company has a rule which precludes it giving out any figures as to the attendance, or whether "Common Clay" broke all records or not, but the fact that this photoplay enjoyed a three consecutive weeks' run in one house, followed by bookings over the entire Gordon circuit, and was instantly snapped up by every other New England circuit and first-run houses which had time open, is proof positive that the picture constitutes one of the biggest film attractions which has played New England for many a long day.

World Releases for May Include Four Female Stars

SHIRLEY MASON, June Elvidge, Violet Palmer and Zena Keefe are among the stars appearing in the World Pictures so far scheduled for release during the month of May. A number of prominent film and stage players appear in support of these players, among them being Matt Moore, of the famous Moore family; Garreth Hughes, Paul Everton, Jack Drumier and others.

First on the schedule for the month comes "Ginger," which is to be released on May 5. Violet Palmer is the star of this production and co-starred with her are Garreth Hughes and Paul Everton. The picture was directed by Burton George and is a modern, striking story of an unusual character. Miss Palmer is known for her work on both stage and screen and both Mr. Hughes and Mr. Everton have appeared with success on the speaking stage and in the silent drama.

On May 12 will be released "The Unwritten Code," starring Shirley Mason, with Matt Moore as her leading man. This is said to be one of the most artistic pictures ever flashed on the screen. Miss Mason portrays the role of a Japanese girl, Kiku-San, while Mr. Moore is seen in the role of Tower, an American traveling in the orient who meets and falls in love with Kiku-San. This is Miss Mason's first appearance on the World program.

June Elvidge will be seen in "The Social Pirate," scheduled for release on May 19. The story of "The Social Pirate" was written by E. Forst, and the picture was directed by Dell Henderson. Prominent in the cast are George MacQuarrie, Ned Sparks and Allan Edwards.

Zena Keefe makes her debut as a World star in the May releases. She will be seen in "The Amateur Widow," directed by Oscar Apfel.

"Full o' Pep" Hale Hamilton's Latest.

"Full o' Pep" could mean a lot of things. Literally it should portend a story glistening with pep, snap, punch and smash, and the hero should be a dashing adventurous youth who is both athletic and handsome, a hero who fights his way through indomitable odds by the sheer force of either his personality or his wits.

And such is the story of "Full o' Pep," the new vehicle purchased by Metro from Robert F. Hill, for Hale Hamilton, which has already started at the Hollywood studios with a well-balanced cast of players.

Heavy Bookings on "Thou Shalt Not."

Following the unanimous indorsement given "Thou Shalt Not," Evelyn Nesbit's latest William Fox picture, by the reviewers in the trade press, exhibitors throughout the country are showing their appreciation of this picture by giving it extended engagements.

P. F. Shea, manager of big theatres in Bridgeport, Holyoke, Mass., and Worcester, Mass., has booked the picture for a week at each of his houses.

"Thou Shalt Not" exposes the hypocrisy and cruel provincialism of small towns in such a way as to carry a strong moral lesson into every community where it is shown.

Marion Davies Film Nearing Completion.

Marion Davies' latest starring vehicle is nearing completion in the Paragon studio in Fort Lee, under Allan Dwan. The picture was begun three and a half weeks ago at Paragon, which C. F. Zittel leased for the Select star and a record has been made in completing it. At present it stands seven reels, enjoys three locales for its exteriors, and its cast includes Norman Kerry, Matt Moore, Dorothy Green, Fred Hearn, George Cooper, Arthur Earle, Ward Crane.

Mutt and Jeff at Peace Conference.

The list of May releases of Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons contains "Sir Sidney," which shows Bud Fisher's comic characters at the Peace Conference in Paris. This cartoon is declared to be the funniest of all the Mutt and Jeff series, besides having a timeliness which makes it an unusually good attraction.

"Bolshevism on Trial" Does Not Attack Socialism

AN erroneous impression has arisen that the special production, "Bolshevism on Trial," combines ill-advised propaganda with an attack on socialism. Select Pictures Corporation, the distributor of this attraction, calls attention to the fact that "Bolshevism on Trial" is not propaganda and it not directed against socialism.

"Bolshevism on Trial" was produced by the Mayflower Pictures Corporation, of which Isaac Wolper is president. It is based on the novel "Comrades" by Thomas Dixon, and was written months before the word Bolshevism originated. An impression that "Bolshevism on Trial" is an attack on socialism has recently gained considerable headway in motion picture circles, and a report has even reached the officials of the Department of Justice at Washington that injudicious methods were being resorted to in the picture's exploitation.

Select declares that "Bolshevism on Trial" is in no manner an attack on the Socialist party, nor is it propaganda. On the contrary, the production is designed purely for entertainment.

In "Bolshevism on Trial" the plot concerns the experiences of an idealist who is influenced to join a movement for the uplift of the downtrodden. The idealist is the son of a wealthy man, and the person who influences the young man to enter this humanitarian movement is the girl he later grows to love. There is a strong thread of love and romance in the story.

Real Wild Animals in Farnum's "Jungle Trail"

AN illustration of the fidelity to detail in producing "The Jungle Trail," the African jungle picture starring William Farnum, is the introduction of wild lions, tigers and other jungle beasts in their native haunts.

These scenes are thrown on the screen just after Farnum, leading a host of African natives, sets forth into the jungle to shoot a tiger which has been reported to be in the neighborhood. The lions and tigers are shown in the depths of the jungle prowling about restlessly.

Another thrill is given when a guide slips a big snake into Farnum's bed. In filming this scene a live rattlesnake was used, and when Farnum pulls down the bed covers preparatory to retiring the snake coils up, rears its head, and is about to strike, when Farnum shoots it dead. This is said to be one of the most startling scenes in the production.

"The richness of detail," it is asserted in a statement by the exhibitors' service bureau of the Fox Film Corporation, "is on a par with the magnificent sets used in this production. One of the most beautiful sets ever shown on the screen is that of the sacred temple in the "lost city" which Farnum finds in the heart of the African jungle. This temple has a facade nearly 100 feet in height, topped by minarets. The interior of the temple, where the members of the lost race worship their idol, is another work of art done in fine simplicity, yet carrying an atmosphere of richness and barbaric wealth.

"As a Man Thinks" Arouses Enthusiasm at Showings

ONE of the most largely attended trade showings ever held in New York was that of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation on the roof of the Marcus Loew New York Theatre on April 18, no less than 400 of the most important exhibitors of the metropolitan district being present. This showing was with a twenty piece orchestra accompaniment under the direction of B. Lutz, Mr. Loew's musical director.

Enthusiasm of a type and intensity rarely ever witnessed at the more or less cynically regarded trade presentations placed the stamp of success upon the first of the Harry Raver-Augustus Thomas-Leah Baird, George Irving productions, to be known in the trade as Four Star Productions and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation through the Pathe offices, out of which all Hodkinson releasing is effected, but in direct charge of the Hodkinson organization's own representatives.

In addition to a more general attendance of exhibitors than the Marcus Loew staff remembered ever having seen at other trade showings, this initial metropolitan presentation was made noteworthy by the attendance of Producer Raver, Augustus Thomas, the author; Leah Baird, the star, and George Irving, the director. Representatives of every journal affiliated with the motion picture industry were present and were liberal in their expressions of approval over the power of coherency, as well as the technical strength of the production.

The Pittsburgh private showing of "As a Man Thinks," to the exhibitors of the territory, was held on Sunday at the Liberty Theatre, East Liberty, under the direction of C. E. Moore, the Hodkinson representative for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. A subsidiary showing is to be held in two West Virginia towns during the current week.

Other trade showings of "As a Man Thinks" are being held this week in Chicago, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Cleveland, Dallas, Seattle, Atlanta and Detroit.

Mildred Manning Plays Dual Role

Mildred Manning, who is well-known to the public through her portrayal of the many "O. Henry" stories in which she has been featured, is depicting a dual role —that of mother and daughter—in "The Westerners," the Stewart Edward White novel which is being picturized by Great Authors Pictures, Inc.

As the young mother in the picture Miss Manning is stabbed to death by Robert McKim, portraying the role of a villainous half-breed. The scenes recently was staged in one end of the big glass studio at the Brunton plant in Los Angeles, under the direction of Edward Sloman.

"Marvelous! Stupendous!"

Says Maxwell Karger, Director General of Metro, to May Allison, Who Has Just Told Him of Her Latest Fox-Hunting Escapade in the Sierras.

"Man Who Turned White" Is a Story of the Desert

THE desert always has a certain fascination in the weaving of stories of mystery, intrigue and love. For that reason Jesse D. Hampton, of the Jesse D. Hampton Productions, seeking to keep in touch with the wishes of the public selected "The Man Who Turned White," a story of the Sahara as the first one for his new star, H. B. Warner. This production will be released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual.

It is the story of a white officer who left his own army under a cloud and who organized a band of marauders to prey upon the caravans of the desert. He made himself up to look like one of the natives and he speaks their language fluently. It is through a white girl captive, that his secret becomes known and when the great love grows between them she learns the true story of his life and brings him back once more to civilization.

The story originally was written by F. McGrew Willis and was adapted for the screen by George Elwood Jenks. It is written faithfully to the life of the roving bands of the desert, contains all the mysticism of their lives, depicts the attitude of the chieftains towards captured women and young girls but without horrors so often shown.

Playing opposite Warner is Barbara Castleton who came West for the first time to appear in this production. She has been a star in her own right in the East.

Three Players Carry the Entire Action.

An innovation in serial making will be introduced in the eighth episode of Pearl White's new Pathe serial, "In Secret," by Robert W. Chambers, when Director George B. Seitz plans to "put over" the maximum of dramatic action with a minimum cast.

Episode No. 8 will be in reality a two-reel dramatic subject with a cast of three persons—Miss White, Walter McGail, her leading man, and a third not yet named. No others will appear in the episode.

"In Secret" promises to shatter several other hitherto accepted rules of serial making. Where other serials have one "heavy" running through all episodes, the new Chambers' story provides a different "heavy" for each episode, making fifteen villains in all.

Among Independent Producers

Sawyer and Lubin to State Right "Virtuous Men"

HERBERT LUBIN and Arthur H. Sawyer announce that "Virtuous Men," the initial S-L Picture, will be distributed on a territorial basis. Due to its spectacular effects and entertaining qualities, this picture is said to appeal strongly to territorial buyers and several offers have been received from buyers in various parts of the United States and Canada.

The consummation of several sales is reported by the S-L organization which will announce the names of the buyers and territory allotted in the near future, which is said to embrace more than half of the United States.

The comprehensive exploitation campaign prepared by the producers for this picture, is said to have especially attracted the buyers who have placed large orders for copies of "The Picture Plus" which is the exploitation guide prepared for this production starring E. K. Lincoln and directed by Ralph Ince.

Territorial Announces Sales on Jester Comedies

THE closing of two contracts on Jester Comedies is announced by the Territorial Sales Corporation. Before the franchise on this series of eighteen two reelers was opened, applications for considerable territory were received, and offers for Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia were disposed of.

Harry Charnas, of the Standard Film Service, of Cleveland, recently saw three of the Jesters screened in his home city, "In the Wild West, "Peace and Riot" and "The Tenderfoot" and soon thereafter closed the deal giving him control of the 1919 output, which he hails as the best comedies of the year, for Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky.

Albert A. Weiland, of the Standard Film Exchange, after seeing only one of the Jesters, "Peace and Riot," declared it to be the most laugh-provoking film he had seen, and arranged for the series for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Territorial announces that the demand for these fun-makers has surprised them, and that before the commencement of the advertising campaign there were several requests for franchises. However, following the initial advertisement, an exceedingly large number of inquiries were received.

Six of the series of eighteen Jesters are now ready for distribution. These are "The Tenderfoot," "In the Wild West," "Peace and Riot," "A Mexican Mix Up," "The Wisest Fool" and "Gee Whiz" and it is announced that every one of these is up to the standard of those which Marcus Loew and other prominent picture showmen found suitable for exhibition in the best houses on their circuits.

Chicago Audiences Like George Beban Picture

HIRAM ABRAMS, who has been very successful in disposing of a large number of the state rights for the George Beban production, "Hearts of Men," was elated upon receipt of a telegram from Clyde Elliott, of the Greater Stars Productions, Inc., of Chicago, owner of the rights for Indiana and Illinois, showing they are having great success.

"Sold Harry Miller on Madison street, four days repeating on the Band Box Theatre, which gives us twenty-five days in all in the Loop. This is without doubt the best representation a legitimate picture, devoid of cheapness and sensationalism, the Loop has ever enjoyed."

The Band Box Theatre played "Hearts of Men" for two weeks, instead of one week, their regular policy, and did this after the picture had run at the Ziegfeld Theatre. Moreover, the Band Box doubled its prices during the two weeks and are said to have played to more money than they had ever done on any picture of this character.

Mr. Abrams' enthusiasm is greatly increased because of the large number of bookings state rights men are securing. Mr. Elliott, of Chicago, has also advised Mr. Abrams that the picture is booked for the entire circuit of Lubliner and Trintz theatres and also for the entire circuit of the Ascher Brothers' theatres.

"Carter Case" Bookings Continue to Increase

OLIVER FILMS, INC., reports a big increase in bookings by the Pioneer Film Corporation in New York and New Jersey territory for "The Carter Case," the Craig Kennedy serial in which Herbert Rawlinson and Margaret Marsh are starred. This picture is now being shown in about two hundred theatres in New York and New Jersey.

As a result of the way in which the first episode "The Phosgene Bullet" was received by the public, many new bookings were secured, even opposition houses in a number of instances making arrangements for presenting this serial to their patrons, so that it is announced that the total of the Pioneer bookings is now more than two hundred and fifty. In addition, more than fifty per cent. of the theatres in New Jersey and New York state, outside of Greater New York territory, are said to have booked this episode film story by Arthur B. Reeve and John W. Grey.

Majority of Territory Sold on "Five Nights"

THE Classical Motion Picture Company, Inc., reports that the following territory has been sold on "Five Nights" the feature production based on Victoria Cross' novel of the same title: Ohio to Robert A. Morrison, Cleveland; Chicago to the Silee Film Exchange, 220 South State street; Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina to Criterion Film Service, 65½ Walton street, Atlanta; New England to G. A. Dodge, Boston; California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaiian Islands to All Star Feature Distributors.

Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas to Southwestern Film Corporation, 1911½ Commerce street, Dallas; southern Indiana and southern Illinois to Doll Van Film Corporation, Minneapolis; Michigan to the Goyette Film Co., Detroit; Minnesota, North and South Dakota and northern Wisconsin to Elliott Film Corporation; Missouri to the Standard Film Corporation, and New York City and New Jersey to Al Harstn.

The following states are still available: Pennsylvania, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

Gaumont Offers New Release

IN announcing the early appearance of its new weekly release, "Pictorial Life," the Gaumont Company promises a distinct novelty. "Pictorial Life" will not be modeled after any other release, but will blaze its own trail—is said will be an unusually brilliant one.

Early announcement will be made of the first release date of "Pictorial Life," which will be handled by independent distributors.

"Stolen Orders" Sold for State of Illinois

WILLIAM A. BRADY announces the sale of "Stolen Orders" for Illinois, to Jones, Linick and Shaefer, also that recent advices from widely separated parts of the country disclose that this production continues to roll up remarkable box-office records. Not only in this country, but also in foreign territories, particularly England and South America, it is proving a strong attraction.

Jones, Linick and Shaefer will shortly inaugurate an extensive campaign of exploitation on behalf of "Stolen Orders," being convinced that it will equal or better in Illinois the remarkable business being done in Ohio, New England and other parts of the country.

Kansas City Exchange Enlarges Its Territory

N. J. FLYNN and Charles W. Harden, of the First National Film Company, Kansas City, have returned from New York after having spent ten days in looking over the market of state rights pictures. They report the closing of contracts for the following productions for Kansas and Missouri:

Maurice Tourneur's picture, "Women," bought through Hiller & Wilk. "Tempest and Sunshine" from J. Frank Hatch Enterprises. "Wives of Men" featuring Florence Reed and "The Still Alarm" from the Pioneer Film Corporation. "Once to Every Man," from the Frohman Amusement Corporation. "When the Desert Smiled" featuring Neal Hart. "The Fires of Hope," "The Webb of Intrigue," "Human Shuttles" and "The Shadow of Fear," featuring Harold Lockwood, from the Arrow Film Company. Forty single reel Western subjects featuring Tom Mix from the Jans Distributing Corporation. Fourteen single reel Western subjects featuring Tom Mix from the Exclusive Film Company.

This is claimed to be the largest group of films ever bought at one time by any concern operating in the Middle West.

Pioneer Reports Sales on Two Pictures.

The Pioneer Film Corporation announces the sale of Iowa and Nebraska territory on "Wives of Men" and the "Still Alarm" to The Sterling Film Corporation of Omaha, Nebraska.

Oliver Films Complete the Craig Kennedy Serial

DESPITE the handicap of being a new organization, and of filming the production during the three months when weather conditions are least conducive to progress, Oliver Films, Inc., completed the fifteen episode, thirty-one reel serial "The Carter Case" in fourteen weeks.

In keeping with the speed and efficiency with which this Craig Kennedy story was filmed, Harry Grossman, general manager of Oliver Films, announces that contracts have been closed with exchanges covering territory as far west as the Rocky Mountains. Canada, as well as foreign rights, have been contracted for, and the few remaining states are now being negotiated for, and will be closed in a short time. The bookings secured have also surpassed Mr. Grossman's most sanguine expectations.

It is announced that one hundred and fifty theatres in greater New York are showing this serial, and as a result of the initial showings other bookings are being received. Exchanges elsewhere are sending in enthusiastic reports and are ordering additional prints.

Bulls Eye Announces Sales

SEVERAL sales of territory have recently been consummated by the Bulls Eye Film Corporation on the Billy West and Gale Henry comedies which they are producing and distributing on state rights basis. Capital Film Company, of Washington, have secured rights to both series for District of Columbia, Maryland and North Carolina, while Consolidated Film Corporation, San Francisco, has secured both series for California, Arizona and Nevada.

Rights for the Billy West series have also been sold to the Educational Films Corporation, of Milwaukee, for northern Wisconsin, Minnesota and North and South Dakota.

Zion Films Will Produce Jewish Historical Picture

ZION FILMS, INC., announces that in line with their policy to screen the biggest and best novels of Jewish historical life, arrangements have been made to produce a story by David Pinski, one of the most prominent Yiddish writers in America.

The title "The Rebirth of a Race" has been selected and it is described as a history cycle of the Jewish race from the days of Moses to the present day. An elaborate scenario has been prepared by Mr. Pinski. It is announced that there will be no deviation from history, and that some of the sources of the story were derived from the Talmud.

Mr. Pinski is not only a dramatist but a poet, and his story is in the nature of a prophecy dealing with a modern Utopia following the signing of peace and restoration of Palestine to the Jews.

A large cast of principals and extras will be required and it is planned to take a majority of the scenes in Palestine. It is announced that this will be a mammoth production, and that a prominent part will be taken by the Palestine Red Cross and members of the British Expeditionary forces in Palestine.

"The Carter Case" Sold for Iowa and Nebraska

WITH Eastern exchanges reporting heavy bookings of "The Carter Case," a Craig Kennedy serial, starring Herbert Rawlinson and Margaret Marsh and produced by Oliver Films, Inc., negotiations for the state rights sales of this episode photoplay in Western territories are progressing rapidly.

Trade showings have already been arranged in several of the Western states, and contracts for the rights to the serial have been closed for Iowa and Nebraska with Phil Goldstone, of the Sterling Film Exchange at Omaha.

Mr. Goldstone viewed the initial episodes of the Craig Kennedy photoplay at Omaha, and came east to close the deal in person with the officials of Oliver Films. While at the producing firm's New York studio he viewed showings of the finished episodes following those he had seen at Omaha and was enthusiastic over the production.

Other western buyers are negotiating for contracts with Oliver Films, Inc., and "The Carter Case" in the west promises to become just as popular as it is in the east.

Aronowitz a State Righter

AMONG the visitors to the Moving Picture World offices during the past week was Sam Aronowitz, who recently opened his own state right exchange in Des Moines, at 223 West Locust street. Mr. Aronowitz has been in New York for several days, during which time he purchased from the Pioneer Film Corporation rights to "The Boomerang" for Iowa and Nebraska and "Virtuous Sinners" for Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

With these two productions, Mr. Aronowitz, who has had a number of years experience in the film business with several prominent exchanges, will make his initial bid for the patronage of exhibitors in his territory.

"S-L" Will Aid Exhibitors in Showing "Virtuous Men"

ARTHUR H. SAWYER and Herbert Lubin announce that in distributing the first S-L Picture "Virtuous Men," starring E. K. Lincoln, on the state rights market, a survey of the entire field will be made to determine the possibilities of exploitation, presentations and advertising in each territory.

Every buyer will have at his disposal the services of the S-L organization which will co-operate with him regarding press matter, cuts, novelties, etc., to fit his requirements. A plan has been worked out for joint action between the distributor, buyer and exhibitor regarding first runs, exploitation methods and local publicity possibilities, and S-L Pictures announces it will also assist buyers by working directly with the exhibitors and newspapers.

Representatives will be sent to each territory to assist exhibitors in the initial presentation, to work under the buyer and exhibitor and supply publicity ideas. Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin announce that it will be their endeavor to aid in handling the local situation in each instance so that it will accrue to the benefit of the exhibitor, instead of offering a general campaign intended for the country as a whole.

Fischer Making New Picture

THE David G. Fischer Productions, which has recently released through the Arrow Film Corporation the seven reel feature "The Law of Nature," is at work at Miami on a second production, which will also be released through Arrow, entitled "When Bonds Are Loosed." It is from the novel of that name.

The picture will be completed within a short time, and plans for the exploitation of the production are now being completed.

The entire production will be staged in Florida. The book "When Bonds Are Loosed" is by Grant Watson, and Mr. Fischer feels elated in being in position to dramatize the widely read story.

"Open Your Eyes," the Public Health Film, Has a Lot of Punch, as the Scene on the Right Indicates.
This picture is being distributed by Warner Brothers on state right basis.

New Billy West Comedy Completed.

The Bulls Eye Film Corporation announces that the latest Billy West two reel comedy "Her First False Hare" is now complete and is being assembled and titled at the Hollywood studios. It is scheduled for release on May 1. The star is supported by the same cast of funmakers as have appeared in his recent productions, and this picture is said to be filled with laughs.

Many Timely Subjects in Latest Gaumont News

BEAUTIFUL photography is said to be the outstanding feature of Gaumont New Number 57. The subjects include the Easter parades on Fifth avenue, New York and the Boardwalk at Atlantic City. There are also scenes of the homecoming of thousands of our troops, also the opening of the Victory Loan campaign.

Belgian heroes from twelve regiments, all decorated for distinguished service, and the band from Pershing's headquarters, now in this country; also American soldiers from the Italian front, Boston's Own, the 101 Infantry, and New York's old "Fighting Sixty-ninth" are also shown.

Other subjects include the "Mummers" parade in Philadelphia, the Steamer Belfast which collided with the Cape Cod Canal bridge, and other items of interest.

Larger Offices for "S-L"

DUE to the increased activity in connection with the production of their initial feature "Virtuous Men," Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin have enlarged their offices in the Longacre Building, so that the present floor space is more than double the space they originally occupied.

This organization now occupies a suite of eight rooms on the eleventh floor, where their original quarters were located. The entire suite has been redecorated and new furniture installed, spacious offices have been provided for the officials and a store room for cuts, posters and advertising supplies, as well as facilities for cutting and re-winding of film has been added.

Big Campaign Planned for "Open Your Eyes"

THE new Warner Brothers feature "Open Your Eyes" is now ready for distribution on state rights basis. This picture was directed by Gilbert P. Hamilton and the story was written by S. L. and J. L. Warner. It is said to have been produced under the supervision of the United States Public Health Service and will carry the seal of the department on advertising and publicity matter.

This picture is interpreted by an excellent cast, including Gaston Glass, Faire Binney, Emily Marceau, Jack Hopkins, Mrs. Goff, Hal Brown and other players of like prominence.

Arrangements are being made for an extensive publicity and advertising campaign which will be conducted throughout the country.

Goldberg Returns from Coast

JESSE J. GOLDBERG, general manager of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, expects to arrive in New York, Monday, bringing from the West Coast the first two Texas Guinan two reelers and the first Mack Swain Poppy Comedy. William L. Sherrill, president of the company, is still on the Coast overseeing the production of other Swain and Guinan pictures, but expects to return to New York shortly.

Since leaving New York, Mr. Goldberg has visited Chicago, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Kansas City, San Francisco, Seattle and Cleveland, and announces that he has disposed of rights to "Once to Every Man" for each territory visited.

Many Territories Sold on Pioneer's "Boomerang"

ALTHOUGH only a short time has elapsed since the Pioneer Film Corporation announced it would distribute "The Boomerang" on a territorial basis, considerable territory has been contracted for and negotiations are under way for the remainder.

This production is in seven reels, and is said to have aroused great interest among state rights buyers who have been quick to see the exploitation possibilities; several having signed contracts for territory immediately after viewing the screening of the picture.

Although the plot is built on the questions of capital and labor, and it is announced that the production has been endorsed by prominent organizations, including the Consumers' League, this phase is said to be only one of the many angles to the picture. There is an appealing love story, which deals with a rich man's son who, thrown upon his own resources, makes good.

"The Boomerang" is founded on a novel by William Hamilton Osborne, and stars Henry B. Walthall, supported by a cast including Melbourne MacDowell, Helen Jerome Eddy and Nina Byron.

Art-o-graf Announces Two Feature Pictures

THE Art-o-graf Film Company of Denver, producers of "Miss Arizona" starring Gertrude Bonhill and James O'Neill which is being distributed on a territorial basis by Arrow Film Corporation, are now engaged in the production of another feature picture entitled "The Wolves of Wall Street." It is described as a melodrama and a "one hundred per cent. American production," and will be not less than six reels in length. Most of the action takes place in the mountains of Colorado.

Immediately following this, work will be begun on an adaptation of Caroline Lockhart's story "Me Smith." The president and managing director of the Art-o-graf Company is Otis B. Thayer, formerly an actor on the stage, and later a director for the Selig Polyscope Company.

Seven Additional Sales Reported on Beban Film

SEVEN additional districts were disposed of to state rights concerns by Hiram Abrams during the past week. On George Beban's "Hearts of Men," Arthur S. Hyman secured right for Michigan; Tom Moore, for Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia; Roland and Clark, for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Other exchanges securing territory are Boston Photoplay Company, for New England; New Jersey Rolfe Film Company, for New Jersey; Frank Beverstock, for Ohio and Kentucky; The Greater Stars Productions, for Illinois and Indiana; the Pioneer Film Corporation, for New York; The Mid West Distributing Company, for Wisconsin, and All Star Features, for California, Arizona and Nevada.

Negotiations are under way for the disposition of the remaining districts for this country and also for the foreign rights on the picture.

Arrow Reports More Sales

W. E. SHALLENBERGER announces that business is unusually brisk with the Arrow Film Corporation and buyers are coming in from all parts of the country. Among the sales reported are "The Mysterious Mr. Browning," for Michigan, to Lefky & Zapp, 25 East Elizabeth street, Detroit. This picture has already played a week's engagement at Kunsky's Washington Theatre in Detroit.

"The Mysterious Mr. Browning" has been sold for the New England States to the Natbam Features Company, of Springfield. "When the Desert Smiled," starring Neal Hart, and "The Webb of Intrigue," "Human Shuttles," "Fires of Hope" and "The Shadow of Fear," the latter four pictures the Lockwood-Allison re-issues for Iowa and Nebraska to Sterling Film Corporation of Omaha, Nebraska.

"Birth of a Race" Sold for Michigan.

W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, Michigan, has purchased the rights to the photo-drama spectacle "The Birth of a Race" for the state of Michigan and will shortly announce booking arrangements for Michigan exhibitors.

This production had its premiere at the Blackstone Theatre in Chicago. It tells a story of peace, democracy, brotherhood, and deals with the past and present.

Exclusive Has a Six-Reeler

EXCLUSIVE FEATURES, Inc., have just purchased from Mr. Wm. N. Selig, the world's rights on a six reel negative, featuring Tom Mix, entitled "The Heart of Texas Ryan." It will be distributed on a state rights basis, as soon as titling and editing on the production is completed.

The Hour of Welcome in Zion's Film, "Khavah."
Sholom Aleichem, author of the story, is considered the Hebrew Mark Twain.

Sidelights and Comments

THE proof of a photoplay is in the showing. If it goes with the spectators it is a good picture. This is the theory of the exhibitor and an excellent theory it is. In regard to its merits, the man who pays his good money to see a moving picture often reverses the opinion of the man who made it. Fortunately there are trustworthy rules to guide the producer in the making of his picture. Unfortunately these rules are not always understood by the producer or the men to whom he has intrusted the making of the scenario and the other details of his picture and the result is always the same: the spectator does not receive the entertainment he pays for. He doesn't know what's wrong with the picture and he doesn't much care; he says it's a poor show, and lets it go at that.

Here is a practical example of the consequences of ignoring one of the rules:

A picture was released lately that made the mistake of repeating a serious situation. The incident marked the first meeting of the hero and the heroine. He rescued her from a dangerous position, and the means used to attract his attention was the most natural in the world. The story then followed a logical course of events and came to a logical and satisfactory finish. But it did not end there. An anti-climatic situation was tacked on in which the heroine was again rescued from a position of danger by the hero and she used precisely the same means as before of attracting his attention to her predicament. Her action was natural enough, but contrary to the rules of showmen. No one ever saw a magician repeat a trick during a performance. It would lose its power of illusion and some of the spectators might catch him at it. This is true of a serious situation in a stageplay or a photodrama. Repetition weakens its force. In comedy the rule works the other way: every repetition increases the laughs. Repeating a serious situation also frequently brings a laugh—just where it isn't wanted. The writer saw the picture referred to in a theatre and several persons near him laughed when the business, which was intended to be impressive, was repeated.

The week before he attended a public showing of a serious photodrama at a New York uptown theatre. Until near the end the picture kept to the rules. At the precise point where it attempted to ignore proper dramatic construction a young girl in the next row brought a smile or a laugh from those near her by remarking in a tone of strong conviction:

Both pictures carried the names of well known stars. Not the slightest applause was heard at the finish of either of the features. WEITZEL.

"Eyes of the Soul"

Artcraft Presents Elsie Ferguson in An Appealing and Up-to-Date Story, Her Finest Performance.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

NOBLY compassionate, tender and sweet is the highly sympathetic role Elsie Ferguson is called upon to interpret in the Artcraft picture, "Eyes of the Soul." And she does it with the eyes of her soul, a soul not wholly indomitable and unselfish, but a human one, strongly inclined to yield to indolent gratification of desire. On the edge of accepting a great fortune laid at her feet, she is moved so powerfully by her finer sentiments as to reveal a soul as white as heaven. It is soul drama, the struggle that is ever going on between our ideals and our instincts. Elsie Ferguson intelligently divines and illuminates every phase of feeling, whether strong or subtle, with such consummate skill that she far excels any previous screen performance of the kind, establishing herself beyond the shadow of a doubt as an artiste of the highest order.

Besides the masterly interpretation of the lead there is the tempo of the story, in the time it is laid, a mirror of the soul of this age. The feeling of pity we might have for a blind soldier of some past war would be passive in comparison to the active sentiment now in our hearts for those manly fellows who gave up bright futures to serve on the line that repelled the attacks of barbarism. It is of today and of today's problems of just relief to our wounded that our hearts and minds are devoted. Masterly psychology and modern theme have combined to make "Eyes of the Soul" a great screen drama.

The production is a distinct credit to the director, Emile Chautard. Eve Unsell's scenario, from the story by George Weston, is a fine piece of work. As Larry Gibson, the blind soldier, Wyndham Standing brings out the fine manliness of the character.

The Story.

Gloria Swann, singing in a fashionable cabaret at Palm Beach, is the heroine of "Eyes of the Soul." She dreams of ease and elegance, and chance places them within reach. Judge Malvin, of old family, established social position, great wealth and fine appearance in spite of his years, offers her all her heart seems to desire. She is on the point of accepting, when the car in which she is driving with the Judge barely misses the wheel chair of a blind soldier, Larry Gibson.

This incident leads to a compassionate interest in the manly fellow, who is living out his small savings in despair, his future a desolate blank. Gloria feels the pull of her finer nature on native instinct, struggles between pity and desire, and gradually falls in love with the blind soldier. He is made aware of her love, but he refuses to let her sacrifice herself until she discovers a musical talent in him which will amply provide for them both.

"Ginger"

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel World-Picture, entitled "Ginger," was written and produced by Burton George. It has a conventional beginning and it might perhaps be said that, so far as the plot is concerned, it is quite obvious throughout. But the development is such that the story gets a real hold upon the interest and for this reason the subject is stronger than many more pretentious ones. The opening scenes are in the tenement section of New York City and the later scenes are on the battlefields of France.

Violet Palmer is cast in the role of "Ginger," a pretty girl of the East Side, who is taught to steal by her father. She is adopted by the judge of the juvenile court and in later years marries his son. Some observers would have perhaps preferred her to marry Tim, her newsboy friend, but the conclusion is satisfying as it is.

Miss Palmer makes with surprising ease the step from a pronounced juvenile part to that of an educated young lady of marriageable age. She plays all of her scenes effectively. Garreth Hughes and Raymond Hackett also appear to advantage as the two boys, who become rivals for the girl's hand.

The atmosphere of this story has been well looked after; the tenement portion at the beginning is lifelike and the battle episodes in France are realistic. The latter will no doubt appeal strongly to enlisted men.

The Cast.

Ginger Carson.....Violet Palmer

The Story.

"Ginger" Carson is the daughter of "Biff" Carson, a man of low principles, who makes his living by his wits. He and a friend conceive the idea of dressing Ginger in boy's clothing and having her rob a house. They force the girl to this action and she is caught.

Ginger is next seen on trial in the juvenile court, where she gains the sympathy of Judge Trowbridge to such an extent that he decides to adopt her. The girl is taken to his fine home, where she meets his son, Bobby. She also receives a call from Tim Mooney, a newsboy who had befriended her in the early part of the story.

Bobby and Tim are rivals for the girl's love, but remain friends nevertheless. Ginger at first finds her new life too lonely, but soon becomes accustomed to it. The judge sends her to school and she returns five years later, a beautiful young woman. Her father is released from prison and makes a vain effort to claim her.

The scenes then change to the battlefields of France, where Bobby and Tim are both wounded in action. They are taken to a hospital where Ginger is playing "little mother." Tim dies in her arms and she later promises to marry Bobby. In the meantime she has had a reconciliation with her father, who is also in service and has become a real man.

"As a Man Thinks"

First Production of "Four-Star" Combination an Attractive and Well-Made Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE list of names connected with the "Four-Star" Combination's first production is an impressive one. Presented by Harry Raver, the screen version of "As a Man Thinks," an Augustus Thomas stage play, has George Irving as its director and Leah Baird as the star. The story in its original form was written for a definite purpose and much of that purpose is retained in the picture. Its theme is the double standard of morals for men and women. It also introduces a number of Jewish characters and makes use of the Mosaic law relating to the virtue of the wife to enforce some of its arguments.

The picture is not a preachment, however. There is abundant action, a liberal amount of light and shade and the scenes shift from social and bohemian life in Paris to the dramatic consequence of the hero's slip from virtue after he and his wife have returned to this country. In showing her resentment of her husband's infatuation for an artist's model while abroad the wife encourages the attentions of an old admirer and brings home to the man whose name she bears the injustice of his own misconduct. The arguments used by the author are powerful ones and the construction of the plot give them added force. A defect in the handling of the story places the big situation too far from the finish.

Leah Baird.
As she appears in stellar role and robes in "As a Man Thinks."

The Story.

"As a Man Thinks" teaches that a double standard of morals is right, because woman's responsibility in the matter of virtue is a sacred trust that enables her to safeguard the home and the happiness of the world. When Frank Clayton, a wealthy magazine publisher of New York, goes to Paris with his wife and little son, he is taken to the artists' colony by Benjamin De Lota, a former admirer of Mrs. Clayton's, and meets an alluring model who is posing for an American sculptor named Burrell. Clayton yields to the temptation offered him at an artist's ball and accompanies the model to her home that night. Later on his wife meets him and the model in the park, and Clayton is forced to introduce his companion as a newly engaged contributor to his magazine.

Upon the return of the Claytons to the United States the wife discovers the true character of the model and learns of her husband's misconduct. She accepts an invitation from De Lota to visit his rooms at night and, although her only fault is lack of discretion, appearances are so strong against her that Clayton is led to believe he is not the father of little Dick. He arrives at De Lota's rooms as his wife is trying to escape from the man's embrace. There is a struggle and Clayton is prevented from killing his supposed friend by his father-in-law. Blind with jealousy and doubt he will not believe in his wife's innocence. He drives her from his home, and is finally convinced of his error by Doctor Seelig, a Jewish physician, in whose house Elinor Clayton has taken refuge with her boy. De Lota also is a Jew and Doctor Seelig uses the religious bond between them to clear Elinor's good name. A love affair involving Vedah Seelig, De Lota and the sculptor Burrell runs through the plot.

"Captain Kidd, Jr."

Mary Pickford's New Artcraft Picture Has Been Constructed Mostly for Laughs.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

LET no possible laugh escape, was the rule governing the making of "Captain Kidd, Jr.," the latest Artcraft picture with Mary Pickford as the magnet. In its original form the play, written by Rida Johnson Young, achieved considerable success upon the stage. It told a pleasing story with good heart interest, frequently witty dialogue and an interesting set of human beings as the characters. The screen version, prepared by Frances Marion, follows the main points of the plots and also contains much new material of a comic nature. Opening in the second-hand book store of a quaint old Scotchman whose granddaughter is the guiding spirit of the place, the first third of the picture is human, brisk of action and sufficiently novel of situation to entertain all classes of Pickford fans.

With the shifting of the locale to a small town in New England a greater change takes place in the classification of the characters and the humorous nature of the picture. Keystone comedy of the get-the-laugh-at-any-price sort supplies the fun from then on, a burlesque constable of the broadest type and longest, thinnest legs being the chief comic cutup. A pert parrot, whose sensible advice is occasionaly spiced with the now familiar, "Give 'em hell!" is another of the amusing members of the cast. Some spectators will vote the constable a huge success, others will find him too much in evidence, while still other devoted admirers of the star will wish he had been left out completely. His bits of horseplay brought many hearty laughs from a full house at the Strand Theatre, New York, last Sunday afternoon. Near the finish of the picture there is a return to the former spirit of the story.

Mary MacTavish is an excellent part for Mary Pickford. A quick witted and engaging young person, the book seller's granddaughter is just in her way and the best loved of the screen favorites invests the other Mary with all the old witchery of her smile and unfailing charm. Douglas MacLean as Jim Gleason, the chap who wins Mary, and Spottiswoode Aitkin as her grandfather are admirable. Victor Potel as the comic supplement constable is always true to type and will be heartily relished by those who are willing to laugh and ask no questions. The production is up to standard.

The Story.

"Captain Kidd, Jr.," as may be inferred from the title, is a story of buried treasure. In this case the treasure is of a very original nature. The grandfather of Willie Carleton puts his will in a book about pirates and their buried treasure and the book is bought by a second-hand book store, run by Angus MacTavish whose granddaughter and a young author named Jim Gleason live with him. After the book gets into the hands of Mary MacTavish young Carleton, his grandfather's lawyer, and the dead man's private secretary, come to the book store and try to buy it back, but Mary has already discovered the paper. It shows where a buried treasure is to be found, and the rightful owner agrees to share it with the MacTavish crowd if they will help him dig for it. The place is an old farm that once belonged to the elder Carleton but is now owned by Lem Butterfield. Pretending to be geologists looking for specimens, the party engage board with the Butterfields and proceed to dig holes all over the place. Before the buried treasure is found the suspicions of the town constable and his neighbors are excited and the officer of the law keeps a close watch on the diggers. The lawyer and the private secretary arrive and try to prevent the search. When the box is found and opened it contains a note stating that the treasure mentioned in the will is a store of good health which young Carleton is bound to gain if he digs up enough of the farm during his hunt. On going back to the city the heir finds that the hunt was only a test, and the lawyer has been holding his fortune in trust. Mary, who bought the farm with money left her by her mother, sells it at a big advance to a man who wants to run a railroad through it. ## "The Pest"

Mabel Normand Has One of Her Best Comedy Roles in New Goldwyn Picture.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE recent Goldwyn five-reel release, "The Pest," with Mabel Normand in the leading role, is a comedy that, in the first part at least, will keep any house-full roaring with laughter. The "Pest" is a rural slavey, and runs a flatboat ferry which furnishes a deal of amusement. But the picture is built up on a melodramatic plot and most of the laughter compelling situations have a touch of pathos and bring out the heroine's character sympathetically. She is charming and lovable and perhaps one of the most pleasing portrayals Mabel Normand has done in a long while.

The slavey is shown in the end to be the daughter of the local rich man, and the girl who is thought to be his daughter is the child of the slavey's supposed parents. There are a number of characters in the plot and while it serves mostly as a comedy vehicle, it has a bit of good story.

The Story.

In "The Pest," a picture by Goldwyn, the heroine is Jiggs, a lovable madcap girl dressed in blue jeans. She lives on a farm on an island and one of whose duties it is to run a flat-boat ferry to and from the mainland.

One day she brings over Blanche, the daughter of Judge Fisher, the local rich man. In the party with this girl, is John Harland, a schemer who wants to marry Blanche for the Judge's money.

Jiggs, who is played by Mabel Normand, is sent to the Judge's house with a basket of eggs and is invited to come to an evening party. The Judge likes her, and Blanche thinks she will make fun. Blanche is to furnish her with a dress. The dress is put on over her suit of blue jeans and she behaves as a irresponsible madcap much to the amusement of the party, though the Judge's serious secretary, Gene Giles, who loves her, takes her part. The Judge has noticed that she is wearing a peculiar ring. He recognizes it and she leaves it with him.

When she gets home and her parents find where she has been and discover that she has left the ring with the Judge, they are much concerned. The presence of the ring has also disturbed Blanche and her lover, Harland. Harland takes some bonds and contrives to have Giles suspected. The schemers at the big house and those in the farm house get in touch. Jiggs is locked in the cabin of "Noisy" Wilson, who is supposed to be her uncle. ## "The Love That Dares"

Madlaine Traverse Plays Heroine in Sensational Fox Story.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

A SERIES of sensational lesser climaxes leading up to the big scene is one of the traits of the latest Fox five-reel drama picture, "The Love That Dares." Madlaine Traverse, as the woman about whom the struggle centers, fills the character with both artistry and physical charm. Thomas Santschi as her husband, the iron manufacturer, and Frank Elliott, as the rich man who is trying to win Risdon's wife away from him, are better than merely commendable in their respective characters. The picture does not convince one as absolutely true in every step it takes to arrive at a big situation. It has a surface plausibility and the climaxes afford a chance for brilliant acting. These make the high spots vivid as bits of life. It will be a widely popular attraction in spite of the fact that the story is not really substantial, on account of its many brilliant flashes. It has graceful scenes, good photography and the right sets.

Cast.

Perry Risdon.....Thomas Santschi
Ned Beckwith.....Frank Elliott
Marta Holmes.....Mae Gaston

The Story.

The opening of the Fox picture, "The Loves That Dares," shows the business of Perry Risdon, iron manufacturer, is in such a condition that he has no time for social diversions. Another man, a loose living millionaire named Beckwith, is scheming to get Risdon's wife away from him. A note given by the manufacturer is due and he lacks funds with which to take it up. He appeals to Beckwith and the millionaire offers him $50,000 if he will consent to a divorce. Risdon knocks him down.

The iron manufacturer has promised his wife a second honeymoon. He tell her it will be impossible to leave the office. She goes alone in a huff. Her husband gets an anonymous letter telling him that his wife is with Beckwith. The letter is sent by a girl whom Beckwith has ruined. Word comes that the note is to be called at once. Risdon's wife learns of it and pawns her jewels, but they hardly bring half the needed amount. The faithful woman goes to Beckwith for a loan, thinking him a friend. He offers the money under dishonorable conditions and tells the wife of his friend to come back at eight. She keeps the appointment. Her husband arrives just as dinner is finished. There is a struggle between the two men and the innocence of Risdon's wife is finally established.

"The Eternal Magdalene"

Goldwyn Presents Margaret Marsh in Screen Adaptation of Robert H. McLaughlin's Stage Success.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

THE exhibitor who expects very big things of Goldwyn's "The Eternal Magdalene," with Margaret Marsh in the leading role, is going to be disappointed. The photoplay is based on Robert H. McLaughlin's stage success of the same title—which is its chief claim to acceptance. The play had a long and successful run in New York and on the road.

But in the photoplay much of the dramatic force of McLaughlin's work has been lost. On the screen we have a visualized sermon—sort of an illustrated argument against condemning the woman who has taken one step off the straight and narrow path, and against the creed of giving a man a religious tract when his body is crying for food. Much of the action of the film is staged in a dream, and it is through its allegorical allusions that the picture endeavors to carry home its message.

Arthur Hopkins, a well-known stage director, directed the picture, but as the subject appears on the screen, it seems to have been a case of "Too many cooks"—as if the film had been through many hands before reaching the screen.

A circumstance that the exhibitor will note is that although Maxine Elliott is cast as "The Eternal Magdalene," it is Margaret Marsh, who is the featured player. The work of the latter is thoroughly acceptable.

"The Eternal Magdalene" is the sort of a picture with which a showman can draw a crowd, but it is doubtful if there would be many repeats.

The Cast.

Elijah Bradshaw.....Charles Dalton
Elizabeth, his daughter...Margaret Marsh
Paul, his son.....Charles Trowbridge
Macy, his secretary.....Donald Gallaher
Mrs. Bradshaw.....Maud Cooling
The Preacher.....Vernon Steele
The Eternal Magdalene....Maxine Elliott

The Story.

As in the days of Christ, when Magdalene beckoned to a strolling soldier, today a fallen woman calls to passers-by. Elijah Bradshaw, the most influential citizen in "any" modern American city, heads a reform movement to stamp out evil. He is a hard, stern man who discounts the belief that some unfortunates are "more to be pitied than censored."

On the eve of a proposed series of revival meetings, Bradshaw learns that his own daughter has taken a misstep. Austere, forbidding, and wrapped up in his own zealous goodness, the father disowns his daughter. Exhausted, he falls asleep and dreams that there appears before him the Magdalene. She leads him through a nightmare in which he sees the real evils of his "reform" work. He sees his daughter flee from a house of the sort he has made war upon; he sees her leave her child at the foundling asylum; he sees her weak, sick and weary.

And in the dream the Magdalene brings him to the church where the poor can't reach the latch; to the bread line where men, clamoring for food, are given song books. The father sees his son find in the breadline the young man with whom his daughter is in love, and who is the father of the child. In the dream the son kills the youth and the news of the arrest kills the mother. Stunned and staggering under the series of blows, the father relents and awakes from his dream. Awaking, he finds that he is in his own home and, just as his daughter is to leave the house, he gathers her in his arms. The son and the youth come into the house, and it is learned that he and the daughter had been secretly married.

Get your local clergy interested some weeks in advance. If there is any chance to work a newspaper sensation of dignity, get after it. The question is ever new. If there is any reform movement in town, you have your opportunity ready made. If you can do no better hook this up with the prohibition and ask if that will be any more successful than was Elijah Bradshaw's campaign. Use plenty of lithograph work, but if you can afford to, make this largely a newspaper campaign.

"False Evidence"

Viola Dana Central Figure in Metro's Adaptation of Mary K. Wilkins' Novel "Madelon."

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

MARY K. WILKINS' novel, "Madelon," has lost none of its interest in its transference to the screen under the title "False Evidence," with Viola Dana in the leading role. There are several fairly dramatic moments in Metro's offering, and Miss Dana, Director Carewe and the supporting cast have made the most of the material offered by Finis Fox's adaptation. The interest of the spectator is fairly well-sustained at all times.

The story follows the usual general course laid out in the novels of Mrs. Wilkins and Laura Jean Libby. The fact that its locale is in the giant Redwood trees of California, and that its characters are drawn from the residents of a village virtually untouched by modernity, has given Director Carewe the opportunity of using interesting backgrounds and types.

Viola Dana's role is one that gives her the chance to "get over" her emotional appeal, and she has a capable supporting cast. "False Evidence" is not a big picture by any means, but it is a program release that an exhibitor need not hesitate to book.

The Story.

Sandy MacTavish and his daughter Madelon live in the remote village of Redwoods. Sandy is a stern woodsman who believes that a man never breaks his word. In her infancy Madelon is betrothed to Lot Gordon, a powerful lumberman. As she grown to womanhood she realizes she loves Burr Gordon, Lot's cousin. Burr Gordon is betrothed to Dorothy Fair, who loves Madelon's brother.

In a fit of jealous rage Madelon rushes home alone from a dance, and is overtaken in the woods by Lot. She mistakes him a clue to the bank robbers. The gang she stabs him. Burr comes upon the scene and forces Madelon to flee, taking the blame for the crime himself. Madelon cannot make anyone believe she did the stabbing. Burr is saved from lynching by Madelon, who extracts the truth from Lot with her promise to marry him. Lot recovers, but fails to appear on the night set for the wedding. It later develops that he has been killed by a fall from his horse, leaving the way clear for the marriage of Madelon and Burr.

Tell your prospective patrons that the film contains many scenes in the Giant Redwood forests of California. If possible, get a small block of redwood from a lumber yard. Put it in on ornamental pedestal in the lobby or foyer. Tack on it a card reading: "This is a block of California Redwood. ## "The Money Corral"

Artcraft Presents William S. Hart in An Intense Melodrama of the Chicago Underworld.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE lean hard face of a typical American, the fighting eye, the careless contempt of danger, the native chivalry to women and children with a touch of dry humor and an inborn sense of true courtesy, all these are exemplified in the role assumed by William S. Hart in "The Money Corral," his latest Artcraft release. The story is pistol melodrama, containing more than one exciting and admirably pictured struggle with well-organized crooks, and there is suspense enough to hold close attention, with a love interest thrown in. But it is Hart's personality on which this production heavily depends. He is given abundant and original opportunity to show that he is governed in his acts by the slow moving destiny of his nature until it is aroused to action by exceptional danger.

A certain amount of dramatic interest is revealed in the contrast of the border gun man with ultra-refined society, but it is negligible when compared to the physical exploits of man, who has as little individual fear as the men who went over the top from trenches in France. This spirit of battle is far from dead—it will never die while the race is vigorous, and this may account for the great popularity of Hart pictures. "The Money Corral will prove no exception, as it is along favorite melodrama lines, a change from the ordinary, a complete and satisfactory performance in lead, support, directing and nature of story.

The Story.

After refusing an offer from a Chicago magnate from material considerations, Lem Beason, the part played by William S. At Chicago he is delegated by the magnate, Gregory Collins, to guard a bank which has been mysteriously attacked, involving the death of two other watchmen. He is "framed" from the inside, by none other than Carl Bruhler, the magnates confidential associate and business manager. He is sent to the toughest kind of a basement resort to see a man who may give him for Burr, and when he kisses her, fake a scene of brutality to arouse the gun man's wrath and he falls for it in protecting a frail girl. She begs him to "see her home," leading him into a trap spread for him, from which he emerges after the toughest kind of fighting, landing in the police station. His experiences arouse a suspicion that he is up against an inside job, so he throws up his own, takes his pay and starts for home, one eye on the magnate's poor relation, who adroitly saved him from social ridicule That night the bank is attacked, but Beason has not given up his keys, and he is there with his deadly gun in time to round up the gang, save the magnate from ruin and win a home for himself and the bright girl he loves.

"Spotlight Sadie"

Delightful Mae Marsh Comedy Picture Full of Irish Optimism.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE new Goldwyn Mae Marsh picture, "Spotlight Sadie," in five reels is a particularly charming comedy. The heroine has a fetching way that wins the heart of the spectator. It is a picture with theatrical life as a background and one of the most interesting characters in it, after the heroine, is the publicity man attached to the show. He is up against it for an idea and something in Sadie's character suggests his playing her up as a saint. She is not that, strictly speaking, but something much better in the way of a sweetheart as the rich hero discovers. He is attracted to her by the publicity she gets. Then he is disappointed because she doesn't fill his ideal, but he discovers in the end her real true-hearted charming self.

The picture is filled with compelling comedy situations that kept the room full of press reviewers laughing. The exhibitor ought to read the story carefully, especially if he is in a neighborhood where patrons are likely to be looking for slights to religion. Every sensible person will like this picture and most spectators will be enthusiastic over it.

The Story.

In the Goldwyn picture, "Spotlight Sadie," the Irish heroine from which it takes its name has a courageous way with her that wins the heart of everyone she meets. She has been living with her married sister in New York, but things are not comfortable and she goes out and gets a job in the chorus of a theatre. She isn't made to dress as some of the others have to, and on account of her innocence, is nicknamed "the saint."

The publicity man of the show makes use of this fact to attract attention to the piece, and Sadie becomes so well known that they give her a better job as leader of a chorus of girls dressed in long robes that faintly suggest nuns. A rich young man, Dick Carrington, loses interest in the leading woman, Dolly Delmar, and takes up with Sadie. There is a kind of engagement. Sadie tells her roommate, Hazel, who lets the secret out, and Dolly hears of it. Dick is disappointed in Sadie. Dolly plots with her brother to get Hazel to dine with her in a place she knows will be raided and then to send a note asking Sadie to come. A note to Dick also lures him there. The plot is foiled by Sadie not wanting to linger among the roysterers. This scheme of Dolly's is the means of bringing Sadie and Dick together again.

VITAGRAPH has for a new release, "A Stitch in Time," a five-reel attraction from the stage success of the same name. The love story intertsts and Gladys Leslie with her graceful acting and charm gives a piquant touch to many a scene in it. The narrative is clear and convincing enough as a tale of studio Bohemian life. It is good as a pretty girl picture that is ably acted, too.

Eugene Strong, playing the role of artist-hero, is manly and pleasing. Agnes Ayres plays with much ability a foil character to the heroine. Jenkins, the artist's faithful servant, should not be forgotten as his work adds a good deal to the picture. The director has handled the plot in a natural and lively way. The sets are mostly in a studio building in the Greenwich Village district of New York.

The Story.

In "A Stitch in Time," produced by Vitagraph, the hero, Worthy Bryce, is trying to make a living by art. Phoebe-Ann, the daughter of the scrubwoman, comes to do the cleaning. Worthy is engaged to Lela Trevor, who wants him for his father's money. Lela is flirting with Dick, one of Worthy's friends, and early in the story Phoebe sees that Lela is not wholly true to Worthy.

Worthy's father withdraws his support to make his son go back to business. There are hard times in the studio. Worthy, his faithful servant and Phoebe buckle down to work in earnest. Phoebe finds one of Worthy's stories and sends it to an editor. It brings in money and success.

Phoebe, to keep Worthy at work, has made him believe that Lela wanted him to succeed and believed that he could win. Lela and Worthy are to be married. Phoebe tries hard to keep Worthy ignorant of how shallow is Lela's love for him and all but succeeds. At the end, Lela acknowledges that she loves Dick and Worthy sends Phoebe to school to finish her education.

"The Love Call"

Billie Rhodes Comes Into Her Own in Western Drama for Exhibitors Mutual.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A STORY by Marjory Benton Cooke serves as the best vehicle for Billie Rhodes that she has had since she entered the ring of feature stardom. "The Love Call," as the production is named, was made by the National Film Corporation for the Exhibitors Mutual program, and directed by William Louis Chaudet. It is a five-part Western drama with a romantic atmosphere and plenty of action. The story is pictured in narrative style and is therefore not strictly true to dramatic construction; but the narrative is such an interesting one that little resentment is felt at the way it has been handled. Billie Rhodes in a role of strong individuality holds the interest of the spectator by her sympathetic portrayal of the lonely little girl of the cattle country. There is a tone of originality about the picture that is pleasing, and in spite of faults among which are a few touches of allegory that could well have been dispensed with, it will in most cases prove a good box office attraction. The heavy-weight propensities of Mate Allen (William Dyer) and Nick Horton (Art Hoxen) supply a couple of thrilling fight scenes. T. Lloyd Whitlock as Joe Emory does good work. The story possesses a combination of tragedy, comedy and pathos that is bound to please. The picture is presented in a soft quality of photography that is especially attractive and effective.

The Story.

"The Love Call" tells the story of Kid Allen, a young girl of the cattle country, daughter of Mate Allen who is fond of his whiskey and is looked upon as an undesirable citizen of Chugwater. As the result of a fight in the village saloon Allen is waylaid and shot at the door of his own home. The girl, Kid, takes her father's gun and shoots into the darkness killing the murderer. She then takes her pony and heads for the city in search of the "eddication" that it was her father's wish that she should have. On her way she falls from her horse over an embankment and is picked up by a young shepherd, who takes care of her at his camp. Finally she arrives at a university town where she is stopped by Nick Horton, a cow puncher, who, seeing her dashing through the street, believes her horse has bolted and assumes the duty of chaperoning her.

Learning that she must go through years of preparation before she can enter a university, Kid and her benefactor make their "get-away" after her champion has thrashed a professor, and are later arrested and brought face to face with justice. Through the good will of the professor they are released and Kid is placed in the girl's boarding school which adjoins the university. After a short period Kid wearies of the conventional ways of the school, mounts her pony and rides back to Nick. The following day they are married.

Work for a breezy style of announcement to match the play, for example: "Kid Allen didn't take the entrance examinations to college. She just announced herself as a student and when Prexy objected she biffed him one on the jaw. She made a hit with the old gentleman in a double sense and he let her stay, but she heard the call of love and she went back to the great open air and to a man who was worth more to her than all the book learning the State University could give."

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is good material for farce-comedy in this five-reel American-Pathe subject, "Charge It To Me," but it has been developed with only an average amount of humor and does not seem to register as many laughs as might be expected. The plot is based on a series of very improbable events, and where this is the case the action must be convincing in order to make the events seem real. In this instance there is a lack of conviction about many of the occurrences.

The main idea is a good one for a light-running story of the kind. Mar-

$600 to $3120 Yearly From a Little Waste Space

The Greatest Payer Your Theatre Can Have

Here comes prosperity to all the country—the greatest business activity it has ever known.

What are you going to do to cash in on your share of it? Why not start right now by sending for our book showing that the Butter-Kist Pop Corn Machine is earning $60 to $250 clear profit per month in many a theatre lobby, for many a concession, in ball rooms and skating rinks?

Every day come letters from exhibitors and concessionaires who want the Butter-Kist Pop Corn Machine to attract and expand the enormous business let loose by the new era of peaceful prosperity.

Pays 4 Ways—Look!

1—Motion makes people stop and look.
2—Coaxing fragrance makes them buy.
3—Toasty flavor brings trade for blocks.
4—Acts as drawing card to your attractions.

BUTTER-KIST

Pop Corn and Peanut Machine

26 x 32 inches—that's all the space it takes up. And it's an ornament any place.

Everybody loves pop corn and there is no better pop corn than Butter-Kist. No other machine can reproduce its toasty flavor.

It operates itself—no extra labor, no trouble. An average of only 90 bags a day means about $1,000 a year profit.

The Coupon Brings the Book; a Small Payment Brings the Machine

Our Easy Payment Plan makes the Butter-Kist Pop Corn machine pay for itself—sometimes it not only buys itself, but pays your rent and pays a profit at the same time.

Don't let anything stop you—pin the coupon to your letterhead and mail it now. Be first in your territory to seize the opportunity.

Valuable

This coupon has started many a man on the road to new profits.

Each read an "ad" like this and had the horse-sense to know it costs nothing but a postage stamp to investigate.

Pictures With The Spark of Genius

Art!

Just as the genius of Shakespeare, of Dickens, of Thackeray, won the acclaim of the public for literature as a field of art—so today have people the world over come to recognize in motion pictures that artistry which is born of genius.

The day of forced and false situations in pictures—of padded film — of hodge-podge stories—is gone. Exhibitors and patrons have learned to know real art in pictures.

The American Film Company long since recognized this trend. It established its studios at Santa Barbara, California—a garden spot where genius is stimulated by Nature's most wonderful gifts.

Here it built its huge producing organization: Studios in mission style, to blend with the environment; facilities to provide any necessary set upon an instant's notice; workshops where craftsmen have the widest latitude to create what is best; an organization of stars, directors, authors, cameramen, supervising executives and other workers whose genius is inspired by pleasant surroundings and the highest artistic ideals.

It has taken the American Film Company eleven years to develop this genius in motion picture production—to develop its knowledge of the film language. It goes without saying that this long record of achievement has brought to the American Film Company a knowledge and experience of the greatest value—qualities which no producer can hope to achieve in a day.

The spark of genius is found in American "Flying A" Pictures because the genius is put there through inspiration—not through cold, routine manufacture. Note the genius of American stars—Mary Miles Minter, William Russell, Margarita Fisher. Note the genius of American directors, authors, casts, technicians, cameramen. That spark of genius is the result of harmonizing all these contributing factors into a family of genii.

This is exemplified in the "Flying A" pictures of today. The world over they have come to be recognized as works of art—inspired, soul-built subjects to which every individual has given his or her heart.

So have American "Flying A" pictures become known as "Pictures With the Spark of Genius." Because back of them is genius in organization, working happily in Nature's garden spot, unhampered, free.

American "Flying A" Pictures are available at Pathe Exchanges.

"Our patrons were delighted with Miss Minter in 'The Amazing Impostor' and made favorable comments. The story was good; photography and light effects fine; settings, acting and direction above criticism."

A. F. MEGAHAN, Mgr., Strand Theatre, Denver, Colo.

"The Rivoli has William Russell as a star this week. The audiences liked him and liked his picture, 'Brass Buttons.' It is a lively farce, filled with refreshing humor."

N. Y. TELEGRAPH

"Exhibitor comment on 'Put Up Your Hands,' starring Margarita Fisher: Elegant entertainment. Big business two days."

EXPERT SAYS AUTOMATIC FILM PROCESSING MACHINE EXCELS

THE technical expert of one of the foremost producing concerns in the United States visited the Spoor-Thompson Laboratories in Chicago to investigate the claims made in behalf of processing by automatic machinery. After examining thoroughly every detail of the process he stated frankly that he considered the Spoor-Thompson automatic machine the last word in the laboratory end of the film business.

Another visitor, prominent in the film world across the sea, stated he had come all the way from England to see if the Spoor-Thompson automatic machine was really a working actuality. As he stood watching the machine operate he said:

"This has been the dream of my life. I congratulate you on your patience and success in bringing to the film laboratory this wonderful mechanism. So far as I can see it is unfailing in the delivery of its work."

When I booked "The Heart of Humanity"—and paid a big price for it—I never expected to play even; but after I played it for two days it broke all box office records and it is still the talk of the community. It has made me big money and I am going to book it again.

Any exhibitor that books it—tell him to advertise it just as big as he can, and boost it above the limit, as he can't boost it any too strong.

The NEW SCREEN MAGAZINE, issued each week by the UNIVERSAL, is in the market and will pay the very highest cash prices for novelties.

By "novelties" we mean exactly what the word implies—i. e., novel things, new ideas, things of extraordinary interest to every human being. These novelties need not be timely. They can be of any period so long as they are interesting, fascinating, absorbing, and entertaining.

If you have short shots of subjects of the high class character we are in the market for, write us describing in detail exactly what you have. Or if you know where big new novelties can be secured, we will also pay for that information.

The NEW SCREEN MAGAZINE has preparations under way for the biggest thing ever dreamed of in a screen magazine. Nothing will compare with the NEW SCREEN MAGAZINE when the present plans are consummated. And we have no hesitancy in saying that it will be as big a box office attraction weekly as anything the screen has ever seen in motion pictures. The NEW SCREEN MAGAZINE will leave no stone unturned in its present plans to produce for the Exhibitors of America the greatest thing of its kind ever attempted. No costs will be too great to gather the most fascinating features in magazine history surpassing anything in this character of release. It will be extraordinary, unusual, distinctive, in a class entirely by itself. We are promising much. We hope to deliver more. A good time to insure this new winner for your house is now, thru any Universal Exchange.

A Spring Clean-up

THERE'S more money for exhibitors in "Come Out of the Kitchen" than in any Marguerite Clark picture ever before produced.

The book, by the popular women's writer, Alice Duer Miller, is known and loved by numberless women. The play by the famous dramatist, A. E. Thomas, ran two years in New York and for equally long runs all over the country. The story is as popular as "Peg o' My Heart"—the kind of story most popular with all classes of audiences.

Marguerite Clark hasn't had such a charming, humorous, human, lovable part since "Miss George Washington." She is supported by Eugene O'Brien as leading man.

A regular spring clean-up, this one. Worthy of an extended run.

Let 'em all see it!

"THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME"

BY HALL CAINE
Directed by HUGH FORD

Hugh Ford

THREE powerful factors absolutely assure the box-office success of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

One is the world-famous story by Hall Caine.

The second is an all-star cast including Katherine MacDonald, Theodore Roberts, Milton Sills, Jack Holt and Fritzi Brunette.

The third, and perhaps the greatest, is the masterly direction of Hugh Ford.

Admittedly one of the foremost producers in the theatrical and motion picture worlds, Hugh Ford has rapidly won an international reputation.

Among his brilliant stage successes are "Joseph and His Brethren," "The Garden of Allah," "The Melting Pot," "The Yellow Jacket," "Potash and Perlmutter."

His remarkable skill on the screen is proved by such hits as "Sapho," "The Prince and the Pauper," "Such a Little Queen," "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and Hall Caine's "The Eternal City."

Hugh Ford is a personal friend of Hall Caine; knows the facts surrounding the startling story of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me"; knows from his travels, the scenes in England, India and Africa which are covered by the action.

The result is a big, thrilling, red-blooded production that means record crowds and record profits for exhibitors.

"It Is 12-Cylindered And All of Them Hit"

Chicago has seen "The Eternal Magdalene" and such is its verdict, expressed through the columns of that powerful and fearless newspaper, the Chicago Herald and Examiner. Upon the opening of its unprecedented booking of four weeks at a "Loop" theatre, the critic of that paper wrote:

"They take chances, those actors in 'The Eternal Magdalene.' They delve deep into the hushed subjects of life, they carry out with reality a daring theme. Goldwyn took a chance on casting them so, for Robert H. McLaughlin's play, which was a sensation on the stage, is a radical treatment of the oldest of evils.

"Regarding the moral and lesson, you are advised by Judges Cook, Fisher and Jarecki of the Municipal Court and Harry E. Miller, city prosecutor, that they are good, instructive and powerful. From me, however, you are asking only one thing—'How is it as a picture?'

"It is twelve-cylindered and all of them hit."

The official endorsements to which the Herald's critic refers are ample evidence of the tremendous local interest aroused whenever a showing of "The Eternal Magdalene" is announced. The exhibitor who books this picture will find immediate local support in endorsements similar to these from Chicago:

Prosecuting Attorney Harry B. Miller:—"The Eternal Magdalene" is a gripping picture.

Wells M. Cook, Associate Justice of the Municipal Court: I earnestly direct every father and mother to this brilliant motion picture.

Justice Edmund K. Jarecki:—It is entertainment of a high and intense order and a moral stimulant at the same time.

Dr. Anna Dwyer of the Morals Commission and Morals Court:—Gazing as I do into the torn, soiled pages of the human soul it was with a thrill of satisfaction that I saw "The Eternal Magdalene." It is pulsing, human and dramatic, artistic and exalted, but straight to the point and descriptive of common feelings and emotions throughout.

"The Stronger Vow"

Geraldine Farrar's newest picture is also her greatest. It tops the highest points of her screen career—from "Carmen," in which Samuel Goldwyn introduced her to motion pictures, to her last powerful production, "Shadows."

"The Stronger Vow" gives your audiences three of the most picturesque and moving sides of this versatile player's art. It first shows Farrar as "Senorita Velvet Eyes" of the Carnival, instinct with the beauty and pulse of Spain. It carries her to Paris, the happy, luxurious, gorgeously, gowned Paris of the days before the war, and shows her wedded unwittingly to the man she has vowed to kill. Finally, it sweeps her into the underworld of the Paris Apache to fulfill a "stronger vow."

Through it all, Reginald Barker's superb direction of a typical Farrar story—strong, swift, full of suspense. Supporting Miss Farrar and interpreting Izola Forrester's narrative are such players as Milton Sills, Thomas Santschi and Hassard Short.

Analyze This Picture For Yourself

Don't take anybody else's word for it. See Louis Bennison in "The Road Called Straight" and make up your own mind on its merits.

On the basis of what you actually see, you will agree that—

Bennison is just as lovable, breezy and big-hearted in this picture as in his other plays.

Bennison shows an added power and drive that carry him beyond his previous best work.

There is punch in this story of the cattle king who didn't know the meaning of a marriage of convenience.

It is built to keep interest racing along from thrill to laugh and back to thrill again.

It is—in the last analysis—"real audience stuff."

See Bennison in "The Road Called Straight" and you will endorse every one of those statements.

If you find you can't, well, Goldwyn still says:

"Do your own thinking."

EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA

NOW that I have seen the first Rothapfel Unit Programme, I feel that I cannot impress upon you too strongly the advisability of arranging to run it in your theatre at the earliest possible moment. I looked at it as an exhibitor and can assure you with perfect confidence that, from the opening title to the last flash on the screen, it surpasses any complete picture entertainment I have ever seen.

Every first class theatre in the country should run this decided innovation and from the bookings now scheduled it is safe to predict that the great majority of houses will play it to tremendous business within a very short time after its release.

The one, two, three and four day runs are being contracted for rapidly in every section of the country.

Yours very truly,

FRANK G. HALL

We have printed, developed and colored the greatest screen attractions of the year, and we have more in work right now for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

With two seats for the theatre comfortably secure in the upper pocket of his full-dress vest, Robert Harvey Randolph entered the pink apartment of Madge Van Tillier.

Clean shaven and fresh from the tub, he felt in a jovial humor at 8 P. M. that crisp, clear, winter evening. But in less than five minutes he thought it the grey dawn of the morning after.

"I'm not going anywhere with you," Madge told him, "You can't afford me."

My, what a bump!

When he got to the street he just naturally stepped into the wrong taxicab. That's how it came about that he rescued little "Pam" from the back row of the chorus. Poor Robert, by way of compensation Pam disinherited him from his fortune.

My, what a bump!

When he became a taxi-driver to fill the vacuum of a lost income, somehow or other he regained his humor. And incidentally he became the Good Samaritan of New York's ne'er-do-wells.

Then, woman-like, Pam searched for her suave benefactor in every taxicab in New York. And when she found him she offered some compensation. My, what a bump!

From the Motion Picture News

"IN The Red Lantern" Metro has turned out a photoplay which will challenge attention with any production ever presented."

"IT is a superior achievement—realized not only in the scope and magnitude of its lavish scenes, all of them conceived with painstaking care and accuracy, but in the graphic and logical development of its story and characterization."

"NAZIMOVA, undertaking a dual role in which the characters are entirely different, displays the highest form of histrionism. Her performance is superb in its vividness, poignancy and sympathy."

"WOULD not have scored so effectively were it not for the appreciation of Metro in selecting appropriate material. Theirs will be the distinction hereafter of having produced The Red Lantern".

RECEIVER CHOSEN FOR GENERAL FILM

Asa B. Kellogg Appointed to Steer Concern Out of Its Present Embarrassment Due to the War

ASA B. KELLOGG was appointed receiver of the General Film Company on April 29 following the institution of bankruptcy proceedings against the company in the United States District Court, and a meeting of the stockholders was immediately called to decide on whether the business shall be liquidated or reorganized.

The petition in bankruptcy was filed by Max Sheinart with the claims of the following creditors: the Interstate Film Company, $4,000; Frank M. Williams, $600, and Herbert H. Yudkin, $500. The petitioners alleged that the company is insolvent and that it had committed an act of bankruptcy in making preferential payments to certain creditors.

Company's Possibilities Great.

Judge Augustus N. Hand appointed Mr. Kellogg receiver of the business, as he was familiar with the film company's affairs, having been recently appointed receiver of the General Film Contracting Company, which is allied with the parent corporation, which was one of the pioneer concerns in the film industry and played a prominent part in its development.

Suspension Will Result in Loss.

The application made by the Interstate Film Company for the appointment of a receiver sets forth "that the good will of the business of the alleged bankrupt in said film exchanges is very valuable as a running business and that if the hiring and rental of films and moving picture productions be suspended great and irreparable loss and damage will result to the alleged bankrupt estate by reason of loss of customers and good will of great value.

The General Film Company operated twenty-six exchanges throughout the country and also had an extensive foreign trade which was crippled as a result of the war, which is said to have contributed materially to the present embarrassment of the company.

Preferred Holders Favor Liquidation.

It is understood that a substantial number of the common stock holders are anxious to reorganize the business and continue it, but some of the holders of preferred stock are reported to be averse to any such plans and desire to have the business liquidated. Consequently unless their holdings are purchased under a reorganization plan or they are induced to change their present attitude it is considered likely that the business will be liquidated.

A preliminary meeting of a number of the stockholders was held at the offices of the company at 25 West Forty-fourth street on Tuesday evening, April 29, to consider the situation.

Action Seems to Indicate Passing.

It seems to be generally believed that this latest action in the affairs of General Film would indicate an eventual, and final, passing of the organization from any participation in picture activities.

Some weeks ago the attaches of the various branch offices, with exception of the managers, were dispensed with. All salaries due to branch managers and employees were paid in full to Saturday, April 26. Those who remained for the current weeks are awaiting the decision of the receiver as to their future connection with the firm.

Selznick Pictures Takes Part of Biograph Studio

SELZNICK PICTURES has taken over part of the Biograph Studio, the Bronx, New York, which is generally considered the finest and most completely equipped studio in the East and ranking among the foremost of the country.

Production Manager Myron Selznick is buried knee deep in plans and preparations for coming productions and Harry Rapf, general studio manager for Selznick, is working full speed so that all will be in readiness by May 15, at which time things are expected to get fully under way at the studio.

Selznick Pictures Corporation has already arranged to have three of its companies work at the studio. Olive Thomas, Elaine Hammerstein and Eugene O'Brien are all in readiness to start work on new productions at the earliest possible moment. Manuscripts are being considered for production and Selznick Pictures will make some important announcements in the near future.

In the meantime the organization is concerned with moving its belongings and effects to the studio.

Another Step in C. K. Y. Litigation.

Justice Donnelly, of the New York Supreme Court, has rendered a decision in favor of the C. K. Y. Film Corporation in its litigation to prevent Clara Kimball Young from violating her contract to produce motion pictures for that company for distribution through Select Pictures Corporation.

This decision establishes the jurisdiction of the New York Supreme Court over Clara Kimball Young, who has been in California since last summer, and clears the way for the decision of the application for an injunction restraining Clara Kimball Young from violating her contract.

Suggest Censor Jobs for Soldiers.

The suggestion has been made at Winnipeg that returned soldiers be appointed to the Manitoba Board of Censors because of the apparent fact that seasoned warriors generally are the possessors of broad minds, fair judgment and practical intellect.

"How to Advertise the Picture"

EXHIBITORS don't need preaching. They want—and appreciate—help and encouragement."

"The exhibitor who thinks he does not need to advertise may be an exhibitor, but as a showman he is a moss-gatherer."

"Advertising used to be regarded as a speculation. Today it is recognized as an investment."

"A conclusion of greatest folly is that only special attractions are worthy of an exhibitor's best publicity efforts."

"Publicity is valuable only when it reaches those who can reach you."

"Keep in touch with the right man on your local papers."

The foregoing are excerpts from the article, "How to Advertise the Picture," which appears on another page of this issue. Opinions on the subject were written by the editors of the four leading motion picture trade journals for Fox's Exhibitors' Bulletin. The article is well worth careful perusal and reflection.

Goldwyn Policy Changes To Be Announced Soon

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, now on his way to New York after two months spent at the Goldwyn studios at Culver City, Cal., will give out an important announcement on his arrival.

Preliminary information suggests that the Goldwyn plans for next season will be revolutionary not only as far as Goldwyn is concerned, but also from the standpoint of the entire art of the motion picture and the business structure on which it has been reared.

Details of the new plans, which appear to comprehend wide and sweeping changes in the whole conduct of picture making, are known at the Goldwyn offices in New York, but final disclosure of them awaits Mr. Goldwyn's arrival. He is expected in New York on Monday, May 5.

It is known, however, that as a part of the changed Goldwyn policy, Mr. Goldwyn will shortly undertake a trip to Europe, where he will remain for an extended stay.

B. S. Moss to Build Big New York Picture House

STILL another theatre will be added to the B. S. Moss string of photoplay-vaudeville houses in Greater New York. Representing the most important theatrical deal thus far effected in the Bronx, Mr. Moss completed negotiations recently with Henry Acker, for the purchase of the property at the northwest corner of Prospect avenue and 161st street for the erection of a big theatre structure calling for a seating capacity of 3,500. It will be the ninth theatre owned and operated by B. S. Moss. Plans also include an adjoining amphitheatre with a capacity of 3,000. An outdoor pipe organ will be one of the innovations.

The new house, which will be named later, will distinguish itself in that it will be the largest and most imposing theatre in he Bronx. Ground will be broken on May 1, and it is expected to have the house completed for occupancy on January 1, 1920.

The policy will be a combination of vaudeville and pictures, supplemented with a symphony orchestra of forty pieces, a large pipe organ, and operatic soloists.

The cost of the land and building will be aproximately $1,000,000.

BEECROFT BACK FROM EUROPEAN TRIP

Finds Conditions Considerably Changed by War—American Interests Are Endangered.

BACK from his eleven weeks spent abroad, Chester Beecroft was found by a representative of Moving Picture World to be a source of much interesting data concerning film conditions in England and on the Continent. Mr. Beecroft is American representative of the Scandinavian Film Agency and has been abroad several times since the great war flamed up and changed matters for the entire world.

How he was more than once torpedoed while crossing the Hun's "forbidden zone" was told in these pages at the time. But his last trip developed none of those harrowing details.

"Famous Players-Lasky and Gaumont have done more to develop the European market for American film men than any other interest," said Mr. Beecroft. "They converted the European trade to the 'star system,' made obsolete the old method of selling film on sample prints and practically revolutionized sales methods everywhere abroad save in England. The English are too tradition-bound to be readily converted—but their time to change methods will eventually materialize."

Englishmen Lose Financial Chances.

Mr. Beecroft explained that the business of exhibiting and distributing films was so differently constituted here and abroad that American film men must eventually adapt themselves to the different methods. "England insists on showing only two films a week," Mr. Beecraft said, "and English showmen are losing fortunes because they refuse to turn to daily changed programs. Until they do realize that their 'off days' are created by their own folly the market for American films in Great Britain will be dull. Right now the cinema managers are booking their films for June and July, 1920. There is slight chance for new subjects to penetrate the English system.

"I visited England, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland and France in the ten weeks I was away, and found conditions on the Continent greatly changed during the years of the war. Through Gaumont the 'star system' has been introduced as a factor in Continental cinema commerce. They want stars."

War Plays Taboo Abroad.

War plays are shunned by every nationality abroad, according to Mr. Beecroft. Militarism has been their daily life so long that they will have none of it even in fiction or pictures. England still sticks to melodramas of the Drury Lane variety, and the villain still pursues the fair heroine in a chase that brings unending delight to the Britisher. But Continentals want American films, like the American method, and European producers are taking over American stars and directors to do things in an American way.

"But what of the market for these foreign films with American methods?" was the question here addressed to Mr. Beecroft.

"Foreigners are bound to seek a market for them here," he said. "There is not enough outlet over there for these productions and Americans must look ahead to the time when foreign made films will be on the market here. There are not enough picture theatres abroad. In France there are hundreds of communities from 5,000 population upward that have no cinema hall. And the post-war regulations are so arranged that outsiders may not come in and build them. So the English, French, Danish and Italian producers, who are now getting busy, must come here for a sufficient market."

Film Shipment Makes Record.

Mr. Beecroft declares that the film transactions he completed on his trip represented the largest deal that has been made since the armistice, and equals any of record even before the war. The Scandinavian Film Agency took the continental rights to all of the Robertson-Cole productions, extending their territory to include Egypt. The deal includes all productions for 1919-20. Mr. Beecroft also took with him a series of Billy West comedies, the J. Stuart Blackwell specials and his firm will absorb such other features as he may select on this side.

D. J. Sullivan Is Appointed Kinograms' General Manager

DENIS J. SULLIVAN, former general manager of the Mutual Film Corporation and for the last year manager of distribution for the Government's Division of Films, has been named general manager of Kinograms, the news reel.

Mr. Sullivan will give special attention to sales and distribution work in connection with Kinograms and its allied interests. Kinograms, established but a matter of weeks, has been rapidly growing in favor and volume of business, necessitating some marked increase in the staff of the organization.

Mr. Sullivan is to be credited with the wide-spread distribution of the war pictures issued by the Government and the equitable plan by which they were made available to the exhibitors.

Prior to his film connections Mr. Sullivan was an active figure in the American Tobacco Company and was a member of the sales board of that corporation with New York headquarters.

Exhibitors Discuss Plans for Seattle Convention

A SPECIAL meeting of exhibitors of the Northwest territory and of exchange managers was called by the Northwest Film Board of Trade on Friday, April 25, to discuss definite plans for the big convention of motion picture men of the territory to be held in Seattle, July 16-19. The meeting was called at 10 o'clock at the Washington Hotel, and the fact that a big crowd was present at this early hour, when there were no eats to tempt them, shows that they meant business. Many out-of-town exhibitors were present, including several from outside the state.

The purpose of the convention, it was explained, would be, first, to get as many exhibitors of the territory together as possible in order to perfect the organization of the associate membership of the Northwest Film Board of Trade, and secondly, to entertain these visiting exhibitors. Great enthusiasm for the event was voiced, and a director-general was thereupon appointed. This important personage is to be W. J. Drummond, for the last year manager of the Kleine office in Seattle. Mr. Drummond has already begun appointing his committees, and the convention, which has been spoken of heretofore only as a possibility, is now a certainty.

Pearson Photoplays Lease Triangle's Yonkers Studio

THE Virginia Pearson Photoplays Company has leased from the Triangle Film Corporation for a number of years the studio located on the Clara Morris estate in Yonkers, which is at present unoccupied. This studio will be used for the production of photoplays in which Miss Pearson will be starred.

Chance played a large part in the securing of this studio as it was while Paul Meyer, treasurer of the corporation, was en route to a golf club near Yonkers that he was attracted by the scenery surrounding the studio. On learning that it was available, he immediately got into communication with his brother, Louis Meyer, president of the organization, and negotiations were rapidly completed.

Pathe Contracts for Rubens-Goodman Plays

PATHE EXCHANGE announces a contract made with Alma Rubens, former Triangle star, and Daniel Carson Goodman, the American novelist, for the production of eight pictures during the coming year. The productions will be made in the East and most of the stories will be from the pen of Dr. Goodman.

Dr. Goodman has the stories for the series partially selected. All of his stories are rich in emotional stimulus and powerful in sympathetic appeal. All are treated with realism and a profound knowledge of human nature.

Minta Durfee Preparing to Appear in Comedies

MINTA DURFEE (Mrs. Roscoe Arbuckle), who recently announced her intention to return to the film world, is very busy these days. Aside from choosing an ultimate career on the screen under the banner of one of the largest producers, she is wading through scenarios and books that contain the material in which she is most interested.

Since comedy work has always proved her greatest forte in the past, Miss Durfee proposes to continue in that branch of screen activity.

A national publicity campaign is being prepared, which will be put into effect within the next few weeks exploiting Miss Durfee's ability and reintroducing her.

SIX MORE THEATRES FOR PHILADELPHIA

Quaker City to Have Two New $1,000,000 Houses—$3,500,000 in All To Be Spent in Construction

SIX large motion picture theatres are soon to be erected in Philadelphia at a total expenditure of more than $3,500,000. The smallest of these will seat 2,000 persons and the cost of each will range from $225,000 to $1,000,000.

The Stanley Company will erect a $1,000,000 motion picture theatre at the southwest corner of Nineteenth and Market streets, with a seating capacity of 4,000 persons.

Others to be built will be located at Fifty-second and Chestnut streets; Market street between Seventh and Eighth street; one in Logan, and another at Broad street and Allegheny avenue. This will have a seating capacity of 3,000 persons and will cost more than $1,000,000.

Cohen to Build Heavily.

Joseph E. Cohen, owner of the Allegheny Theatre, at Frankford and Allegheny avenues, and his four business associates, who will erect this theatre on the site of the old Convention Hall, will also construct a six-story apartment house with accommodations for 5,000 persons, a dance hall with capacity of three thousand and a row of eighteen stores on the plot. Mr. Cohen announces that the construction will start immediately. He expects the theatre to be completed by next February.

The new Stanley theatre, to be erected at Nineteenth and Market streets, will be the last word in theatre construction. Jules Mastbaum, head of the Stanley Company, said he would spare no expense to make it the most beautiful in the country. It will stand on a lot 176 by 200 feet on Market street, the plot alone costing $600,000. One of the new features will be private elevators leading up to the boxes. The plans are now being completed and construction soon will begin.

ARMATO.

First National Circuit Secures Lehrman Comedies

A CONTRACT has just been consummated by Harry A. Sherman in conjunction with the First National Exhibitors Circuit, under the terms of which is made an arrangement with that distributing organization for the Lehrman Comedies. The deal involved a sum said to exceed $1,000,000.

This sum of money is said to be the largest ever paid for two-reel comedies, with the exception of one or two comedy star contracts, and is undoubtedly the highest financial return ever recorded for comedies of the shorter length, minus a star. This transaction is made all the more extraordinary by the record breaking time in which it was concluded, not more than an hour having been required to consummate.

Comedies Every Six Weeks.

The comedies to be produced under this contract are to be released every six weeks and are to be known as the Lehrman Comedies. They are to be created at the new Lehrman studios at Culver City, and it is said that no expense will be spared to make each of the comedies a genuine feature attraction.

Mr. Lehrman has long been distinguished as one of the foremost comedy producers of the screen, and has been releasing his productions through William Fox for several years. The new arrangement marks the first time in his screen career that he is to have complete personal supervision of his screen activities, all of which will be conducted entirely under his own auspices. Mr. Sherman is authority for the statement that Mr. Lehrman is determined to make every expenditure of time, energy and money necessary to establish new comedy standards and that the trade will be presently surprised with the future Lehrman productions.

Joseph Goldberg Plans Bigger Majestic Theatre

JOSEPH GOLDBERG, proprietor of the Majestic and Lillian theatres in Clarksville, Tenn., says he owes his success to keeping pace with picture development. It was eight years ago that Mr. Goldberg withdrew his active interests from the furniture business in Clarksville to become an exhibitor. He thought he saw a bigger future in pictures. Now he is the recognized "picture king" of that part of Tennessee.

Mr. Goldberg had never felt that his patrons wanted a steady diet of the market's biggest features until last winter, when he obtained from the Big Feature Right Corporation, of Louisville, which handles the First National attractions, twenty-five features which he played consecutively.

Mr. Goldberg is going to remodel his Majestic Theatre so that it will hold more people. He intends spending several thousand dollars on it, so that it will be the equal of the best theatre in any town of the size of Clarksville, in the country.

"I always tried to keep up to the times in pictures," says Mr. Goldberg, "but never until now did I realize that the exhibitor who desires to get the most out of his house must have the best pictures. From now on no day in the week with me, not even Saturday, will have for its booking a picture inferior to another I might get instead."

Eight More Film Firms Incorporate in New York

Albany, April 28.

IN addition to the many motion picture concerns and distributing agencies which have lately sprung into existence in New York, eight more have been added during the past few days, incorporating with Secretary of State Hugo.

These latter include Broda and Meyer at $10,000, with Maryan F. Broda and Louis and Maurice Meyer, of New York City; Burson Films, at $10,000, with Anne Silverman, Ethan Katz and Bernard Witt; Lux Products Corporation, dealing in screens and supplies, at $350,000, with N. H. Meyers, Benjamin Greenhut and H. B. Davis; Walter Hast, at $50,000, with Alex Rose, Morris Rose and Walter Hast; Washington Motion Pictures, Inc., at $25,000, with Harry Marcus, Hyman Shapiro and David Goldstein; Photo Serials, Inc., at $5,000, with Joseph Weinstock, Emanuel Manheimer and Joseph Umans; Sunapee Film Corporation, at $100,000, with Robert Russell, Elliott H. King and Herman J. Witte, and Superior Amusements, incorporating with Myron Sulzburger, Claire Goldberg and Edna Egan.

Margaret Marsh to Star in Her Own Two Reelers

MARGARET MARSH has formed a company of her own for the production of two-reel subjects, and it is announced that production will be begun at an early date, several stories already having been selected. Her most recent screen work was as co-star with Herbert Rawlinson in "The Carter Case," a Craig Kennedy Serial prepared for the screen by Arthur B. Reeve and John W. Grey.

Miss Marsh severed her connection with Oliver Films, Inc., upon completion of this serial, and while she has given out no details of her plan, she believes that there is a wide market at the present time for two-reelers, and has already made arrangements for a studio.

Previous to her success in "The Carter Case," Miss Marsh was featured in the Houdini serial. She also recently created the role of Elizabeth Bradshaw, around whom the plot centers in "The Eternal Magdalene," the Goldwyn production of Robert H. McLaughlin's celebrated play.

Miss Marsh has had a versatile career, having appeared when a mere child in the stage production, "The Mascot." Later, she was a member of the Oliver Morosco stock company in Los Angeles, and then joined the Biograph Company, working under D. W. Griffith's direction.

Soldier Shoots Villain on Screen.

During the presentation of a picture in the Crystal Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., James Conners, a returned soldier, took a shot at the figure of the villain on the screen of the theatre, the bullet penetrating the silver sheet and imbedding itself in the real wall of the theatre.

The show was stopped and the police were summoned, after which the arrest of the war veteran was effected on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon. He was found to have a revolver and several .38 calibre cartridges, one of which was discharged.

A few people left the theatre hastily but there was no panic.

Evelyn Greeley Recovers from Influenza.

Evelyn Greeley, recently promoted to stardom in her own right by World Pictures, after having been co-starred with Carlyle Blackwell, Montagu Love and other well-known picture stars, has recovered from an attack of influenza that interfered with the production of "Relations." Miss Greeley has started work at the studio at Fort Lee on a new picture that bears the title of "Phil for Short." The story was written by Clara Beranger and Forrest Halsey and will be directed by Oscar Apfel.

CIRCUIT SIGNS CONSTANCE TALMADGE

First National Gets Star for Six Productions; Option on More—Emerson-Loos to Write and Direct

THE First National Exhibitors' Circuit has placed its corporate seal beneath the signature of Constance Talmadge on a contract for the distribution of six big attractions to be produced by her within a year. The agreement contains an option in favor of First National for an additional six productions.

The series in which Miss Talmadge is to be starred is to be written and directed by John Emerson and Anita Loos. This combination of talent is characterized by First National officials as "an effort to further increase standards of screen entertainment by obtaining, in the writing and direction of special attractions, ability equal to that of the star."

Williams Pleased With Contract.

"The combination of Miss Talmadge John Emerson and Anita Loos is one of the forces that make for bigger and more successful productions," declared James D. Williams. "First National's chief purpose is to encourage better work by stars and producers. Our exhibitor members know thoroughly the value of greater quality and they are ready to go more than half way to obtain it. It is the salvation of their business as theatre operators."

Miss Talmadge's productions under her contract with First National will be made in Eastern studios. Work on the first of the six will be started immediately. It is said that this will be an adaptation of a famous stage play. It is expected to be completed and ready for release early in August.

"As soon as it was rumored about that Constance Talmadge might not continue with Select Pictures" said Joseph M. Schenck, who will be Constance Talmadge's producer, "she received offers from practically all the large motion picture producers and destributors, and the great increase in her box-office value in the last year is well-demonstrated by the fact that the lowest estimate placed on her services was exactly double the salary she has heretofore been receiving. But no possible contract would have pleased me more than the arrangement with the First National, as it has ever been my cherished ambition to have the two sisters' releases under the same banner."

SKELETONS RATTLED AT OPEN MEETING

Public Session of F. I. L. M. Club Brings Number of Suggestions for Reform from the Exhibitors

THE gentle pastime of rattling the family skeleton was done to perfection on Wednesday evening, April 30, in the Nimrod Room of the Hotel Astor, when exhibitors of New York met with the exchangemen in an open meeting of the F. I. L. M. Club, which, through the Hoy Reporting Agency, adjusts all differences between the distributing organizations and the exhibitors.

The family skeleton in this case turned out to be a plurality and not a singularity of person. Exhibitors stated their grievances frankly and earnestly, while the exchangemen were nothing loath in bringing forth that gentle reminder of yesterday's misdeeds, Specific Instance. Although the exchangemen put up a good fight, they could not withstand the assaults of the showmen, who came primed with a number of excellent suggestions for the reform of present methods of the F. I. L. M. Club.

Excellent Concrete Suggestions.

The open meeting of the F. I. L. M. Club was called at the suggestion of Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors' League. The session was presided over by I. E. Chadwick, secretary of the F. I. L. M. Club, who acted as chairman of the proceedings in the absence from town of the president and vice president of the club.

Mr. Chadwick opened the meeting by outlining the work of the Club since its formation in 1916 to combat evils existing in the business intercourse between showmen and exchanges, stating that the functions of the club had expanded until it now took in every phase of activity relating to the mutual benefit of distributor and exhibitor.

When the meeting was thrown open for general discussion, Sydney S. Cohen took the floor and presented a series of concrete suggestions for the reform of the F. I. L. M. Club. They were: exhibitor representation on the grievance committee of the club which settles disputes between exchange managers and exhibitors; a standard contract to be used by all exchanges; the acceptance or rejection of contracts by the exchange within a period of seven days after the contract is signed; elimination of the deposit system, or at least the payment of 6 per cent. interest on deposits made by exhibitors; prompt rendition of bills by the producers, who send out bills late and then hold up play dates because they are not paid.

Goldwyn Policy Applauded.

Discussion was full and constructive on each suggestion. Sam Eckman, chairman of the grievance committee of the club, became the center of the maelstrom when he voiced the personal opinion that exhibitors should have no representation on the committee. Mr. Eckman could not stand the attack of Messrs. Cohen, Manheimer, O'Reilly, and Bracher. He had the pleasure, however, of hearing the Goldwyn policy of paying 6 per cent. interest on exhibitor deposits warmly applauded.

S. I. Berman, secretary of the State Exhibitors' League, registered a protest against the payment of the 5 per cent. film tax by exhibitors, while William Brandt, president of the Brooklyn League, took out the axe on "Fit to Win," the Public Health film.

A heated discussion of exhibitor combinations to beat down prices on film rentals took place. When exchange men cited examples of showmen combination, the exhibitors retaliated with concrete illustrations of collective selling on the part of exchange managers.

Mr. Chadwick announced that all th suggestions presented by the exhibito would be given careful consideration the meeting of the F. I. L. M. Club ne week, after which meeting the resul would be communicated to the variou exhibitor bodies.

A more detailed account of the mee ing, not possible in this issue becau the World is even now going to pres will be printed in our issue of May 1 It will be of interest to all exchang and exhibitors. REILLY.

INDUSTRY WILL BE ITS OWN CENSOR

At Joint Meeting in New York Both Producers and Distributors of National Association Unanimously Provide for Supervision of Pictures and Theatres

BELIEVING that motion pictures of questionable moral theme publicly exhibited threaten the very existence of the motion picture industry, more than ninety-five per cent. of the recognized producers of screen stories met on Friday night, April 25, in the Claridge Hotel and took decisive action, which, it is believed, will effectively cleanse the screen of sensational, salacious films. Announcement of the steps to be taken was made by William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Against Harmful Shows.

The plan of vigorous, aggressive action against the disreputable motion picture, and particularly against the producers of pictures who would seek to profit financially by exploiting sensational scenes and stories on the screen, is taken as the result of unanimous action by the producer and distributor members of the National Association who have pledged their own product to the same scrutiny as that of the producers not members of the association.

The plan in effect as outlined in the resolutions is to serve notice immediately upon every exhibitor of motion pictures in the United States—of whom there are about seventeen thousand—that none of the distributing agencies of the producing companies would serve any theatre or exhibitor with motion pictures if he should run for public exhibition any film that has been disapproved by the National Association.

Bad Use of Worthy Pictures.

Mr. Brady said: "The action taken by the producers and distributors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, representative of more than ninety-five per cent. of the recognized makers of screen product, is directly impelled by the fact that throughout the United States there are being released at present for public exhibition certain films and health propaganda motion pictures which were made for the exclusive exhibition to soldier audiences in cantonments and billets, both here and abroad. These films treat of the social evil, and, properly distributed among the men of the army and navy, aided materially the medical corps of the army and navy in their work.

"It has come to our attention, however, that these pictures are exclusively for army distribution, and others patterned along the same lines in some manner have become released for public exhibition before mixed audiences of men, women and children. Unjustly, the entire motion picture industry is being made to suffer by the righteous indignation of the public against these exhibitions. That the public has not been fully acquainted with the facts which led to the dissemination of such pictorial information only complicates and makes more dangerous the menace to the recognized producers in the industry.

Industry's Fine War Record.

"I defy any other industry to point to its record of war co-operation with the United States Government with any greater pride or with any cleaner story than can be told by the motion picture industry. The activities of the films in behalf of maintaining the morale of the soldiers abroad and the civilian population at home are too well known to the general public to bear repetition. So vibrant is the medium of the animated picture, however, that unless it is guided by the hands of those fit and qualified to direct it, it may turn its sharp weapons upon itself as in effect the exhibition of the pictures to which I allude are doing.

Protests Against Legal Censorship.

"The motion picture industry denies emphatically the right of legislators, of local commissions, of self-constituted reviewers to censor the motion picture beyond the regulations embodied in the law of every state of the Union prohibiting the dissemination of unclean and indecent literature and pictures. Self-willed, sincere, but narrow-minded persons are seeking to fasten upon a medium of expression as great as the spoken word or the press a diabolical censorship which is un-American. Of late the force of arguments of these individuals has been strengthened by the reference to the social evil pictures referred to.

"In so far as discouraging the exhibition of these pictures is concerned every self-respecting motion picture producer in the United States agrees with these proponents of legalized censorship. But we do not agree—in fact, we will not tolerate—the methods of legalized control because we feel we have in our hands far greater responsibility and far greater ability to combat the evils that are against us than have any other agencies."

Pass Resolutions Unanimously.

The resolutions follow:

"First: That all members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shall submit to it every picture produced and distributed by them upon its request at any time prior to or after the public exhibition thereof, and shall accept any and all rulings made by said National Association in respect thereto.

"Second: That all producers and distributors shall attach at the beginning of the first reel of every picture produced and distributed by them such mark or stamp as shall be authorized and issued by said National Association and shall remove the same upon order thereof.

Will Govern Theatre Showings.

"Third: That all members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shall forthwith advise all of their exhibitors that on and after the first day of June, 1919, they shall refuse to furnish any of their product for exhibition in any theatre in which there shall be exhibited after the receipt of such notice any motion picture disapproved by the said National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, or from which eliminations have been ordered or changes in titles or subtitles have been ordered by it but not made; and that the purport of this third paragraph be incorporated in and made a part of all contracts between distributors and exhibitors hereafter entered into.

"Fourth: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry take all steps that may be permitted by law to prohibit the exhibitions of such pictures as are by it disapproved or from which eliminations or changes in titles or subtitles have been ordered by it but not made.

"Fifth: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shall adopt rules, regulations and orders with respect to the foregoing and provide for their proper enforcement.

"Sixth: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry condemns the exhibition of all pictures which are obscene, immoral, salacious or tend to corrupt or debase morals, or that are exhibited contrary to its rules, regulations or orders.

Will Aid in Proper Prosecutions.

"Seventh: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shall assist and co-operate with the proper authorities in any legal proceedings, whether criminal or otherwise, that may be undertaken to prohibit the exhibition of such pictures and in the prosecution of those exhibiting the same.

"Eighth: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry reaffirms its unalterable opposition to any form of legalized censorship of motion pictures prior to their exhibition.

The Constitutional Amendment.

"Ninth: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shall endeavor to cause to be adopted an amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the enforcement of any law abridging the freedom of expression through the medium of the motion picture to the same effect as is provided in Article I of the ten original amendments to the Constitution of the United States that were declared in force December 15, 1791, prohibiting the enactment of any law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press.

"Tenth: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry urge the passage of a law by the next Congress of the United States amending that section of the Penal Law of the United States which now prohibits the transmission by mail or otherwise of indecent pictures or literature so as to clearly include the prohibition of a like transmission of obscene or indecent motion pictures."

Those Present at the Meeting.

All of the leading companies were represented at the dinner by the following:

William A. Brady, Arthur S. Friend, John C. Flinn, Walter L. Greene, J. Robert Rubin, Percy L. Waters, Herman Robbins, Ronald Reader, N. J. Baumer, J. Stuart Blackton, Charles C. Pettijohn, E. J. ## Capt. Kaufman Back After Filming History Overseas

CAPTAIN AL KAUFMAN, formerly manager of eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has returned from France, having served seven months as officer in charge of all motion picture work in the photographic division of the Signal Corps, A. E. F.

Captain Kaufman's chief work was the compiling of an historical photographic record of America's participation in the war, and this took him to England, France, Luxemburg, Belgium, Asace and Germany.

The motion picture business in Europe, according to Captain Kaufman's observations, is due for a big boom. The war naturaly proved a big setback, but now that it is all over and conditions are again settling down to a semblance of the normal, exhibitors are already finding it hard to keep pace with the public demand for more and better pictures. Captain Kaufman and his superior officer, Major Hardy, enjoyed the unique distinction of being the first Americans to enter a German motion picture theatre since the entrance of this country into the war. This was at Trier, or Treves, on the evening of the first day of the Americans' march into Germany.

Famous Players-Lasky Make Bond Film in Record Time

WHAT is believed to be a record in handling motion picture film, from exposure to the screen, was established by the Famous Players-Lasky Company last week as part of that organization's stunts to boost the sale of Victory Bonds in New York.

At noon crowds began to gather in front of Aeolian Hall, West Forty-second street and, under the direction of Captain Al Kaufman, the famous Players-Lasky cameraman began taking pictures of the note buyers. The first purchases was Mrs. Adolph Zukor, wife of the president of Famous Players-Lasky.

At six minutes past four the last foot of film was exposed, and a messenger hurried to the Empire City Film Laboratory, on West Forty-fourth street. Just exactly one hour and ten minutes later the negative was ready for printing. Eight titles were inserted in the print and in the total time of two hours and forty-five minutes the print was ready for projection. It was rushed to the Strand Theatre and there thrown on the screen.

Harry A. Bilger Dead.

Harry A. Bilger, former manager of the Hopkins Theatre at Louisville, and who for years has been a well-known exhibitor and showman in the South, died last week at his home in Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. Bilger first went to Louisville to take charge of the Hopkins Theatre when it was changed from a dramatic to a picture house. Then he became manager of Fontaine Ferry, a big amusement park, which he conducted successfully until two years ago, when he suffered a nervous breakdown. He had never recovered sufficiently to resume his business activities and ultimately returned from Louisville to his old home in Memphis.

PSYCHOLOGY OF FILM SALESMANSHIP

Must First Convince Prospective Customer He Wants a Thing and Has the Money to Buy It, Says World's Oregon Correspondent—Analyzing the Various Steps

By Abraham Nelson

SALESMANSHIP is the art practiced by one man upon the mind of another to convince that other of his desire and his ability to possess something which the salesman has. Matters pertaining to the science of the mind are psychological, therefore the connection between psychology and salesmanship. After convincing a man of his desire for a certain thing and of his ability to gratify the desire, the salesman steps out and the "order taker" comes in. Every salesman is naturally an order taker. But the number of "order takers" who are not salesmen is legion, even in this most pleasing branch of the selling profession, the selling of moving pictures.

Generally speaking, every sale, whether it be of films, real estate or live stock, proceeds through the same steps, just as every geometric proposition is solved in the same general way. Sales managers have analyzed a sale by dividing it into three general steps: the approach, the interview or demonstration and the closing. It appears to the writer that these steps may be further subdivided to get a clearer understanding of sales psychology, into: the preapproach and the approach, the prelude to the interview, the analysis of the buyer's motives, the demonstration of the seller's wares, and the grand argument where the motives of the buyer as analyzed are fitted to the proposition of the salesman.

Film Salesmen Can Get to Exhibitor.

The film salesman has little to worry about the pre-approach, that is, of the office boys and subordinate clerks; the ordinary exhibitor has few such to bar the way to the inner sanctum. The good salesman remembers, however, that there is but one place to talk business and that is a place where all handicaps have been cleared away and unnecessary interruptions barred. The film salesman who attempts to talk business in the theatre foyer or in the projection room while the show is going on is wrong from the start. Better wait until the show is over or come back the next day.

And the salesman who makes the fatal error of apologizing for his "intrusion" and "begging," literally or otherwise, for his customer's "valuable time," does not know the first principles of his profession. The average exhibitor will welcome the film salesman. Psychologically, it should be the salesman's purpose to impress the exhibitor in the approach that his calling upon him is strictly a business proposition for the exhibitor's benefit which requires no apology, no servility, any more than does the opening of the doors of a theatre to the public require excuses. Of course there are some theatres which ought to apologize to the public for being open at all, and the analogy follows with some men.

Creates Atmosphere Through Approach.

Right here in the approach is where the salesman creates the atmosphere through which it is going to be easy or hard sailing to close the deal. The question of negatives and positive becomes in issue. An example: "Mr. Blank, I have called upon you to SELL you some film." Negative, absolutely. The psychological part of the exhibitor concerned herein grasps that little word "sell" right out of the idea, holds it in its little cells—note the difference in the spelling—and the salesman who has made the error has a hard time to pry it loose. "Sell" to any man means to take money away from him and no man wants to part with money.

This is the right way: Perhaps after a few joyful and gloom-dispelling preliminaries, say this: "Mr. Blank, I firmly believe I have a picture that will make you some money." And right here let the reader be impressed with the value of "firm belief," that is, earnestness. Throughout the argument stick with the firm belief that your film will get the exhibitor the money. That is primarily what he is in the business for. The buying of film and the incident parting of the exhibitor from a little of his money is a mighty important part of the theatre business. But do not bring it home to your customer; he will fail to appreciate your efforts.

Find Out His Motive.

Having done your best to impress upon your customer that your efforts are for his benefit along financial lines, gauge him to find out what motive he might have in buying your product. Of course, the exhibitor's big motive is to make money, but exhibitors have different ideas as how the money should be made. A few deft questions, a little observation, will usually uncover the motive.

A salesman called upon a Western theatre manager one evening and complimented him upon his excellent attendance. "Bah," said the showman. "The crowd matters nothing, it's the profit that counts. Film costs too much these days." This man's motive was easily discerned. It was further evidenced by his own presence in the box office in the place of a tidy cashier. His house might have been called the "Cheap" Theatre. The argument in his case was the low price of the salesman's service considering, of course, its unusual merit.

Competitive Motive Common.

In a thousand towns in the United States there are two picture shows, the owners of which are bitter rivals.

There Is Plenty of Atmosphere and Vivid Action in the Coming Norma Talmadge Feature, "The New Moon."
H. H. Van Loan is the author of the Russian story which Chester Withey directed for Select.

The motive of a man in such a town in buying your product is obvious: to keep the other fellow from getting it. This motive will appear without asking your customer any questions at all. Do not play it too strong. There are many cases where rivals have been played against each other by film salesmen until, for their own protection, they have declared an armistice and, united, have turned in battle array against the film-selling concerns with disastrous effect on the price question.

If the exhibitor is of a type that wears a flannel shirt and operates a garage or a coal yard in the daytime, find out how he feels about "boiled shirt" plays. Nine times out of ten you will make the amazing discovery that only Westerns "go" in his town or theatre. If you are selling a regular service, show him all the gun shootin' stills you have in your portfolio, touch but lightly upon your society plays and you will get his name on the dotted line.

Motive Is "Minimum Chance."

An important motive of a buyer of films is that of "minimum chance." In other words, the desire to play only sure things. When this motive appears dominant, discuss your product's former successes and show where others have made money with that which you have to offer. In searching for this motive exhibitors will tell you that films which go big in one city or locality are impossible in their theatres. With such exhibitors forget the motive of "minimum chance" and look for another.

A glance at the lobby might show the exhibitor's motive to be "expressive paper." Many exhibitors select their programs in the poster room. In a town full of churches, a "holy city," as it were, the motive might be "superwhitewashed pictures." Perhaps you have a production in which some of the appeal is in the antics of a shapely chorus. Remember the town's peculiarity; forget the chorus. Your picture has other selling points.

Motives in Many Combinations.

Motives appear in many combinations. The observing salesman selects the big motives and makes combinations of his own. He loses sight of the minor points. With the big motives singled out, he marshals his forces, selects his batteries and makes the grand attack in the demonstration and argument.

Except that the salesman should never lose sight of the positive quality of his argument, little need be said about this stage of the sale. Be clear, firm, logical, about bringing home the points that will best meet the customer's motive. And when you have made all those points, you have done enough and you are through.

Appreciate the fact that you are through. Just because you have been so eloquent in your appeal that the exhibitor is overcome and stands breathless, awed and silent before you, do not get the idea that you will help your sale any by raising another fine point. Keep to the big points and then close with your customer.

Closing of Sale Minor Detail.

The closing of a sale is of course the purpose of your visit. In the psychological diagram of a sale, the closing is a comparatively minor detail and follows the argument as a matter of course if the psychological principles are clearly understood. The big thing about closing is when to do it. Intuition will tell you. Ask the clinching question or make the closing statement in terms that are positive and affirmative instead of negative. Do not ask your question in such a way that it will suggest a negative answer. Try to frame your question so that if you do not get "yes" for an answer, your customer will at least say something that will reopen the demonstration from a new angle. Never lose hope.

Psychologist Will Get Orders.

To the man who understands the psychological elements of a sale there will be no doubt but what he will eventually close successfully. He considers a sale like a gasoline engine, with valves adjusted and gears meshed to explode the charge at the proper time, and with a sufficient flywheel to carry the machine through another revolution should the first charge miss fire. To such a salesman the law of averages gives more than his share of successes. The man who does not comprehend the psychological elements of a sale gropes in the dark, and using the gasoline engine again as an illustration, fires his charge before it is properly compressed or after the compression is released, and the law of averages usually slights him.

In the words of a well known film sales manager of Gotham, there are exhibitors in this land of ours who maintain that Niagara Falls are not naturally the way they appear on the screen, but that the water is merely diverted that way occasionally for the benefit of the moving pictures, and that the assassination of Abraham Lincoln was nothing but a thrilling rehearsal for a scene in the silent drama. But even with the most skeptical exhibitors the great psychological principles of salesmanship apply and the salesman who understands his approach, studies his customer's motives, demonstrates as his observations guide him and closes at the right time in a sincere, affirmative manner, wins.

Trade Paper Editors Discuss Topic in Fox Exhibitors Bulletin—Much Pithy Advice Contained in Opinions of Men Conducting Industry's Four Leading Organs

ONE of the outstanding developments in the film industry in its later phases is the great increase in service which the producer is giving the exhibitor. In the early days of the business many producers thought their duty ended with the making of indifferent pictures and the sale of these to exhibitors. As men of greater vision entered the business, however, they developed the idea that the producer's duty consisted not alone in making good pictures, but in helping the exhibitor to market them to the public.

A striking example of this policy is given in the current issue of the William Fox Exhibitors Bulletin, published this week. This number of the Bulletin contains something unusual in exhibitor service—a symposium of the views of four editors of trade papers on the general subject "How To Advertise the Picture." The articles were written especially for the Exhibitors Bulletin, as a part of its aid to exhibitors, by Lesley Mason, editor of the Exhibitors' Trade Review; William A. Johnston, editor of The Motion Picture News; Martin J. Quigley, publisher of The Exhibitors Herald and Motography of Chicago, and George Blaisdell, editor of The Moving Picture World.

Articles Contain Sound Advice.

The articles were written from the standpoint of service to the exhibitor and contain an abundance of sound advice on principles and methods of exhibitor exploitation of motion pictures. While varied in their treatment of the subject the editors unite in advocacy of live advertising and publicity on the part of exhibitors.

Pointing out that up-to-date exhibitors appreciate the importance of good advertising, Mr. Johnston says:

"These exhibitors don't need preaching. They want—and appreciate—help and encouragement. And let me say that the trend of thought in the inner councils is to give them more and more aid. The Fox Exhibitors Bulletin is one such evidence.

"As for the exhibitors who have not yet learned the lesson of advertising:

"The time for preaching is past. The exhibitor whose eyes are open can readily see what advertising is doing for others—and how others are doing it. The exhibitor whose eyes are open will take advantage of the aids that the producers are supplying. The exhibitor whose eyes are open will follow the sign-post that points to the highway of Big Money.

"The exhibitor who, 'having eyes, will not see,' will be shunted to the roadside and forgotten in the onward sweep of the greatest, keenest, livest business on earth."

Divides Exhibitors Into Two Classes.

Mr. Mason divides exhibitors into two major classes—those who advertise and those who do not. The latter class he subdivides into the exhibitors who think they don't need to advertise, the exhibitors who don't believe in advertising, and the exhibitors who don't know what advertising means.

"The exhibitor who thinks he does not need to advertise," says Mr. Mason, "may be an exhibitor, but as a showman he is a moss-gatherer. He is too easily satisfied with the patronage he has, and he will only have that so long as no wide-awake competitor arises to dispute his patronage with him.

"The second man is generally the shiftless theatre owner who has nothing to advertise, and wouldn't spend a nickel as long as his box office is busy.

"The third man is usually the struggling, well-meaning exhibitor who can't understand why his townsfolk pass his theatre by to flock to a well-kept and well-advertised house.

"The exhibitor who has such a theatre, and doesn't advertise it, ought to get wise to himself.

"Advertising used to be regarded as a speculation. Today it is recognized as an investment and a service that is expected by the customer."

Quigley Raises Interesting Point.

Mr. Quigley in his article raises a point that will be of special interest to exhibitors who have made it their policy to advertise only when they play a special attraction.

"A conclusion of greatest folly," declares Mr. Quigley, "is that only special attractions are worthy of an exhibitor's best publicity efforts. To allow a suspicion to form in your patrons' minds that you are only half-sold on your program of a certain day is the surest way to be left with a half-filled house. Your day-by-day advertising forges a great chain of publicity that binds your patrons to your theatre.

"Lessening your efforts on a single picture results in a weakened link that menaces the stability of the entire chain."

Pointing out that selling a picture via the screen is not a simple test, Mr. Quigley asserts that so many things enter into the proper exploitation of a motion picture that the exhibitor must be an analyst.

Must Study Picture.

"The dominant exploitation features of a production may be pointed out to him, but to obtain the fullest value for his particular theatre he must carefully consider the chief 'selling points' with reference to the tastes and tendencies of his clientele. It is a grievous error to hang your argument exclusively upon personalities.

"What type of play is it? What is the

Judging from the Determined Look on His Face Sessue Hayakawa Won't Let "The Debt" Hang Over Him Long.
The gaming table evidently has little appeal to the star of this Robertson-Cole production released by Exhibitors Mutual.

story about? These are questions which mechanically occur in the minds of the public, thereby creating an opportunity for the exhibitor to answer the queries with pungent, interest-exciting paragraphs that result in convincing the reader that this is a picture he wants to see.

"Titles of the right sort offer opportunities for positive profit when used adroitly in advertising announcements.

"Titles that pique the curiosity of the reader, that effectively suggest romance, sensation or humor cannot be used too conspicuously in your announcement.

"This being a pictorial art, the lavish use of illustrations is not only consistent, but absolutely necessary. Your film tells its story in pictures. Your advertising story—or at least 75 per cent. of it—also should be told in pictures. Your message in type may not be read, but your message in halftone or line cut illustration cannot escape. In the wording of your advertisements be brief. In analyzing any and every picture you will discover some fact of dominant appeal, whether it be the star, the story, the production or some other essential of a good picture. Drive this fact home."

Small House Used As Example.

For the basis of his discussion of the topic, Mr. Blaisdell, of the Moving Picture World, takes a 600-seat house in a community of detached dwellings in a city of 25,000 inhabitants.

"There is a local daily—perhaps there are two—the advertising rates of which hardly can be described as prohibitive," says Mr. Blaisdell. "Make a contract permitting a minimum of two inches a day and yet capable of expansion to any figure.

"There won't be a day that any one of your patrons present or prospective will be in doubt as to what is being shown at any time during the week. Every Saturday advertise liberally, going more or less into detail as to what is 'on' during the next six—or seven—days.

"If in the list there is a subject that stands out—if you are satisfied that it really does stand out, and you should make it a point to have at least one every week that does—go to that one extra hard and raise the admission price. Take pains, too, to see that no one night shall be fixed in the minds of your patrons as a special night.

"For your newspaper advertising use a characteristic logotype of the name of your house—in single, in double and in triple column—so that your customers instinctively will spot it when glancing at the page.

Give Heed to Typography.

"Make it a point to give heed to your typography. Make it attractive.

"Keep in touch with the right men on your local papers. Know them, and know them well, so that they will never be in doubt that you are a customer of the paper. Drop in on the editor an occasional afternoon just as the paper goes to press. Say 'halloa' to him, tell him how your bill is going; bring in an announcement for publication on the day following, so there will be no excuse for not having it in time. If you possess a car take him for a ride, casually reaching the theatre just as the best thing in your program is going on.

"Under no circumstances lose contact with that editor.

"And advertise your show according to its strength. Don't mislead your public. If you 'pull a flivver' don't be afraid to apologize for it.

"Use slides sparingly. Don't, between shows, put on your screen announcement of all the pictures you'll show for three weeks. Don't bore your customers. If you have on your slate something really big, that's a different matter. But three or four slides are enough—more are not only tiresome, but patrons will not attempt to keep track of them.

Spend More Than You Can Afford.

"As to billboards, spend a little more than you really can afford—and that same statement will apply in the case of almost any advertising.

"Publicity is valuable only when it is right.

"Publicity is valuable only when it reaches those who can reach you.

"Know your 'regulars' and personally keep them posted as to what big stuff is coming to your house. Learn the names of your patrons and address them accordingly. If you don't know the name that goes with a familiar face inquire of a mutual friend.

"Don't smear your lobby with posters and stills. Use a few selected stills in a frame and put them where they can be seen. As for one-sheets, have a care. If they are not artistic, just forget them.

"In conclusion, when dubious as to what amount of money to allot to advertising a picture that you are satisfied will make a hit with your clientele, if only you can get it into the theatre, give the benefit of the doubt to that sum just exceeding what you think you can afford."

Other Features of Interest.

In addition to the discussion by the tradepaper editors, there are numerous other features in the current Exhibitors Bulletin that will prove of great interest to exhibitors. There are stories regarding the activities of progressive showmen throughout the country, as well as short, gossipy items of a personal nature about exhibitors in different territories.

One of the features of especial interest is an important announcement regarding the activities of William Fox in Europe. This announcement gives details regarding the plans of Mr. Fox to produce pictures on the battlefields of France, as well as information concerning new stars of world wide fame with whom Mr. Fox is negotiating.

The Bulletin, which has forty pages, has a cover printed on buff paper, showing Mr. Fox, Winfield R. Sheehan and Abraham Carlos about to sail from New York.

Separate Structure for Art Department.

Despite that Thomas H. Ince's new studios at Culver City, Cal., seemed to be entirely adequate to all needs, it has been found necessary to provide a separate building to house the Art Department, while still another will be required for the wardrobe. The latter is temporarily housed in one of the three large projection rooms in the administration building. This department is under the supervision of Roy Purden.

Irvin J. Martin heads the art department. In the new structure there will be a room for the photographic work, separate apartments for the artists, and another for mechanical subtitle work.

Garson's "The Hushed Hour" to Get Detroit Premiere

HARRY GARSON'S next production featuring Blanche Sweet, which is to be released soon, is "The Hushed Hour." Mr. Garson has not decided as to whether he will state right this feature or sell the negative outright, several parties are negotiating on the latter proposition. In either event it is the intention to open the picture at the Broadway Strand, in Detroit, the same theatre in which "The Unpardonable Sin" had its sensational premiere.

"The Hushed Hour" boasts of one of the most unusual casts ever seen in a motion picture, and for once "an all star cast" does not belie its name, for besides Blanche Sweet are Wilfred Lucas, Milton Sills, Mary Anderson, Rosemary Theby, Harry Northrup, Gloria Hope, Wyndham Standing, Ben Alexander, Winter Hall, Lydia Knott, Edward M. Kimball and L. T. Steers.

The opening in Detroit is set for May 18.

George D. Baker to Spend Vacation in the East

WHILE George D. Baker, the Metro director, is taking a well-earned vacation from the megaphone, George D. Baker, the writer, is still on the job in his office at Metro studios in Hollywood. When the two continuities he is now engaged upon are completed. Mr. Baker, the writer, will also rest upon his labors.

Mr. Baker expects to complete his labors in two weeks and will then catch the first train to New York to indulge in his second real vacation in six years (the "flu" vacation not included). He will rest for probably two months, returning to California this summer to direct special Metro features.

Laemmle Buys a Fannie Hurst Story.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, announces the purchase of a story from Fannie Hurst, the short story writer. This Fannie Hurst story, "The Petal on the Current," is the first the author has sold for motion picture production and it will be produced shortly at the Universal City studios.

Neither the star nor the cast for the production which will be in five or six reels, has been announced but it is thought Mary MacLaren will be given the leading role.

Artcraft Picture Smashes Records.

All records established by the Rialto Theatre, Omaha, prior to the showing of "Don't Change Your Husband," the Cecil B. De Mille Artcraft picture, were broken by that picture, which ran a full week to jammed houses. The total of paid admissions during the week was 41,000, as compared with 35,000 paid admissions the previous high mark for a week. The Rialto seats 2,490 persons.

Turrill Joins Famous Players.

Jesse L. Lasky announces the addition to the Famous Players-Lasky organization of Howard Turrill, for several years connected with the Exhibitors-Mutual in charge of various activities. Mr. Turrill will be associated with Whitman Bennett, production manager.

HAMPTON ANNOUNCES GREAT AUTHORS

Will Picturize Novels of Stewart Edward White, Winston Churchill, Emerson Hough and Others

RETURNING from California, where he went for a final business conference, Charles A. Weeks, treasurer and associate of Benjamin B. Hampton, announces the organization of Great Authors, Inc., one of the most significant developments of recent years in the motion picture industry.

Great Authors, Inc., will produce and market as "Benjamin B. Hampton Productions" the most famous novels of Stewart Edward White, Winston Churchill and Emerson Hough, in addition to the best known novels of other of the most popular personalities in American literary life.

Great Authors Distributed by Hodkinson

All productions of Great Authors, Inc., will be distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, which handles its physical releasing through the thirty Hathe Exchange offices in the United States with Hodkinson managers and assistants in full and complete charge of selling in each office. To insure increased sales efficiency, the Hodkinson sales mechanism across the country recently has undergone many changes with the introduction of some of the best known exchange figures in the industry as Hodkinson representatives.

Stewart Edward White's "The Westerners" is the first of the big productions ready for release. This most successful novel has been given an all-star cast with Roy Stewart, Mildred Manning, Robert McKim, Wilfred Lucas, Graham Pettie, Mary Jane Irving and Frankie O'Neil and has been made under the direction of Edward Sloman.

Other Stewart Edward White novels to be produced by Mr. Hampton include "The Grey Dawn," "The Leopard Woman," "The Blazed Trail," "The Riverman" and "The Rules of the Game."

Winston Churchill's most famous stories to be produced by this organization include "The Dwelling Place of Light" and "The Inside of the Cup," two of the greatest literary hits of the past ten years.

Emerson Hough's notable successes, "54-40 or Fight" and "The Mississippi Bubble," will serve as his introductions to the screen audiences of the nation.

Rothapfel's Unit Program Gets Premiere at Rialto

S. ROTHAPFEL'S first Unit Program will be given its premiere to the trade and press Friday morning, May 9, at 10 o'clock, at the Rialto Theatre, according to an announcement made by Frank G. Hall, vice-president, Rothapfel Picture Corporation, whose interests, Independent Sales Corporation and Film Clearing House, Inc., are handling the distribution of the Rothapfel Unit.

The Unit Program will be given in its entirety—from overture to curtain—with the full Rialto orchestra giving the musical accompaniment as conceived and arranged by Mr. Rothapfel. Announcement will not be made of the subject matter of the picture program, but it is said that Mr. Rothapfel has ready for projection some novel and unique subjects, each with a special musical accompaniment, interpreting the sentiments and speaking for the action. The feature number of the program is said to be one of the finest examples of dramatic expose, giving Mr. Rothapfel's own individual ideas as to special effects and dramatic interpretation by an all-star cast of the screen's best artists.

Schwerin Secures Big Garson Film for South

CHARLES F. SCHWERIN announces that he has purchased from Harry I. Garson, the rights to the Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina territory on "The Unpardonable Sin." Mr. Schwerin closed the deal for the Southern territory the first of the week, paying the highest figure, it is said, ever recorded for a single production playing this territory. Immediately after closing the deal, Mr. Schwerin planned a publicity and advertising campaign in every newspaper and local trade paper in that section. Mr. Schwerin is known from New York to the Coast. Recently he toured the Eastern territory as special representative for Frank G. Hall in the interest of the Rothapfel Unit Program. Mr. Schwerin is conceded to be one of the industry's most efficient and capable operators in the independent field, and in his new venture he has the best wishes from his many friends.

Ray to Fight Professional Pugilist.

Charles Ray has returned to the Ince studios, after a two weeks' vacation in San Francisco. He will start work on a picture, as yet untitled, under the direction of Jerome Storm.

In the production Ray has to fight a professional pugilist and this fight will be one of the big points in the play.

Ray is meanwhile getting in training in his gymnasium for the big fight, for it is going to be a real one, and will tax every muscle the actor possesses.

Coleen Moore will be leading woman. The story was written by Julien Josephson, author of "String Bean," "The Girl Dodger" and others.

Cinema Camera Club Holds Successful Studio Ball

THE annual ball of the Cinema Camera Club, held at the Estee Studio, West 125th street, on Saturday evening, April 26, was an enjoyable success. The studio, given over for the purpose by E. Spitz, was thronged to the doors with New York cameramen, screen actors and their friends. There were no elaborate decorations, but the novelty of dancing in a moving picture studio under the lights fully compensated.

A dance by little Helen Bagley, formerly with Thanhouser, and Master Earle Coudert, was one of the features of the evening. The ball was arranged under the direction of George C. Coudert, as chairman of the committee on entertainment. A moving picture of the grand march was taken, giving the friends of the Cinema Club a chance to act before the camera.

Among the screen actors present were Coit Anderson, Paul Fox, Ed. Roseman, Hugh Thompson and Stuart Holmes. Members of the Cinema Camera Club who took an active part during the evening were Larry Williams, "Doc" Travers, Lloyd Lewis, Fred Held, Eric Elderberg, Max Schneider, Al Ansbacher, Joe Schelderfer, George Brautigan, Eugene French, Harry Keepers, Charles Davis, Tom Moloy, Joe Malcolm, and Arthur Quinn.

Famous Players-Lasky to Screen "Peg O' My Heart"

"PEG O' MY HEART," by J. Hartley Manners, a most successful stage play, is to be filmed in California by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a big special production.

The play was recently released for motion picture presentation by decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and the final arrangements for the production were consummated between the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Oliver Morosco.

In making the above announcement, Jesse L. Lasky, who has just returned to New York from California, stated that he considered it the biggest piece of production news of the year.

"The play will be reproduced with exactness of detail," said Mr. Lasky. "William C. DeMille will direct, and he has been placed in exclusive charge of the casting and all details of production. The selecting of those to interpret the various roles is now under way, and Mr. DeMille has already chosen Wanda Hawley to play the part of 'Peg,' with Thomas Meighan in the leading male role."

Olga Printzlau has written the scenario.

Big News Breaks on Extreme West Coast

A NUMBER of prominent visitors were entertained at the Christie studios last week, and were shown how the festive picture is made. Among them were Ike Colder, the representative of the American Ice Company, who regularly delivers ice to the laboratory; Mrs. Irma Proudflesh, with her cute little daughter, whom she wants to get into pictures; John Skinner, correspondent for the South Newark Daily Blatt, who is interesting the actors in a souvenir booklet to be published with autographed photos of celebrities (paid for by same), and a large party of society girls from Pasadena who declared that they would be willing to appear in pictures just for a lark.

(No, they wouldn't care to accept money for their appearance, but would take the checks for souvenirs.)

The guests were photographed with the president of the company, and later entertained at an elaborate luncheon especially prepared for the visitors at Mrs. Pshaw's dainty chocolate parlor in Hollywood.

After luncheon the prominent Easterners were photographed for the news weeklies, which will be shown in Guam, Capetown, Adam's Mills, Ohio, and other large cities, together with the latest Christie comedy. The guests expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the manner in which the intricacies of motion picture making were presented to them, and declared that they had never before realized that motion pictures were no longer in their infancy.

Association Takes Revolutionary Action

WHEN the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry decided to censor the product of its own members it did what may be cribed as nothing short of revolutionary. In its ger aspects clearly it is one of the most important s ever taken by organized producers and dis- utors; and the step is the right one to take. It l be indorsed and backed up by every one possessing ion; by every one who is concerned as to matters ond the moment, who takes pride in the standing he industry of which he is a part. It is legislation h teeth in it sharp enough, if necessary, to do erved harm to those who, for temporary gain today, ld jeopardize for months to come the business of r scrupulous competitors.

resident Brady intimates that the "last straw"— one thing that impelled the producers and dis- utors to take matters into their own hands—was exploitation before mixed gatherings of "social " films, intended at the time of their making solely showing to soldiers. That these pictures have a sion this journal indicated in its review of several ks ago, but this mission is not fulfilled when they thrown on the screen unsurrounded by such safe- rds as are obvious — safeguards plainly in the interest of public decency. They are not subjects that should be commercialized, not even by the United States Government, and if any officer of the Government has been a party to the sale and consequent indiscriminate, unsupervised showing of these pictures to unsegregated groups the National Association would perform a public service if it should uncover his identity and tell the people about it.

The New York World, in a news story, announces that the National Association by its action tacitly admitted the recent charges of the female fifth deputy police commissioner concerning immoral and salacious films. If the outburst of Mrs. O'Grady was precipitated by the exhibition of Government-made films there may be a shade of truth in the statement. If there be truth in it the men of the industry have a right to demand of the Government that no action be taken by any of its officers that will subject the motion picture business to contumely. The motion picture interests have supported the Government whenever and wherever there was a chance to do so. The industry is not entitled to, nor does it claim, any particular credit for the performance of its duty. It does have a right, however, to ask from the Government the same protection of its business reputation that is accorded to any other division of commercial activity.

The decision of the National Association will make for better pictures. What is of more importance it will go far to eliminate the few bad pictures, and that means better business for every one who is deserving of it.

Faith in the Future

NO more favorable indication of the health and prosperity of the moving picture industry could be desired than the week-after-week news of building activities all over the country. This week brings another refreshing chronicle—that of expansion in the Northwest, New England and the Middle Atlantic section, represented by Philadelphia. Three colossal structures are going up in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth; four houses representing an outlay of a million and a quarter are under way in Springfield, Ansonia and Stamford; while Philadelphia will soon erect six photoplay theatres, with capacities ranging from 2,000 to 4,000 and the expenditure totaling more than $3,500,000.

The erection of these new picture palaces indicates a confidence in the future of the industry. The capital going into them is looking ahead. The slipping of the building leash by the conclusion of the war, bringing daily news of construction activities, demonstrates besides the faith of the exhibitors in the backing of the public.

At Large in Winnipeg: A Humorist

OUR Canadian correspondent sends word of the suggestion made in Winnipeg that returned soldiers be appointed to the Manitoba board of censors. The story points out that the intimation is due to the apparent fact that "seasoned warriors generally are the possessors of broad minds, fair judgment and practical intellect." The statement is made that no action has been taken as yet.

Which surely is cause for regret. We are speaking of the matter contained in the preceding sentence. But is there any one in Winnipeg or anywhere else who does not know that the very possession of "broad minds, fair judgment and practical intellect" as a general rule is sufficient in itself to establish disqualification for the job—that is, in the minds of those who most loudly do clamor for censorship?

Much might be written on this subject. The possibilities for speculation are seemingly endless. Just what productions would most likely be put under the ban by a soldier board—a board composed of men just back from service, where they had seen little in the way of amusement? Of course, prize fights, abhorred by all reformers, would be the first to feel the scissors; and then again bathing comedies would be removed from the screen pronto. With slapstick surely soldiers would have no patience. The "cooties" in "Shoulder Arms" would be declared out of order as being—well—indelicate and offensive to the finer sensibilities. But why go further?

Your average soldier most closely approximates "the man with the bark on." He has no patience with cant. He estimates men by what they have done, not by what they pretend. So, after all, we fear there is no chance for their employment as censors.

Sunday Privileges Bring Responsibilities

SUNDAY pictures are now legal in the State of New York. The moving picture exhibitors have many friends who have supported their cause with feelings of confidence that any powers granted them would be well and wisely used. The opponents of the exhibitors who made dire predictions as to the outcome of Sunday pictures and prophesied all kinds of Sabbath desecration will now be more censorous and critical than ever. They will wear spectacles of "extra magnifying power" and will keep a record of all delinquencies so that they may be fortified with material to attack the "Sabbath breakers" next year.

The future of Sunday pictures, therefore, is no longer in the hands of the opponents, but the exhibitors themselves must "make good," justifying their friends and covering themselves with credit. If next year, in addition to their present friends, they have an army of new ones, together with satisfied authorities and confounded opponents, they will deserve well. Moreover, more than forty states in the Union are looking to New York in these matters. Suffice it now to subjoin the opinion of the Brooklyn Eagle at this important time:

> Our hope is that the motion picture magnates will realize that a new responsibility is put upon them. Films of dignity, of character, of educational value are available. If tawdry eccentricities were cut out on Sundays, if the drama offered on that day were classical or artistic, or both, opposition would gradually disappear. But if the reverse is the magnates' policy they may as well be warned that Sunday restriction will come back, for this state is not ruled by its city population, and Albany is not always or often responsive to the East Side element of Manhattan.

Delivering the Goods

THERE is no going behind the returns! The goods are being delivered! High-grade pictures in greater numbers than ever before are being shown to the public. In the Broadway theatres, New York, the week of April 27 Cecil B. De Mille's Artcraft production, "For Better, for Worse"; Harry Garson's "The Unpardonable Sin," starring Blanche Sweet, and Goldwyn's "The Stronger Vow," with Geraldine Farrar, were shown. The previous week had seen Elsie Ferguson in "Eyes of the Soul," an Artcraft picture.

The week of May 4 promises Nazimova in Metro's gorgeous production, "The Red Lantern"; the First National release, "Mary Regan," starring Anita Stewart, and the Salvation Army picture, "Fires of Faith." Seven subjects of so fine a calibre in three weeks is a record of which to be proud. The list of other high-class pictures released lately is proportionately large.

Making Friends with Newspaper Men

NO better advice can be given any exhibitor than "Know the newspaper men in your own town." It should be more than an acquaintance; the contact should be close enough to constitute real friendship. On another page we tell the story of what this friendship meant to Mr. Maloney, manager of the Strand in Fort Worth. The theatre man was confronted with a situation—one in which he found his house booked to show a pretentious subject, but lacking the wherewith that would exploit it. There were no heralds, posters, press sheet, slides, or any of the accessories usually accompanying, or rather anticipating, the film. Mr. Maloney called on his newspaper friends, and he leaned on his club chums. In spite of the initial handicap the picture was viewed by throngs; and it was well advertised, too, both in the newspapers and by word of mouth.

Speaking about the possibilities of an alliance between the picture showmen and the newspaper men of his city, a suggestion has come to us as this is being written. When you, Mr. Exhibitor, talk with your local newspaper man about the manner in which he ignores the news value of motion picture announcements, and incidentally mention the large amount of space given to sporting news, don't intimate that the latter be curtailed in any way. If you do you will create antagonism. Ask him to establish an extra department.

One argument exhibitors may use in this connection—and beyond question it is a good one—is that for every additional subscriber put on the presses of a daily newspaper there is an increase in the value of the advertising. In other words, the increased circulation makes the paper more valuable to every merchant employing those columns to exploit his goods; and the newspaper may accordingly charge increased rates. So it works out that the publisher gets his return—his monetary return—from printing motion picture news, not necessarily from the exhibitors, but from every advertiser using his columns.

The Right Way to Remove Misunderstandings

THE exhibitors and exchangemen of New York City have adopted a sane way of removing misunderstandings. On Wednesday, April 30, the members of the F. I. L. M. Club and the exhibitors of New York met in open session and talked plainly.

Among the suggestions submitted by the exhibitors for the consideration of the exchangemen—and assurance was given that they would receive thoughtful attention—were exhibitor representation on the grievance committee of the exchangemen; a standard contract to be used by all exchanges; acceptance or rejection of contracts within seven days after signing, and the elimination of the deposit or the payment of 6 per cent. interest.

Europeans Want No War Plays

WAR plays are taboo abroad, according to Chester Beecroft, American representative of the Scandinavian Film Agency, just returned to the United States from an eleven weeks' trip covering England, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland and France. Of things military the men and women on the other side have had their fill in the last five years.

There is a scarcity of motion picture theatres abroad, Mr. Beecroft points out, and adds that under post-war regulations foreigners are debarred from building. Europeans like American picture-making methods, and are adopting them.

Personal and Otherwise

JESSE GOLDBERG, of the Frohman Amusement Company, just one month since his departure to the Coast, has returned to New York. He is enthusiastic over the two-reel western productions by the Frohman Company, and says he will give a trade showing the latter part of next week.

The Sawyer and Lubin Pictures Corporation, by additions to their newly furnished and decorated offices, is sharing the eleventh floor of the Longacre Building about fifty-fifty with the Metro.

Phil Kauffman, from Toronto, representing the Allen interests, is in town. He is stopping at the Astor.

We announce with much regret the death of the father of Irving Cohen, manager of the Sixty-eighth street and Rex theatres, New York. Mr. Cohen is an honored member of our industry and his many friends extend to him their deep and sincere sympathy.

C. J. Meegan, publicity director for General Film, during the time George Kleine was general manager, has been employed by the Knights of Columbus, in a clerical capacity. Mr. Meegan is contemplating going to Cuba as a representative of a large commercial concern.

Wid Gunning, who has been in New York for the past two weeks, will return to Los Angeles, the week of May 8.

The executive offices of the United Artists Distributing Corporation, now occupy the rooms in the Godfrey Building, hitherto tenanted by General Film.

Lewis Boche, manager of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, of Philadelphia, was in town during the convention of the First National. With him was A. G. Buck, associated with Harry Schwalbe, of Philadelphia.

Harry Crandall, of Washington, D. C., was in New York last week with Mrs. Crandall and their daughter, Ethel. Harry did a lot of business while here, but we are glad he gave us an opportunity of meeting part of his family, whose hospitality we have enjoyed on many occasions when visiting the National Capitol.

George Germain, as salesman, goes to Buffalo with Select's new branch manager, A. W. Moses.

We met Fred P. Elliott, of the Clinton Square, Theatre, Albany, at the Astor, the other day. He has in mind the building of a larger house at the state's capital.

J. M. Franklin, of the Strand, Halifax, N. S., wrote us a few days ago that he has given a special showing of the "Life of Nelson," a feature made in England. He speaks of it in glowing terms.

P. S. Greenburg, Philadelphia representative of the Capital Film Company, was in New York during convention week at the Hotel Astor. He will remain in New York for several days and says it is very probable that the Capital will establish an office here in the film centre.

While talking with Mr. Greenburg, we were introduced to F. H. Smith, of the home office of the Capital Film Company, located at Indianapolis.

Vitagraph has made many marked improvements in the rearrangement of their business offices at 1600 Broadway. The space which was used for the shipping and distribution of posters and printing is now occupied by the executive office staff.

In the course of saunterings on the film trail the past week, we met up with the following out-of-town visitors to Manhattan: Ludwig Schinaler, Nathan Ascher and F. O. Neilson, of the Mickey Film Corporation, Chicago; Tom Moore, of Washington, D. C.; Sol Lesser and T. L. Tally, of San Francisco; Alfred S. Black, of Rockland, Maine; John A. Schuberg, W. P. Dewees and R. A. Scott, of Vancouver, B. C.; A. Cubberly of Ruben & Finklestein, of Mineapolis, and N. J. Flynn of Richard and Flynn, Kansas City.

We are told that Sam Suchno, of Albany, N. Y., has taken over Proctor's Annes, which he will remodel for a modern motion picture house. He also has under consideration the building of a new theatre in the fall.

Mary Pickford has taken her departure from the Coast and will arrive in New York, on Friday, May 2.

William S. Hart is in our midst and camping at the Hotel Claridge.

J. W. Flynn, general manager of the Vitagraph Distributing Company, is on his way to California. He will stop at the Vitagraph exchanges en route. He will be gone about three weeks.

President of United Artists.

President Price Meets Trade Paper Editors

OSCAR A. PRICE, president of the United Artists, which organization sometimes is referred to as the Big Four, was the guest at luncheon of the editors of the five motion picture trade papers at their weekly get-together April 25. Mr. Price frankly is seeking information about the making and distribution of motion pictures. He makes no pretense of having any advice to impart on these subjects.

The former officials of the railroad administration is a likable man to meet. He is without frills. His gray hair seemingly is no indication of his age. His face is youthful, yet bears the impress of the stamp of experience in large affairs. He is one of those who acquire knowledge fast.

Perhaps Mr. Price's idea of success was summed up in his reference to one of his former associates, a man who has attained eminence in the United States Army and whose name had been mentioned by one of the party: "You call him a genius. So he is. You will notice that most men who are credited with possessing that attribute have a capacity and a will to work eighteen hours a day. That is what he does."

Mr. Price saw service in the Spanish-American war, emerging a first lieutenant. He is a former newspaper man. Incidentally he is a type for which there always is room in any industry. That among the motion picture fraternity the chief of the United Artists will be voted a welcome addition is a foregone conclusion.

Boston Director for Broadway.

Signor Ronualdo De Martin, formerly of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been engaged by B. S. Moss to conduct the New American Symphony Orchestra of forty pieces at the Broadway Theatre, which will open Friday night under the direction of Mr. Moss, with "The Unpardonable Sin," the big multi-reeler, as the chief pictorial attraction. The members of this orchestra are soloists of individual distinction, and represent the pick of the country's symphony field.

O'Shea Returns to the Universal.

James O'Shea, who started his picture career as a member of the business department of the Morosco plant, has returned to the Universal. O'Shea made "The Rummy" and "Jim Bludso" for the Fine Arts. Now that he is with Universal he will soon be seen in support of Neal Burns in the comedies being produced by Al Santell. He has been assigned a heavy role in "Father Was Wise," a comedy in which Neal Burns and Josephine Hill are starred.

Goldwyn Distributor Knighted.

Oswall Stoll, one of the most important amusement men in England, managing director of the Coliseum Syndicate and distributor of Goldwyn pictures in the entire United Kingdom, has just been knighted for his work during the war, which aided greatly in keeping up the morale of the British army. Mr. Stoll—now Sir Oswald—contributed liberally to all the war charities, and did his most important work through the arranging of amusements for the soldiers.

ROBERTSON-COLE CREATES NEW BRAND

Exhibitors Mutual to Release "Superior Pictures"—First One Is Warner's "The Man Who Turned White"

ROBERTSON-COLE announces that, beginning with the first of June, they will inaugurate a new brand of attractions which will be known as "Superior Pictures."

Only the most pretentious and vital photoplays, with a stirring public appeal, will be released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual under this category.

H. B. Warner, in the Jesse D. Hampton attraction, "The Man Who Turned White," a big, pulsating photodrama of the ever-interesting, mysterious sands which lie down behind the Mediterranean, will be the initial Superior Picture released by Robertson-Cole.

Superior Pictures will be "specials" in every sense of the term, and must possess an extraordinary box office value before going under this classification.

Superior Pictures All "Specials."

Robertson-Cole is taking its keen judgment on inaugurating the series with "The Man Who Turned White." This Warner picture is hailed as one of the most finished products ever sent out of the West.

After a most exhaustive study of the motion picture situation Robertson-Cole have come to a decision regarding the real merit of "Special" productions, and with the inauguration of Superior Pictures these views will be put into practice. Any photo play which is released as a Superior Picture will have to be a "special" in every respect, it is said. And no production will come under the classification of Superior until it has passed the test of rigid perfection Robertson-Cole has arranged for these offerings.

In their study of the field, the Robertson-Cole officials have found that spectacles do not always attain the "special" class in the eyes of the public. It is the public which must be eventually satisfied, and it is the box office as well as the artistic merit which will be considered by Robertson-Cole in the selection of Superior Pictures.

May Be Sure of Superiors.

Exhibitors may feel certain, Robertson-Cole promise, that when they book a Superior Picture they are obtaining a "special in every sense—a production of the first rank."

"The Man Who Turned White" was screened in New York last week, and was hailed as one of the biggest and best pictures Robertson-Cole has ever handled for American distribution. Money was spent lavishly, though carefully, it is said, on "The Man Who Turned White." An entire Arabian village was built for this picture, elaborate interiors were erected in the Hampton studios, and the entire country was scoured for the finest type of Arabian horses.

The supporting cast contains all prominent players, with the beautiful Barbara Castleton as leading woman.

Did You Say "Money Corral"?
It looks like William S. Hart in "The Girl Corral," but Artcraft says it's "Money."

Emerson-Loos Investigation Tour Shows Need of Stories

JOHN EMERSON and Anita Loos, the well-known writers and producers for Paramount, have returned to New York after a transcontinental tour, undertaken for the purpose of investigating conditions in the industry, getting closer to the audiences and theatre managers, and thus, with their fingers on the film public's pulse, determining what is required for their future productions.

When Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos were interviewed upon their return, they concluded their discussion of the whole situation throughout the country, by saying, "They don't need more stars or new ones, they don't need more directors or better ones, they don't ask for more artistry or more elaborate settings, the public is not looking for new tricks of the camera or in lightings, but they certainly do want more good stories."

Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos visited over twenty of the larger cities and no less than thirty smaller communities, where they tested out their plan precisely as they did in Chicago, Denver, Kansas City, San Francisco and other large cities. Mr. Emerson appeared before a number of men's clubs, while Miss Loos spoke to more than forty women's organizations. After every address they invited open discussion by their hearers and in this way gained a very accurate idea of what the better class of the public wants. They also interviewed theatre managers, managers of exchanges, and people in all walks of life.

Cummings With Famous Players-Lasky.

Irving Cummins has been placed under contract by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to appear in pictures made on the Pacific Coast, starting July 1.

Mr. Cummings has just completed work in "Street Service," doing a heavy role, under the direction of Hugh Ford.

Tom Santschi.
Favorite featured in Fox plays.

Prior to that, he appeared in Ethel Clayton's picture, "Men, Women and Money," for Paramount. Among the screen stars Mr. Cummings has supported are Clara Kimball Young, Nazimova, Florence Reed, Pauline Frederick, Hazel Dawn and Ethel Barrymore. He also played an important part in Maurice Tourneur's production, "The Whip."

Want Ways of Securing and Protecting Patents Changed

REFORM of the procedure covering the securing of patents will be agitated early in the coming session of Congress, and a number of bills have already been prepared to cover what are considered needed changes in the present methods of securing and protecting patents.

For years, it is declared, individual inventors, manufacturers and attorneys have endeavored to secure needed reforms, but have failed because of lack of unanimity among those working toward that end. The patent committee of the National Research Council, however, composed of some of the leading scientists, inventors and patent lawyers of the country, has completed an investigation of the Patent Office and patent system and have determined upon suggestions which will be included in four bills which have been prepared for submission to Congress.

The proposed measures will call for the establishment of a single court of patent appeals, the separation of the Patent Office from the Department of the Interior and its elevation to the position of an independent bureau; increases in the salaries of examiners, so as to enable the Government to secure the men best equipped for the work; and an amendment to the Revised Statutes enabling the patentee in all suits where the patent has been found valid and infringed to recover at least a reasonable royalty or other form of general damages.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Players Positively Popping with Pep to Push the Victory Loan Over the Highest Top

By Giebler

THE old colony is busy, positively popping over with pep, stepping right along on high day and night; the studios all busy, with every head, every star, every director and every player working like a Trojan to make the Victory Loan a success.

Down in Pershing Square there is a wonderfully realistic miniature ship called the "Victory," and every night this vessel is manned by a crew of players captained by a star or a director, and the people pack themselves into the park like the proverbial sardines in the metaphorical tin can, and they cheer and hurrah and huzza and listen to the music and join in the choruses of the songs and look at the stars and—best of all—they buy bonds.

It is a good thing Rubbernecking is full of rubber. It had to be stretched all over the map this week, and even then it didn't get but a modicum of the momentous happenings.

National Builds Bit of Bowery.

One day I went out to the National studios, where Director Bertram Bracken has got a section of little old New York set up in the lot for Henry Walthall's new play, "The Parted Curtain." Bowery stuff, with the elevated railway and a stairway that is practical enough to be climbed up on, and a lamppost that is not real enough to be leaned against unless you want a property man with a hammer in his hand and a baleful look in his eye to regard you with a look of scorn.

Underneath the elevated stairs a row of fronts, stores, pawn shops, McGurk's Place, a window that might belong to a restaurant from the looks of its sign, which reads "He that cometh to me shall never hunger," but which is in reality a mission; and next to that, the Little Jumbo saloon, with a fine picture of a scoop of suds on its glass front.

Putting on Scoop Stuff for the Drys.

They were not shooting the street stuff, but I went in to one of the dark stages and found the interior of the Little Jumbo all set up, and Bert Bracken making drama on the sawdust floor.

Henry Walthall and William Clifford were working in the scene, and Walthall's make-up was so good that I had to have him pointed out before I recognized him.

Watching them make that scene in the barroom answered a question that I have long wanted answered.

Bracken staged a bit of action that showed Clifford having a tilt with the Bartender. There was an extra in the scene, a little sawed-off chap. I don't know where they picked him up, but he was the exact type.

The extra's part was to lend atmosphere to the scene by drinking a tall scoop of beer. When the time came he raised the glass to his lips, tilted back his head and let gravity do the rest. I never saw such simplicity and such utter realism.

When Retakes Add to Gayety.

I have often wondered what it was that the players drank in movie barrooms. After that scene I began to suspect. Then Bracken said, "We'll take it again." A smile of beatitude overspread the extra's face, and my suspicions grew stronger. They started the camera and again the extra elevated the scoop and again the liquor disappeared with pouring-it-in-a-rat-hole realism.

Bracken was still unsatisfied with the action, and once more the extra did his part, with never a gasp or a gurgle, never a slip to the machine-like smoothness of his work, and my suspicions became a certainty. I knew.

I am casting no insinuations, making no inviduous allegations, but that chap was not drinking the cold tea with soap suds on it that many of us have been led to think is served over movie bars. There was too much dram-ah to his work for that.

Meets Up with a Crowd.

I had a long talk with Mr. Walthall, and he told me about the play he was making and his part, which is a Walthall part down to the ground.

Then I went over on another stage and saw William Seiter direct Carter De Haven and Flora Parker De Haven in a comedy dining room scene which was good and snappy. I saw Harry Pollard, who said he was going to start directing Bill Parsons "tomorrow" in a comedy, and Louis Chaudet wearing an overcoat and a megaphone practicing for his next Billie Rhodes feature.

I then paid my respects to Isadore Bernstein and told him how much I regretted the fact that my old friend Smiling Bill and Mrs. Smiling Bill were not at the studio.

After this I went over to Metro, and, as we would say back in Missouri, I ran "right smack dab" into a circus.

Bert Lytell Digs Up a Collar.

The circus, which was the most complete I have ever seen on a movie lot, was being used as a location for Bert Lytell's new feature, "One Thing at a Time O'Day," and Bert—talk about make-ups! He had on a suit of rube store-clothes and one of those clean-'em-yourself-with-a-wet-rag rubber collars that I thought went out along with free silver parades.

Bert says he got the collar down in Sonora Town, the Mex quarter of Los Angeles, and he wouldn't take a whole dozen of imported collars for it.

The circus, as I have said, was most complete, and Bert says he once transferred the contents of a good-sized lake into the interior of three elephants to look at one not half so good. And there were three hundred extras sitting in the seats, having a good time and getting paid for it.

John Ince was directing the circus and Webster Cullison was helping. Eileen Percy was supporting Lytell. Jules Hanft was the ringmaster, and Bull Montana was a trainer who got "One Thing at a Time O'Day" in shape to knock the tar out of Stanton Heck, who plays the heavy.

Sounds Like a Regular Circus.

There were all kinds of animals; a band dressed in tights; a tall Uncle Sam, who kept bumping his head against the top of the tent; a trained goose, and a "mountain canary" with a colt—I suppose you call 'em colts—that was just a little over a month, and the cutest little thing!

Bert says he is going to teach it to sing in his odd moments.

It was hard work, but I finally managed to drag Theodore Taylor, who is doing the press work at Metro, away from the circus and over on the stages, where I found Charles Swickard working out a scene from "His Father's Wife" written by my old friend, Ed Durling.

Nothing Temperamental About Swickard.

May Allison was playing the lead. Hugh Fay, Frank Curier, James Weston James, Walter Percival and Henry Miller, Jr., son of the Henry Miller of the regular stage, were in the action, and Charlie was going along in the usual smooth and easy manner that always permits of his dropping everything and coming out of the set to give visitors a hearty handshake and a friendly greeting.

On another stage Hale Hamilton was doping out "Full of Pep," a Latin-American comedy under the direction of Harry R. Franklin.

Hale was in the set entirely surrounded by bottles of his wonderful "pep," the stuff he uses to invigorate the population of a Central American city in the film, and stuff that we are going to be sadly in need of after July first in these United States.

Alice Lake, ex-slapstick queen, Frank Malatesta and Alice Nolan were working with Mr. Hamilton.

Viola Dana was out on location with her company, making outdoor stuff for "The Pliant Patricia," and George D. Baker was getting ready to take a vacation.

Leonhardt Stocks Up on Cones.

Monday night I went down to see the dedication of the ship Victory; saw the bottle of water from the River Rhine smashed over the bows; heard D. W. Griffith make his impassioned and telling speech; talked to Harry Leonhardt, who had his usual job of taking care of the door and lost children.

Last October, when Harry was guarding the gate at the Tank bond sale meetings he evolved a neat little system of taking care of the lost kids. As soon as a youngster would find its way to the tank, which it invariably did, Harry would have an announcement made to the crowd through a megaphone and then start filling the kid up on ice cream cones until its parents arrived.

Harry says it is a fine scheme but it needs some kind of checking system to prevent the same kids from getting lost two or three times every night. One kid showed up the first hour of the first night of the present drive and said: "Well, here I am, lost again. Bring on your cones."

The End of a Perfect Week.

The next day I went out to the Christie plant and saw Al Christie exercising his wonderful gift—I wish I had a word that would express ambidexterity of mind. At any rate, Al has it, whatever it is that enables him to direct comedies, write stories, continuity, talk to half a dozen visitors all at once and keep on smiling at the same time.

I watched Fay Tincher and Katherine Lewis putting comedy in classical dancing; said Hello to Charles Christie, and a few brief words to Pat Dowling, editorial expert, and came away.

That night I went down to the ship again, and watched Doug Fairbanks sell bonds, and saw Ted Reed, Doug's scenario editor, who used to be cheer leader of the Michigan University, work the crowd up to the boiling point of enthusiasm and wake the echoes of the old town with their concerted roaring.

Culbertson Wrote "Heads Win."

The scenario for "Heads Win," a five reel picture which the Universal has just completed for the International Correspondence Schools, and which was given its initial showing at the Symphony Theatre, April 25 and 26, was written by Ernest Howard Culbertson, until recently on the scenario staff of the Universal. For a considerable time Mr. Culbertson was associated with Jack Cohn and edited Universal's Screen Magazine.

High Class Publicity Aids Precede "Fall of Babylon"

THE publicity department of D. W. Griffith's enterprises, headed by Robert Edgar Long, knows the "ins and outs" of first class promotion, a statement inspired by giving the "once over" to the press book for picture showmen who shall play the latest Griffith production, "The Fall of Babylon." The work is done in high class style, proving that travelling with first class road shows or publicizing a real, big circus leaves its mark of showmanship on the man who has thus learned his business.

Matter Gets Intelligent Treatment.

"The Fall of Babylon" gets intelligent treatment in the many and various press notices to hand for exhibitors who contract for the new Griffith presentation. They are written in a style that will admit of an editor running them without mutilation or subsequent apogogy to himself or the owner of the sheet he edits.

Program copy, advertising catch lines, twelve unduplicated advance notices, a set of mail-order announcements, a set of seat-sale notices, a full dozen of unduplicated special stories and three unduplicated reviews are printed in imitation typewriter type, on perforated sheets of vari-tinted paper—and all on one side of the paper and never an "upper case" display of words or expressions to torment the copy-reader who must finally pass the material along to the composing room, and that is all important in publicity.

All Done in "Big Time" Style.

It's all done in "big time" style. The showman who gets it will have "longs and shorts," specials and advertising aids to help him win the elusive dollars from Mr. and Mrs. Public in slick and clean fashion. # DEMILLE'S FINEST ACHIEVEMENT

A Distinct Advance for the Man Who Directed It, the New Artcraft Picture, "For Better, For Worse," Is Rich in Matter That Lies Close to the Heart of Today

By Edward Weitzel

AFTER all, no story is bigger than its theme! "For Better, for Worse," Cecil B. DeMille's latest and finest achievement in production, bears out this self-evident fact. It is the result of a combination of fortunate circumstances, and the Artcraft trademark has never been placed on a better picture. Taken from a play by Edgar Selwyn, the story has the advantage of true dramatic form which the screen version never forgets to respect. Jeanie Macpherson made the scenario, and her efforts deserve the name of photoplay. The characters reveal their lives by their own acts; no one is given the tedious task of explaining things at second hand.

To go back to the theme, "For Better, for Worse" does tardy justice to the millions of brave men who never wore the United States uniform either here or abroad during the world war, but who helped to win the conflict by staying at home, and, in the face of undeserved contempt, did their duty where they were needed most. Four persons are vitally concerned with the outcome of the plot, and their story is told with the help of every device known to the skilled dramatist. In place of the familiar triangle, the love motive is a four-sided affair, and there is no conflict between honor and baseness. Two upright men love the same woman, and matters are complicated by the deep affection felt for one of the men by a young girl who is in every way worthy of him. The suspence is never broken until the very end, and the variety and vitality of incident keeps the interest always taut and in harmony with the scenes.

A Test of True Courage.

The opening of "For Better, for Worse" finds Dr. Edward Meade and his close friend, Richard Burton, rivals for the hand of Sylvia Norcross. Both men have enlisted for the war, and Sylvia, who favors Doctor Meade, is intensely proud of the spirit shown by the two friends. As Meade is trying on his uniform the head surgeon of the children's hospital where the young doctor has gained a fine reputation for performing difficult operations, enters the room and tells him his duty demands that he stay at home and attend to the helpless little ones under his charge. Meade pleads the need of surgeons in France, but the old doctor insists that his place is with deformed and injured children whose only hope of cure lies in the skill of the man they have learned to trust and to love. Convinced at last, Meade shows true courage by resigning his commission and remaining at home.

Sylvia cannot see the matter in the right light. Disappointed at Meade's supposed want of courage she turns to Richard Burton, and is married to him on the day he sails for Europe with his regiment. Meade conceals the hurt in his heart, and devotes himself to his duties at the hospital. During this time Betty Hoyt, who has always loved Burton, hides the wound in her breast in the same brave manner. Clearly defined, founded on a phase of the war that has practically never been used and alive with sympathetic interest, this explanatory section of the drama sets up a problem that will baffle most spectators.

Novel War Scenes.

The second step in the story is taken when Sylvia, now Mrs. Burton, starts aiding the families of the soldiers from the east side, and her automobile runs down a little girl. The child is an orphan, her father having been killed at the front and her mother dying from overwork. Sylvia has the sufferer taken to her own home, when she learns the orphan may never walk again. A search for the most skillful surgeon in New York brings the information that Doctor Meade is the only man left at home who is able to perform the operation. Sylvia hesitates for a moment, but does her duty and goes to him. He readily consents to take the child's case, and devotes all his skill to her recovery.

In the meantime, over in France, Richard Burton is doing his part in the war. In a novel and gripping series of incidents that get away from the familiar trench scenes, he is shown calmly facing almost certain death in the discharge of his duty. He is terribly wounded, and, when he recovers sufficiently to realize his condition, finds he has lost his right hand, and the left side of his face has been almost destroyed. Shrinking from himself and the thought of the feeling he may arouse in the woman he loves, he extracts a promise from one of his comrades that he will tell Sylvia the man she married has been killed.

The Return of Richard.

Back in New York fate is taking a further grip on Sylvia's life. She has watched Doctor Meade's care and tenderness toward the litle orphan, and has come to understand his splendid courage and fine nature. When the news is brought of Richard's death she turns to the man she has always really loved. Betty Hoyt accuses her of loving him, and she cannot deny the charge. With the injured child now well and playing near them, Doctor Meade, after waiting a proper length of time, asks Sylvia to become his wife, and she consents. On the night their engagement is to be announced Richard Burton returns. Wonderful surgery has restored his face to a near approach of its former condition and supplied him with a substitute for his hand. Impatient and eager to see his wife, he hurries to the house. The first person he meets is Betty. The warmth of her greeting inspires him with new hope that Sylvia will not shrink from him. Betty brings husband and wife together.

Between Love and Duty.

Overcome at first, Sylvia tries to do her duty. She conceals her repugnance at Richard's scarred face, and throws her arms about his neck. While he is being toasted as a hero by the guests, Sylvia and Doctor Meade face the situation, and it is agreed that Richard has the first claim. The physician goes to his home without betraying his second disappointment, and Sylvia prepares to take up her life as best she may. She finds Richard waiting for her in her room. He is beaming with joy and affection. As he takes his wife in his arms she can no longer hide her aversion for him. Quick to understand, he reproaches her bitterly and leaves the room. In the hall he meets Betty, and tells of what has happened. Her own joy shows itself in her face. She makes it so clear how gladly she will take Sylvia's place in his life that the sensible hero puts his arms about her and accepts his happiness without further delay. Sylvia, whose sole thought is to get to Meade, hurries to his home. He is seated in a big chair, the little orphan asleep in his arms. Sylvia explains that she tried to give herself to Richard, but her love for his rival was too strong. Burton has followed Sylvia. The explanations which ensue bring peace and contentment to the four persons whose lives have come so near to being wrecked.

Cecil B. DeMille Uses His Best Skill.

There is no denying the artistic and commercial value of such a story. Up to the minute in theme, dignified in tone, adroitly proportioned and correctly presenting a collection of human beings that interest by their sterling qualities and dramatic incidents of their lives, "For Better, for Worse" has received the benefit of Cecil B. DeMille's best skill. His direction has given it the tempo, distinction and perfect play of every feature required. The war scenes are short in point of time, but brilliant in originality and execution. A few brief flashes of a symbolic nature is the only departure from the drama treatment of the story.

The cast is in close harmony with the requirements of its several roles. Elliott Dexter as Dr. Edward Meade, Tom Forman as Richard Burton, Gloria Swanson as Sylvia Norcross, Sylvia Ashton as Sylvia's aunt, Raymond Hatton as Bud, Theodore Roberts as hospital head, Wanda Hawley as Betty Howe and the litle girl who plays the crippled orphan complete a list of characterizations that are gratifying from every point of view. "For Better, for Worse" is a distinct advance for the man who directed it, and is rich in matter that lies close to the heart of today.

WOMEN BACK "OUR TEDDY" CAMPAIGN

California Exhibitor Packs House by Getting Support of Inglewood's Exclusive Women's Club

THE hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that helped George S. Bell, proprietor of the Inglewood, Calif., pack his house for "Our Teddy." the authorized Roosevelt picture.

The strongest organization in Exhibitor Bell's town is the Inglewood Women's Club. Bell knows a thing or two about feminine psychology. He noticed that it's not the screen stars with the lady-like features and action that "go big" with his women patrons; it's the strong virile men like Douglas Fairbanks and Bill Hart that win their admiration.

Manager Bell was thinking along these lines when he booked "Our Teddy." What woman wouldn't be interested and thrilled, he reasoned, by a picture in which a two-fisted fighting man like Theodore Roosevelt is the hero? He resolved to make a try for the support of the exclusive Women's Club of Inglewood in his campaign for the Roosevelt drama. Here is Bell's own story of what happened:

Women Enlisted in Campaign.

"By enlisting the women in my campaign for 'Our Teddy,' I saw two distinct advantages for my house. I would win the good-will and friendship of the women of the town—something in the career of any theatre proprietor. I also saw an opportunity to establish prestige for my house by showing an excellent picture to the most prominent people in the city.

"First, I told the Women's Club all about 'Our Teddy.' I called in the assistance of my good friend, W. E. Knotts, manager of the First National Exchange in Los Angeles, and between us we convinced them that here was just the sort of a picture they should get behind—a thrilling drama portraying the career of a national hero. They agreed with us, and immediately went to work with a will.

"The Women's Club backed our advertising campaign in 'Our Teddy' to the limit. They persuaded all their friends and acquaintances to see the picture and canvassed the town on its behalf. The result was a clean-up. My house was packed and, what is more important, every patron was tickled to death with the picture. I gained the confidence of the people of Inglewood. When I advertise now that I have a fine picture at my theatre, I get the crowds. Their experience with 'Our Teddy' has convinced them that I know a good picture when I see one, and my judgment is respected."

A. Victor Smith Returns to Vitagraph from Overseas

UPON his recent return from France and his discharge from the A. E. F., Lieutenant Victor Smith has been appointed a member of the sales promotion department of the Vitagraph at 1600 Broadway, New York, and, if we do not miss our guess, he will inject into its efficiency the benefits of the experience and training of his business and military life.

Lieut. A. Victor Smith.

At the age of twenty-two, in 1906, "Vic" Smith, the youngest brother of A. E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, came from California to enter the motion picture industry in its infancy. He started with the building of the first studio, consisting of one small concrete structure in Flatbush, Brooklyn, then known as Greenville. His training in mercantile business made him a valuable, all-round man, and in 1912 he was made general studio manager, which position he held until America entered the war.

On May 10, 1917, almost immediately after war was declared, Lieutenant Smith enlisted and joined the Officers Training Camp at Plattsburg, New York. He left there with a Lieutenancy, to go to Camp Upton, where he remained for three months, and from there was sent to Fort Meyer, Va., depot of supplies, as Officer in Charge. In the fall of 1918 he went to Paris, France, where he was stationed as emergency man, in charge of motor transport work.

Western Players Return from Ausable Chasm.

The players who are now engaged in making "The Great Gamble," the new Western Photoplay serial, which will be the next episodic thriller on the Pathe program, have returned from a journey to upper New York State, where, under the guidance of Joseph A. Golden, they have been taking part in scenes in and around the Ausable Chasm.

A. Alperstein, treasurer and general manager of the organization, reports the successful taking of a number of stunt scenes.

Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison, the co-stars in the production, will be obliged to return to the Chasm within a few days. Among those who will accompany the stars on their return journey are Richard Neil, who is cast in the role of the villain; William Cavanaugh, Warren Cook and Billy Moran.

"The Great Gamble" will be released on the Pathe program starting August 3.

Fox Films on Ceiling for Wounded.

Wounded soldiers who will be brought home on the return trip of the U. S. Hospital Ship Mercy, will have their pain lightened by seeing William Fox photoplays. The picture will be thrown on the screen stretched across the ceiling of the ship's big hospital ward, so that the men in cots will not even have to raise themselves on their elbows to see the pictures.

Five Fox plays were lent to Major H. P. Moorehead and Paymaster Walter Wilson, who will have charge of the entertainment of the wounded men on their trip home.

Goldwyn Presents Trophy to Sailors.

Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, presented a twelve inch silver trophy to the third gun crew of the U. S. S. Nevada, the victors in the gun-mounting contest held on Victory Way. The winners of the contest loaded and fired their shell in the remarkable time of 8 2/5 seconds.

PLAYERS OPEN VICTORY LOAN CAMPAIGN

Actor Folks Stage Stirring Stunts Around Victory Ship in Pershing Square—Many Filmites Subscribe

MEMBERS of the Los Angeles film colony have buckled on their bond-selling harness and jumped into the ring with the same vigor and enthusiasm that characterized their efforts in campaigns that have gone before.

The Victory Ship, a miniature transport that has been erected in Pershing Square, is headquarters for the bond-selling work of the players.

The ship was dedicated on Monday night, April 21, with appropriate ceremonies, and christened by Col. Charles Hutchins, of the 160th Infantry, with a bottle of water from the River Rhine, which he brought a week ago.

Griffith Makes Opening Speech.

The opening speech was made by D. W. Griffith, chairman of the Victory Loan Committee, who addressed a forceful talk to the crowd that filled every available foot of the park—and the campaign was on.

The next evening Doug. Fairbanks was sales manager at the ship. Doug not only addressed the crowd from the quarter deck of the vessel, but jumped overboard into the sea of humanity that surrounded the ship and made his bond selling arguments at close range.

The Fairbanks propaganda film, "Knocking and Knockers," was shown. Ted Reed, scenario editor for the Fairbanks company, led the cheering, and even Bennie Zeidman and Bull Montana were pressed into service.

Wednesday night Anita Stewart was the magnet that drew an immense throng to the Square.

The film of the William S. Hart holdup of the war exhibit train in the San Fernando Valley was given its first exhibition on this night.

Studio Folks Buy Heavily.

Over $189,000 in bonds have been sold as a result of the first three nights at the Ship, and of this amount $128,000 worth were bought by the studio people themselves. D. W. Griffith's personal subscription was for $30,000, and the employes and players at the Griffith plant bought $57,000. Douglas Fairbanks bought $25,000, and the people at his studio $9,000. Anita Stewart studio employes subscribed for $2,000, and Miss Stewart $5,000.

The picture colony has been given a quota of $3,000,000. Of this sum the players have pledged to take $1,250,000 and to sell $1,750,000 to the public.

Two studios outside of those who have participated in the Ship meetings have already made their allotments. The National Film Corporation went over the top three days before the drive started with a completed quota of $30,000. William Parsons, the president of the company, making a personal buy of $25,000. The William S. Hart plant has bought $6,000 more than their allotment. Mr. Hart subscribed for $30,000 personally.

California Theatre Men Hold Frolic at Harlow's

A NUMBER of elaborate sketches and entertaining features were secured for the annual frolic of the Theatre Owners' Association of Southern California and their guests held at Harlow's Dome Cafe at Ocean Park on the evening of April 24. One of the special atractions was the appearance of forty members of the St. Francis Follies and a chorus of twenty beautiful girls.

A dancing contest, with a handsome silver cup as the prize, was another feature of the entertainment. The dome was decorated with American Beauty roses as the predominating flower. Exhibitors from San Francisco and San Diego attended in large numbers, as well as many theatre managers from smaller towns adjacent to Los Angeles.

Tables and boxes for studio groups were reserved early, and among the film producing companies represented were the Mary Pickford, Sessue Hayakawa, Billy Parsons, Mack Sennett, Metro, Vitagraph, Ince, Fox, Lasky and others. Charlie Murray, as usual, enacted the role of major domo.

J. A. Quinn in the East.

J. A. Quinn, manager of the Rialto Theatre, and representative of the Motion Picture Protective Association, recently organized by him, has gone to New York, and from there will visit other cities in the East in the interests of the movement for better pictures sponsored by his association. While in the East, Mr. Quinn will complete arrangements for financing the unit studio that has been projected by the association he represents. It is planned to erect the studio on the Newton ranch, near Sierra Vista, about 15 minutes ride from Los Angeles. Arthur Levitt and A. H. Catern, owners of the tract, are interested in the Quinn plan.

"The Clansman" at Mason.

"The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's photoplay from the Thomas Dixon novel of Civil War times, began an engagement at the Mason Opera House on April 21.

Two Stars Join Forces.

Another new venture in the production of photoplays has brought to light an interesting arrangement between Mitchell Lewis and Kathlyn Williams to join forces and appear as co-stars in special stories written to suit their particular talents and capabilities. The first story for the new company will be an original plot and theme by Monte Katterjohn, and will deal with the rugged life and atmosphere of the Northwest. Norval MacGregor will direct the picture.

"Hall Room Boys" Comedies Announced.

William Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation, is making arrangements to produce a series of one-reel comedies adapted from the cartoon, "The Hall Room Boys." Mr. Parsons secured the film rights for fifty-two comedies based on these cartoons during his recent visit to New York.

Hank Mann Company Organized.

Hank Mann, back from the fields of France, has organized a company of his own, and has begun the production of comedies at the Horsley Studio in Los Angeles. Vincent Bryan has been engaged to write the stories, and will assist Mann in directing the films. Discharged soldiers will be given preference as actors and studio employes in the Hank Mann Company. Scenes for the first comedy were shot on April 22. Madge Kirby plays opposite the comedian in the picture.

"The Westerner" Completed.

Major Stewart Edward White, author and producer, was host to a number of friends at a presentation of his newly finished production, "The Westerner," at the Brunton studio one evening last week. Among the guests were Mrs. White, Charles Chaplin, Rob Wagner, Benjamin Hampton, Edward Sloman and other film celebrities.

Moos Heads Efficiency Bureau.

Sigmund Moos, formerly special representative of Universal in New York, and recently connected with the Los Angeles Universal Exchange, has been placed at the head of the labor and efficiency bureau at Universal City. Mr. Moos will give his special attention to the welfare of the employes of the Universal studio, working along lines that have been adopted by other corporations employing a large number of workers.

Nehls to Remain in West.

R. R. Nehls, general manager of the American Film Company, who came to the Santa Barbara studios from the Chicago office, was a visitor in Los Angeles last week, and announced that he would probably remain in the West for several months longer.

Broadway Company Leases Superba.

The Broadway Theatre Company has leased the building at 520 South Broadway, which houses the Superba Theatre, and will make extensive improvements before opening the house under the new management. The leasing company is affiliated with the Universal Film Company.

Gunderson to Assist Nathan.

Guy Gunderson, formerly manager of the Fox, and later of the Pathe exchanges in Los Angeles, has been engaged to assist Al Nathan in exploiting his features in the Southwest.

Studio Shots

Olive Thomas, who left for New York last week, was given several little farewell parties before her departure. Jack Pickford, her husband, shared the honors.

George Siegman, formerly of the D. W. Griffith Company, has returned from war, and has been engaged to direct Priscilla Dean at Universal. George saw active service in the trenches, even to the extent of being gassed.

Helen Holmes, of the railroad thrillers, will support Eddie Polo in his forthcoming serial for Universal.

The all-star cast for "A Little Brother of the Rich," to be produced for Universal by Lynn Reynolds, includes Frank Mayo, J. Barney Sherry, Kathryn Adams and Lillian Leslie.

Lewis S. Stone has deserted the screen after making one picture, and has signed a contract to play leading roles in a newly organized stock company under the management of Thomas Wilkes at the Majestic Theatre.

James Clemens, former assistant to Al E. Christie, has been promoted to the office of stage manager for the Christie studios.

John Ince is directing the new Bert Lytell picture, "One - Thing - at - a - Time O'Day," at Metro.

Henry Walthall has finished "The Long Arm of Mannister" under the direction of Bertram Bracken at the National studio.

Verne Hardin Porter has resigned from the scenario staff of the Ince Company.

Katherine MacDonald has gone to New York to purchase new gowns for her second production, "The Bleeders."

Samuel Goldwyn left for New York this week to consult with the heads of the New York office on future Goldwyn productions.

Frederick Warde, stage and screen star, recited Henry Van Dyke's poem, "God of the Open Air," at the daybreak services on Eagle Rock, near Pasadena, on Easter Sunday.

Colleen Moore, who supported Charles Ray in "The Busher," is again Ray's leading lady in a new picture from an original story by Julian Josephson.

The Monroe Salisbury Company has returned from Keene Camp in the San Jacinto Mountains, where scenes were made for "The Open Road."

Ruth Roland spent a few days last week in the Santa Cruz Islands, just off the coast of southern California. The Roland players hunted wild goats for a diversion between scenes.

Carmen Phillips is supporting H. B. Warner in "The Pagan God."

Harry Houdini, the handcuff king, arrived in Los Angeles last Sunday night, and will begin work in an Arthur B. Reeve mystery story at the Lasky Studio about May 1. Mrs. Houdini accompanied the actor.

Lester Cuneo, formerly of the Harold Lockwood Company, is expected to come home from France in May.

Edwin Carewe has returned to Metro from a two weeks' stay in New York.

Clare Alexander has been engaged to play leading parts in L-Ko comedies.

Lila Lee made personal appearances in connection with the showing of her late picture, "Puppy Love," during its run at the Grauman Theatre.

Dwight Cleveland, formerly of the Vitagraph scenario force, has been put in charge of the reading department at Universal City.

Harry Carey has completed his tour of the theatres in the West, and is vacationing at his ranch near Newhall while waiting for his new story, "A Man of Peace," to be put in shape for filming.

Agnes Vernon, former Bluebird star, is playing opposite William Desmond in "Bare-Fisted Gallagher."

Jack Mulhall is leading man for Emmy Wehlen in "Family Trees," being produced by Herbert Blache at Metro.

Arthur Hoyt, formerly with Universal, is now at the Fox Studio in Hollywood.

Theodore Kosloff, the Russian dancer, whose vaudeville tour closes in June, and who is now filling an engagement at the Orpheum, is considering an offer to star in pictures in Los Angeles during the coming year.

Marguerite Clark will begin work about May 1 at the Morosco studio under the direction of Walter Edwards in the Clyde Fitch comedy, "Girls."

Josephine Hill, who played the role of "Cuddles" in "School Day," when Lila Lee deserted the stage for the screen, is now co-starring with Neal Burns in Universal comedies.

Fatty Arbuckle is negotiating for a large block of stock in the Vernon Ball Club.

Roger MacKinnon, Australian actor, recently with the Anzacs in Gallipoli, the Dardanelles and in Egypt, is supporting Madge Kennedy in her new Goldwyn picture.

Director Vin Moore has started on a new L-Ko comedy featuring Dot Farley.

Little Zoe Rae and Lena Baskette are supporting Mary MacLaren in "The Weaker Vessel."

Jack Cunningham, continuity writer at Brunton, is using up his first vacation in months by making motor trips over southern California. Last week he went to San Diego, and this week he is going to San Francisco.

The William S. Hart Company have gone to Sacramento to make scenes for a new picture.

Harry Pollard has again assumed the role of director of the Billy Parsons comedies.

George Beban is making a personal appearance tour in the East and Middle West.

Maxine Elliott Hicks plays the part of a little consumptive girl in Dorothy Phillips' new picture.

Maxwell Karger, Metro director-general, celebrated Easter Sunday by making his first trip in an aeroplane.

Tom Santschi has been engaged for a leading part in the Monte M. Katterjohn story soon to be filmed.

Rita Stanwood, wife of H. B. Warner, will appear with her husband in films produced at the Hampton Studio.

Frank E. Woods, superviser of Lasky productions, is building a home on a ranch near Hollywood.

Eileen Percy, Joseph Kilgour and Bull Montana are three important members of the cast of Bert Lytell's new picture "One-Thing-at-a-Time O'Day."

Margaret Loomis, one of the Ruth St Denis dancers, has been engaged to pla a leading part in a Lasky picture to b directed by George Melford.

Film Board Warns Showmen to Scan Their Contract

IN order to prevent any possible mis representations on the part of un scrupulous salesmen, the Minneapoli Film Board of Trade has addressed a letter to all exhibitors of the territor cautioning them to scrutinize their con tracts carefully before signing the dotte line. The letter follows:

To All Exhibitors:

The Minneapolis Film Board of Trad was established for the purpose of elimin ating numerous bad practices on the par of the exhibitor, as well as on the par of the exchange and salesmen.

It has been called to the attention o the board that salesmen throughout th territory are making certain promise and concessions verbally to the exhibitor in violation of their instructions fro their managers.

Therefore, we request and urge ever exhibitor when signing a contract with a salesman that any concessions or agree ments made must be made a part of th contract and written in the contract a the exchanges will not recognize any ver bal promises whether it be for advertising material, pictures or stars. If you ar made any promises be absolutely sure tha it is in your contract.

It is further called to our attentio that certain salesmen throughout the ter ritory are misrepresenting to the exhibit ors that they are going to have certain stars on their program, and in view o this fact the exhibitor is hoodwinked int signing a contract expecting these stars

If a salesman promises you certain stars please see that the names of the star appear in the contract, as this is an un fair advantage some of the salesmen ar using against other companies as well a to the detriment of the exhibitor.

Robertson-Cole to Release Big Pictures During Summer

IN pursuance of its policy to further in every way the interests of the exhibitor, Robertson-Cole has decided to issue some of its biggest productions during the summer months when the showman, handicapped by the weather, finds the sledding hard and unremunerative.

Instead of holding off until the fall when most big offerings are issued, Robertson-Cole will begin the release of the Beatriz Michelena features through Exhibitors Mutual during the month of May. This decision was reached last week when it was decided to introduce the Michelena series with "Just Squaw" and to begin releasing in May.

In addition to the Michelena series, Robertson-Cole promises exhibitors a series of unusual photoplay productions featuring one of the handsomest and best known women on the stage or screen. The first of this popular favorite offerings will be made during the summer.

Within the next fortnight Robertson-Cole expects to be in a position to announce the name of the star, the plans it has made for her, and the name of her initial release which is now nearing completion.

ILLINOIS FILM MEN FORM ASSOCIATION

New Body Appoints Three to Head of State Campaign Against Buck Censorship Bill

DURING the closing days of the week of Monday, April 14, the Motion Picture Association of Illinois was formed in a quiet way, and to avoid any charge of factionalism on the part of existing organizations in the trade here, Peter J. Schaefer, Illinois director of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America; Lewis F. Jacobson, general counsel, and Dr. Sam Atkinson, field secretary for Illinois, of the same organization, were appointed to take charge of the state campaign against the passage of the Buck censorship bill, which awaits the action of the House of Representatives at Springfield.

As the result of the deliberations of these men, a conference of exhibitors from all parts of the state was called for Monday afternoon, April 28, at the Hotel Morrison, and invitations to attend were sent out accordingly. The object of this conference was to formulate a plan of campaign of education throughout the state opposing all harmful legislation against the moving picture business and, more particularly, against the passage of the Buck censorship bill.

Conference Precedes Convention.

This conference was arranged as a preliminary meeting to the convention that was held the following day, Tuesday, April 29, at the same hotel, at 11 o'clock a. m. This convention was devoted especially to the formation of plans to reach the masses of the people of Illinois and acquaint them fully with the mal-influence of the Buck bill on their favorite amusement. The convention was attended by various representatives of the moving picture business, including exhibitors, film exchange managers and employes, moving picture operators and supply men.

To spread widecast the evil that would be wrought on moving picture amusement by the passage of the Buck bill and to awaken the people of Illinois to the attempted infringement of their rights by this bill, the convention arranged that slides, trailers, pamphlets, etc., and "four minute men" would be sent to every moving picture theatre in the state, so that voters in Illinois may notify their representatives in the legislature what action is expected from them when they vote on the Buck censorship bill.

Must Fight to Defeat Bill.

Dr. Atkinson, field secretary for Illinois, at the time of writing, expressed himself to the writer as being much encouraged by the outlook thus far; but he also realizes that the Buck bill is an administrative measure and that it will require tremendous efforts, backed by public opinion, to defeat it.

Every exhibitor in Illinois is besought to join his fellows in solid ranks to assist in the defeat of the Buck state censorship bill. In season and out of season he should acquaint his patrons with the true object of the bill, which is to deprive them of the right to think and judge for themselves in the matter of amusements and to bestow that right on the holder of a political position, who can hold it only by the consent of the people themselves.

Illinois always has been proudly American and no American of this type has yet learned to permit a creature of his favor to become the master of his thought and judgment. He who would lead must also serve. Keep Buck and his bill in place.

Ike Schlank of Capitol Resigns as Its President

IKE SCHLANK, president of the Capitol Film Company, Inc., with home offices in the Merchants Bank Building, Indianapolis, has resigned that position, but still retains his stock and interests in the organization. It is said that the president of a prominent bank in Indianapolis, who is financially interested in the company, will succeed Mr. Schlank.

C. Eddy Eckels, advertising manager of the Capitol, was in New York last week attending to the business interests of the concern. He is well known in newspaper circles of the Middle West, and when newspaper publishers recognized that moving pictures merited a department for themselves Mr. Eckels originated and conducted the first department of that kind on the Cleveland Plaindealer. He afterward started, in succession, similar departments for the Chicago Journal and the Chicago Post.

For the past two years Mr. Eckels has been associated with J. E. Willis, under the firm name of Willis & Eckels, with offices in the Consumers Building, this city, in the production of Filmcraft, which has been recognized by exhibitors as a valuable aid.

"Betrayal" to Open at Illinois May 5.

Opening May 5, at the Illinois Theatre, "The Betrayal," a historical photoplay directed by J. A. Barry, will begin an indefinite run. The business di-

Mr. Barry was Mr. Griffiths' personal representative for several years, and the production has been financed by the Lenox Producing Corporation, of New York, which has been engaged in its filming for a year and over, it is said. Its appearance at the Illinois will mark its first presentation on the screen before a public gathering.

The Illinois was the scene of the initial triumph of "The Birth of a Nation," in Chicago, and is considered the leading dramatic house in the city.

Major Funkhouser's Case Delayed.

The legal fight started by Major Funkhouser some time ago for reinstatement as second deputy superintendent of police and, incidentally, as head of the municipal censor board in Chicago, has been delayed for one week by Judge Torrison, to allow time for the attorneys of the Civil Service Commission, which ousted him, to prepare an argument to quash the writ of certiorari, which calls for the production of the records of the trial in court. If the writ is quashed that will probably end the matter; but, if sustained, the entire proceedings of the trial will be reviewed by the court.

Samuel S. Hutchinson Talks of America's Productions

SAMUEL S. HUTCHINSON, president of the American Film Company, Inc., when seen one day last week, was highly pleased over a letter which he had just received from a leading English exhibitor, who owns a large circuit of houses in the "tight little isle." The letter was written in jubilant vein over the great success that is being made by American's productions in his theatres, and facts and figures were quoted to sustain the writer's statements. The letter concluded with the following paragraph:

"It's easy to understand the popularity of 'Flying A' pictures. They're pictures with the spark of genius."

"A tribute like this is immensely gratifying, not only to me but to every member of our organization," said Mr. Hutchinson. "It means widespread recognition of the way in which every department of our forces is working in co-ordination to make the American's picture as nearly perfect as we can make them.

Aim to Creat Works of Art.

"Our aim is to create works of art; or, as our English friend puts it, 'pictures with the spark of genius'—pictures that will live, simply because they deserve to live. We have believed in composite genius—or special aptitude—in our studio management, in our stars, in direction and photography, in stories and casts, in lighting and settings, etc. It is the combination of all these which gives the 'spark of genius' to any picture.

"The picture theatre goers of America know pretty definitely what kind of pictures they like and just as definitely what kind they dislike. After years of close observation and study I can say, without boasting, that we are now able to gauge the public demand pretty accurately. This special knowledge enables us to avoid the type of picture that will be handicapped from the very outset by its nature. We concentrate on the class of pictures which the peopie are eager to see, because that policy means co-operation all around, among patrons, exhibitors, distributors and company."

Pictures Must Be Entertaining.

On being questioned as to the kind of stories that are most likely to please, Mr. Hutchinson replied: "As I see it, the big idea in pictures today is entertainment, with a capital E; but that entertainment must be of high grade, avoiding the slapstick stuff that once passed muster, and it must be clean and wholesome throughout. By that I don't mean sticky-sweet stories nor the kind that wave a moral in your face, like an old-fashioned fable or a Sunday-school book. I think our writers have given abundant proof that it is possible to turn out red-blooded dramas, crammed with entertainment, and clever comedy dramas that draw spontaneous, hearty laughter, without being guilty of any offense."

Here Mr. Hutchinson was asked if the policy just outlined was satisfactory from a business standpoint and he answered:

"Well, since the measure of success in this business is quality of picture plus quality of bookings, the answer would certainly seem to be 'Yes.' Not only are 'Flying A' productions being booked in many theatres, but they're being seen in some of the highest class houses in every city. In New York they can be found at the Rivoli, the Symphony and in the theatres on the Marcus Loew circuit; in Chicago at the Riviera and the Woodlawn; in St. Louis at the Pershing, Jefferson and other houses of the Consolidated Amusement Co.; in Minneapolis and St. Paul at the Reuben & Finkelstein houses; in Denver at the America and the Strand; in San Francisco at the Tivoli and the California, and so on.

Stars' Names Household Words.

"In all these and in many other important theatres throughout the country, the names of Mary Miles Minter, William Russell and Margarita Fischer are household words.

"Wasn't it Carlyle who defined genius as 'the transcendent capacity of taking pains, first of all'? There isn't a person in the American organization who isn't a post-graduate in the art of painstaking. From one release to the next, American pictures show how sincere is the collective aim for increasingly better pictures and the efficiency of the means adopted to secure that result."

Mr. Hutchinson then declared that the volume of business has fully doubled in bookings since this time last year, notwithstanding that the product has been reduced one-half in the same time. In other words, the cash receipts for one-half the number of pictures are more than double what they were last year, at this time.

"'Better pictures' will be the watchword for the year entered upon—high grade, clean pictures, with stories of heart interest, the accent being on 'clean,'" said Mr. Hutchinson, as the interview closed.

Not the Finger of Accusation, but the Hand of Mute Appeal.

"Red Lantern" Big Hit in Chicago.

Metro's latest feature production, "The Red Lantern," with Nazimova as the star, was given its first showing in Chicago at the Ziegfeld Theatre, Saturday afternoon, April 26, after a great gathering of enthusiasts, who were impressed that this is the greatest screen appearance yet made by that notable artiste. Manager Smith, of Metro's Chicago office, sent out invitations to attend, with the result that many admirers of the great actress were turned away. The Linick, Jacoby enterprises, which control the Ziegfeld, will present this great production for one week.

"The Unpardonable Sin" Breaks Records.

Louis Jones, manager of the Randolph Theatre, informed me that "The Unpardonable Sin," with Blanche Sweet, broke all records at that house during its first week's run. The receipts for that week exceeded the best week's showing of "Cannibals of the South Seas" by $2,000. The general admission is 25 cents, but a few choice seats are always filled at $1 per seat.

Woodlawn Theatre News Is Launched.

The Woodlawn Theatre News, published monthly by the Woodlawn Theatre Co., with E. J. Ryan as editor, made its initial appearance Saturday, April 26. On this date, last year, the Woodwn was opened, and to assist in re-inding the Woodlawn patrons of its econd birthday as well as to keep em in close touch with the policies the management, the attractive little eet has been launched.

The news matter will be confined to e Woodlawn and to its coming at-actions, and the advertisements will e restricted to the business houses in e Woodlawn district. The circula-on will be 15,000 for each monthly sue, and it will be confined to the omes in the Woodlawn territory.

Corporal Nyhagen Returns; Wants Old Customers Back

THE writer had a pleasant call last week from Corporal R. A. Nyhagen, a strapping, young sixpoter, straight as an arrow, with the miliar hardiness on his cheeks which dicated service in France, under the oud colors of Uncle Sam. Corporal yhagen served one year in France, the heavy tank service, in battalion 6, under Major Crutcher, which was cluded in brigade 306, under the comand of Colonel Ware.

As Corporal Nyhagen modestly exained, his battalion had only a little ush with the enemy, under the British, ear LeCatalet. His brigade was prearing to go up into the Argonne region hen the armistice was declared, much the disappointment of the boys, as at put an end to the chance for ory to which they eagerly looked rward.

Before joining the colors, Corporal yhagen had been engaged in theatre air repairs, in Chicago, at 14 East ckson Boulevard. He established the siness two years ago and had created successful trade when the call of ar claimed him. Now he will begin over again, trusting that his old stomers will renew their orders.

Corporal Nyhagen is giving preferce, in employing help, to mechanics o have seen active service in France, d doubtless this will, as it should, ad to still more liberal patronage om Chicago exhibitors generally. His vertisement will be found in this isle, in the picture review section.

AD WRITERS MUST KNOW PRODUCTIONS

Publicity Departments Are Not Furnished with Enough Data to Get Best Results, Says Raver

By Harry Raver.

APROPOS the controversy over the best advertising for motion picture products a good deal is said pro and con as to the intelligence, or lack of intelligence, displayed by advertising men in spending their appropriations. Something also might be said about the character of the advertising.

There is a tendency on the part of producers to leave advertising and kindred matters too completely in the hands of advertising departments which have not been furnished with adequate data and then to wonder why there is something wrong with the advertising. Thus, too much advertising is superficial—based on imperfect knowledge of the product advertised.

Many an advertising manager knows less about the pictures he is spending thousands to exploit than does the shipping clerk or his organization, simply because it is taken for granted that being an advertising manager he must necessarily know all about it. It is not enough that this gentleman know the names of author, producer, star and director. Yet from his product it would appear that often this is all he does know of the production. The rest is fluff.

Departments Should Be in Close Touch.

The advertising and publicity departments ought to be in close touch with and thoroughly informed on every stage of production in order that they may be able to ripen their publicity ideas before picking them.

Too often these important departments know practically nothing of the work they are called on to publicize until a short time before release date, when a mass of material is dumped on somebody's desk with the injunction to "get busy," whereupon the department engages in a wild scramble for words that will circus the picture instead of being able to push actual selling points—to use fact instead of fancy.

It seems to me that exercise of the same degree of personal contact and co-operation by the producer in connection with his advertising and publicity campaigns that he invariably accords less vital processes involved in the presentation of his wares would save him much money and bring other good results.

I am opposed to flambuoyant or misleading publicity material. The nearer one comes to telling the absolute truth about a picture, the more likely it is that the production will realize its full merits and this is all that can be legitimately asked.

When Advertising Is Not Good.

I do not believe that advertising in publications which merely carry motion picture departments can be considered good advertising. My experience is that exhibitors do not read these publications and that the money spent for such space may be regarded as an investment for good-will.

The best advertising is truthful advertising. That advertising medium which can be depended on to print truthful reviews is the best advertising medium.

It is with great satisfaction that I look forward to the sale and merchandising of my own new Four Star series of Augustus Thomas' plays. Through our distributors, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, we have provided ourselves with a picture merchandising and advertising specialist, a man who knows the exhibitor's problems from the ground up, and who is not only going to advertise the plays properly but also help the exhibitor sell them to a largely increased audience.

This is what I mean by advertising co-operation on the part of the producer and distributor—where they actually help the exhibitor sell the pictures he buys.

"Eileen, It's Hard to Tell You This, but Don't Believe Bill Russell: He Is 'Some Liar.'"
Well, anyhow, Eileen Percy, in the scene at the right, is going to fight it out with the star of the American feature, "Some Liar."

HOLD JOINT MEETING ON TRADE RULES

Exhibitors Agree to Regulations of Washington's Association of Exchanges Following Discussion

WASHINGTON CITY'S exchange managers are going to adhere to the trade rules recently adopted by their association. This decision follows the joint meeting held by them with a large delegation of exhibitors from Virginia. It is said that this meeting was something of a stormy session, although when it was over exchange managers and exhibitors alike went to a nearby bowling alley and proceeded to have a few friendly games.

There were a great many exhibitors in the Virginia territory who did not comprehend the meaning of these rules. They protested against their adoption until a joint meeting could be held. This was agreed to by the managers' association and the exhibitors were invited to a dinner at Harvey's. President Smeltzer, manager of the World Film Exchange, greeted the guests, stating that the meeting was to be nothing but a co-operative one, and he explained that these trade rules were aimed at the bad exhibitor and that the good exhibitor had nothing to fear from them.

Protest Against Prepayment Rule.

Harry Bernstein, representing the Wells interests, responded and asked that each rule be taken up by itself and given full discussion. The exhibitors agreed that the rule providing for the payment of transportation charges by them was fair, and there was no controversy over this rule, but a storm of protest came against the prepayment requirement involving the sending of films C. O. D. where no check had been sent to the exchange to cover the cost of the show.

The managers told their guests that the good exhibitors would have nothing to fear from this requirement, for the good exhibitor, the man who attends to his business in a businesslike way, will have his check in the exchange on time, and after long discussion it was declared that the regulation was a reasonable one.

Abolish Verbal Agreements.

It was agreed by both sides that verbal agreements should no longer be recognized. The exchangemen pointed out to the exhibitors that contracts always passed hands before service was started and that they should see to it that all promises and agreements are made a part of their contracts before signing them. It develops that many controversies have arisen as the result of verbal agreements being entered into, very often by the salesmen covering the territory, regarding which the managers are not always apprised and they are sometimes of a nature that is not sanctioned by the home office.

There has long been a grievance committee of managers and exhibitors in Washington and the Virginia exhibitors suggested that a committee be formed having one member from Virginia, one from Maryland and one from the District of Columbia, selected from among the exhibitors, and three exchange managers. Whenever North Carolina is involved, the president of the exchange managers' association is to communicate with the president of the North Carolina league and have him appoint an arbitrator. In case of a deadlock in the committee, the six members are to select a seventh man.

To Wipe Out Delays.

The exhibitors urged that everything possible be done to get their shows to them on time. This is covered by the rule on delays and the managers are going to try and wipe out the practice of holding and bicycling films. Where an adjustment is in question and cannot be settled between the manager and exhibitor the matter is to be left to the grievance committee.

The five per cent. war tax on motion picture films was explained to the exhibitors and agreed to.

Those Who Were Present.

Those present were Harry Bernstein, Richmond, Va.; J. L. Spry, Culpepper, Va.; C. F. Geoghagen, Chase City, Va.; J. C. Weiss, Emporia, Va.; M. M. Collins, Covington, Va.; Val Steele, Alexandria, Va.; L. A. DeHoff, Baltimore, and the following exhibitors of Washington: Harry M. Crandall and Joseph P. Morgan, of the Crandall Amusement Company; Lawrence A. Beatus, manager of Loew's Palace, and Fred Klein, manager of Loew's Columbia. The exchange managers present were Robert Smeltzer, World Film; Oscar A. Morgan, Famous Players-Lasky; George F. Lenihan, Goldwyn; R. E. Wilson, Vitagraph; Herbert C. Wales, Universal; Sidney B. Lust, Super Films Attraction, Inc.; Sidney E. Kent, Triangle; E. R. Champion Pathe, Inc.; Rudolph Berger, W. W Hodkinson Corporation; Louis H. Bell American; G G. Coleman and W. A White, Capitol Film Company; Abe Dresner, Exhibitors' Co-operative Film Exchange; B. P. Rogers, Fox Film; D F. O'Donnell, United Picture Theatres B. C. Cunningham, of the First National and Mr. Fuller, of Metro. Mr. Marks, of Metro; Mr. Hody, of Universal, New York; Lester Rosenthal, of Famous Players, and M. Levy, of Mutual, were also among those present. LINZ.

William S. Hart Studio Oversubscribes V Loan

THE William S. Hart studio at Hollywood oversubscribed its quota for the Victory Loan by 37 per cent. the first day of the drive and is now flying an honor flag. The studio's quota was $25,000 and Mr. Hart personally subscribed $30,000.

The pre-Victory Loan campaign in Los Angeles and its environs started off with a hold-up reminiscent of the days when road agents waylaid travelers along the Sunset Trail.

Hart stopped the special Victory Loan train at San Fernando and the engineer and fireman came down and grinned into the muzzle of his six-shooter. Twenty horses came to their haunches on the edge of the big crowd and things looked bad for the passengers until a whippet tank, which the train carried along was quickly unloaded and started after Bill and his desperate crew. The outlaws were compelled to surrender and then Bill rode the tank while its pilot made it buck. Hart made a typically good Loan speech.

The big Vitagraph star radiates vitality and energy in all his pictures and this is true of his latest, "Beating the Odds."

Lieut. Robert T. Kane.

Robert T. Kane, Producer, Back from France a Hero

BOB KANE—First Lieutenant Robert T. Kane, 91st (Wild West) Division, A. E. F.—is back from France and ready to take up his motion picture work where the war stopped it. He returned unheralded, the modest little ribbon bar of the Belgian Croix de Guerre on his breast, a citation entitling him to the American Distinguished Cross in his pocket and with three gold service chevrons and a wound stripe on the cuffs of his blouse.

When the war came to America, Bob Kane was among the most successful managing producers in the motion picture field. He was the organizer of and a director and officer in Paralta Plays, Inc., Paralta Studios, Inc., Paralta Productions, Inc., Selexart Pictures, Inc., Bessie Barriscale Feature Corporation, Kerrigan Feature Corporation, Walthall Pictures Corporation and Glaum Productions, Inc.

After the armistice was signed, Kane says he spent considerable time with European film men in Paris, London and Rome. These conferences impressed him particularly, he said, with the possibilities of the educational and industrial film in the European field, where he feels sure there will be a big demand following the conclusion of peace. He thinks the screen will play a vital part in the tremendous work of reconstruction yet to be begun.

Mr. Kane is reticent regarding his plans for the future. He said, however, that he would have an important announcement to make after a conference with his associates in New York, Washington and on the Pacific Coast.

Loan Flyers Use DeMille's Field.

For the big Flying Circus given in the interest of the Victory Loan in Los Angeles, Cecil B. DeMille contributed the use of his private flying field in Hollywood.

Asher To Be Mack Sennett's Personal Representative

E. M. ASHER, who has had charge of the film exchange branch of the business of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit since the formation of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., and who has also directed the destinies of the T. & D. Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco, for several months, has given up his work with that concern, to become personal representative of Mack Sennett. He will assume his new duties early in May and expects to divide his attention in the future between Los Angeles and New York.

The offer of this important post came about two months ago, when Sennett disposed of the United States rights to "Yankee Doodle in Berlin" to Sol L. Lesser, and was closed recently when Sennett made a trip to San Francisco for the purpose. No successor has been named to Mr. Asher by the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, but it is planned to have one man devote his entire attention to the film exchange end of the business and another to manage the Tivoli Theatre.

E. M. Asher secured his early training in the film business with Sol L. Lesser at the old stand of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, an Eddy street, and soon became very popular among the trade. During Exposition Year he won laurels by promoting several unusual events, the most spectacular of which was Metro Day at the fair, when Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow appeared in person. His success with the First National program and with the management of the Tivoli Theatre brought him into national prominence, resulting in the splendid advancement to first assistant to Mack Sennett, peer of funmakers.

Webster and Selznick Get Big Offices with Select

FOLLOWING the appointment of Sam E. Morris as general manager and Charles R. Rogers as director of sales of Select Pictures Corporation, announcement is now made of the men who have been chosen to succeed these two former branch executives in charge of Select's posts in the field.

The Cleveland branch, which was the headquarters of Mr. Morris, who also had jurisdiction over Select's Detroit exchange, has been placed in the hands of Sherman S. Webster, who was formerly Select's branch manager at Buffalo.

David J. Selznick has been given the position of New England manager, with headquarters at Boston, which has been made vacant by the promotion of Charles R. Rogers to be director of sales for Select. Mr. Selznick's appointment is also a promotion within the Select organization, as he has served in the Boston branch, first as salesman and then as assistant branch manager, and has earned an enviable reputation for his efficient and businesslike administration.

In assuming charge of the New England office, David J. Selznick announced that he had appointed Morris Safier to be sales manager in the New England territory, Mr. Safier being promoted from the position of salesman in the Boston branch.

W. W. Lewis Ill of Appendicitis.

W. W. Lewis, who for the last three years has been selling representative of the Nicholas Power Company, Inc., was suddenly stricken with appendicitis April 26, and removed to the New York Hospital where he was operated on.

Walter Stern Signs Important Contracts

WALTER L. STERN, for several years a familiar figure on Film Row, San Francisco, Cal., through his connection with the equipment house of G. A. Metcalf, has just signed two of the most important contracts of his young life. Without taking his many friends into his confidence he recently journey to Salt Lake City, where he was married to Miss Nettie Woolf, whom he met while stationed there in the service of Uncle Sam.

The honeymoon includes a trip to New ork, where Mr. Stern will confer with P. T. Edwards, manager of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation. Following a short stay there the couple will go to Chicago to make their home. Mr. Ster nhaving signed a contract to manage the branch of this equipment house maintained there. This contract is for a period of two years and is to be in force after May 5. This young salesman has made a great success in his chosen line of work in the San Francisco field.

Mrs. Irene Castle, Famous Dancer, to Wed Ithaca Man

MRS. IRENE CASTLE, internationally known dancer who recently signed a contract with Famous Players-Lasky to appear in its production of "The Firing Line," is to wed again. The fact that Mrs. Castle, widow of Vernon Castle, who lost his life in the aviation service in Texas, was to marry again was verified Thursday, May 1.

Mrs. Castle is to become the bride of Robert E. Treman, of Ithaca, N. Y. Mr. Treman, until recently a captain in the air service, is at present the head of a hardware firm in Ithaca.

INDUSTRY EXPANDING IN NORTHWEST

Duluth to Have $500,000 Theatre—Many Reports on Proposed Building Show Unprecedented Activity

LOOK BROTHERS, of Duluth, have announced plans for the erection of a new moving picture theatre to cost $500,000 on the site at present occupied by the St. Louis Hotel in Duluth.

This announcement is significant of progressive growth of the moving picture industry in the Northwest, coming as it does in the wake of a score of others telling of proposed building projects, including the plans of the Hamm-Finkelstein & Reuben interests for the erection of two colossal theatres this year, one in Minneapolis and the other in St. Paul.

With the construction of the three theatres accomplished, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, the largest cities in Minnesota, will harbor moving picture houses that will be without equal anywhere else in the Middle West.

Steel Corporation to Move Town.

W. J. Rezac, a prominent Minnesota exhibitor, has announced that he intends to build a modern theatre at Alice, Minn., as a result of the plans now under way to move the city of Hibbing, Minn., where he is now operating a moving picture house. The United States Steel Corporation has located ore under the city of Hibbing, and has purchased the entire town site. As a result, Hibbing will move as a whole to Alice, which is located just outside of the city limits of Hibbing.

In the Dakotas many new theatres are under construction, and others closed during the war have reopened for business.

Fred Helmers has reopened the Orpheum Theatre at Courtnay, N. D., closed since last April.

The picture house at Pingree, N. D., which was closed more than a year ago, will soon resume operations.

Bellfield is another North Dakota town which has been without movies for a year. The picture house there has reopened, and the manager reports good business. The public, he says, is hungry for amusement.

The Lyceum Theatre at Minot, N. D., H. Grimmer, manager, reopened its doors to the public with the showing of "The Heart of Humanity," and played to big business.

Charles Sawyer is building a new 400-seat picture theatre at Sioux Falls, S. D. It will be named the Liberty, and will open May 1.

Expansion Throughout Northwest.

A. W. Dibble, proprietor of the Rex Theatre at Hutchinson, Minn., following his purchase of the Idle Hour Theatre in that city from Jack Murnan, announced plans to build an addition to the Idle Hour.

Waldo B. Nielson has purchased a site at Fosston, Minn., on which he will commence the construction of a moving picture theatre within a few weeks.

The work of remodeling H. B. Smoots' Milo Theatre at Little Falls, Minn., is well under way. The seating capacity will be increased from 400 to 550, and many other improvements will be made. June 15 is the date set for the opening of the new Milo. Mr. Smoots is also the proprietor of the Victory Theatre at Little Falls.

Frank Koppelberger has already begun work on a new 1,300-seat moving picture theatre at LaCrosse, Wis.

Montana Also Shows Life.

New theatre projects are also springing up in the state of Montana, Miles City, Bozeman, Roundup and Wolf Point making some of the most recent announcements.

Owners of the Glazier Theatre at Wolf Point will build a new $30,000 hous this summer.

Otto Schmidt, E. A. Kelnachnidt an other business men are behind plans fo the construction of a new picture the atre at Bozeman to cost $100,000.

Thomas and Miholovich have begu the construction of a two-story pictur house at Roundup.

The old Liberty Theatre at Miles Cit will be torn down and replaced by new modern picture house.

A. H. Brown has announced plans fo the construction of a $40,000 theatre a Mobridge, S. D. The new structur will be of brick, two stories high, an will have a frontage of 50 feet and depth of 140 feet.

HOBART HENLEY STARTS OWN COMPANY

Newly Incorporated Producer Will Begin on Series of Features for Independent Sales

HOBART HENLEY has formed the Hobart Henley Productions, Inc., and has been signed by Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation. He will produce a series of special features for release through the distributing organizations, of which Mr. Hall is promoter and chief executive. The signing of Mr. Henley for a series of productions marks the third producing organization to be brought into being within the past three weeks by the interest which Frank G. Hall represents, the other two being the Charles Miller Productions, Inc., and the Gerald Bacon Company.

Hobart Henley.

Henley Has Amply Proved Ability.

It is Mr. Hall's objective to have associated with him only those producers and directors of motion pictures who have demonstrated that they are capable of giving the best in photodramatic plays. In signing Mr. Henley, Mr. Hall has taken into consideration his work with some of the leading stars of the screen, including Pauline Frederick and Mae Marsh whom Mr. Henley directed in some of their biggest successes. With Mae Marsh Mr. Henley directed "The Glorious Adventure," "All Women," "Money Mad" and "The Face in th Dark." With Pauline Frederick, he di rected "One Week of Life," "The Peac of Roaring River" and more recentl "The Woman on the Index." He di rected Frank McIntyre in Goldwyn' production of "Too Fat to Fight," an this, too, was pronounced a masterpiec in the art of direction.

Mr. Henley is probably better know to the motion picture public because o his creation of the "Parentage," one o the most successful independent attrac tions of the past three years. In thi work Mr. Henley demonstrated that h is not merely an average director fol lowing along in path as laid by other but that he is creative—possessing th ability to take a human interest subjec and make a big, heart interest drama o it. He is one of the screen's younges directors and because of his varied ex perience in theatricals, having worke before the camera himself, Mr. Hall ha every confidence in Mr. Henley's abil ity to produce pictures with big value for all concerned.

Begins Production at Once.

The first production to be made b the Hobart Henley Productions, Inc will be begun in about three weeks During the intervening time, Mr. Hen ley will spend his time going over likel scripts and selecting his cast of play ers as soon as he decides upon his firs story. Phil Rosen, one of the best know cameramen on the Coast, has been en gaged by Mr. Henley to assist him i this branch of the production work. Mr Henley will have offices at 130 Wes Forty-sixth street and will probably us the Bacon-Backer studio.

Burke Returns from Tour.

James L. Burke, special representativ for Frank G. Hall's picture interest returned to the New York offices o Independent Sales Corporation this wee after a two weeks' tour of the Film Clearing House exchanges covering th territory east of Denver. On this trip Mr. Burke made special inquiries from representative exhibitors in this terri tory concerning the prospective an actual bookings on the Rothapfel Uni Program. He reports that all are await ing the program with keen expectation Mr. Burke reports, also, that specia features are in big demand and tha open booking is gradually forging ahea of the program.

FOUR NEW THEATRES BOOM NEW ENGLAND

Springfield's Two and One Each for Stamford and Ansonia to Cost Aggregate of $1,225,000

FOUR new moving picture theatres in New England, and these the forerunners of a new boom, will be erected in the near future, at an aggregate cost of $1,225,000. Two of the houses will be in Springfield, Mass., one in Ansonia and one in Stamford, Connecticut.

Fox House to Cost Nearly $700,000.

The largest and most elaborate of the four is the new William Fox theatre in Springfield. Plans are nearing completion for a house to seat 3,500, accommodating 1,950 on the orchestra floor and the remainder in the balcony. The total cost of the building will be from $650,000 to $700,000. An organ, costing $25,000 will be one of the features, and will be supplemented by an orchestra of 30 pieces.

A mammoth marquise will extend across the entire front of the building which will be illuminated at night by brilliantly changing lights. A new style electric sign will be operated by independent motors and will throw a variety of light from high-powered lamps advertising the feature picture. The cost of the illumination of the front of the theatre is approximated at $45,000.

The Adams style will prevail in the interior of the house. The ceiling will be vaulted and decorated with stalactite chandeliers of opalescent glass. The ventilating system will change the atmosphere of the auditorium every two minutes. The Japanese suite in the Fox Audubon, New York, will be duplicated in the Springfield theatre. John Zanft is directing the work in the absence of Mr. Fox.

New Theatre on Gilmore Property.

The other Springfield house will be built on the site of the Gilmore theatre block on Main street by a syndicate under the management of Abraham Goodside of Portland, Me. The theatre will seat 2,500 and will cost $200,000. Plans by G. Henri Desmond of Boston call for an artistic structure will every modern convenience. A number of innovations are promised for the interior of the theatre.

Houses for Stamford and Ansonia.

The Sam Weiss interests will shortly begin work on a modern playhouse in which will seat over 2,000, will cost Stamford, Connecticut. The house, which will seat over 2,000 will cost $125,000. A. Geronimo, manager of the Alhambra, will take the direction of the new theatre. All the features of a modern photoplay palace are promised for the new structure.

Ansonia, Connecticut, will have an ultra-modern moving picture theatre, according to A. Hoffman, owner of the Pastime, who will erect a new house at a cost of $200,000. The seating capacity of the new Hoffman theatre will be 2,000, and every known convenience for the enjoyment and comfort of the patrons will be installed.

$60,000 Picture House Is Part of Big Buffalo Boom

BUFFALO will soon have a new South Side motion picture house. Plans were recently issued to James S. Savage for a modern fireproof building, to be erected at a cost of $60,000.

The new structure will go up at 26 and 28 Triangle street. The interior decoration and equipment of the theatre will bring the total cost of the building to over $100,000.

Buffalo is in the throes of a general building boom, according to the list of plans filed in a single week for alterations and new constructions. The total cost brings the figures for the week close up to $200,000.

Dee Robinson Will Build Modern Theatre in Peoria

NOT content with being interested already in four places of amusement in Peoria, Ill., Dee Robinson of that city has leased for 99 years a large block of property at Main and Madison, and will begin forthwith the erection of a big, modern playhouse to seat 2,000.

Peoria boasts already that the new Robinson house will not be excelled by any in the country, not failing to include Chicago and New York in the list of places which will be outdone.

The new theatre will be built as a combination house, although moving pictures will be of primary importance. By the lease Mr. Robinson becomes the largest property holder on Main street, now controlling 270 feet frontage.

A Chicago theatrical architect is at work now with Fred Klein, Peoria's premier plan maker, drawing up the design of the new theatre. It will be equipped in most luxurious and artistic fashion, with a pipe organ, chimes, beautiful decorations, furnished smoking rooms and parlors, and every modern convenience.

How Much Should I Invest in the Victory Loan?

HOW much should I invest in the Victory Liberty Loan?" is a question not infrequently asked. Some persons seem to have the notion that the Government is asking every one to put all his available funds into the Loan.

This is not true. The Government desires nothing of the kind. It would be bad business, both for the country and for the individual.

The Notes of the Victory Liberty Loan are the soundest security in the world, gold obligations of the soundest nation in the world, and they yield a substantial rate of interest.

But it is also true that there are other investments which are sound and which yield a higher rate of interest. The Government does not desire the individual to refrain from placing part of his money in such investments. The Government is not selfish.

It would be bad business for the country if the individual investor was restrained from placing part of his money in business securities. These securities would decline for lack of a sustaining market. Lack of confidence would follow and new enterprises, essential to national prosperity could not be financed.

What the Government does ask is co-operation. It asks that the individual —every individual—place a just portion of his available funds in the Victory Loan.

Thus will the needs of the Government be financed, business can go ahead, and prosperity will be advanced.

Pearl White Aids Victory Loan.

Cheered by 1,200 officers and men of the U. S. S. Mississippi and an equal number of women guests, Pearl White, the Pathe serial star, stood in the balcony of the Hotel Commodore, New York, on Friday night, April 25, and pledged her best efforts to the cause of the Victory Loan.

It was Miss White's first public appearance as sponsor for the battleship Mississippi during the present loan drive and her enthusiasm gave impetus to the efforts of the bluejackets in their sale of bonds. Miss White was the guest of honor at the annual ball given by the crew of the Mississippi to their officers at the Commodore.

SHERRY ORGANIZES NEW SALES FORCE

Also Forms Alliance with Film Clearing House, Which Will Handle Distribution of Sherry Service

WILLIAM L. SHERRY, head of the Sherry Service, has decided to again cover the United States with his own salesmen. In addition he has just formed an alliance with the Film Clearing House, Inc., which will handle the physical distribution of all pictures released through the Sherry Service, including the De Luxe Pictures, Inc., productions starring Doris Kenyon, Frank A. Keeny, productions starring Catherine Calvert and the Edgar Lewis and Gilbert A. Anderson features.

Before the ink was dry on the contract signed by Mr. Sherry and Frank C. Hall, president of the Film Clearing House, Inc., Mr. Sherry had dispatched half a dozen members of the N. Y. office to every part of the U. S. with instructions to engage the best salesmen and managers in every principal city.

From this date the completely reorganized Sherry sales force will cover all territory under the personal direction of Mr. Sherry, who intends to devote close attention to the needs of the exhibitor and who invites personal correspondence with regard to the same.

"Under the new plan," said Mr. Sherry, in discussing the reorganization," I hope to get away from the atmosphere of remoteness that prevents close cooperation between the head office of the picture play organization and the exhibitor —an atmosphere that hampers both and may easily be dispelled if a little more attention is paid to the human elements involved.

"To insure closer intimacy with exhibitors I am urging them to keep in personal touch with me by letter. If there is reason for criticism of any department of my organization I want to find it out and the best source of information I know of is the exhibitor whose interest that organization is designed to serve.

"I propose to reply in person to all such communications and in this way to establish an understanding based on community of interest, which will benefit all concerned.

"If my salesmen do not call on the exhibitor I want to know that. It is difficult to remedy conditions that are not known to exist but easy enough when the condition is once brought to my attention. My policy is to cultivate intimacy with the other fellow's point of view, and correspondents will find me in a receptive as well as communicative mood."

The productions released exclusively by the Sherry Service include twelve features, five of them new releases which have not until now been offered for booking. These latter include the De Luxe Pictures production "Twilight," starring Doris Kenyon; the Frank A. Keeney production, "Marriage For Convenience," by E. Lloyd Sheldon, featuring Catherine Calvert; "Love and the Law," an Edgar Lewis production of the highest .merit; "Calibre 38," another Lewis product, and the five-part western drama "The Son-Of-A-Gun," from the studios of the Golden West Producing Company, featuring G. M. Anderson.

GARSON PICTURE OPENS IN NEW YORK

"Unpardonable Sin" Expected to Run All Summer at Broadway Theatre, Renovated for the Occasion

FRIDAY, May 2, marks the opening of Harry Garson's much heralded production, "The Unpardonable Sin," starring Blanche Sweet, at the Broadway Theatre, New York, for an indefinite engagement. This also marks the opening of the Broadway under new management.

The theatre has been renovated, recarpeted, decorated and painted both inside and out for this occasion, and those who are familiar with this playhouse will scarcely recognize it as the famous old Broadway Theatre.

"The Unpardonable Sin" comes to New York with the solid endorsement of the public in many other cities. At the time the picture was ready for a New York showing no theatre was available, so Harry Garson gave the preliminary showing at his own theatre, the Broadway Strand, in Detroit. The public acclaimed the production as one of the few big things of the screen, and the result was the breaking of all box office records for any opening anywhere by either a legitimate production or moving picture. All the more remarkable was the fact that state rights buyers flocked to Detroit, with the result that nearly all territorial rights were disposed of in a short time.

Broke Records in California.

The next opening to follow was the California Theatre in San Francisco, where again all records for that theatre were broken, to be followed immediately at the Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles with like results. What is most remarkable is that the picture played to nearly $16,000 in that city during Holy Week.

Breaks Record in Chicago.

The next opening was at the Randolph Theatre in Chicago, when the house record was again broken—and you can't blame the Garson people for sitting back with a confident smile in regard to New York, where the picture is expected to run all summer.

Nearly all territory has been disposed of, the last sales reported being Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah and Nebraska by the Merit Film Company of Denver; Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas by E. H. Hulsey, of the First National Exhibitors' Exchange, Dallas; Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Virginia and North and South Carolina by Charles F. Schwerin, of Atlanta.

Blackton Buys A Porter Novel.

J. Stuart Blackton has purchased the world motion picture rights to "Dawn" from the pen of Eleanor H. Porter, author of "Pollyanna" and a score of other well-known novels.

"Dawn" is the story of a blind boy whose courage leads him through the gulf of despair into a final victory gained by dedicating his life to the service of blinded soldiers.

SENNETT'S WATER NYMPHS ON TOUR

Bathing Beauties Make Sad Sea Waves Sadder by Hitting the Trail with "Yankee Doodle in Berlin"

By Giebler

OF course the scheme of sending the Sennett Bathing Girls on tour with the "Yankee Doodle in Berlin" lm as doped out by Mack Sennett and ol Lesser, is a good scheme. Personal ppearance of the players is always ood. If the public likes to see one of s favorites in the flesh, what will the ublic say when it sees six of them at nce, and in bathing suits?

The question has its other side, how-ver, its humanitarian side.

What of the girls?

The Sennett Bathing Beauties have een working in beach and bathing tuff until they are almost as much mer-naids as mere maids.

Will it not be cruelty to nymphs to ake these girls away from the sad sea aves? I spoke to Sol and Mack about .

bsence Will Make Sea Waves Sadder.

"Look here," I said, "how are you go-ng to get by with this stuff? These irls are pretty nigh amphibious, and ou propose to make dryland troupers of hem, jump them from crag to crag of he show circuits of the arid east, west, orth, south and middle west. You'll ave to carry a tank of water as you ould for trained seals."

"Don't worry," said Mack. "There's ots of water in the country. The pro-ibitionists say there's enough aqua ura to quench the thirst of the entire opulation, and leave enough for water-alls and things like that."

"There's a big lake at Chicago," said ol, "and look at the Mississippi River."

One Look at Mississippi Enough.

"I have looked at the Mississippi iver," I replied. "Lots of folks have ooked at it. People with bathing in heir minds go down and look at it, then turn right around and make a dash for the kitchen sink. The Mississippi River won't do, the girls would stick in the mud the first time they tried to make a dive. Lake Erie may be all right, but the Mississippi won't do!"

Mack and Sol's idea went over big here in Los Angeles. The people simply ate it up.

"Yankee Doodle in Berlin," with Bothwell Browne vamping the kaiser, and the Crown Prince and Hindenburg gave 'em the laughs, and the bathing girl stuff gave 'em the looks.

Eager Eyes Fill First Rows.

A lot of people who wouldn't think of sitting any closer to the screen than the eighteenth row any other time, followed the usher right down front and stayed there.

There is a multiplicity of situations in the film that will be labeled funny by the most confirmed grouch, and about half a dozen that are positively riproarious.

Charlie Murray, Cock-eyed Ben Turpin, Phillis Haver, Ford Sterling, Mal St. Clair, and the whole bunch of Sennett laugh-mongers hit the bulls eye with a regularity that is almost monotonous. Laughs overlapped. Chuckles, giggles and chortles got mixed up and were born as snorts of laughter.

Girls' Appearance a Dessert.

The girl part of the show came last, as a sort of dessert, and the girls were beautiful, clever and appealing. The picture of three of them is printed herewith—the other three are just as classy and just as "sassy," but they had to be left off for this reason: it is only fitting that the pictures of Mack Sennett and Sol Lesser, the parents of the new idea, should also adorn this story, and it would not do to have too much beauty all on one page—it would look too good to be true.

There are good advertising possibilities to the combination. I can see exhibitors all over the country getting out the paint pot and making banners, something like this:

"Yankee Doodle in Berlin, and Six Sennett Sand Witches. See them here today." "Not Mermaids, But Mere Maids." "Sennett Beauties in Bathing Suits That Never Saw the Sea."

Mack Sennett.

Hicks Succeeds Cubberly at Famous Players-Lasky

JOHN W. HICKS, JR., manager of the Minneapolis Goldwyn exchange for the last nine months, has been selected succesor of J. F. Cubberly as manager of the Minneapolis branch of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Cubberly has taken over the management of the Minneapolis First National Exchange following the resignation of E. R. Pearson.

Mr. Hicks started his moving picture career as an exhibitor at Sedalia, Mo., where he operated two theatres. He drifted into the distributing end of the business. He was for a time associated with A. D. Flintom as office manager in St. Louis. Later he was with the General Film Company in Omaha, Kansas City and Oklahoma City, and with Famous Players in Omaha.

L. E. Davis, who has been acting as special representative for Goldwyn's home office since leaving the Government bureau of films two months ago, is Mr. Hicks' successor as Goldwyn manager in Minneapolis. Mr. Davis was with Mutual before entering government service.

The Moving Picture World carries a message to exhibitors in small towns by the hundred where salesmen seldom, if ever, visit in their travels. It is to benefit this great prosperous exhibitor element that the World is compiled—as much to help the little fellow as to help the "first run" man in the larger cities.

Metro Scenario Department to Be Given More Room

SINCE his arrival in New York from California, where he went to see a projection of Nazimova's new super-feature, "The Red Lantern," and consult with other Metro officials on special plans of exploitation and distribution of this spectacular production, Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, has been very busy laying out final plans for the enlargement of the new Hollywood studio in accordance with notes he made on his visit.

"The scenario department," said Rowland, "will be the first thing to receive attention. It must be given more room to meet the requirements of the plans which we have laid out for our new production policy."

New Additions to Force.

As soon as the quarters of this department have been altered according to the sketches sent to Maxwell Karger, director general of Metro, there will be several new additions to the already efficient force. Experienced motion picture critics, who have gained a varied experience in reviewing the silent drama from its babyhood to its present stage of development, will be added to this staff.

Pleasant surroundings and plenty of light, says Mr. Rowland, are essential to the reader or writer for the screen, as well as in any other artistic endeavor, and it is Metro's intention to tear down one of the small new structures three-story concrete building providing spacious individual offices for each of the scenario staff.

Metro now has in its literary department a group of well-known screen writers including June Mathis, Luther A. Reed, A. S. Le Vino, A. G. Kenyon, and George D. Baker. The last mentioned, however, is also one of the biggest and most skillful directors the screen has ever known, but he still offers his technical knowledge of the photodrama to the adaptation of screen vehicles for Metro stars. He is a tireless worker on long hours.

D. L. Faralla Is Appointed Controller for Selznick

ANOTHER promotion in keeping with President Lewis J. Selznick's statement at the Select convention last week, that in the future all advancements will be made from the ranks, is the announcement that Dario L. Faralla, Deputy Controller of Select Pictures Corporation, has been appointed Controller of the new Selznick Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Faralla is a graduate of the Royal Technical Institute in Rome and holds the degree of European C. P. A. After coming to American he was made head accountant and manager of the Tocci Bank. Later he was with the Pathe Exchanges as auditor, and from that office he went to the Unity Sales as head auditor.

Graduate of Italian Institute.

Mr. Faralla first joined Mr. Selznick in February of 1917, remaining in his employ until the time of the organization of Select Pictures Corporation, at which time he was appointed to the post of deputy controller of Select in association with Controller J. A. Derham.

Then came the organization of Selznick Pictures Corporation, and a few months later the acquisition by Mr. Selznick of 100 per cent. of the stock of Select Pictures.

In the future Mr. Faralla's duties will be confined to the finances and accounts of Selznick Pictures, while Mr. Derham remains in the position of Controller for Select.

Troy Will Have Another Photoplay Theatre Soon

ACCORDING to present indications, Troy, N. Y., is to have another big moving picture house. A deal was consummated recently for the sale of the Odd Fellows' property on River street near Fulton, and although no definite announcements have been made, it is understood that the property will be the site of a new motion picture theatre.

Truman C. Ives, of the Ives Realty Company, through whose concern the sale was made, said that there were no announcements at present, but it was learned from other sources that the Odd Fellows' Hall would be razed soon and a theatre erected on the site.

Odd Fellows Hall was destroyed by fire two years ago and was never rebuilt. Owing to its central situation it has always been considered an ideal location for a playhouse.

EW YORK TOWNS ARGUE SUNDAY SHOWS

Communities Alive Over Possible Action of Their Governing Boards—Priest Says Sunday Movies no Sin

Albany, April 28.

UDGING from the many letters which are being received these days, virtually every community throughout state is taking an active interest ards ascertaining whether or not its idents will be permitted to enjoy nday motion picture shows, now that Governor has signed the bill which kes it permissible for each commun- to decide for themselves through ir governing board.

n Rensselaer, a city occupying the osite bank from Albany, the city ners have already made it clear that y do not want Sunday shows. This ement was made even before any tion was presented to the common ncil.

Churches Still Object to Shows.

ommon councils in other cities, ough the press, have made it plain esidents that they will take no action ept where petitions are presented to m. The churches have also actively aged in carrying on propaganda inst Sunday movies being permitted. the annual meeting of the Madison nty W. C. T. U. in Canastota a few s ago, the Rev. A. C. Horseman, re- nding on "Sunday Movies," said that law amounted to but one thing after ther towards ultimately unfitting ple for service through Sabbath de- ration. He also claimed that in towns ere moving pictures are shown on days, boys from the country drive town to attend these instead of the rches.

unday Movies No Sin, Says Priest.

ev. Father M. R. Burns, of Water- n, one of the leading priests of thern New York, and one whose ds are followed by thousands in that ion, was recently asked the follow- question, as calling for an explana- of the Catholic church on Sunday vies:

s it a sin in the eyes of the Catholic rch to attend a motion picture show Sunday?"

No, it is not a sin to go to a good ion picture show at any time," said . M. R. Burns, "but it is a sin to see ad motion picture show on Sunday ny other day. I am not opposed to poor man seeing a Sunday motion ure show or a ball game for recrea- and amusement, providing he does duty toward God. If the city would sidize all its motion picture shows baseball parks and not make Sunday ibitions a matter of commerce, I feel no objections would be heard, but roprietors of theatres are permitted give Sunday exhibitions and charge issions, will not the merchants, the hiers and grocers claim the same t, and with a certain amount of son? However, it is not a sin for a son to attend a motion picture ex- ition on Sunday, and in fact I rather rove of it, providing commercialism ot permitted to creep in."

GRANT.

nder the auspices of the moving pic- operators of Spokane, a dance was given in the Masonic Temple, April 23, which was attended by several hundred, including the theatre managers and their wives. The committee of arrangements for the ball was composed of: W. H. Shepherd, Kenneth F. Damon, K. V. Van Arsdel, E. Parrott, J. R. Dixon and V. C. Hill. Pictures were taken of the dancers and are to be shown in some of the picture houses later.

Quebec Exhibitor Fined $40 for Opening Sunday

AN echo of the fight being waged by exhibitors of Sherbrooke, Quebec, against the local enforcement of the Lord's Day act which compels the Sherbrooke theatres to close on Sundays was heard on April 25 when Judge Mulvena fined Adelard Bayeur, proprietor of the Premier Theatre, $40 and costs for opening his theatre on a recent Sunday.

Announcement has also been made that there are twenty-three charges against Rudolphe Vallee, proprietor of the Casino Theatre, Sherbrooke, for alleged infraction of the Lord's Day Act. Discussion in these charges was heard on the same day, but the case was adjourned for later hearing.

It is urged that local confectionary stores, news stands and other places of business are open for business every Sunday, and that no action is taken against any "offenders" except the local exhibitors. It is also argued that theatres in other cities of the Province of Quebec are open on Sundays and the law applies to these theatres as well as to those of Sherbrooke.

Legal Battle Over Film Coater's Right to Quit

Rochester.

THE second round in what promises to be one of the most important legal battles in the history of the film industry was fought in the Supreme Court here on Saturday. The Eastman Kodak Company, through its attorneys, argued before Justice A. J. Rodenbeck, to have an injunction made permanent, restraining Harry Warren from entering the employ of the Powers Film Products Company.

According to the Eastman people, millions of dollars spent in research work and developing motion picture film to its present stage are involved in the action. If the injunction is not made permanent, it is assumed that employes under contract with the Eastman Company might be tempted by higher salaries offered by rival concerns. A short time ago a temporary injunction was secured by the Eastman Company, restraining Warren from leaving the employ of the company.

The Powers Company was represented by George A. Ingraham, formerly presiding justice of the Appellate Division of the First Department. The Eastman Company was represented by Walter S. Hubbell, well known Rochester attorney. The Powers Company is said to have offered Warren more money than the Eastman Company was paying. He entered the employ of the Powers Company and then the Eastman people secured the injunction.

Justice Rodenbeck reserved decision.

Warren a Skilled Worker.

Warren is a skilled film coater and was getting $25 a week from the Eastman Company. The Powers Company offered him $50 a week. Mr. Hubbell argued that the Eastman Company had spent millions of dollars in carrying on research work and that the training of film coaters requires many months.

The argument of Attorney Ingraham was that the action of the Eastman Company was confiscatory and indefensible in attempting to keep a monopoly on expert workmen.

Select Pictures Sues Australasian Company

THE Select Pictures Corporation has commenced an action in the United States District Court against the Australasian Films, Ltd., to recover $216,000 for alleged breach of contract entered into last December under the terms of which the defendant company acquired the sole and exclusive rights to distribute the releases of the plaintiff company in Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, the Fiji Islands, and British New Guinea for a period of three years.

Under the terms of the contract the plaintiff alleges the defendant corporation contracted to accept at least one release weekly for the year commencing April 1 last and agreed to pay the Select Pictures Corporation $4,500 for each release. It is alleged the defendant company repudiated the contract on April 19, by refusing to select further releases.

The plaintiff company claims that it has been and is unable to contract with other film distributing concerns or individuals in the territory covered by the contract and contends that by virtue of the alleged breach of contract the Select Pictures Corporation will sustain damages aggregating $216,000.

Konta, Kirchway, France & Michael represent the plaintiff company in the action.

Orral Humphrey Retires; Plans to Take Up Ranching

ORRAL HUMPHREY, for many years a stage player and recently of the screen, has announced his retirement from screen life. He will take up active ranching on his property in Happy Valley, Cal.

Mr. Humphrey was for many years a leading man on the legitimate stage and was a Morosco lead at Oakland, Cal. He has had a wide experience in the motion picture field, having played in heavy and comedy parts as well as having done some directing. He was assigned to the part of chief villain for the Universal forthcoming serial, "The Midnight Man," in which James J. Corbett is starred. The "Beauty Comedies" were created to present Mr. Humphrey in light comedy, and as a director he produced "Are Waitresses Safe?" for the Keystone.

BALTIMORE BALL DRAWS HUGE CROWD

Maryland Exhibitors' League Stages Brilliantly Successful Affair—Dinner Is Part of Program

MORE than five thousand persons jammed into the Lyric Theatre, Baltimore, on Friday night, April 25, to attend the fourth annual moving picture ball given under the auspices of the Exhibitors' League of Maryland. Despite the crowd inside, fully half as many more outside clamored vainly for admittance. The crowd began to gather long before the doors had opened.

Dancing began at nine o'clock, but so crowded was the floor that but little dancing could be done. The gay-decked walls of the old opera house reverberated with the happy roar of an adulating populace as the stars appeared. The voice of the crowd gave noisy homage to Eugene O'Brien, Taylor Holmes, June Caprice and Leah Baird, and other stars.

League Officers Introduce Stars.

Thomas D. Goldberg, second vice-president of the league, introduced the stars from the stage and Louis Schlichter, president of the league, made the presentation speeches.

During the dancing, colored lights were thrown with a wierdly wonderful effect on the throng, with the result that to the eye the dancing thousands formed an undulating sea of ever-changing, blending color.

Shortly after midnight many of the merrymaking filmites repaired to the dining hall, where covers had been laid for two hundred. During the dinner entertainment was furnished by talent secured by Louis A. DeHoff, manager of the New Theatre. Harry W. Nice, assistant state attorney, acted as toastmaster.

During the course of the banquet many speakers were introduced. Among those who delivered short addresses were Eugene O'Brien, David Selznick, O. D. (Nick) Weems, Louis Schlichter, James Nelson, Sunday editor of the Baltimore American; General W. Bladen Lowndes and William F. Broening, who was hailed as "Baltimore's next mayor."

The banquet broke up about 3.15 o'clock Saturday morning, April 26.

Those Who Were There.

Among those who attended the banquet were: Frank A. Hornig, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schlichter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Durkee, Charles A. Hicks, Charles B. Eyer, Harry Cluster, I. Berman, Julius Goodman, Thomas D. Goldberg and sister, Walter D. Pacey, Milton Caplon, O. D. Weems, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reddisch, J. Rabinowich, Guy L. Wonders, Solon L. Wonders, E. C. Sandell, Bernard Depkin, Jr., W. A. Busch, W. Timmons, Wallace High, Charles Nolte, J. F. Ritterpush, A. Albers, F. C. Neber, J. Louis Rome, L. A. DeHoff, W. E. Stumpf, C. B. Councilman, Joseph Brodie, H. Morstein, A. G. Buck, Harry Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney B. Lust, Louis O. Maas, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. O'Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, J. J. Payette, W. F. Hayner, Mr. Champion, Louis J. Frederick, Mr. Kent, L. Rosenthall, Frank Price, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. M. Siegel, Mr. McSchane, N. C. Haefelle, Maurice Silverman, H. M. Siegel and Charles Schnieder.

The officers of the Exhibitors' League of Maryland are: Louis Schlichter, president; Eugene B. McCurdy, first vice-president; Thomas D. Goldberg, second vice-president; William E. Stumpf, treasurer; Morris A. Rome, counsel; Charles B. Eyer, secretary.

Personnel of Committees.

Those on the committee which had supervision of the ball were: Frank A. Hornig, chairman; Thomas D. Goldberg, Julius Goodman, J. Louis Rome, J. Rabinowich, B. Rosenbauer, Walter D. Pacey, George Hoeffer, Frank H. Durkee, E. C. Sandell, William E. Stumpf, Milton Caplon, Ervine Levine, Martine Berger, Charles B. Eyer, Louis Schlichter and Louis A. DeHoff.

Movie Ball in Providence Was Magnificent Affair

IT WAS a gay and gorgeous assemblage, a brilliant galaxy, a noted gathering, a magnificent spectacle and everything else. Referring, of course, to the Grand Ball held at the State Armory in Providence, R. I., April 24, under the auspices of Local 223 I. A. T. S. E. Governor Beeckman and Mayor Gainer were present, together with many stars, managers, and big men of the film corporations.

At nine o'clock Governor Beeckman and Mayor Gainer led the procession of stars to the stage where each one was introduced by Colonel H. Anthony Dyer and called upon them for a few remarks.

The list of movieites includes the names of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, Olive Thomas and Eugene O'Brien of Select Picture; George Fecke, of World Films, Boston; Montagu Love and Madge Evans, two World stars; Catherine Calvert, Dorothy Dalton, John Emerson, Anita Loos and John C. Flinn of Famous Players-Lasky; Jane and Catherine Lee of Fox.

A number of feature dances were on the program, including the Shadow, Balloon, Snow and Moving Picture Dances. The committee won a lot of praise for the fine gathering it assembled. Samuel Taylor, William A. Sholes, James A. Foley, Edwin W. Anthony, Charles J. Duffy, and Camille C. Turcotte, members of the committee were ably assisted by Richard H. Gamble, moving picture police censor of Providence, who worked to secure the attendance of the many stars.

The proceeds of the ball were divided between the Fatherless Children of France Fund and the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Sick Benefit Fund.

Frances Marion Writes Official Film.

The service of American women during the war was truly remarkable, and the Government is about ready to tell of this work in motion picture by a photoplay written by a woman.

Frances Marion, one of the most noted women photoplay authors in the world, has completed the great Government film, depicting American women in the war, and has returned to the East from Los Angeles, where she spent several weeks working on the film. Miss Marion passed several months under fire in France, and she was one of the first American women to cross the Rhine after the armistice was signed.

Assisting her in making the pictures were Lieut. Wesley Ruggles, of the Signal Corps, U. S. A., and Harry Thorpe, formerly a cameraman for Douglas Fairbanks.

Miss Marion will write a number of plays for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in New York.

Kansas Exhibitors to Hold Big Organizing Convention

THE Kansas State Exhibitors will hold a convention in Hutchinson May 18, 19 and 20, for the purpose of perfecting a hundred per cent organization. Four big, vital, important questions are to come up before the convention to be thrashed out. The amount of response from advance notices sent out has been far above expectations and it is really believed that the exhibitors have awakened to the fact that if they intend to exist they must be at the meeting and help organize Kansas.

The Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club of Hutchinson have both agreed to help boost this convention and have planned big entertainment for the visitors. The exchanges supplying this territory have also agreed to give their support in making this one of the greatest state conventions ever held by the motion picture industry.

Hutchinson merchants have agreed to finance a trip for the girl who wins in a movie popularity election to be staged in order to give her a chance to get into pictures.

Universal Auditors Hold Meeting.

A call meeting of the auditors of the Universal Exchanges, Inc., was held recently at the Congress Hotel in Chicago. G. M. Davidson, superintendent of the Universal Exchanges, and Joe Schnitzer, general sales manager, both of New York, attended the meeting. The auditors who were present: G. B. Howe, F. W. Talbert, F. W. Barlett and A. F. King, all traveling auditors, and Art Schmidt, of Cleveland, and Joe Friedman, of Detroit.

The matter of improvement in the operating system was discussed as well as topics relative to the general sales. The five exchanges making the best showing in collections in a period of four weeks were awarded a prize.

Government O. K.'s "Bolshevism" Film

Whatever misunderstanding the Government authorities had in regard to "Bolshevism on Trial," the special which is being distributed through Select, is was cleared away when several Government officials saw a special showing of the film last week at Keith's Theatre in Washington and announced that they had no objection to the release of the picture. This removes any question as to whether the Government will take any action to prevent the exhibition of the film.

TO BREAK GROUND FOR NEW STUDIO SOON

Famous Players Plant in Long Island City Will Occupy 140,000 Square Feet—Cost Put at $2,000,000

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will soon break ground for its new studio and laboratory in Long Island City, which will occupy respectively the entire square block bounded by Sixth and Seventh and Pierce and Graham avenues, and the block front on the north side of Pierce avenue from Fifth to Sixth avenues. The structure will cover all told over 140,000 square feet of ground area.

Owing to the fact that the detail plans and specifications of the laboratory are farther advanced, that building probably will be started first.

The square block will be covered with the latest type of glass enclosed studio as well as open air stages. The studio building will be strictly fireproof, of reinforced concrete construction, and will contain dressing room facilities equipped with shower baths, toilets, and all of the latest conveniences. Suites will be provided for the directors and their assistants, and each director will be furnished with individual projecting rooms equipped with the most modern type of facilities for properly inspecting productions.

To Move Scenes Mechanically.

Large scene docks equipped with modern machinery will be installed to handle all scenes and sets mechanically. A light and airy scenario department, casting department, modeling department, wardrobe rooms, property rooms, etc., will be installed.

Among the notable features will be a completely equipped modern theatre for the demonstration and showing of films to executives and players, a complete and up-to-date restaurant for the exclusive use of players and employes, a refrigerating plant, a sanitary barber shop, hair dressing parlors, libraries, reading rooms, locker rooms, turkish baths, green rooms, club rooms, gymnasium, etc.

Estimated at $2,000,000.

The studio building will be equipped with the most modern sprinkler system and elevators will be provided for the quick and easy handling of all scenes and properties. The roof of the studio will be so constructed as to provide floods of natural daylight so as to make it possible to take scenes practically from sunrise to sunset without artificial light. Modern ventilating and air cooling systems will be installed.

On the block front adjoining, there will be erected a three-story building to be devoted exclusively to laboratory purposes. This building will also be fireproof and modern in every respect, and will contain every known contrivances for the proper developing of film.

The group of buildings and open stages will cost, as estimated, about $2,000,000.

Cincinnati Exchange Body Is Doing Excellent Work

THE Associated Film Exchange Managers of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce has been holding interesting weekly meetings at that institution. The exchange men's association has been in existence about six months and has been doing excellent work, which will prove of lasting benefit to both the exchanges and the exhibitors.

The purposes as set forth in the constitution and by-laws are to adjust complaints between the exchanges and exhibitors which may originate with either side; to secure co-operation between the two branches of the industry; to work for the improvement of transportation facilities; to promote legislation favorable to the industry and oppose any of an opposite nature; and to do all things possible for the uplift and improvement of the moving picture business.

Exchanges in the Association.

Eleven of the exchanges are represented in the membership, and earnest efforts are being made to induce all of them to join. These efforts are meeting with much encouragement, and gratifying results are expected to materialize in the near future. The following exchanges are members of the association: Famous Players-Lasky, Goldwyn, Triangle, First National, Select, Mutual, Vitagraph, Pathe, Metro, World Films, and Standard Film Service.

The officers are: President, Jack Stewart, of Triangle; vice president, George Wilson, of Standard; secretary, C. V. Zimmerman, of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, and treasurer, Beecher E. Hess, Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

Three Goldwyn Players Aid Naval Loan Campaign

THREE of Goldwyn's stars are cooperating with the Navy in the naval Victory Loan Campaign.

Three of the biggest dreadnoughts of the great fleet that kept Germany bottled up in Kiel harbor have the services of these players to swell their receipts in the effort the navy is making to fill the peace chest for the government. Madge Kennedy is helping the Oklahoma, Mabel Normand is putting all her effort into work for the Delaware, and Geraldine Farrar, just ending her season at the Metropolitan Opera House, has given her name and effort to the Wyoming.

Co-operation of screen stars in the big task isn't entirely thankless aside from the satisfaction of doing it. The star whose ship heads the list when the records are all in will be permanently named by Secretary Daniels as "The Little Sister of the Navy."

Chicago to See "The Betrayal."

Arrangements have been completed by the Lenox Producing Corporation with Klaw & Erlanger for the Illinois Theatre, Chicago, for the engagement there of "The Betrayal," a historical motion picture drama by J. A. Barry, which will be presented for the first time at that theatre on May 5. Mr. Barry and associates have been working on the story for the past year. It deals with one of the most vital topics now before the world.

"The Betrayal" will be set for a run in Chicago and after its engagement there will be taken to New York. J. J. McCarthy and Theodore Mitchell have gone to Chicago to take active charge of the local engagement, which will be handled upon the same large scale that has marked previous feature productions with which they have been identified.

Philadelphia Sees Loan Films Sundays.

As a result of the objections registered by Philadelphia ministers against Sunday exhibitions Secretary Glass, of the Treasury, announced that he would not interfere with the Victory Loan Pictures, "The Price of Peace," which were shown in Philadelphia on Sundays. Secretary Glass said the telegram ended the matter as far as he was concerned. "The Treasury Department," said Mr. Glass, at Washington, "is most certainly not in favor of desecrating the Sabbath, or violating local Sunday laws anywhere in the loan campaign, but we have adopted a policy of leaving all local details to local loan committees, who are best able to judge what shall be done or not done."

BIG GAME PICTURES FROM WILD AFRICA

Outing-Chester Has Cottar Jungle Films Unsurpassed in Daring of the Huntsman

THE most daring scenes of a hunt in the African jungles that have thus far been filmed are contained in the Outing-Chester films which are being released through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. These pictures were photographed by Charles Cottar, the celebrated hunter, and are being presented as "Cameraing Through Africa." In addition to many scenes in which wild animals of the jungle can be seen cavorting in their own haunts, there are pictures of thrilling charges of rhinocerii, leopards and lions. There is decidedly no fake about any of these scenes; on the contrary they are startlingly realistic, and some of them illustrate accidental happenings, the finish of which never appeared in film for the reason that the cameraman had to quit the job in a hurry. One of these instances is in the case of the unexpected charge of a rhinoceros. Another scene ends abruptly with the leap of an angered lion. The actual killing of some of these beasts is shown in the film, shot down in the act of charging

The first of this two-reel series presents many animals of the African plains, including the water buck, the impalla, buffalo, zebras, giraffes, lions, and the Greater Kudu, rarest of the animal kingdom of Africa. The second breaks into the Congo country and introduces us to the natives on the way. The king of the Toro district with his band delivering native harmony, and also a war dance in which befeathered heads and partly clothed bodies perform the motions of the dance, are present in the opening scenes. One of the features of the reel is a large group of hippotamus taking a bath. Dog-faced baboons in large numbers persisted in keeping as far from the camera as possible, or in trying to hide in the trees. A leopard hunt supplies some thrills, and the charging Rhino before mentioned challenges anything of the kind that has ever been seen.

The photography in this series of pictures is not of the clearest, but is of the same quality as that seen in former African films. This is, of course, partly due to the lack of facilities for developing the film. The titling of the films by Katherine Hilliker never fails to emphasize the salient points, nor to bring out the comedy that sometimes lurks in an African jungle.

Latest Ford-Goldwyns Cover Fish, Mountains and Roads

A TRIPLET of Ford-Goldwyn Educational Weeklies present a variety of subjects all of which are interesting. The titles, not particularly illuminative, are "Good Roads," "Going Up" and "Can the Poor Fish."

The first number, "Good Roads," does not give suggestions on road building as might be expected, but discusses the question of why it is a national duty to make good roads and keep them in condition. The various phases of life which are helped or hindered according to the state of the roads, are touched upon, and illustrations of roads such as many of us have seen in rural districts compared with the concrete or asphalt roads of modern times.

"Going Up" illustrates the difficulties of climbing a mountain in the winter time with an automobile. Mount Hood is used in the illustration, showing the Government camp, at which point the climbers arrived with the automobile. From here they are obliged to go afoot over slopes and glaciers of gradual incline finally arriving at the cabin of the forest ranger who keeps watch for forest fires in that district. A view of the crater of the old volcano embodied in the mountain of earlier years is shown, and other attractive views of Mount Hood.

"Can the Poor Fish" was photographed on Puget Sound and shows by diagram and also by closeup views just how the salmon are lured into a trap successfully prepared through experience with salmon kind. The unloading of the fish at the cannery, and the detail work of canning the fish is given a graphic description in the film.

School and Church Equipment Booming.

According to W. A. Stone, of the Service Film Company, the business of supplying schools and churches with projecting machines has taken a big jump forward. Within the past few weeks the following have been furnished with projectors for educational purposes: Rose City Park School, Portland, Rev. Heis Astoria Methodist Church, Rev. Thomp son, Vancouver, Wash., Public Schools Astoria, Oregon, Public Schools; Wasco Oregon, and High School, Rosebur Oregon.

When questioned the purchase stated that the machines would be use to show educational and religious sul jects and not for the purpose of com peting with established picture shows.

National Board's New List Ready.

The National Board of Review of Mo tion Pictures through its Social Servic Department, the National Committee fo Better Films, has in preparation a ne edition of the "Garden of American Mo tion Pictures," which will list the be pictures submitted to the Board durin the twelve months ending April 1, 191 It offers a wide variety of selection fro all the companies, from which to mak up special programs for the famil group, for juvenile, or for strictly adu entertainment.

Several improvements are being mad in this over previous issues. As hereto fore, the pictures are grouped by di tributing companies, but are arrange in order of release dates, which ar given first, to facilitate selection wit reference to age and price. Anothe innovation is the inclusion of the sourc of the picture when it is drawn fro standard or current literature, a maga zine story or stage play.

It is anticipated that, in addition t the use which this catalog should fin among exhibitors, it will fill a decide need among churches, recreation cen ters, and other social organizations, a well as the committees cooperating wit theatre managers, for whose benefit i periodic publication was, several yea ago, originally undertaken.

Church Service Is Its Specialty.

A new organization for the purpose o supplying Bible and entertainment film to churches has been formed by Re Paul Smith, well known in connectio with "The Finger of Justice," the mora ity film which was the cause of more o less controversy throughout the cou try during the past year. The organ zation will be known as the Intern tional Church Film Corporation, and i addition to supplying film service it wi aid the churches in securing projectio equipment, including screens, darken ing apparatus for the windows, an stereopticon attachment.

Exchange Men See Two New Films.

Delegates to the exchange manager section of the First National conventio witnessed screenings of "The Thirteent Chair" and "Mary Regan" on Tuesda and Wednesday evenings April 22 and 2 respectively.

May especially for the occasion, that th head salesmen of the First National o ganization might have their first "loo at it. Both showings were started at o'clock in the evening just to round o a full day's work for the delegates.

CONNECTICUT DOING GOOD BUSINESS

World Man Reports Picture Theatre Attendance Satisfactory Throughout State—Visits Film Men

By Nat Bregstein.

THE last time I visited Bridgeport, Conn., there wasn't elbow room on the streets. Since the armistice has been signed, I believe that the population in Bridgeport has decreased by 25,000, and there is plenty of room there now. As this was a floating population, it didn't seem to effect the attendance at the moving picture theatres. Among the biggest show houses in town is the Poli Theatre, running a combination of vaudeville and pictures. Mr. Saunders, the manager, says this house is crowded all the time.

About two blocks below, on the main street, we have the Strand Theatre. This house is a 900-seater, has an orchestra of six pieces, and uses Fox, Mutual, World, Metro and Vitagraph. P. T. Kontos is the manager. Another down-town house is the Empire. This theatre has a big sign reading "Foto." A stranger not knowing this was the Empire Theatre would take it for the Foto Theatre. This house seats 1,000. It is a first-run theatre, with admission of 11 and 17 cents. Artcraft, Paramount, Select and Mutual, are the services used. D. J. Lustig, former newspaperman, is in charge and says that Mr. O'Rourke, the owner, takes over the Park Theatre, opposite the Empire, on May 25.

Splendid Business Reported.

Liberty Theatre is a neighborhood house, with admission price of 11 and 17 cents, and uses Metro, Select, World, Fox, Pathe and Specials. Cohen and Friedman are the owners. Splendid business is reported. West End Theatre is another neighborhood house, seating 1,200. It is a very neat theatre, and runs Artcraft, Paramount and Goldwyn. Has admission price of 17 and 22 cents. C. Lund, the owner and manager, is a wide-awake exhibitor and informed me that he makes a study of what his patrons want in the way of movie attractions, and books accordingly. The Roma Theatre is a little house seating 350 and has an admission price of 5 and 10 cents; uses Bluebird, Fox, Paramount, Pathe and General. Joe Canistraci is the owner.

New Haven Important Center.

Meadow street, New Haven, is a very important film centre these days. Most all of the exhibitors in Connecticut find their way there sooner or later. At the Paramount office Mr. Scully is the manager. He reports business great in Conn. for all Paramount Productions. Right next door we have the Triangle. H. D. Posey, manager, claims a booking on Poli Circuit for all Olive Thomas specials. Eddy Leighton, formerly a booker at this office, is now connected with the sales department. The Gordon & Mayer office is another busy exchange. This office has First National productions, Jewel and Universal special attractions, and "Hearts of Humanity," which will be put over as a road attraction.

Fanny Mitten, for many years with the American Feature Company of Boston, is now at the New Haven office of Gordon & Mayer. At the Universal office, New Haven, N. Josephs says he will shortly make alterations on account of the increased business. He claims all serials and comedies are going big. The American Feature Film Company, of Boston, also maintains an office in New Haven at 131 Meadow street. W. Scully, manager, reports Metro productions going big. Among the film salesmen from New York are S. Farber, of the Film Clearing House, who makes his headquarters in New Haven. Mr. Farber claims a booking for the 10, 20 and 30 series and "Wanted for Murder" in most Connecticut towns, including the Poli Circuit. Another salesman from New York is A. Interrante, representing the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. He claims a good business for Goldwyn all through Connecticut. Harry Germain, just out of the army, is handling short subjects. He makes his headquarters in Rosen Film Delivery office, Meadow street, New Haven.

Theatres Always Full.

Most of the exhibitors in New Haven are doing an excellent business. The largest theatres are the Palace, Olympia and Bijou. The Olympia seats 3,000, runs First National and is doing a splendid business. At the Bijou Theatre D. Garvey, the publicity man for Poli Circuit, says that although the floating population has left New Haven, business is just as good as it ever was. J. L. Fernandez, proprietor of the Eden Theatre, Waterbury, Conn., says he believes that productions are getting better. The Eden is 750-seater, admission 10 and 20 cents. It uses Metro, Paramount, Fox, Triangle and Vitagraph. A peculiar thing about this theatre is that it has no screen, and Mr. Fernandez informed me that what I was looking at is nothing but a blank wall with a composition on it which he did not wish to disclose to me.

The Palace Theatre, New Britain, opened last week under the management of Jean Belasco. This house has been remodeled, has a nine piece orchestra and is up-to-date in every respect.

Hartford is holding its own in the movie line. The Strand Theatre seats 1,800, admission price 11 to 45 cents. Mr. Young, in charge, says the Strand will have a new stage setting and will add several musicians. Good business is reported. The Majestic seats 1,400, admission of 11, 17 and 28 cents. This is a Paramount first-run house, and has a twelve-piece orchestra. H. M. Pierce is the manager. At the Liberty Theatre we have a house seating 1,600, admission price of 11 and 17 cents. Herman Goldman, manager, reports a good business. The house uses Select, Fox, Jewel, Film Clearing House, Select and World. The Crown Theatre seats 800, and has an admission price of 11 cents. D. E. Lorenzo, manager, reports good business with Fox, Triangle, Universal, American Feature, General, Metro and First National.

GOLDWYN EXPANDS EUROPEAN BUSINESS

Distribution Will Be Established in New Nations Upon Signing of Peace in Enemy Countries

THE Goldwyn Pictures Corporation announces that with the signing of the treaty of peace at Paris Goldwyn pictures will be sold in all the countries of Europe that have been cut off from distribution by the war. Goldwyn distribution will be established in Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Germany, Austria, Poland, Bulgaria and Roumania, and all the lesser countries of the Balkans. Arrangements for distribution with a newly formed American company have been completed, and as soon as the treaty is signed at Paris the new venture will be initiated. Further details will be made public at that time.

The step means the extension of American methods in pictures, American ideals and Americanism in general to those whose need has been clearly shown by the war. Goldwyn executives have been guided by this ideal, and not only by the promised extension of their business, when it was decided to undertake the responsibility of extensive European distribution.

With the opening of Goldwyn distribution in the new countries Goldwyn will have established its system in every important trade center and country in the world.

Goldwyn Issues Statement.

Samuel Goldwyn has issued a statement with reference to the new step about to be taken.

"The picture industry is too important a contribution to the life of the world to be viewed merely as a business, and it has been one of the first principles of Goldwyn to assume that it would be a good business only if it served the world as a great institution of civilization. Europe enters on a new phase of history with the signing of the peace treaty and it is appropriate that the motion picture should play a great part in the regeneration of nations and the reconstitution of their forms of living.

"I think that the producers of motion pictures have for a long time taken too humble a place in the larger affairs of the world. Newspaper publishers and editors everywhere assume their importance in the general scheme of civilization, and rightly, and yet the motion picture touches humanity in a thousand places, where the newspaper reaches it in a hundred. The world of tomorrow, the tomorrow on which the sun is just beginning to rise, will demand more and more of the screen, more intelligence as well as greater beauty.

Picturemakers Men of Ideals.

"What we are doing in definitely assuming the burden of a widespread European distribution is with that in mind. To the lives of the millions who have been scarred by the ravages of war, whose habits and beliefs of ordinary life have been uprooted, we are trying to bring the ideas and ideals of honor and courage, the vitality and energy and chivalry which is at the bottom of American manhood and womanhood, and which Goldwyn pictures have always striven faithfully to represent.

"It would be foolish to hide that we believe this is a good business stroke. We expect it to be successful; that is why we have given so much attention to it. But we would like the world that stands outside the motion picture and views it still as a novelty to realize that the men who are engaged in it are men of ideals as well as men of practical affairs. We want to do our share in making life worth living, and we believe it is a great one."

Buffalo Exchanges Oppose Cut in Express Service

BUFFALO film exchanges are opposed to the recent discontinuance by the American Railways Express Company of the pickup and delivery service after 5 o'clock in the afternoon and on Sunday. The film men stated at a meeting of the Public Service Commission that when the express company discontinued the service April 1 it was necessary for them to go to the expense of hiring teams to deliver such goods formerly delivered by the express company.

The express company claims that the recent advance in cost of labor and materials has caused the concern to curtail all unnecessary service. Night and Sunday pickup and delivery service, they said, was not a paying proposition and never can be placed on a paying basis.

C. A. Weeks, of Zane Grey, Back from Trip to Coast

C. A. WEEKS, treasurer of Zane Grey Pictures, Inc., and of Great Authors Pictures, Inc., returned to New York last week after a visit to Los Angeles, where he conferred with Benjamin B. Hampton, president of the two companies, and personal supervisor of producing activities. While on the coast Mr. Weeks viewed "Desert Gold," the first of the Zane Grey features, and "The Westerners," Stewart Edward White's story, which has been selected to inaugurate the Great Authors productions. Both are to be distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

"In these works," Mr. Weeks says, "Mr. Hampton has brought to fruition a plan he has entertained ever since he first became associated with the industry; and that is to present the stories of popular authors in pictures with all of the elements that give them their appeal in book form. They are to be 'starless' pictures, in so far as featuring any particular player is concerned, but the entire cast of each will be made up of players who enjoy star honors and popularity. Real stories, interpreted by real players and presented in real productions about sum up our policy.

"'Desert Gold' and 'The Westerners' exemplify in a convincing manner what the author means to the quality of pictures."

SHOWMEN SHOULD KEEP LOOKING AHEAD

Says Henry Reiss: Give Suburban Patrons the Best and Build New Clientele for Dull Times

"DON'T sit back and wait for the regulars to come to your suburban house. Go out and get new business." This is the business slogan of Henry Reiss, manager of the West Broadway and Ideal theatres, of Louisville, two good suburban houses with a wide territory to draw from.

These houses have enough "regulars" to insure them sufficient patronage with little effort, but Reiss believes that the suburban house that does not make an effort to get additional business is letting golden opportunities slip by. It is not only missing patronage that will add to present profits, but it is also overlooking that important duty of a successful manager, the building up of a clientele so large that it will carry the house successfully through any dull seasons or periods of degression that may come at any time.

Builds Business All the Time.

When Reiss gets a special feature he lets all the people know about it in what is strictly his territory and he also lets them know about it in territory that is beyond his ordinary limits. For the Tarzan pictures and "Virtuous Wives," he personally circularized his field and he went far beyond the regular boundaries. He did a fine extra business as the result of his foresight and efforts.

Mr. Reiss believes also in two-day runs for suburban houses on big features. He ran "Shoulder Arms" two days and had such fine business that he added another day. And "Shoulder Arms" had twenty-five days before in Louisville.

"Give the suburban house patrons the best to be had," says Mr. Reiss.

"Charge increased rates. They will pay it cheerfully. Create new patronage and enlarge your circle of 'regulars.'"

There are four surburban houses within a mile of Mr. Reiss' West Broadway and Ideal theatres, but he is going steadily ahead. He is a real showman and a mighty good judge of box office values. His brother, Martin Reiss, is associated with him in the management of the two houses.

Tom Mix Picture Draws 70% of Town's Population

THE drawing power of Tom Mix has been growing with each new Mix picture, according to reports from exhibitors which are being received by the Fox Film Corporation. Each new Tom Mix release, it is stated, results in an increase in the number of houses booking Tom Mix and also in a flood of telegrams and letters from exhibitors praising Tom Mix as a box office attraction.

An example of Mix's strong hold on the public was given recently in the little town of Prairie du Rocher, Ill. In this town one of Tom Mix's pictures, "Fame and Fortune," played a one-night engagement, and out of the 500 inhabitants of the village, 350 saw the picture at one sitting. Thus Mix drew 70 per cent, of the town's total population in one day.

Canadians Discuss Theatre Regulations with Officials

REPRESENTATIVES of twenty-five picture theatres of Montreal, Quebec, recently held a conference with the members of the Montreal Administrative Commission to discuss matters relative to the city's announced intention of enforcing theatre regulations more strictly in the future.

The chief discussion arose over the subject of keeping the aisles and entrances of theatres free for passage. The exhibitors contended that the aisles of local theatres are never blocked, because the filling of the aisles would interfere with the vision of those in the seats. It was also urged that the gathering of a crowd in the rear of a theatre and in the entrance did not constitute a danger, because such people would reach the street, in the event of any confusion, before the seated patrons would reach the doorways.

The city officials announced that it was their duty to enforce the bylaw regarding the blocking of entrances in the interest of the public, and that they intended to issue instructions to see that the law was observed to the letter.

At the conclusion of the conference, the exhibitors announced that the instructions of the police would be obeyed without hesitation. The exhibitors had been invited to the conference by the Administration to talk over the matter before orders were issued.

Alan Edwards, World Star, Has Had an Unusual Career

A RATHER remarkable career is credited to Alan Edwards, who is June Elvidge's leading man in "The Social Pirate," a World Picture. Mr. Edwards, after graduating from Rutgers and Princeton, took up stage work. He has been under the management of Winthrop Ames, Charles Frohman, Messrs. Shubert, Oliver Morosco and other equally well known producing managers.

Mr. Edwards has played with Jane Cowl, Helen Ware, Florence Nash and scores of other stars. He has been prominent in the cast of such stage successes as "Our Children," "Prunella," "Arms and the Girl," "Melting of Molly," and "Mrs. Bolting's Daughters."

In pictures he has played leads to Viola Dana, Olga Petrova, June Caprice and Mary Miles Minter. He has worked for Edison, Fox, Metro, Universal, Famous Players and Paragon.

While at college he was known as the best all around athlete in America. He was on the football team, baseball, basket ball, roller skating and water polo teams. For six years he was a member of the Seventh Regiment, N. Y. N. G.

He drove a car in the Vanderbilt Cup Race at Savannah, and also at Indianapolis. He credits himself with being the first picture artist who took up aviation, not in the office of the publicity director, but in actual experience on aviation fields.

STAGES CLIMAX OF GOLDWYN SPECIAL

Toronto Showman Stops "Eternal Magdalene" Just Before End and Players Enact Closing Episode

FOR the presentation of "The Eternal Magdalene," the Goldwyn special release, at the Regent Theatre, one of the large downtown theatres of Toronto, during the week of April 21, Manager Will M. Elliott literally made a big hole in the picture for the purpose of staging a dramatic scene as a chapter of the film story. The picture was stopped at a point just before the climax and the subsequent episode was portrayed in person by two characters who used the lines of the spoken play as arranged by Mr. Elliott. For this scene, the stage setting was made all-black and the stage was kept darkened. Two spot lights were used on the two characters and the effect, to say the least, was startlingly wierd. The stunt made a distinct hit and it was the first time that a Canadian exhibitor had tried the plan of breaking a picture for the presentation of a scene with living players. Two local persons were used in the playlet. They were costumed in keeping with the pictured characterizations and their acting led right into the resumption of the feature. In other words, one whole chapter was lifted right out of the feature for the sketch.

Advertising Unique.

There was still another new stunt which was sprung upon patrons of the Toronto Regent for which the responsibility rests with Manager Elliott.

The advertising in advance of the release of "The Eternal Magdalene" was also unique. It consisted of a black-and-white display of the teaser type. The regular wording of this advertisement was "The Eternal Magdalene—Do You Know Her?" with the name of the Regent Theatre at the bottom. In a white space various questions were asked from day to day, such as "Behind you she lurches, in queenly finery, clasping the bony, icy hand of fate. Do you know her?"

Newspaper Refuses Advertisement.

It is significant that the Toronto Daily Star refused to carry any advertising of the Regent Theatre for the presentation of "The Eternal Magdalene" on the ground that the theme was not proper, although the Ontario Board of Censors had readily passed the picture. The Star had been carrying Regent Theatre advertisements regularly, but drew the line against "The Eternal Magdalene." All other Toronto newspapers readily used the offered advertising matter.

Demand for Laboratory Equipments.

The Bass Camera Company, well known dealers in motion picture cameras, reports a heavy demand for complete laboratory equipment. The demand for cameras used in producing weekly pictures has been greater than any previous year. They report having equipped a complete studio and laboratory for a company organized in Mexico City. The demand amongst large manufacturers for motion picture equipment is an evidence that the commercial interests of the United States are rapidly beginning to realize the enormous advertising value of the motion picture. This report is an indication of the ever increasing popularity of motion pictures for commercial or amusement purposes, etc.

France Has Ideal Locale for After-the-War Picture

WHEN the motion picture men who have served with the American Expeditionary Forces in France return to this country, it will only be to turn around and go back again, according to Lieutenant Courtney Ryley Cooper, of the United States Marines, who has just returned from a trip to the battlefields of France. And the reason for all of this is, according to Cooper, that France possesses locations for motion picture photography that cannot be equalled in the United States.

"There is a quaint beauty about France that one doesn't find elsewhere," says Cooper. "Then too, the day of the after-war-story is here—and where can that story be truthfully told in pictures outside of France? All the studio work in the world cannot reproduce the fiendishness of Belleau Wood, where the Marines fought; the queer, mounded farms of Brittany, or the shell-torn regions of the Argonne. There is only one way to reproduce them—and that is to go to France. Otherwise, the foreign producer will have the real article, and the American picture company only the imitation."

Cooper formerly was scenario editor for Norma Talmadge, and for William J. Flynn in the writing of "The Eagle's Eye."

Buss Takes Over Easton's Strand.

C. D. Buss, who left the Third Street Theatre, Easton, Pa., to join the Signal Corps, and who was discharged from the service some months ago, has taken over the Strand Theatre, Easton, and is back in harness again. The Strand is a 700-seat house, modern in every way, and there is a fifty-foot plot in the rear available for enlargement when the proper time comes. Meantime Mr. Buss has his eye on some other nearby towns and hopes soon to have a circuit of several houses within a convenient radius. Mr. Buss is a veteran showman and probably will forge ahead. He did wonders for the Third Street, and with his present associates in sympathy with his aims, he should make himself a power in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Want Censor Member in Pittsburgh

A movement is on foot to have a member of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors stationed in Pittsburgh. That the proposition seems to be destined to success is noted in the fact that a bill providing for an additional member of the board has already passed the State Senate.

The F. I. L. M. Club, of Pittsburgh, has sent a letter to the State lawmakers, pointing out the necessity and advisability of having a representative of the Censor Board in this city.

This communication is relative to Senate Bill No. 510, introduced by Senator William M. Mearkle, of Allegheny County.

War Trade Board Withdraws All Enemy Trading Lists

ALL enemy trading lists heretofore issued or compiled by the War Trade Board have been withdrawn, effective April 29, according to an announcement just made by Chairman Vance C. McCormick. All disabilities heretofore attached to trade and communication with persons included in these lists have ceased to operate.

The lifting of these restrictions does not modify or affect in any respect, however, the present restrictions against trade and communication between the United States and Germany or Hungary, nor does it authorize trade with respect to any property which heretofore, pursuant to the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act as amended, has been reported to the Alien Property Custodian or should have been so reported to him, or any property which heretofore the Alien Property Custodian has seized or has required to be conveyed, transferred, assigned, delivered or paid over to him.

This action is taken by the United States Government concurrently with the Allied Governments. The latter, with the United States, have reserved the right to reissue the enemy trading list and to revive the various disabilities that were attached to trade and commerce should such action become necessary.

Mabel Normand on Song Cover.

Mabel Normand, the Goldwyn comedienne, is furnishing inspiration to music publishers; for her latest photograph appears on the cover of "Kentucky Dream" by S. R. Henry and D. Onivas. The publishers of this song claim that Miss Normand's picture on the cover will greatly increase the sale of the music.

Northam to Show British Pictures at Loew's Roof

ON behalf of a group of leading British film producers, W. Arthur Northam will give exhibitions of British films at Loew's New York Roof, at 11 o'clock on the mornings of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, May 6, 7, 8 and 9. The trade is invited.

Mr. Northam says that British manufacturers are endeavoring to ascertain the demands of the American market, and that the showing of these films is but one indication of their intention to supply its requirements. He asks that every person who attends the showing give frank and fair criticism of the offerings, and during the exhibitions, slips will be given out upon which he hopes the comments will be written. Mr. Northam, who is stopping at the Knickerbocker Hotel, states that he will be glad to entertain propositions for the purchase or rights to the pictures.

Among the subjects to be shown are "The Kiddies in the Ruins," a three-reeler made from Plubot's famous French cartoons; "God and the Man," six reels, Ideal Film Company; "Nearer, My God, To Thee," a five-reeler made by Hepworth; "Uncle Remus—Brer Rabbitt," a split-reel cartoon; "God Bless Our Red, White and Blue," six reels; "Cheerie Chums—Well, I'll Be Blowed," a cartoon; "A Soul's Crucifixion," five reels, and "Cheerie Chums—Hot Stuff," a cartoon by Dudley Buxton.

Marguerite Clark Arrives on Coast.

Marguerite Clark, the Paramount star, has arrived in Los Angeles.

She was met at the train by Charles Eyton, manager of the Morosco studio; Walter Edwards, who will direct her first picture on the Coast, and others.

Miss Clark will begin work in the course of a week under Walter Edwards, the director, on Clyde Fitch's comedy "Girls." The work will be done at the Morosco studio. Miss Clark's stay on the coast is indefinite. This is the first time in four years that she has been in California.

"Fires of Faith" Opens at the Harris.

"Fires of Faith," the special production made by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in co-operation with the Salvation Army, will open its New York run at the Harris Theatre, Monday evening, May 5. This picture, produced in California and New York, presents hundreds of people in its various scenes which, through the narrative on which it is based, depict the work of the Salvation Army both in war and in peace.

Commander Booth will be present on the opening night.

Laemmle Urges Employes to Buy Bonds.

Universal has scored a high percentage in subscribing to the Fifth Victory Loan and reports from the Loan committee show that the employes have responded quickly. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, sent a letter to each of the employes of the firm reminding them of the loan and the fact that the victory of the United States was due to the untiring efforts of the men who went across the sea.

Fred A. Valle.
Who will go abroad in the interest of Poli's.

Whalen's "Great Sardine" Sells Bonds at Poli's

JEFF WHALEN, former vaudevillian, but now in the film business, answered the burning question, "When is a sardine not a sardine?" in his "Great Sardine" act at Poli's Million Dollar Palace in New Haven, when he showed how Houdini could be out-Houdinied for the benefit of the Victory Loan. The answer to the sardine question is, "When it's in a packing box."

Manager Fred Valle, of Poli's, placed the Whalen sardine act at the head of his bill. The act went on as being staged by the Jesters, an organization made up of film salesmen, managers and exchange men of New Haven. When the sketch opened with a request by Mr. Whalen for a sardine can from the audience every one wondered what the connection between Houdini and sardine was. Mr. Whalen then explained that his assistant would escape from the sardine can and thus take the "Who" out of Houdini.

Since no sardine can could be found in the audience, Mr. Wahlen decided to use a packing box, so as not to disappoint anyone. The packing box had a large hole in the back, but no one accused the New Haven Houdini of taking advantage of the situation. After the "escape," Mr. Whalen and a number of actors on the bill sold bonds to the house.

After the show actors, Jesters and all motored to the Shoreham Inn, Shoreham, Conn., and wished "Bon Voyage" to Mr. Valle, who is about to go abroad in the interest of Poli's. Manager Scully, of the Paramount office, won the prize for fancy dancing at the Shoreham. The prize was the privilege of "blowing" the crowd.

Gerald Bacon Is Signed for Big Hall Productions

GERALD F. BACON, producer for stage and screen, has signed with Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation, to make a series of special features for release by Independent Sales through the Film Clearing House. Mr. Bacon will start work on the first of the series within two weeks. He announces that he has virtually completed negotiations with the star of one of Broadway's most successful plays of the current season to portray the featured role in the first of the series of Bacon productions.

First Production "At Sunrise."

For his first screen play Mr. Bacon has the rights to Max Marcin's "Substitute Prisoner." Mr. Marcin is recognized as one of America's best known playwrights, his most successful play of recent years being "The House of Glass." The author's play will be produced and released under the title "At Sunrise."

For the work of adapting Mr. Marcin's play for screen purposes, Mr. Bacon has Basil Dickey, formerly scenario editor of International Film Corporation. Oliver D. Bailey, director of stage and screen productions, will direct the Bacon productions, his work to be under the direct supervision of Mr. Bacon. Mr. Bailey will be remembered for his direction of the stage productions, "Over Here," "Stitch in Time," "Traffic" and "Branded." His ability as a director for the silent drama, is represented in many screen successes.

Dye Buys Ft. Lauderdale Rex.

R. E. Dye, formerly in the theatre business in South Dakota, is evidently a member of the Seven League Boot Club. From South Dakota he has pilgrimaged his way to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and has purchased there the Rex Theatre.

Mr. Dye, remembering from South Dakota days what paper served his interests best, wrote to resume his readership of the Moving Picture World. He will take full charge of the Rex about June 1.

Theda Bara Makes Big Bond Sales.

Escorted by the band of the 152nd Depot Brigade of Camp Upton, Theda Bara went to the booth of the Stage Women's War Relief, in Victory Way, Park avenue, New York, last Friday and sold $100,000 worth of bonds in less than an hour. This was the record sale at the booth since the opening of the loan campaign, and was especially notable because Friday was the coldest April day in years and the Fox star had to compete with a cutting wind and flurry of snow.

Duncan Returns to Lasky Fold.

Captain T. E. Duncan, who has been serving on the general court martial board at Fort McArthur for the past year, has just returned to the Lasky studio and is playing a part in "Secret Service," the Famous Players-Lasky production starring Captain Robert Warwick and directed by Hugh Ford. Captain Duncan was a stock player at the studio before entering the army and expresses great satisfaction at being back again on the lot.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Press Work.

REALLY good press work is not merely the writing of good advertising. In part—and perhaps the greater part—it is the ability to turn all things to the profit of the advertiser. Lately two scraps have been written up in this department. In one instance Steve Farrar was bucking an elaborate seven-reel production of the life of Roosevelt with a two-reel "feature," apparently made up of an assemblage of clippings from the news reels. He got away with it through adroit press work. He made people satisfied with what he had to sell. He had but one talking point, so kept talking about that, and he came through. On the other hand, A. C. Raleigh boosted his prices for a special picture, and when the other houses sought to make capital of the advance, instead of turning the tables on his opposition, he sought to get back with mere statements that the picture was a good one and worth the money. Mr. Raleigh is a good advertiser, but he is not a press man, because he does not know how to turn an attack to advantage; to make adroit use of the material at hand. Years ago a western act obtained a contract to play Keith's Union Square Theatre in New York; then the most desirable booking in the country. For weeks they advertised their date and begged managers and booking agents to "See us at Keith's" on a certain date. Then came the opening and they found they went on at half past twelve and twice between five and seven; hours when no booking man ever sat in the house. The other performers laughed at them, but the man who had the act was a press man and not merely an advertiser. He hustled up to the Clipper and advertised "We lead where others follow," in letters as large as his space would contain, following that with a smaller "Opening the show at Keith's Union Square Theatre." His press work carried him over. He made capital of what at first seemed to be a misfortune. Instead of losing the advance advertising, he made it give a punch to his last approach. Everyone talked about his advertisement and managers gave bookings on the supposition that an act that could pull such a stunt must be good. Not one actor in a thousand would have thought of a comeback. Most of them would either have shut up and have gone back west or would have sought to fight down the poor program placing with a denunciation of the management, but this thousandth man was a press man as well as player and he came through. It is the same way in your theatre advertising. If the other house tries to blanket you, get a comeback that will turn the laugh. That's what press work is.

Something to Copy.

Lately we spoke of the programs from the Star, Westbrook, Maine. W. C. Benson has kindly responded to our request for some samples on white paper instead of the colored stock he usually employs and we are able to give a better idea of the general style. The first cut shows the general plan of the front and back pages. The stock is 3¼ by 10 inches and is folded once to get a four page folder. We show two of the days from the inside page almost full size. This is no better than any average printer can do, if he can be persuaded to do it. The trouble is that most printers are not willing to take the trouble to get a small job just right. It will be seen that the titles stand out well, though the space is well filled, and the sheet has all of the display value of a five by eight page and twenty-four point type. If you will study it closely you will see that the printer has gone to some pains to work out a good combination of types, and if you will take this sample over to your own printer, he can give you precisely the same result if he is willing to take a little trouble. Mr. Benson writes that his town has no local paper so that he has been compelled to put his effort into programs and billboards. He adds that he has been considering the use of the Portland papers, but that the space is so high that he cannot afford enough to make a showing. Westbrook is a town a short distance out of Portland and depends upon that city for its daily paper. Many also take the Boston papers, which are on hand in the morning. There are dozens of small towns in the Portland radius and he must pay for circulation in all of those towns if he uses the Portland paper, though only the people in his own town will respond to the Star advertising. The papers charge an advertising rate based upon their total circulation, though he uses but a small part of this. That is the trouble with general newspaper advertising for a local house. It costs too much per head to reach possible patrons, and it is better to confine the efforts to getting advertising matter to the patron direct through the use of a well printed program.

Simple but Good.

This three sevens from the Rialto, Washington, is all type, but it is a mighty good example of how to display the leading lines. The house, name, title, player and the selling line are in heavy type. The rest is set in twelve point. The all caps is bad, but the four lines in black will do most of the selling. The rest is clincher argument and it does not so much matter whether it is read or not.

A Three Sevens That Sticks Up from the Page and Gives Its Message in a Glance.

At the same time, since the space is there to be used, it would have been better had an upper and lower case been employed. If we had written this we think we would have put a one point rule underline under "entire week of March 9th" under the house name. It would have helped a little. But the main point is that by keeping the minor matter down and the big lines up, the display is capitally done without attractors of any sort. Mr. Moore does with type what others vainly seek to accomplish with cuts and ornaments. He gets his space read the first thing on the page.

Hyman Is Here Again.

Edward L. Hyman, who used to run the Victoria, Buffalo, is now in charge of the Fox Liberty Theatre down in St. Louis. His program is a nice looking sheet, done in dark blue on buff paper. Mr. Hyman never would run a white program you could produce, which is one thing we hold against him, and the only thing, for he gets out a good program, though he is not jazzing this issue as he did the old Victoria program. Perhaps he is still feeling his way. The present issue is only a four pager and is gotten out twice a week to meet the changes. It is purely a house program and not a distributed organ, which accounts for its one, but even here he uses terse phrases nd inviting descriptions. A two five and halfs in the Sunday papers suggests

It seems to be a spe- ial design, though it could very easily e made standard and mortised to let in ype titles. This is hand lettered, but ost of the lettering copies type designs, o nothing is gained in this direction by aving the lettering done. The one ad- antage is that it lets in small letters in isplay instead of straight roman.

McCormicks.

Here are some of S. Barret McCormick's dvertisements for "A Perfect Lady" and Mickey." In the former he took three nd four elevens. The display on the ight shows how his colored advertise- ent looked. In colors the scheme was reen and orange red. The black band ehind the girls at the top was omitted nd they showed in green, overprinted ith black, against the orange ground. he large figures were untouched save or the bands on the hat, which were one in green and the house signature howed green on black, with orange and reen above. The space on the left is etter in black and white. Both suggest he theatrical character of the story while eaturing the minister to show where he interest comes in. It did not require he explanatory text to get that over, but s usual Mr. McCormick gives a strong elling talk. "Mickey" got rather smaller paces, but three thirteens and three levens are not so small, at that, except or McCormick. The space on the right eems to be the master for the colored display, but we have no sample of the colored advertisement, though we gather that the while white figures were done clearest letters are the best, and no use of hand lettering could ever equal the selling value of his type talks, and those talks run more to six than to eight point, as a rule. So regular is his use of this form of advertising that it is now known as "the McCormick style" wherever advertising is spoken of in the theatres, yet few houses copy him, though many could do so and with profit.

For "The Greatest Thing in Life" S. Barret McCormick suggest Griffith's greater triumph in the use of the heart design in all of his displays. This is a nice instance of subtle suggestion. There is no direct reference to "Hearts of the World" save in one instance, but the heart carries its own suggestion. The smaller examples are each three nines, including the margin. In one the heart is in black and the other it is the white outline, with some black hearts in the margin. That on the right carries a top bank of type for the "only a chicken" incident, while the lower is devoted to the director, who is worked into each of the displays shown. The display on the left is rather more general than is usual with Mr. McCormick and in the four twelves he gets even more prominence, though we do not think that "spectacle maker" is a happy phrase since it suggests an optician rather than the creator of gorgeous pageantry.

Larger in Utica.

Clifford A. Carroll writes that the Hippodrome has gone in for larger spaces in the morning paper. Before the decision was made the morning and afternoon papers gave the best results, as the house opens at noon. The evening paper is better where the night business is concerned, but the morning paper will hold over until evening and help the matinee business as well, if the evening papers are not employed. We take it that small cards are also run in the afternoon editions. The first example is a three fives, and the printer is at his old trick of filling the space just as full of type as he can get it. And he does his extras up in neat little panels and uses cross-page rule and does everything else that a trick printer can conceivably do, and Mr. Carroll lets him get away with it. In this instance there is some excuse for the large Charlie Chaplin, but none for the boxing in of the subjects and even less for the cross space rule just above. If Miss Frederick's name had been put in a smaller type, to hold it away from the margin and the title in a letter smaller by twelve points, it would have been more prominent on the page. It is not size, but relative size, that counts, and a smaller letter and some white space is better display than running the largest possible type and hitting right up against the panel rules. The same thing holds good of the two sevens, which is a proportion more generally used. Here about an inch and a half is taken for the underline and the printer keeps a pica inside of the panel. It is poor composition with harsh letters and a composition style that would find approval in the backwoods, but is pretty provincial for a town the size of Utica. The advertising manager of the paper should be ashamed to offer such results to his patrons. We would suggest a drawn signature for the top of the display, to be about the size of the present signature. Then get large, clear faces, but do not pick faces which completely fill the space. If there are small features, play them up, but keep them small. A twelve point is large enough for any one or two reel feature, as a rule. If there are two or three lines of descriptive matter in bank, set it in ten or twelve point Roman instead of bold face, and get some contrast. If Mr. Carroll wants to try an experiment let him get the printer to set up "The Little Princess" with an eight point Roman "The" followed by "Little Princess" in an extended letter on the second line, omitting the quotation marks, which are not really essential. He will find that he can get a better display and he will not need more than the 36 points he now takes, using a 24 point extended for "Little Princess." It will probably look larger than the type he now has. Certainly it will look better.

Bleich on Prices.

George A. Bleich, of Owensboro, Ky., is one of the most adroit managers in the game, and his method of handling an increase in prices is worth studying. Mr. Bleich sends in some slides, of which this is the main argument.

Do You Think I Raise Prices Just Because a Show is Good?
Well I don't! It's only when the cost of Nobody's Kicking! I Merely Want to Tell

A Direct Price Argument Slide from George A. Bleich.

This is simple and to the point. Nobody is kicking, but he wants to make it clear, before someone does kick, just why some shows cost more than others. Building up on this, another slide reads:

Get this!

On Thursday I am offering you a whale of a show! One of the most enjoyable you have ever seen in this theatre.

Will Rogers in Rex Beach's

LAUGHING BILL HYDE

A big picture that is immensely good

"Fatty" Arbuckle in "The Sheriff"

The funniest thing he has ever done.

—Bleich.

THURSDAY IS THE DAY.

Don't quibble about the extra nickel that will be charged.

Another slide is the "The Squaw Man." Here only the "Prices 10 and 20c." alludes to the price, but after announcing it as something extra he adds "Let me persuade you to attend its showing. Do so on my recommendation.—Bleich." He has trained his patrons to know that when he says a picture is good it is above the ordinary and that recommendation beats all the rest of the argument, because it is backed up by years of square dealing with his patrons. Only lately we showed how he warned his patrons against the Caruso picture. That is but one of many similar incidents. The people of Owensboro know that he means what he says, and they bank on his word.

Steve Stunts.

Lately Steve Farrar had an idea he could clean up with "Old Wives for New," so some days ahead of the showing he started in to use readers. We show two of these in the first illustration. One is a single and the other a double three. Another display shows three fours directly under the advertisement of the opposition, while Steve's own advertisement is a double 9½ on the opposite side of the page. Probably Steve figured that the other house would take a three and by making the reader a triple and his own display a single he shoved it where he wanted it without having to ask.

None of the readers repeats the text, though all work along the general lines, and each picks up just a single phase of the story to dwell upon instead of seeking to tell the entire story. This is the essens of the reader. It should always be confined to a single point. It should take up just one topic, handle that interestingly and stop with a "to be continued in our next" effect. Steve has used a reader campaign, or teasers, for several stories of late. Evidently he finds that it pays him to do so. Most always it does, if the story is the right sort, for this special advertising, if not too continuously done, suggests a better-than-usual play, and the very fact of the advertising carries weight, to which should be added the effect of the sharp presentation of one of several angles. Very few houses seem to realize this and most managers seem to prefer to add to the space for their daily advertisement for the underline. The effect is not the same even line. The effect is not as large, and the effect of the extra large space is not as inch reader or teaser. The difference bestriking as the addition of even a twotween a teaser and a reader is merely that the former piques your curiosity where the latter engages your interest through the exploitation of some point of note. But sometimes Steve does more than a reader. Here are two displays from the same issue, and on the same page. That on the left is run in the upper left hand corner; a two nines. The one on the right was shown in the lower right hand corner. It is not the immediate underline. That is carried in the main advertisement. This skips a day and advertises the Saturday features on Thursday. It will be noted that the first of the signed Chaplins runs with two serials. That looks like a pretty good clean-up bill for a Saturday in a small town.

The P. A.

You don't have to lie to be a good press agent, but you do need imagination. A press agent merely presents facts interestingly. He sees more in a statement than the average man and shows what he sees to that average man.

Prices.

No picture is worth ten cents, or twenty or fifty. It is worth what you make it. The picture one man sells for ten cents may be worth a quarter in another man's house—ten cents worth of picture and fifteen cents worth of showmanship.

CLEVELAND MEN HATED TO LOSE MORRIS

So They Gave Him a Dinner, a Desk Set, a Silver Cigarette Case and a Watch Before He Departed

SAM E. MORRIS, district manager of the Select Pictures for Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit, was entertained prior to his leaving for New York to become general manager of Select Pictures.

He was the honor guest at a dinner given by the Board of Motion Picture Exchange Managers of the Chamber of Commerce. At this dinner he resigned as president of the organization and was presented with a silver desk set and a cigarette case.

The employes of the Cleveland exchange presented him with a gold watch and a testimonial letter in which they expressed their regret at his departure and their appreciation of the interest which he had displayed in them.

He left April 28. Mrs. Morris will follow in a week or ten days.

Euclid Opens to Good Business.

The new Euclid Theatre had a very successful opening week, ending April 27. Thos. Carroll is manager, and the orchestra is directed by Max Faetkenheuer. The policy of two changes a week will be continued. The first attraction was "Eyes of the Soul" and "Blackie's Redemption."

Shier Quits, Then Resumes.

Fred Shier, pioneer exhibitor, has sold his Deucan Theatre on Broadway, Cleveland to W. W. Buck. Freddie then turned around and bought the Miles Square.

Brodsky Gets Back

Sam Brodsky, of the Argus Company, Cleveland, has returned from two weeks in the wilds of Ontario, where he filmed a big wood-pulp paper plant.

Adams Carries the Standard.

Charlie Adams, well known in the West, has come to Cleveland, and is now on the road for the Standard Film Service Co.

Klein Says They Are Waking Up.

Dave Klein, Triangle salesman in northern Ohio, reports many small towns just waking up, and business on the increase.

Meinhold Visits Cleveland.

Mr. Meinhold, representing Marcus Loew, was in Cleveland last week looking over the new Loew houses, the Mall and Alhambra.

Washington News Letter

RUDOLPH BERGER is back in civilian clothes and on the job again as a film exchange manager. Mr. Berger opened the Washington office of the George Kleine System and remained in charge of its destinies until he entered the army. He recently secured his discharge from the service and is now manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Company. He succeeds E. C. Stembler, who relieved former manager Crane when he was recalled to the New York office to take a bigger job.

The local Hodkinson office is to be an independent one, and it will no longer come under Philadelphia, this being a feature of the reorganization in the thirty Pathe branches from which Hodkinson distribution is to be made.

Beatus Gave Billie a Bouquet.

Lawrence Beatus, manager of the Palace Theatre, was selected by Marcus Loew to present to Miss Billie Burke a bouquet of American Beauty roses following her appearance before several thousand people who had gathered at the South front of the Treasury Department during the Liberty Loan rally. In the evening the star, with her husband, Florenz Ziegfeld, and Admiral Sims, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson, John C. Flynn, in charge of the advertising work of the Victory Loan Committee of the motion picture industry, Mrs. Flynn, Oscar A. Morgan, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in this city, and Mrs. Morgan, were members of the theatre party at the Shubert Garrick, where "Nighty Night" was viewed.

Hepburn Joins Famous Players.

A new addition to the force at the Famous Players-Lasky exchange is D. Neil Hepburn, recently released from military service. Mr. Hepburn was first sergeant of one of the machine gun detachments with the Twenty-Seventh Division, crack New York outfit. He went over the top with his detachment in the drive starting on September 29. Two days later, while still in the drive, he was shot through the side. He also had the "privilege" of being gassed twice.

Shubert-Garrick Starts Show Later.

The Shubert-Garrick Theatre has just announced that the show will begin at 8:45 hereafter. Manager Edwards explains that this action is due to the fact that under the change of time it is still light at 8:30. With Victory Gardens a big fad, and opportunities offered for tennis, golf and other outdoor sports until a late hour each day, the theatre managers find that their patrons do not care to go indoors to see plays and pictures, unless they can do so after dark.

Sam Flax Is Now a State Righter.

Sam Flax, who has been in charge of special features at the Pathe Exchange, has resigned his position to enter into the state rights business. It is said he has joined with another exchange manager in the purchase of a western serial. Mr. Flax is the brother of Jake Flax, manager of the General Film's exchange.

CINCINNATI PICTURE MEN AID THE DRIVE

Showing Slides, Distributing Films and Serving on Teams, They Are Putting Over Victory Loan

THE Victory Loan campaign is now in full swing, Cincinnati, as usual subscribing generously, more than one-third of the quota being reached the first day of the drive. This excellent showing undoubtedly is partly owing to the patriotic efforts of the picture house managers, who for two weeks past have been showing slides and films in support of the Loan. Besides these activities, the men in the business have devoted considerable of their time to the regular work of the committees and teams, many of them being members of the various teams, and all of them doing everything possible to aid in the work.

H. P. Wolfberg, of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, chairman of the committee booking the Victory Loan pictures in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia, has been a very busy man for the past two weeks, distributing the films. The artists contributing the films used here are Geraldine Farrar, Dorothy Dalton, Charles Ray, George Beban, Charlie Chaplin, Dustin Farnum, Elsie Ferguson and Nazimova.

Good Programs and Good Business.

Patronage at the local houses continues to be remarkably good. Despite all counter attractions, such as boat excursions, baseball games, Liberty Loan activities, flying circuses, parades, etc., as well as warm and pleasant weather, the people flock in undiminished numbers to the picture houses. It is seldom possible at the evening or Sunday performances to get a seat immediately after purchasing tickets, and as a general rule a wait of from a quarter to a half hour is necessary. Excellent bills have been the rule at all the houses, and this policy on the part of the managers undoubtedly has served to overcome the natural tendency of the people to desert the theatres for the out-of-door pleasures. Prospects seem bright for the continuation of these conditions. All of the managers are having the cooling systems looked over and placed in perfect condition for the time when they will be needed.

The Walnut Will Be Camouflaged.

The art of camouflage will be resorted to in carrying out improvements scheduled to be made in the near future at the Walnut. Increased seating capacity and new decorative effects being desired, and the management not wishing to close the house, called on the architects, carpenters and plasterers to devise some means by which this work could be accomplished without closing. Camouflaged coverings will be used, behind which the work will be done while the shows proceed.

This house celebrated the opening of its fourth season with an elaborate "Spring Festival" program. Beginning Sunday, April 27, and continuing for one week, the program consisted of "The Veiled Adventure," "Johnny Get Your Gun," a new release of Prizma Films, "Women of France," a Victory Loan picture and the Pathe News. This program was put on with an orchestra of twenty-five pieces.

What the Theatres Are Screening.

This week's programs at the first-run houses include: "The Pest," at the Gifts; "Good Gracious Annabelle," at the Family; "The Sheriff's Son," at the Strand, and the Talmadge-Stone combination at the Walnut. The Royal has "The End of the Game"; the Alhambra, "The Fire Flingers"; the Orpheum, "A Man and His Money," and the Lubin, Martin Johnson's "Captured by Cannibals."

Pathe News Pictures Cincinnati.

A film of particular interest to Cincinnatians is shown at the Walnut this week. It was taken by the Pathe News photographer during the airplane fight and shows a panoramic view of Cincinnati, this being the first picture of this nature ever taken of Cincinnati.

Jones Will Build House in Brighton.

Garland R. Jones is having plans made for the erection of a moving picture theatre at 1114 Harrison avenue, Brighton, in the western section of Cincinnati. The building will be a one-story structure, 55 by 76 feet, and will cost approximately $9,000.

Lyric Will Go to Pictures May 11.

The Lyric will open for its summer season of pictures Sunday, May 11, under the management of I. Lisbon. The initial feature will be the Artcraft-Paramount production, "Oh, You Women."

Pittsburgh News Letter

Globe of Washington Will Be Enlarged.

EXTENSIVE improvements will be made to the Globe Theatre, Washington, Pa., house during the coming summer months, and will accordingly close June 15. At present the house has a balcony and a gallery. The present plans call for the removal of the gallery and the house will have but two floors, but the capacity will be increased from 800 to 1,300. The cost of the improvements will total $30,000. The Globe is owned by J. R. Forest and is leased by the M. Horton Company. J. W. Mercer is the manager.

Grelle Gets Carroll.

Harry Grelle, general manager of the Supreme Photo-Play Productions Company, Pittsburgh, has secured the service of Norman S. Carroll, to act in the capacity of special representative covering the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia with the picture "Mickey."

Mr. Carroll will be remembered as general manager of the Pitt Theatre, Pittsburgh, and by many of the big pictures he handled successfully throughout Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia at $2.00 top admission price.

Moving Day Approaches.

Joseph Duke Harrison, architect for the Paramount Company, of New York, was in Pittsburgh, recently, going over the plans for the new film building in Forbes street. It looks now as if the work on the building will be completed about the middle of May, at which time there will be a general exodus from the building at 938 Penn avenue, when the Metro, Universal and Pathe will join Paramount in occupying the new film building.

Bonistall's Bunch Is on Bonus List.

Manager Bonistall, of the Pittsburg Paramount, received word from the home office, that his branch is leading all other in number of contracts secured on "O You Women." This office is also on the bonus list and the various heads of departments will accordingly share in some extra cash. Three roadmen here are specializing on this production, E. Steuve, T. P. Kelly and T. P. McLaughlin.

Independent Display Company Moves.

The Independent Display Company, of which T. P. Miller is manager, moved Saturday, April 26, from 938 Penn avenue to 127 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh. They now occupy four floors, giving them plenty of room, where heretofore they were badly cramped. The mounting department occupies the two upper floors and the office and salesrooms located on the first and second floors.

Regent Succeeds Strand.

The Regent Theatre, formerly the Strand, Washington, Pa., was reopened Monday, April 21, by John Connors, with "Don't Change Your Husband," for a three-day run. The picture went over big. The Regent is a 500-seat house and was formerly run by Clark & Elder. It had been closed for repairs and re-decorating since April 1.

Hagerty Succeeds Carroll.

Succeeding Norman S. Carroll as manager of the Independent Sales Corporation, releasing through the Film Clearing House, Pittsburgh branch, is W. J. Hagerty, who came from New York, Saturday, April 19. Mr. Hagerty's film experience was gained with the Famous Players and Triangle, with whom he was associated during the past two years.

Burkhardt Take Option on Imperial.

Mike Burkhardt, owner of the Imperial Theatre, New Kensington, has taken an option on the Strand Theatre in the same town and in case he closes the deal will manage both houses. Mr. Burkhardt is one of the best exhibitors in this section and has been very successful in his various ventures.

McCalmont Sells Burgettstown House.

R. V. McCalmont, owner of the Auditorium Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa., announces the sale of the theatre, including the property, to George Claire, a resident of the town, the new owner to take charge May 5. Mr. McCalmont intends starting a new house in another town and has several propositions under advisement.

And When He Steps on a Tack——!

F. C. Bonistall, manager of the Pittsburgh Paramount branch, is the master of seven languages: English, French

The Cast Was Casting About for Something to Do

So it was obliged to have its picture taken. Such was the fate, en route to Florida for exteriors, of these members of the cast of "The Great Gamble," Pathe's serial with Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison, who are seated at the left.

Spanish, Portugese, Italian, Belgian and German.

Hullinger Joins Martin.

O. A. Hullinger, Jewel salesman for the Universal, has resigned his position and has associated himself with J. H. Martin, who is handling "The Finger of Justice" in West Virginia.

Universal Puts on New Salesmen.

Two new men have been engaged in the salesforce of the Pittsburgh Universal exchange. Frank Windstein, formerly of Fox and F. L. McNamee, a new man to the business. W. J. Fitzpatrick has resigned and his territory in the northwestern part of the state will be handled by A. H. Schnitzer.

Weiland Back with the Bacon.

Manager A. A. Weiland, of the Standard Film Exchange, Pittsburgh, has just returned from New York with several new films. He signed up for the new series of Jester Comedies; a serial, "The Masked Rider," and the Ham and Bud reissues.

Reiff Will Smooth 'Em Down.

Harry E. Reiff, assistant manager of the Pittsburgh Universal, has been delegated to settle disputes with exhibitors. Manager Stern will hereafter devote all of his time to the salesforce.

Personal and News Notes.

Henry Poke, owner of the Shiloh Theatre, Mt. Washington, Pittsburgh, has been confined to his home the past two weeks, seriously ill.

R. Coon, formerly of the Fox branch at Buffalo, N. Y., is now with the Pittsburgh branch of the same company.

The only movie house at Wilson, Pa., is reported as being closed.

The Avenue Theatre, Bloomfield, Pittsburgh, began matinee showings Monday, April 28.

Baltimore News Letter

Majestic Is Now the Arcadia.

THE Arcadia is the new name selected by Broadway Theatre management recently for the former Majestic Theatre, 320 South Broadway, which they have taken over. This house will be under the management of J. Louis Rome, who also manages the Broadway and Baltimore theatres. The theatre was reopened to the public on Easter Monday. It has been entirely redecorated, and the lighting, heating and ventilating systems have been renovated. New chairs and a new screen have been installed. Two new projection machines have also been purchased. The approximate cost of improvements is $2,500.

Lewy and Barry Shoot Airplanes.

Moving pictures of the airplanes which flew over Baltimore on Saturday, April 12, to open the Victory Loan drive, and details connected with unloading the machines at Camden Station, were made by Harry Lewy and his assistant, J. Aler Barry, of Baltimore. The landing of the machines at Halethorp and their maneuvers in the air were caught by the cameras at this point and at Patterson Park.

Saunders Visits Baltimore.

E. M. Saunders, sales manager of the Metro Film Company, visited Baltimore recently.

Silverman Now at the Wilson.

Dave Silverman, a member of the Operators' Union, Local No. 181, has returned from the navy. He is now operating at the Wilson Theatre.

SAN FRANCISCO HOUSES CHANGE HANDS

The Cory, Fairmont, Lyric, Regent, Bell as Well as the Burlingame Theatre Now Have New Owners

MANY transfers of moving picture theatres are being made, recent transactions consummated through the United Theatre Exchange being the sale of the Cory Theatre, 2241 Union street, San Francisco, from J. A. Wallach to W. F. Haussler; a one-third interest in the Fairmont Theatre Company, from O. B. Atkinson to William Godfrey and Harry Sack; the Lyric Theatre, on Fillmore street, from Sack & Rothchild to A. Fisher; the Regent Theatre, at Fillmore and Clay streets, from W. F. Haussler to William Corbett; the Bell Theatre, on East Fourteenth street, Oakland, from H. Taylor to C. Hellman, and the Burlingame Photoplay Theatre, Burlingame, from George Roy to C. F. Archibald.

Camera Man to Return to Air Service.

G. Smith, of Oakland, Cal., who has been in the air service of the navy department for the past two years, has secured a release from duty and is visiting friends and relatives at San Francisco. He found aerial photography very fascinating work and plans to return to this at an early date.

World Film News.

Manager Floyd St. John is delighted with the manner in which business has been growing of late and is now attempting to secure an adjoining store in order to relieve the present cramped facilities.

Jack Frazier, until recently with the All Star, has joined the selling staff of the World.

They Kinogrammed Meyerfeld.

Morris Meyerfeld, president of the Orpheum Circuit, recently completed his one-hundredth trip across the continent, and the last lap of the journey was caught by a Kinogram cameraman on the San Francisco ferry.

Famous Players-Lasky Notes.

T. M. LeBerthon, who has had charge of the publicity department for several months, has resigned and plans to engage in film publicity work at Los Angeles. He has been succeeded at the San Francisco office by E. N. Ayer.

W. A. Churton, auditor, has been transferred to the Seattle branch.

News of Stars and Producers.

Kitty Gordon, who recently came to San Francisco to establish her home, has forsaken studio work for the present and will appear at the Casino Theatre for an indefinite period in musical revues.

Pauline Stark and Jack Holt are expected here shortly to make pictures on the waterfront for "Romany Rye."

Pauline Frederick and a company of twenty-five will shortly engage in picture work here and in the East-Bay suburbs, according to an announcement from Los Angeles.

Joseph A. Eliason, of the Hermann Film Company, Los Angeles, was a recent visitor in San Francisco to make arrangements for the erection of a studio for the production of Chinese films featuring Moon Kwan, author, poet and actor. This concern has Margery Wilson, former Griffith-Ince star, under contract for five features.

The Seller Film Company is engaged in production work at Calistoga, where a small studio has been fitted up.

Film News in Brief.

He's a real African king welcoming the Outing-Chester man on the veranda of his palace in "Cameraring Through Africa."

HERB JENNINGS LETS HIS PATRONS KNOW

Toronto Bloor Theatre's Manager Does Not Believe in Hiding His Light Under a Bushel

MANAGER Herb Jennings, of the new Allen's Bloor Theatre, Toronto, did not allow Easter to slip by without presenting the compliments of the season to regular patrons of the house. Manager Jennings distributed a neat little folder, printed in purple ink, on the outside of which appeared the words, "Easter Greetings." Inside the folder were pictures of Easter lilies and an Easter chicken with the seasonly announcement —"The management of Allen's Bloor Theatre extends Heartiest Easter Greetings."

Announcement was also made that arrangements had been made for delightful children's matinees during the Easter vacation with the presentation of "A Romance of Happy Valley" during the first half of the week of April 21, and the presentation on Thursday and Friday matinees only of Mary Pickford in "Johanna Enlists," and on Saturday morning and afternoon only, of Marguerite Clark in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Tells the Children About It.

With the adoption by the Ontario Legislature of an amendment to the existing laws to provide for the admission of unaccompanied children to moving picture theatres for Saturday and holiday matinees, Manager Jennings arranged for the distribution of a special blotter among all school children of the district to announce special attractions for children's performances on the Saturdays of May and June.

The Imperial Maintains Regular Prices.

The Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., has made it a policy to maintain regular prices at all times, regardless of the importance of an attraction. The Imperial has been presenting some of the very best pictures on the market, but yet the admission prices are never changed. The scale runs at 10c and 15c for matinees and 15c and 25c for evening performances. The owner and proprietor of the Imperial is Harry Brouse.

Picture Advertising Looms Up Big.

The Ottawa Journal carried four full pages of moving picture advertising and reading matter in the issue of Saturday, April 19. One whole page was taken up with an announcement of the presentation of "The Unpardonable Sin" at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, during the following week. Another whole page was devoted to announcing "Queen of the Sea," at the Imperial Theatre.

Ottawa Houses Enjoyed Good Easter

Two Ottawa, Ont., theatres played to big business during Easter Week. The Regent Theatre was packed for four days during the run of "The Unpardonable Sin," for which special prices were charged. The Imperial Theatre also had a fine week with Annette Kellerman in "Queen of the Sea," at regular prices.

Portland News Letter

Film Men Aid Loan.

AFTER a slight delay, due, say exchange men, to a misunderstanding as to who should do the work and a consequent shifting of responsibilities, the exploitation films for the Victory Loan are all booked and working. Apparently whoever had charge of the film arrangements at headquarters conceived the idea that Seattle was the only city in the Pacific Northwest, and left the Oregon territory to be handled from the Sound metropolis.

C. M. Hill, manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was the patriotic exchange man who volunteered his services in getting the loan films started. Mr. Hill employed a booker especially for the work, and it was through his efforts, backed by the co-operation of the other Portland exchanges, that the films reached the state's exhibitors on time.

Hastings Is Back as Auditor.

Portland.—H. F. Hastings, well known for his bookkeeping activities for the old Portland Mutual office, has returned from overseas and is back in the employ of the Exhibitors Mutual in the capacity of Western Division auditor.

In the Army Hastings was mess-sergeant and had for his bunkie Bill Davis, now with Universal. They were in the thick of the fighting on the Western front.

Hood River Theatre Reopens.

After being closed for more than a year, the Empire Theatre, Hood River, has been reported by Art Kolstad, owner of the Liberty. Mr. Kolstad controls the theatrical situation in Hood River, and heretofore concluded that business conditions warranted keeping only the big house open. Increased patronage has compelled him to run both theatres.

Makes His Own Juice.

Portland.—B. J. Callahan, the sage of Seaside, was a recent visitor on Film Row, making his bookings for the summer season. In past seasons, Mr. Callahan says, he has had trouble with the power failing on big show nights, and he is now installing his own lighting system to obviate future necessity for refunding the patrons' money.

"Safety First" Was Not Safe.

"Safety First" was not safe in Gardiner. The Universal film of that name was destroyed in a film fire April 17. There was no other damage to the theatre reported.

Oregon Briefs.

The Orpheum Theatre, Klamath Falls, has reopened.

Pete Sabo has supplied new Power's equipment to the Portland Union Avenue Theatre.

S. LaRouge has opened a theatre at Ridgefield, Wash. He already conducts the Wonder Theatre, at Battleground, and the People's Theatre, at Yacolt, Wash.

The Service Film Company, Portland, heretofore conducted by W. A. Stone and Thomas Duncan, has branched out after new projector business, and new capital has been added to the company by S. S. and H. Neal East buying the interest of Mr. Duncan. Mr. Stone retains his old interest.

The Portland Paramount Artcraft office sent a report to the home office showing that for the week closing April 12, the local branch broke all records for booking and collections.

Recent visitors on Film Row were: A. H. McDonald, Eugene; W. M. Bestone, new owner of the Liberty Theatre, St. Helens; L. O. Lukan, Pathe exchange; L. A. Todd, Fox representative; W. J. White, Cottage Grove.

Reports have come in showing the recent openings of the following theatres: Opera House, Walport; Gem Theatre, Tillamook, and the Yoncalla Theatre.

Detroit News Letter

The Miles Does Well During Holy Week.

GUS GREENING, manager of the Miles, Detroit, says there is no such thing as a poor week in show business; and he proved it for the week of April 13th, which was Holy Week. This particular period of seven days was the best in the history of the house, breaking all past records for attendance. Mr. Greening booked an Exhibitors Mutual feature, "Hoop-La," and also a complete show of circus acts. He transformed his lobby into a side show of a circus, with fat lady, snakes, clowns, spielers, etc. He advertised strong in the newspapers, billboards and street cars, with the result that almost every mother and father in the city brought the children. It took several policemen every day to handle the crowds.

Moeller Gives a Dance.

A. J. Moeller, manager of the DeLuxe Theatre, Detroit, pulled a good stunt at his house on Wednesday evening, April 23, in connection with a three-day engagement of "A Midnight Romance." First he gave a midnight performance, preceded by a dance in the foyer, which was arranged to resemble the ball room scene in the picture. The novelty had the whole East Side of Detroit talking, and there was a large crowd to participate.

Minter Gets Two More Pictures.

James M. Minter, who operates under the name of Super-Attractions Company, 53 East Elizabeth street, Detroit, has purchased from Harry Goldstein the Michigan rights to "The Accidental Honeymoon" and "The Struggle Everlasting." Mr. Minter also owns "Birth" for Michigan and is now negotiating for several other state rights attractions.

Niles Strand Will Be Enlarged.

Harry Angel and Robert Codd, owners of the Strand Theatre, Niles, announce that they will start remodelling the house sometime late in May, spending around $7,500 on improvements. They will increase the seating capacity to 750. During alterations the theatre will be closed. Messrs. Angel and Codd also operate the Lincoln Theatre, Owosso.

Dennison Succeeds Mead.

D. Leo Dennison, recent manager for the General Film, has been appointed Detroit manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corp., succeeding Charles A. Mead, who will manage "Yankee Doodle in Berlin" for Mowatt and Diehl. Mr. Dennison is well known in the Michigan territory having been for many months Detroit manager for the Paramount.

More New Houses for Detroit.

Among the newest theatre enterprises being proposed for Detroit are those of the Ferry Field Theatre Company, who plans a new house on Grand River avenue; John H. Kunsky, who plans a new East Side theatre on Jefferson avenue; Warren and Cohen, who plan a 3,000-seat house just north of Grand Circus Park; Wadlow Brothers, who plan a new house on Hamilton Boulevard.

Butterfield Secures "The Birth of a Race."

Col. W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, who operates a circuit of theatres in Michigan, has secured the Michigan rights for "The Birth of a Race." He has already booked it to John H. Kunsky, first-run in Detroit, and it will play the entire Butterfield circuit as soon as the vaudeville season closes.

"The Red Lantern" Is Going Well.

M. C. Hughes, Metro manager, reports that exhibitors are booking "The Red Lantern" for long runs. Already James Steele has booked it for a week for the Regent Theatre, Bay City; W. S. McLaren has booked it for four days in Jackson; Claud Cady, of Lansing, has it booked for four days, and Lew Barnes, of Kalamazoo, also booked it for four days.

Majestic Holds Over "The Better 'Ole."

"The Better 'Ole" was held over for three additional days at the Majestic Theatre, Detroit, although originally booked for the first four days of the week of April 13.

Short News Notes.

L. C. McConnell, former World salesman, has joined the force of the United Picture Theatres, Detroit.

John H. Kunsky has placed an order for two new Power's machines to be installed in the Alhambra Theatre, Detroit.

J. L. Chapman, Caro, Mich., has sold the Temple Theatre to Clarence H. Schuckert and F. H. Shuckert.

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service, was in Detroit recently conferring with Manager Jess Fishman.

Seigel and Feigensen, who own the Bernhardt Theatre, Detroit, have taken over the Irish, at Joseph Campau and the Boulevard, and have appointed Harry Breneau as manager.

Ira H. Cohen, Metro salesman, was robbed recently of $800 worth of diamonds. The theft was made from his apartment at the Hotel Addison.

C. N. Norris and Bernard Shanley are two new salesmen in the Vitagraph exchange. Mr. Norris came from Cleveland, while Mr. Shanley was former house manager of the Wenonah Theatre, Bay City.

Discloses Mysteries of the Telephone.

"How the Telephone Talks" is a feature of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph for April 27 that will delight and entertain every user of the telephone. By the aid of diagrammatic charts the artist illustrates just how the voice is carried over the telephone wires and transmitted to the ears of a person miles away. The diagrams explain the mystery of the telephone in a simple manner which will readily be understood by every picture fan.

INDIANAPOLIS HOUSES HAD BIG EASTER

The Afternoon and Evening Crowds Proved Too Great for the Theatres' Seating Capacities

INDIANAPOLIS picture theatres did an excellent business on Easter Sunday. Especially was this true of nearly all of the big downtown theatres.

The throngs seeking admittance to the downtown houses during the afternoon and evening could not be handled adequately, and it was estimated that several thousand more admissions could have been collected if the seating capacity of the theatres had been larger.

What the Houses Offered.

The Easter offering at the Circle was Nazimova in "Out of the Fog," the photoplay adaptation of the stage play, "'Ception Shoals." The program at the Alhambra featured Marguerite Clark in "Let's Elope," and included a Mutt and Jeff comedy, a news reel and appropriate music. The Colonial presented "The Lamb and the Lion" and Harold Lloyd in "Crack Your Heels"; the Isis had Bryant Washburn in "Something to Do" and a comedy film, "Lost, a Bridgroom"; the Regent had Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives," and the Keystone presented "Vanity Pool."

What has been said of the downtown motion picture theatres also applies to the neighborhood houses, many of these reporting the best Easter day business in years.

Carthage Is to Have a New House.

A new motion picture and vaudeville theatre is to be erected at Carthage, Ind., in the near future. Carthage is a progressive little town in Rush county and has long felt the need of a modern theatre building. The proposed structure will be built of brick and will have a seating capacity of about 1,000. The Odd Fellows' lodge will occupy the top floor of the building and the basement will be made into a dancing hall.

The Millers Will Open in Decatur.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Miller, of Niles, Mich., have leased the Terveer Building, at Decatur, Ind., and expect to open up an up-to-date motion picture theatre there about June 1. Mr. Miller, who formerly operated a motion picture theatre in Niles, has just returned from Florida, where he spent the winter.

Giving Them the Air.

George Greenleaf, chief inspector for the Indiana State Industrial Commission, has been making a tour of inspection of theatres in the north part of the state recently. He said he found general conditions good, but was forced to instruct several of the exhibitors to improve the ventilating system of their operating booths.

Omaha News Notes

Peavey Has a Good Idea.

MANAGER C. L. PEAVEY, of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in Omaha, has instituted smoker-showings for the film trade three days each week at the rooms of the Omaha Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, 212 South Fourteenth street. From 10 A. M. to 12, on each Monday, Wednesday and Friday, he shows a feature and a comedy, the latest bookings, and at the same time passes around an unlimited supply of smokes. The idea has proved a winner.

Chenoweth Is Promoting News Films.

H. F. Chenoweth, of Lincoln, has established a motion picture developing and print-making plant over the Exhibitors Mutual exchange in Omaha, and is promoting the Central State News Motion Picture agency. He intends to make moving picture reels, showing happenings of local interest throughout the central states, and book his pictures in central cities and towns.

Strand Plays Up Local Hero.

Manager Harry Watts, of the Strand Theatre, Omaha, Neb., found the Pathe News Weekly of April 27 included a picture of Lieut. Allen Tukey, Omaha hero, being decorated with a distinguished service cross. He played up the idea in his advertisements. "I always use the local touch where I get a chance. It pays," he said.

A Conference to Put Dessert in "Desert Gold."

Russell Simpson, E. K. Lincoln, Zane Grey and Frank Brownlee confer on the Zane Grey picture to be distributed by Hodkinson.

J. B. JULIUS OF DES MOINES WILL BUILD

His New Theatre Will Seat About 1500 Patrons and Be One of the Finest Houses in the State

J. B. JULIUS, of Fort Dodge, will build a new theatre seating more than 1500 which will be ready for opening in the early fall. Plans have been drawn for the building which will occupy a site on the principal business street of the city, the realty has been arranged for and all that is holding up immediate action is the labor conditions.

Julius has been in the picture business in Fort Dodge for the past four years. He opened the Strand with Ed Awe, later selling out to Awe and purchasing the Majestic Theatre which he still operates. He has proven a shrewd showman and the new house will be one of the finest in Iowa.

H. M. Berman in Des Moines.

H. M. Berman, general sales manager of Universal, was a Des Moines visitor last week. He spent one day in conference with local manager M. J. Frisch and expressed himself well pleased at the progress Frisch has made since taking over the reins as manager last summer.

"Intolerance" Here at Last.

For the first time "Intolerance" has been shown in Des Moines in a picture theatre. A week's engagement at the Rialto of the Griffith special attracted large business and the picture gave general satisfaction. It was shown here two years ago as a road show at $2.00, playing four days to light business at that scale. The showing at 25c and 50c at the Rialto attracted large crowds.

Nazimova in Long Run.

Manager Abe Frankle, of the Rialto, has booked Nazimova for this house for a two weeks' run at 25c and 50c. He plans a big advertising campaign.

Good Newspaper Work.

During the engagement of "What Every Woman Wants," at the Palace, a two-page spread of ads connecting up on the picture proved effective publicity. It made a circus flash and business responded to the unique manner in which the subject was boosted.

Lego Out of Service.

Henry Lego, former owner of the Majestic, at Fort Dodge, who has been in the service in the accounting department at Camp Dodge, has been released and plans to embark in the picture business again. Lego plans a chain of theatres in smaller towns and already has his eye on two locations.

Heller at Marshalltown.

A. H. Blank announces the appointment of H. A. Heller as manager of the Strand at Marshalltown, Iowa. He succeeds J. Jolly Jones, Jr., who is reported to have organized a stock company to promote a new $50,000 theatre at that city.

Gottlieb Promoted.

Harry Gottlieb has been placed in charge of the shipping and inspection departments at Universal. He is one of Manager Frisch's most valuable men and his promotion is a deserved one.

Strike Still On.

The building strike involving all allied labor organizations is still on here and work is at a standstill. Two theatres have new machines on the ground waiting for the break in the strike to secure the services of electricians for installation.

Breezes from Salt Lake

Universal Gets Rialto.

UPON its completion not later than November 1, next, the new Rialto Theatre will be used exclusively for the exhibition of Universal motion pictures. The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has completed negotiations for the new house, which is being built in connection with the new Clift Building, Main street and Broadway. Announcement has been made that the Universal has taken over the lease of Edward Mehesy, proprietor of the old Rialto.

The lease is a favorable one, running for a long term of years. While the exact length has not been divulged, it is known that it provides the company with an outlet for its product in Salt Lake for years to come. The transaction is reported to have involved in the neighborhood of $100,000.

The theatre will have a seating capacity of about 1,200, and it is announced that a pipe organ to cost not less than $40,000 will be installed.

Quill Manages Strand.

L. Quill has been appointed by W. H. Swanson as house manager of the Strand and Liberty theatres in this city, which are under the general management of George Mayne.

Welcome Young Marcus.

Louis Marcus, district manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is the proud father of a new son.

United Office May Be Transferred.

Announcement is made that the office of the United Picture Theatres of America which has been maintained here is to be transferred to Denver.

The Cast Enacts "The Onlookers" While the Directors Work.

Kansas City News Letter

Henneberry Buys Paint and Equipment.

TOM HENNEBERRY, manager of the Wagner Amusement Company, of Independence, Kan., with theatres in that town and also Fort Scott, Paola, and other towns, recently paid a visit to Kansas City to book up for the summer with the A. H. Blank Enterprise Company. He announced that the Snark, his Independence theatre, was to be completely remodeled, redecorated and newly equipped. The Beildorf, of Independence, has closed for the summer, and its air-dome will be opened as soon as the weather will permit. The Best, of the same city, will continue its former policy of showing nothing but high-class pictures.

Miss Wright Is on the Right Track.

Miss Harriet B. Wright, manager of the Cosy, Topeka, has successfully exploited "A Midnight Romance," the costumes and stage settings of which appealed to the society people of the capitol city. She sent out engraved invitations to the ladies of Topeka, besides sprinkling numerous items with regard to the play through the columns of the daily papers.

Parks Is Now a Distributor.

J. L. Parks, formerly manager of the Seelye Theatre, in Abilene, Kan., has entered the distributing end of the moving picture business and has located in Omaha. He has bought the state rights for Iowa and Nebraska for "Tempest and Sunshine," which will be his first exploitation.

McAvoy Revisits His Old Territory.

Earl McAvoy, manager of the Mutual, is making a personal trip over his old territory in Kansas, visiting only the larger cities.

Personal and News Items.

A new theatre in Springfield, Mo., the Liberty, with James Allen as manager, has opened.

Manager Josephson, of the Victory, has contracted for first-run issues three days in the week.

E. J. O'Donnell, of New York, is in the city to secure and install a new manager for the United.

Harry Coppock, formerly Vitagraph traveling man in the Oklahoma territory, is now taking contracts for the same company in Southern Kansas.

Ray and Fair Begin Third Picture.

"Be a Little Sport" is the title of the third picture to be made for William Fox by Albert Ray and Elinor Fair. The picture is now in work at Hollywood under the direction of Scott Dunlap.

The story was written by Hale Merriman, and the scenario is the work of Joseph A. Roach.

In the supporting cast are Lule Warranton, George Hernandez, Leota Lorraine and Eugene Palette.

Last of Morrison's Westerns Titled.

"Kingdom Come" is the title given the last of a series of two reel Western dramas written expressly for Pete Morrison by Dorothy Rockford. The entire series was written by this authoress from whose typewriter such stories for the screen as "Motherhood," "The White Rosette" and "Redemption" have issued.

Why the Smile? We'll Tell You.

Pathe's "The Cry of the Weak" and Fannie Ward has just—nope, it's all off. You'll have to see it yourself.

Buffalo News Letter

olice Chief Endorses Sunday Pictures.

HIEF James W. Higgins, of the Buffalo police department, is an ardent advocate of Sunday moving picture formances.

I am strongly in favor of this class Sunday entertainment," said Chief Higs. "I say this from the point of view a police officer. The Sunday program motion pictures; that is, the proper s of films, serves more than one pure. It offers an opportunity to young n to find some other source of amuseat that shooting crap or hanging und corners."

Hippodrome Showed Soldiers.

pictorial history of the movements of 108th Infantry and the 106th Field illery, of Buffalo, from the time they Camp Upton until their arrival at Buffalo armories, was shown recently the screen at Shea's Hippodrome three rs after the finish of the parade here. Hippodrome camera man was with boys since their demobilization.

Penitentiary Will Not Get Projector.

CHARLES SEGAL BUYS ANOTHER THEATRE

Philadelphia Exhibitor Gets the Fifty-sixth Street House with Its Apartments and Stores

CHARLES SEGAL has purchased the entire block from Fifty-sixth to Fifty-seventh street, and from Pine to De Lancy, including the Fifty-sixth Street Theatre, apartments and stores situated on the site. The property was purchased from the Fifty-sixth Theatre Company.

Mr. Segal also owns the Apollo Theatre, at Fifty-second and Thompson streets, a large and up-to-date theatre, for which he has built up a very large and high-class patronage. He has been a pioneer in the business, having bought and sold more than a dozen theatres in every section of Philadelphia during the past twelve years of his successful exhibiting career.

Knapp Now Censors Chairman.

Harry L. Knapp, a dramatic editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer, has been appointed chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors. Mr. Knapp succeeds the late Frank E. Shattuck, who was also an appointee of the Governor. The local film industry, although generally well pleased over the appointment of the new chairman, does not consider the situation very much relieved, as Dr. Oberholtzer and Mrs. Niver can still control the final decisions made by their two-thirds vote.

Boyd Will Open Another House.

Mastbaum Brothers and Fleisher, representing the Philadelphia Trust Company, executors for the estate of Joseph Harrison, have leased the building at 722, 724 Market street to Alexander R. Boyd for a term of years. Mr. Boyd will open up a first class moving picture theatre after extensive alterations, costing over $50,000, are completed. Mr. Boyd is now operating The Family, The Arcadia, The Great Northern, The Virginia, in Atlantic City; Colonial, in Camden, and many others.

Karrer Leaves Fox.

Bill Karrer has resigned from the Fox Film Corporation and will devote his entire time to the operation of the Strand Theater, in Gloucester, N. J., with Jack Greenberg. Extensive alterations and improvements have been made on the Strand and a large organ installed. A strictly high-class policy with big features at high prices of admission will be inaugurated.

Richardson Gets Royal Reception.

Many notables in filmdom attended the annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which was held at the Adelphia Hotel, April 14, 15 and 16. F. H. Richardson, of the Moving Picture World, was given a royal reception by his host of friends and followers and the members of I. A. T. S. E. Local No. 307.

Mrs. Buhler Pushing Loan Work.

Mrs. F. W. Buhler, who was appointed chairman on the Women's Downtown Entertainment Committee for the Victory Loan, has apparently acquired her husband's genius to guide her throughout her patriotic endeavor. In addition to several theatres, she has secured the best talent obtainable in Philadelphia, who have volunteered their services in order to help sell Victory Bonds.

Triangle Exchange Get Banner.

The Triangle exchange was the first to receive the Victory Loan 100 Per Cent. Banner through the energetic solicitations of Bill Humphries, the manager, who turned in over $1,500 worth of subscriptions on the first day of the drive.

Short News Items.

J. E. Farrow, former cashier of the Mutual exchange, who is stationed on the receiving ship at the local navy yard, recently visited his friends on Vine street. He expects shortly to be mustered out.

Manager Max Milder, of the Select exchange, has announced his engagement to Miss Ray Shirley, of New York. The date of the wedding will be given out later.

Our partnership started four years ago—one office, one typewriter [rented], one assistant on more or less steady salary.

We worked hard and grew rapidly; and added to our office space and forces from time to time.

We found it necessary to once again enlarge our offices and add to our staff of competent assistants.

All our departments continue to grow, whether engagement, publicity, book and play, studio, film marketing, photographic, financing. A friendly rivalry exists between each department.

We are grateful to the producers, managers, exhibitors, directors, artists, cameramen and technical men who have given us such generous support and who have made our success possible.

It is our earnest endeavor to merit and increase our clients' patronage and confidence.

Pioneer Purchases Rapf's "Sins of the Children"

THE Pioneer Film Corporation announces its purchase of Harry Rapf's production of Cosmo Hamilton's successful novel, "Sins of the Children." Alma Hanlon and Stuart Holmes are the stars of this picture, which is said to be one of the biggest produced by Harry Rapf, who has a number of successes to his credit.

This is the second big deal recently put through by the Pioneer Company, which only a short time ago purchased "The Boomerang," starring Henry B. Walthall, and is in line with the plans of the executives to make this one of the largest state rights companies in the country.

In anticipation of a big increase in business resulting from these two purchases the home office of Pioneer is being enlarged, and M. H. Hoffman, general manager, contemplates making several additions to his working force.

Another Sale on Brady Film

WILLIAM A. BRADY announces the sale of "Stolen Orders" for eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware to the Metro Film Exchange of Philadelphia. Robert Lynch, manager of the Philadelphia Metro office, will shortly inaugurate an extensive campaign of exploitation on behalf of this picture.

This sale, following on the heels of that for Illinois to Jones, Linick and Schaefer, of Chicago, indicates the keen interest and further substantiates record "Stolen Orders" is making at box offices all over the country.

Jans Closes Many Sales on Tom Mix One-Reelers

THE Jans Distributing Corporation, of which H. E. Jans is president, announces that practically the entire state rights territory on the Tom Mix reissues have been disposed of. Mr. Jans says that exchange managers report that exhibitors take to these pictures with avidity, inasmuch as one of the most popular actors of the day is presented in them. The stories are full of action and include the sort of stunts that have made the star famous.

Following is a list of the territories disposed of: Northern New Jersey to Modern Film Co., New York; eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey, to Electric Theatre Supply Co., Philadelphia; western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to Craft Film Service, Pittsburgh; Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia, to Baltimore State Rights Co., Baltimore; Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan, to Standard Film Service, Cleveland; Minnesota and North and South Dakota, to B. N. Judell, Minneapolis, Iowa and Nebraska, to Sterling Film Company; Omaha; Missouri and Kansas, to First National Exhibitors, Kansas City; Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, to R. D. Lewis Film Corp., Oklahoma City; Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida, to Southeastern Pictures Corp., Atlanta.

H. F. Jans
Distributing Ham and Bud and Tom Mix reissues.

The Tom Mix pictures are one reel in length and are released weekly. Mr. Jans has purchased the right to forty of the subjects. The prints are said to be in excellent condition while a line of accessories, including one and three-sheets, 11x4 stills and slides is supplied. The pictures are released under their original titles.

Sales for "Virtuous Men" Reported by S-L Pictures

S-L PICTURES announces the following sales of territory on "Virtuous Men," produced under the supervision of Ralph Ince and starring E. K. Lincoln. Arthur S. Hyman, of the Hyman Film Attractions, Detroit, has acquired the rights for Illinois, Michigan and Indiana, while H. C. Simeral, general manager of Co-Partner Attractions, of Pittsburgh, has secured rights for Ohio, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hyman plans an extensive exploitation campaign in behalf of this picture and will advertise it heavily in his territory. In connection with his purchase he says, "'Virtuous Men' is the biggest box office attraction I have acquired since I secured rights to 'Hearts of the World.' I have been waiting for many months for a production of this quality and size to offer to exhibitors as a successor to the D. W. Griffith masterpiece. 'Virtuous Men,' from the standpoint of magnificence, punch and spectacular effects, is the greatest picture I have viewed in months. I feel sure it will be one of the biggest money makers I have ever handled." Mr. Hyman has already ordered ten prints for his territory.

Mr. Simeral also believes that this production will be hailed as a box office winner by the exhibitors in his territory, and will present it personally in many of the large cities as a theatrical attraction.

Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin announce that bids for territory are being received from every section, and it is expected that the entire territory will be disposed of within a short time.

Texas Guinan in "The She Wolf," a Frohman Amusement Two-Reeler, Looks Like an Honest-to-Goodness Gun Lady.
"The She Wolf" is one of a series of Western two-reel features being made under the direction of William L. Sherrill, seen on the right with his company on location.

Nearly All Territory Sold on "The Carter Case"

SIMULTANEOUS with the announcement of the completion of "The Carter Case," the Craig Kennedy serial featuring Herbert Rawlinson as Kennedy and Margaret Marsh as Anita Carter, Harry Grossman, vice-president and general manager of Oliver Films reports that this production has been purchased for distribution in practically every territory in the United States and in all foreign countries.

"Booked around the world before completion can be truthfully said of 'The Carter Case,'" says Mr. Grossman. "The bookings are being made at a rapid rate, and the territory of greater New York may be taken as a criterion that will indicate the remarkable success of this serial throughout the country. Pioneer bookings are piling up at a rapid rate and seem to point to a new record for colume in this territory."

Impressed with the picture's powerful appeal, and cognizant of its unusual advertising value by reason of the popularity of the Craig Kennedy detective stories, exhibitors are making "The Carter Case" an important part of their program, and reports indicate they are finding this serial a decided asset from a box-office standpoint. For example, at the Symphony Theatre in New York, the first house to exhibit the picture, extra performances were necessary to accommodate the patrons.

Since the release of the serial, similar reports are said to have been received from exchanges and exhibitors in different parts of the country, new attendance records being made in many houses. The officials of Oliver Films voice deep gratification at the success of their efforts to produce a serial that would be one of the best episode pictures made, and which they announce is piling up new records for rapidity and volume of bookings, rapidity of sales, attendance and popular approval.

American Cinema to Star Mollie King in Six Films

IN accordance with the terms of a contract negotiated by her manager, Sanger and Jordon, Mollie King will return to the moving picture field, and will be starred in a series of six pictures to be made by the American Cinema Corporation.

Miss King's return to motion pictures will not interfere with her engagement with "Good Morning, Judge," a stage production in which she is now appearing at a prominent New York theatre. However, she has retired from the cast of a midnight roof performance in which she has also been working.

The American Cinema Corporation is a newcomer in the industry. Studio facilities have already been acquired and the cast to support the star selected. John Stahl, who has directed a number of pictures for Florence Reed, has been engaged to direct the series of specials for Mollie King.

Busy Week for Pioneer

THE past week has been a busy one with the Pioneer Film Corporation, many out-of-town buyers having called to see M. H. Hoffman, the new general manager. Among them were T. L. Talley, of San Francisco; R. A. Scott, of the W. P. Dewees office in Vancouver, and Mr. Flynn, of Richards & Flynn, Kansas City.

All three of these gentlemen bought territory on "Wives of Men," starring Florence Reed, and, in addition, Mr. Flynn also secured "The Still Alarm" for his territory.

John Schuberg, of Vancouver; A. Cubberly, of Rubin and Finkelstein offices in Minneapolis, and R. D. Craver, of Charlotte, were also among the callers.

E. S. Manheimer Secures Foreign Rights to Serial

THE entire foreign rights on "The Great Gamble," a thirty-one-reel serial, have been purchased by E. S. Manheimer, with offices at 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. This production was made by Western Photoplays and was directed by Sidney Golden. Charles Hutchinson and Anna Luther are the featured players.

This serial is announced as being filled with punch scenes, and many unusual stunts are performed by Mr. Hutchinson in the role of the hero. Anna Luther plays two separate roles, two twin sisters, one reared by the father in wealth and luxury, the other by an adventurer who secured possession of the child upon the death of her mother. The plot involves the attempt of the adventurer to substitute the child in his care for the wealthy sister and Hutchinson's attempt to fathom the mystery surrounding the daughter whom the father believes to have been drowned when a baby.

Henry Walthall Evidently Doesn't Fear "The Boomerang."

Star-Gazing.

Special Twenty-four Sheet for First S-L Production

IN ORDER to assist state rights buyers in exploiting "Virtuous Men," S-L Pictures have prepared a special twenty-four sheet lithograph, which is announced as being distinctly theatrical in makeup and coloring in view of the decision of certain buyers to present this production as a theatrical attraction.

This lithograph was designed by R. G. Morgan, creator of some of the posters for the Victory Loan, and is being made by the Butts Lithograph Company. It presents E. K. Lincoln, Grace Darling, Clara Joel, Robert W. Cummings and William B. Mack in one of the most dramatic moments of the picture, and is executed in eight colors by a new process. An effective color scheme will bring out the title, "Virtuous Men," from a great distance, while the figures in the illustration are several degrees larger than life-size.

In addition to this twenty-four sheet a series of distinctive posters have also been designed by such well known artists as Clarence F. Underwood, Gustav Michelson and R. C. Luders, embracing several types of one, six and twenty-four sheet posters.

Many New England Bookings on Latest Frohman Feature

W. E. AECHTLER and Edward F. Farrell, of the Major Film Corporation, of Boston, called at the office of the Frohman Amusement Corporation and reported that the production, "Once to Every Man," is booked solid to the middle of July in Massachusetts and Connecticut, and that they have not as yet even attempted bookings in the remainder of the New England States. Mr. Farrell stated that the women patrons of the theatres have taken to the attraction to the same extent as the men. This is said to be an unlooked for situation, largely because of the predominance of the fight scenes in the production.

While at the office of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, Messrs. Farrell and Aechtler closed for the entire series of Texas Guinan two-reel Westerns and the Mack Swain comedies, announced for state rights distribution by the Frohman Amusement Corporation in another column of this publication. Mr. Farrell further stated that he would exploit the Westerns and comedies as separate and independent special productions, and will pursue a novel campaign of exploitation.

Arrow in New Offices

HEADQUARTERS of the Arrow Film Corporation are now located on the fifth floor of the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, his company having moved from the Times Building on May 1. The new offices are well appointed and several features which will appeal to state rights buyers have been introduced.

Big Business for Pioneer Subjects.

The New York exchange of Pioneer Film Corporation reports that the Al. Jennings pictures, "The Lady in the Dugout" and "Hearts of Men," starring George Beban, have been signed for the entire circuit of Loew theatres, also that bookings are exceptionally heavy on the Craig Kennedy serial, "The Carter Case," and on the new Pioneer release, "Virtuous Sinners."

H. F. Jans to State Right "Ham and Bud" Reissues

H. F. JANS, of Jans Productions, Inc., has bought the negatives for the entire series of "Ham and Bud" comedies released by Kalem. He will reissue these under their original titles and believes that they will meet with success similar to that now greeting the Tom Mix reissues which he distributes through another company.

The "Ham and Bud" comedies were immensely popular when first released," said Mr. Jans, "and the two leads are still popular today. Both Lloyd Hamilton and Bud Duncan put new stuff into their comedies, original with them. For this reason the comedies will score as well today as they did two years ago. We tried one of them out in a New York City house and found that the crowd liked it."

The "Ham and Bud" comedies will be sold on a state rights basis and a line of accessories is now being prepared for their proper exploitation. New prints will be made and the reels will be offered in practically new condition.

Cohen and Spitzer in Chicago

AS a variation of the coast to coast trips frequently indulged in by film officials, Milton L. Cohen, president of the Bulls Eye Film Corporation in New York, and Nat H. Spitzer, studio manager in the Hollywood studio of the company, left their respective offices a few days ago and met in Chicago on April 27 for a conference on Billy West comedies.

"It is our desire to make better and better comedies," says Mr. Cohen, "and the conference in Chicago was arranged to obviate a coast to coast trip.

Arrow Sells Territory on Several Productions

W. E SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, states that his company has had one of, if not the most successful week of its career. Buyers from all parts of the world have been visitors at the Arrow's office. The Western serial, "The Masked Rider," has been the cause of much favorable comment. The stars in this serial are Ruth Stonehouse, Harry Meyers and Paul Panzer. Practically all territory for the Neal Hart Western five-reel feature, "When the Desert Smiled," has been sold. Among the sales reported by Arrow for the week are: "The Masked Rider," for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to the Standard Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, also to the Southeastern Pictures Corporation, of Atlanta, for North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee; "When the Desert Smiled," starring Neal Hart for northern New Jersey to Thomas Toby, of 126 West 46th street, New York; "The Demon's Shadow," the reissue serial featuring Mitchell Lewis, for Ohio, to the Ohio Ivan Film Company.

"Open Your Eyes," the Warner Film, Has a Message of Good Health.

Aywon Reports Sales

NATHAN HIRSH, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, reports that during the past few weeks Aywon has sold much territory for their Security Features. Among the sales are:

To the Sterling Film Company, 1417 Farnum street, Omaha, Neb., Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

To the Savini Film Co., Atlanta, Ga., for Alabama, Georgia, and North and South Carolina.

To the Penn Film Service, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Oliver Issues Press Sheets for "Carter Case" Episodes

AMONG the exploitation aids that have been prepared by Oliver Films, Inc., in behalf of "The Carter Case," the Craig Kennedy serial featuring Herbert Rawlinson and Margaret Marsh, are a number of comprehensive press sheets issued as supplements to the campaign book furnished.

Each press sheet contains a number of selected newspaper articles dealing with the various episodes of the serial and with the stars, making available for exhibitors an assortment of articles ready for insertion in newspapers.

Oliver Films, Inc., has also made up such fundamental aids as paper, stills, slides, banners, heralds, publicity illustrations, lobby display, advertising lay-outs and a complete campaign book, for assisting exhibitors in exploiting the Craig Kennedy serial.

Sawyer on Sales Trip for Initial S-L Picture

ARTHUR H. SAWYER, of S-L Pictures, left New York this week for a trip in the interests of "Virtuous Men," the special film production sponsored by Herbert Lubin and himself. Mr. Sawyer will carry two prints of this picture, and has arranged for special screenings in Boston of this production starring E. K. Lincoln for New England state rights buyers. After which he will arrange for a run of the picture at one of the leading theatres in that city. On leaving New England, Mr. Sawyer will visit practically all of the states west of Denver.

Bert Lubin, of the S-L selling forces, also left New York on Monday for a tour of the Northwestern states in the interests of "Virtuous Men." He will make his first stop at Minneapolis.

Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin report the closing of several sales in connection with their picture, and it is believed the entire country will be disposed of within the next few weeks.

Alpha Announces Sales

ALPHA PICTURES, INC., announce the sale of foreign rights for its production "Reclaimed," starring Mabel Julienne Scott and Niles Welch, to International Photoplay Distributors, Inc., also the sale of the rights to the New England states to the Major Film Corporation of Boston.

Frohman Company Completes Two Guinan Westerns

THE officials of the Frohman Amusement Corporation are enthusiastic over the progress that has been made on the series of two-reel Texas Guinan Western pictures that are being filmed at the Frohman West Coast studio, and still more over the prospects which they announce indicate these productions will be one of the photoplay sensations of the year.

"Anyone," says J. J. Goldburg, general manager of the company, "who imagines the art of photoplay has reached its zenith will awaken to the fact that there are things yet to be done that will lift the motion picture beyond what it now stands for. The ingenue, sweet and bewitching, always will be with us, but the day of the woman of brawn and brains is about to break upon the horizon, and Miss Guinan in the character of a woman of the great Western plains will, we are sure, present a new example of character that is dear to every heart.

"W. L. Sherrill, president of the company, is so enthusiastic over these productions and the work already accomplished that he is determined to go further than he originally contemplated, for he believes the showing of the first few releases will establish Miss Guinan as one of the most popular characters in filmdom. It has often been said regarding pictures that no expense is being spared. However, if any five- or six-reel Western production can show more punch, greater detail, more extravagant sets or more beauty than the Texas Guinan Westerns we have failed in our mission."

Among the interesting items in connection with the making of these productions is that one of William S. Hart's former mounts is used by Miss Guinan, and a real Chinese actor is cast in the role of a Chinese owner of a dance hall. Every man employed in the pictures received his training on a ranch, while the productions are being directed by Cliff Smith, who has achieved an excellent record as the director of Western pictures.

The release of these attractions will commence on May 10, and already there is a heavy demand for these pictures both from buyers and exhibitors. The exploitation and advertising matter will be along the lines employed for feature productions.

Timely Items in Gaumont News.

Among the interesting items in Gaumont News No. 58 released April 29 was the farewell to the famous 26th Division in Boston, and the arrival in San Francisco of twelve United States submarine chasers, after a 9,000-mile trip from the Azores.

Other items of interest include a thrilling hold-up of a Liberty Loan express staged by Bill Hart at San Fernando, Cal.; Alamo bell at San Antonio pealing again for the dead heroes, and beach beauties in the annual fashion review at Venice, Cal.

Tyrad Open Office in Los Angeles.

Tyrad Pictures, Inc., distributors of special features, announce that they have opened a branch in Los Angeles, of which Al. Nathan is manager, at 802 South Olive street.

Premiere of "White Heather" at Rialto Theatre, May 4

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S latest production, "The White Heather," will have its premiere at the Rialto Theatre, New York, on Sunday, May 4. Each of his productions has had its premiere at either the Rialto or Rivoli theatre. "Sporting Life" and "Woman" both had their premiere at the Rivoli.

Special interest is attached to the production because it is not only his first production in several months, but it is also the first picture made by the director in California.

"The White Heather" is based on Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton's famous Drury Lane melodrama, which had a remarkable success in London and later in New York.

When Mr. Tourneur took his entire studio staff to California, he selected "The White Heather" as his first production. The background of the melodrama is divided between the Scotch highlands, the London financial district, the slums and the ocean.

"The White Heather" culminates in a death struggle between the hero and the villain at the bottom of the sea, both trying to get possession of the fateful paper locked within a water-tight chest. These scenes were actually taken on the ocean floor off San Pedro Harbor, Mr. Tourneur utilizing the newest sub-sea photographic inventions of the Williamson Brothers.

For "The White Heather," Mr. Tourneur gathered such able players as Mabel Ballin, H. E. Herbert, little Ben Alexander, Ralph Graves, Jack Gilbert and Spottiswood Aitken.

Raver Reports Big Business on "The Liberator" Serial

REPORTS from various territories where D'Annunzio's war hero, "Maciste," the star of two great spectacles now appearing in the serial, "The Liberator," are said to confirm Harry Raver's prediction that "the big fellow's" newest vehicle would prove a splendid box office attraction and add greatly to his popularity.

"Distributors who displayed a tendency to hold back because the 'Maciste' production was produced upon 'foreign' soil," says Mr. Raver, "are now convinced that 'Maciste' is just as popular with an American audience as he is in his own home town. Besides, 'The Liberator' is excellent entertainment, appealing to all classes, races and creeds. No audience cares where it was produced so long as it satisfies."

Regarding the disposal of territory, Mr. Raver announces there is a heavy demand in some territories from buyers who are willing to buy blindly at reduced figures, but that he prefers to wait until the distributor comes to New York and sees the entire twelve episodes, when he feels sure deals can be arranged without cutting the price schedules already set, which were established on a live-and-let-live basis.

Mack Swain Has Finished First Two Poppy Comedies

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation, distributing the Mark Swain Poppy comedies on the state rights basis, announce that the first two productions have been completed, and that the release of these attractions will commence May 10. There will be twenty-six productions, released one every other week, and the officials of the Frohman Amusement Corporation feel that the demand for these comedies justifies them in believing that the entire country will be disposed of within an unusually short time.

The Swain comedies will not be of the slapstick variety, and it is said that nothing savoring of either the crude or the vulgar will be shown in any of the productions. The stories screened were written largely to suit the talents of Mr. Swain himself. The productions are being directed by Walter S. Frederick, who received his training as an actor, stage director, manager and author of stage attractions. His screen career was established with Kalem, Biograph and Keystone.

Mr. William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, is now on his way East with the first two of these attractions.

Shipyard Provides Setting for Big Scenes in S-L Film

IN ADDITION to the other punch scenes in "Virtuous Men," S-L Pictures call attention to a realistic moment, in which John P. Wade and William B. Mack figure. The scene shows a huge scaffolding built alongside a ship in the course of construction, and was taken in the Sun shipyards, at Chester, Pa.

Wade walks under the scaffolding while one of the conspirators in the plot causes a large wrench to be dropped. The effect of this implement striking Wade and the realistic manner in which he is felled is said to provide one of the big thrills of the picture. Three cameras were upon this scene to give the desired effect.

BOOSTING TAYLOR HOLMES IN "TAXI"

Advertising Ideas and Press Notices to Aid Picture Showmen in Taking Full Advantage of Their Promotion Opportunities on the Latest Issue from Triangle

By Epes Winthrop Sargent and Walter K. Hill

IF you play "Taxi," the newest Triangle with Taylor Holmes as star, these aids will help in the game of winning ticket-money from the public. The comedy was made from a magazine story and Mr. Holmes will be known to houses where Triangles are shown through his recent appearances in "It's a Bear," "A Regular Fellow"; and now comes "Taxi," which is recommended as best of the lot. The comedy moves swiftly, there is a love interest to hold attention and Mr. Holmes is a lively principal in a good supporting organization.

Get the press book. There are ideas there to help. But what we print here is different again—the combination should give every picture showman who plays "Taxi" the greatest possible help in putting over the subject. Press notices and program aids; the story of the plot, catch lines for advertising and suggestions for advertising and boosting will be found here to work in combination with—or without—the press book. If you fail to get the company advertising aids in time there is material here to swing the picture anyhow.

Sell the Star But Boost Story.

You will be able to sell Taylor Holmes to greater advantage than the story, but by no means neglect the story angle. This is a talking point not to be neglected, but work chiefly on the star. If you have not played the Essanay productions in which he has been seen and they have shown at some other house in your town or district, get into the territory of that other house with paper and throwaways.

Tell that Taylor Holmes is now to be seen at your house in his newest stories. Recall the success of the star in his earlier appearances, refer to "A Pair of Sixes," to "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," "Its a Bear," and others by title, then tell that his newest story is from George Agnew Chamberlains story which ran in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

If you have played his earlier successes, you do not need to work so strenuously to connect him with your house. All you have to do is to tell that you have him in another story, but tell that as widely as possible. Get plenty of paper out, and take some of it outside of your usual territory. Make his name draw you extra business.

It can where he has been seen, and even where his pictures have not been played his name is known to the fans and will bring people to your house. Buy a little extra lithographic paper and spread it widely. If you get only a dollar's worth of patronage out of a dollar's worth of paper, you are sending those people out of your house well pleased and determined to come again.

Story from the Cosmopolitan.

But do not expect the fact that you have Taylor Holmes to bring your business without effort on your part. You must make known the fact that you have him and then get your patrons interested in the particular story you are offering. Do not feature the story, but play up the action to build immediate interest. Make them want to see Holmes in this particular story

Offer it as an accurate picture of New York. Tell your people that when Randolph tells his servant to meet him at the corner of Sixty-third street and Central Park West, the picture is made at that exact spot; that it shows glimpses of the crowded traffic of Broadway and Fifth avenue. Tell that it shows some of the homes of fashion on Washington Square North, where a few fashionables still hold their own against Greenwich Village and tell of the glimpses of night life as a taxi driver sees it.

Use some of the paragraphs from the press sheet bearing upon this last angle. They cover the ground thoroughly. You can appeal to the temperance people with the horrible example idea and to the more convivial in a lighter vein.

Play Up Accuracy of Location.

For more direct work hook up with your local taxi company, if there is one. If you have only a fliver or buss service you can work this. Get out cheap but neat cloth signs reading "Taxi," and in smaller lettering "See Taylor Holmes drive a Taxi at the Blank Theatre, date." Perhaps the taxi company will unit with you in a joint advertisement, the taxi company telling the reader to see the play at your theatre to realize the excellent service they give. If you cannot get signs on the cars, get signs for the taxi stations.

Taylor Holmes in "Taxi."
Showing his regular togs and some others, not his.

Stage Stories Always Attract.

Take up the stage angle. Tell the story along these lines. "Duke Beamer was not a theatrical angel, but he had many investments in successful shows—mostly girl shows—and woe to the chorus girl who refused to respond to his advances. She lost her place and she did not find another one.

"But when he sought to bend Vivien Vivierre to his will he did not reckon on Robert Hervey Randolph, who knocked him down and then bore the girl off in Beamer's own car. Some nerve, but Randolph was all nerve and he knew just what to do."

You can get a good sensational advertisement by telling in large letters "Pretty chorus girl spends night in young man's apartment." Then add in smaller type "while he went out and got a job as taxi driver because he knew that his income stopped when the lost heiress was found."

Accent High Cost of Living.

Another good lead would be a "Could not marry on $10,000 a year," telling how Madge Van Tillier threw him down because he could ot provide her with the pretty things she craved. In many sections you can get up a newspaper dispute on whether it is possible to live decently on $10,000 a year. Use a big $10,000.00, in figures, to head your advertisement.

The figures mean more than the words and putting a decimal point and the noughts for cents will make it look even larger. You can use the same idea for a throwaway headed "Can you live on $10,000.00 a year?" Most of your readers will be doing it on less than that, but the question will interest them.

"My, what a bump!" which is used several times in the play can be made into a local catch phrase for the time being if it is run as a teaser before the advertising campaign and repeated on snipes if practicable. You do not have to have the snipes printed if you can get some white paper and a man who can letter roughly but neatly.

Boost Star with Photographs.

Use plenty of personal photographs as well as still, and use these for window cards as well as lobby display. Hook up with clothing and furnishing stores for window displays, calling attention to the store's own stock and telling the passerby to compare the styles with those worn by Holmes and it will be found that the offerings are right up-to-date. Get the portraits in dry goods and candy stores where the women will see them, and use cuts in your advertisements in the newspapers.

If you want to work the streets send out four men each with a sandwich sign front and back, each one lettered with one of the components of "taxi" and marching in regular order. On each one, at the bottom and top give the name of your house, star and date in small lettering, but make the "Taxi" so large that it can be read across the street. Send the men along four abreast where possible.

March of the Sandwich Men.

Arrange the lettering so that the man with the T in front carries the I on his back with a-x, x-a and i-t for the other combinations so that the sign will read correctly front and back. Where they cannot march in fours send them in single file with instructions to line up at the curb now and then in close order.

For a lobby novelty get a closed car, if your lobby will hold one, and sell tickets from the interior instead of from the box office. Put a one-sheet above the car and rig up a taxi clock for the front.

Taxi Ticket Wagon Iden.

On the front dash letter in soap mixed with colored pigment, "Buy your Taxi tickets here." If your lobby is too small, plant the taxi at the curb and sell from there as well as at the regular box office.

Many youngsters have pushmobiles. Offer a small prize for the best taxicab, strictly the work of any boy or boys under fourteen to come to your house the afternoon of the first showing. Advertise the event in your paper or by throwaway, and try and get a crowd to watch the judging.

They may not buy tickets at the time, but they will remember the title, and the boy contestants will be walking advertisements. Give them at least a week to work in. Get some local garage man for the judge. Give a couple of additional prizes if there is a good turnout and give each contestant a pair of matinee tickets.

Synopsis of "Taxi," with Cast.

Triangle's Special Presentation. From George Agnew Chamberlain's Cosmopolitan Magazine Story. Directed by Lawrence Windom. Photographed by George W. Peters. The cast:

Robert Hervey Randolph...Taylor Holmes
Madge Van Tillier.....Irene Tams
Vivien Vivierre.....Lillian Hall
Sweet Genevieve.....Maude Eburne
Duke Beamer.....Henry Sedley
Mrs. Borden Millyuns.....Jane Jennings
Eileen Millyuns.....Olive Trevor

On an income of only $10,000 a year Robert Hervey Randolph hoped to marry. But the girl he had chosen for his wife decided that she was too expensive for him—and jilted the young man remorselessly. The girl's thought was that in the event of a certain other girl turning up, Randolph's fortune would simmer down to nothing and the rightful heiress would gather in the sheckles.

Disconsolate, Randolph goes from the house, having been jilted, and falls into the wrong taxi. He is wheeled away to the stage door of a theatre where he overhears a conversation between Vivien Vivierre and Duke Beamer, one of the species New Yorker who seeks women of the stage as companions. Vivien is objecting to what Beamer is saying to her—and Bob hops out of the taxi and with a blow cuts short the conversation.

Then Robert escorts the girl to her apartments and learns from her that she is really Imogene Pamela Thornton—the girl "Pam"—who is heiress to the fortune Randolph is drawing on. Realizing that he must go to work, Robert buys a job, uniform and all, from a passing taxi driver and becomes one of the hundreds of men who live on the results of New York night life. Pam comes into possession of her fortune, consisting largely in stock controlling the Ajax Taxicab Company.

Beamer, in revenge, attempts to become possessed of enough stock to impoverish Pam, because she would not consent to his continued attention. Robert becomes aware of the scheme, rounds up his own society friends and swings to himself the election Beamer wanted.

Then Pam meets again the young man who has won her love and so strangely disappeared. Robert retires as a taxi driver and generally manages his pretty wife's fortunes. Such is the outline of "Taxi," a plot filled with lively comedy and snappy action, in which Taylor Holmes will be seen at the (insert name of theatre and date).

"Shorts" for Program and Newspapers.

Taylor Holmes, the renowned comedian of stage and screen, is coming again to the (name theatre and date) for presentations of his latest success, "Taxi," a snappy comedy made from a magazine story by George Agnew Chamberlain. Here is a play of many comedy possibilities in which Mr. Holmes acquits himself to the very last opportunity.

Taylor Holmes, a driver of one of New York's ocean-going taxicabs, will present George Agnew Chamberlain's magazine story, "Taxi," in screen form at the (insert theatre and date) with a large and skillful company in his support. "Taxi" was written principally for laughing purposes, although there is an engaging love story to cement the "heart interest."

How a New York taxi driver gained fortune and a wife by his skill as pilot through the busy thoroughfares of the great city will form the principal element in the screen comedy, "Taxi," to be presented at the (insert name of theatre and date) with Taylor Holmes the hero of the occasion. Mr. Holmes will be pleasureably recalled for his work in numerous screen plays as well as for his stage successes. "Taxi" will provide a world of fun.

Taylor Holmes, star of "Taxi," coming to the (insert theatre and date) has won screen fame for his clever comedy developments in numerous plays of recent vintage. "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," which he played on the stage; "Efficiency," "Edgar's Courtship," "It's a Bear," "A Regular Fellow," and other screen successes, have been his. In vaudeville he gained his first fame, but now he is appearing exclusively in films under management of the Triangle corporation.

Press Notices for "Taxi."

Taylor Holmes comes to the (insert name of theatre and date) for presentation of his latest screen success, "Taxi," a comedy made from George Agnew Chamberlain's magazine story. In this feature Mr. Holmes plays the role of a taxi driver who makes all-night cruises around the districts where bright lights gleam, finally driving his way to happiness and fortune under the most unexpected circumstances. Mr. Holmes has established himself as a screen star through frequent appearances in such successes as "A Pair of Sixes," "It's a Bear" and "A Regular Fellow." On the dramatic stage he scored successfully with "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," and in vaudeville he has always been a headliner of immensely popular appeal.

No matter how clever the star, the supporting company must represent talent as well, and be it said for Taylor Holmes that he has always insisted upon skillful associates in all of his screen plays. This fact will again be demonstrated when "Taxi" is presented at the (name theatre and date) with Mr. Holmes heading a carefully chosen cast. "Taxi" was made from George Agnew Chamberlain's story of the same title, reflecting night life in New York when the lights burn brightly and high-speed taxicabs roam the streets in search of more or less belated "fares." But New York night life is not alone reflected in "Taxi"—there is an impelling love interest to make the play appealing to all classes for theatregoers. For it will stand repeating: "All the world loves a lover"—and Taylor Holmes makes you laugh while he makes love in the most approved fashion.

He Drove Taxicabs and Became a Hero.

Could you live on $10,000 a year? And marry an expensive wife?

The girl said Taylor Holmes, the star of "Taxi," couldn't do so—and thereupon jilted him.

So our hero began driving a taxicab—and ran across the right girl.

See how nicely it works out when "Taxi" is presented at the (insert name of theatre and date).

ANNOUNCING THE

PEERLESS STANDARD PROJECTOR

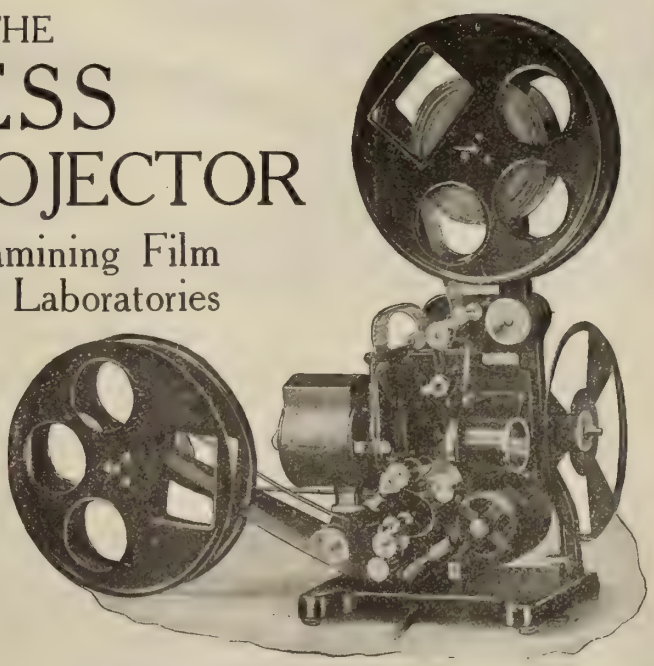
Ideal for Editing and Examining Film in Theatres, Studios and Laboratories



WITH PLAIN REEL ARMS

The PEERLESS STANDARD PROJECTOR has the wonderful 5 to 1 eccentric star intermittent movement and a balanced shutter of three equal 45 degree blades that passes 62½% of the light from the objective and gives an absolutely flickerless picture at less than normal speed.

Particularly adapted to film inspection and editing, as it can be operated at any speed or stopped for cutting and patching.

Using a 28 WATT lamp, even negative can be safely projected, thus saving time and expense of unnecessary print.

Takes one thousand ft. standard reels, operates from any light socket. Uses 2¾ amperes with motor drive, or less with crank. Projects pictures up to 10 feet wide at any distance up to 75 feet.

With plain reel arms folded and current wiring attached, outside dimensions are 13 inches long, 8 inches wide and 13 inches high. Weight with motor 23 pounds.

A Good Picture Deserves Good Projection

Poor projection prevents appreciation of good picture qualities. Under such conditions all efforts for perfection in producing will have been in vain.

Westinghouse Motion Picture Equipments aid projectionists in bringing out every artistic achievement that is embodied in the film for the patron's entertainment. They insure that fundamental requirement of good projection—a steady and brilliant light—and, consequently, pictures that are always steady and clearly defined.

Westinghouse Motion Picture Equipments are very simple in operation. No tinkering is necessary, no electrical adjusting is necessary, nor is any great electrical knowledge necessary to keep them operating. Once started, they may be forgotten—the bright, steady light tells the projectionist that his Westinghouse set is operating satisfactorily, and he is free to concentrate on many other duties that require his undivided attention. Lens Charts Help.

Ralph Humbert, member local union 72, Bay City, Michigan, says:

"Have applied the lens chart, Decem- r 28 issue, to my optical trains and find at it improves my projection consider- bly. I expect, in the very near future, install a new outfit. Projection dis- nce 169 feet, with a 22-foot 8-inch pic- re. Seventy amperes D.C. at arc. I ish to use 100 amperes at the arc. ould you advise M-Bi C or plano con- x condensors; and what focal length? ill you supply me with a chart covering is?"

Have, as yet, no chart for such high mperages. Am preparing to have arc afted. It will be published when com- ete. I would strongly advise against a -foot picture. There is no necessity r it and it will be difficult to brilliantly luminate, both by reason of size and npossibility of avoiding large light loss projection lens. Even though the rear ats be 169 feet from the screen (if they e) a 19 or at most a 20-foot picture is nply large. Those who cannot see ainly from rear seats will sit further wn, and those with long vision will seat emselves further back With a 19-foot cture titles can readily be read by nor- al vision at 200 feet. Then, moreover, nother equation enters when you use normally high amperage on a long focal ngth projection lens, viz: as the am- rage increases the distance from con- nser to film decreases, with result that e long focal length lens is made in- easingly inefficient with each amperage mp. That this is true, and is a very rious matter, I shall soon prove by in- sputable evidence. However, if you in- st on the hundred amperes and the 23- ot picture I would advise you to try get hold of a Sabo projection lens. ith it you would obtain greater increased ficiency. Send letter in stamped en- lope and I will forward it to Mr. Sabo. nder the abnormal condition you pro- pose I believe the M Bi-C lenses would be best, but cannot say what focal length would suit the condition. You will have to wait for that, probably for a couple of months anyhow.

Good Stunt.

John Griffith hands us the following:

"With reference to criticism by John Auerbach, New York City, of No. 2 of the lens charts, so far as the different distances of projection be concerned we can ignore the difference of lens position caused by same, as it is very slight. There is, however, another factor which renders it impossible for the exact position of condenser aerial image to be given. Friend Solar called my attention to this fact recently. The calculations in Chart No. 2 are based on the performance of a single lens of given E. F., whereas a compound lens, such as a projection lens, has the effect of shortening the distance between the lens and aerial image as compared with the distance obtained from calculations with a single lens. There is, however, no material difference between the sizes obtained by the two calculations. The action of no two lenses are alike, unless they be made to the same formula. It, therefore, follows that the value of Chart No. 2 is in giving an approximate idea of what kind of beam will be projected through a given lens, with the understanding that in practice the condenser aerial image will be some fraction of an inch closer to the lens that the chart indicates.

"And, anyhow, I would suggest the following as easily applied and thoroughly reliable: Place an ordinary slide in the carrier, open the machine gate and, first having loosened the shutter so that it can be slipped forward and back on its shaft, project the slide and move the shutter until the slide image is in focus on the shutter blade. You now have the shutter at the aerial image plane. Next, turn the machine flywheel in the direction it normally runs until the intermittent sprocket is just ready to start. Set the main blade of the shutter so that the light is just barely cut off the screen. Now turn the flywheel until the intermittent sprocket has just barely completed its movement, and you can see whether or not your shutter blade is too wide."

Good stunt! But I don't think the comparatively slight variation very seriously affects the value of Chart No. 2. But if it does, the chart is still of great value in fixing the aerial image position very closely where it is out of reach of the shutter without going to a lot of bother. The plan of Brother Griffith is, however, recommended to projectionists.

Overloaded Lines.

William J. Griswold, from a town in Illinois, the name of which I cannot decipher, says:

"Will you be good enough to tell me what is wrong. This is a rather small place, and the light plant is small, though it supplies quite a lot of current to nearby farmers and to a rock quarry at the edge of the town. Three days a week we run matinees, and during the afternoon our incandescent lamps burn brightly, also the projection light is excellent. But when it gets dark the incandescents dim down a lot, and the projection light is very poor. We cannot see why this should be. The light company electrician tells us it is just our imagination, but that is not true. Can you tell us where the trouble lies, also is there any way to convince Mr. Electrician that our imagination is not to blame?"

Certainly is. Your electrician is evidently quite strong for the company, as well as some artist at shooting the bull. I wish all questions were as easy to answer as yours. In the afternoon none of the residences are using light, hence the street mains leading to your theatre are carrying no more than their capacity—probably less. But when night settles down and the residences begin to light up your supply wires become overloaded, with consequent drop in voltage at your theatre. Have your imagination electrician go with you to the light plant, and both of you look at the switch board voltmeter. Then have him go to your theatre and take a reading of your supply voltage at your main switch. The difference in voltage will be the answer. And there you are.

Failure vs. Success.

Do you dread the hour you go on duty and once on duty long constantly for "quitting time" to come? If you do you are foredoomed to failure.

Do you find pleasure and interest in your work? Do you give your whole mind and energy to your work while "on the job"? Do you respect your profession and demand respect for it? Do you demand from your employer adequate remuneration and decent working conditions, giving in return the very best there is in you? Then you will succeed, and will be an honor and a credit to the profession.

Oh, That's Good Enough.

A certain projectionist, whose name and location we withnold, asks a ruling as to whether pitted condensers are as good as unpitted ones. He entered the employment of a certain company (Ohio) recently and asked for condensers to replace badly pitted ones, which were also of wrong focal length. Another projectionist, who "has been with the company a number of years," told the manager the condensers in the machines were all right and that pitting made no difference.

There are very many of those have-been-with-the-company-a-long-time chaps who would be doing the management a distinct favor by resigning. Their sole and only recommendation consists in having "been there a long time." This particular shining light in all human probability would not know a lens chart from a page of the holy scripture. Condensers of wrong focal length are as nothing in his young life. True they may be wasting from thirty to fifty per cent. of the input wattage, but he should worry. The boss pays the bills and does not know the difference. If pitted condensers are just as good as unpitted ones, why not sandpaper the whole condenser surface?

After setting forth the pitting matter and asking for an expression of opinio through the department, the good brothe remarks that when he used compositio carbon holders instead of iron, there wa no pitting. For his information, the iro carbon arms have nothing to do wit condenser pitting. Pitting may be cause by (a) metal coated lower carbon though that fault of those carbons ha we think, been very largely remedied (b) excessive flaming of carbons, ver damp carbons or overloaded carbons. Pitt ing is caused by incandescent particle from the carbons burning minute hole in the lens, or, rather, adhering to th surface of the lens and ruining the polis at that point. Pitting acts to diffuse th light passing through the pitted spots an to weaken the screen illumination. Th loss of light is not great, but with cur rent at say 8 cents per K. W. it don't tak long to eat up the price of a condense lens. But lenses should not pit. Mak your optical train conform to the len chart (copy for framing, 11x17", may b had for 50 cents from M. P. World), an then if there is pitting look for the trou ble in your carbons.

Another from Vancouver.

C. B. Marshall, Vancouver, British Col umbia, sends in what we consider a excellent answer to the question: "Wher Shall the Crater Be Focused," but th answer cannot well be published now, a so very much matter is waiting space, an the matter contained therein has alread and quite recently been set forth in th department. Brother Marshall holds th film should be at a point midway of th various creater images, or images o various portions of the crater. This i another way, I think, of saying it shoul be at the point of greatest concentratio Marshall's arguments leading up to hi conclusion are entirely logical and we put.

Can't Be Done.

We notice that Harry Schlegel, Mans field, Ohio, proposes to stop film damag by assessing film rental according t damage done by the projectionist.

Aside from the fact that this scheme i almost as old as the industry, havin been discussed in this department almo ten years ago, and intermittently eve since, it is only capable of partial appli cation, in any event. The trouble lies i the fact that an enormous percentage o damage is not perceptible to the eye, an could only be detected by use of a magni fying glass. Moreover, even the micro scope would not show the damage cause by rapid rewinding upon crooked reel or on a rewinder which is out of lin until the damage had progressed very fa indeed. Mr. Schlegel makes one sugge tion which has been made many time in, and has long ago been approved b this department, viz., the exchange s send out competent inspectors, whos duty it would be to inspect the conditio under which the films are used. Th department long ago advocated that exa procedure, and comparatively recentl suggested to Washington exchanges tha they all club together and employ two o three high-class inspectors to periodically inspect all projection apparatus in that territory. Mr. Schlegel writes an excellent letter. He evidently is a progressive projectionist. His idea is good as such, but has been thoroughly inspected many times, and has been found to be impractical, chiefly because it could, at best, offer but a partial remedy. Oil is bad. Scratches are bad. Punch marks are bad, but the very worst of all is damage to the delicate edges of the sprocket holes by excessive tension, work sprockets, etc., and the damage done by improper rewinding.

What Is Equal to Number Six Wire.

John R. Allenbacher, Boston, Mass., springs one I don't remember ever having been asked before:

"We have a lot of wire of various sizes, from No. 14 up to No. 8. Would it be possible and practical to use these wires for a projection circuit of a new theatre we are building in a small city near Boston. This circuit will be more than two hundred feet in length, hence, at present price of copper wire, it would mean a worth while bit of saving."

Certainly the thing could be done, but whether you would save anything or not would remain to be seen, because of the fact that larger conduit might and probably would be required. It is also within range of possibility that some ivory domed inspector might condemn it, though it would be without legitimate cause. For your benefit, and the benefit of others, I quote from the Hawkins Electrical Guide, Volume 8, page 1913, the following equivalents, B. & S. guage:

"To equal a No. 4 wire requires two No. 7, four No. 10, eight No. 14 or sixteen No. 16 wires. To equal a No. 6 wire requires two No. 9, four No. 12, eight No. 15 or sixteen No. 18 wires."

The table in Hawkins gives equivalents for wires from No. 0000 down to No. 21. Of course, Neighbor Allenbacher, in saying you can use the wire you have I assume it to be up to the requirements in the matter of insulation.

Examination Argument.

Milton O. Field, projectionist, Lethbridge, Alberta, writes:

"Enclosed find 40 cents for question booklets. In our recent Alberta examination we were asked the question: "Which is the positive and which the negative of a projection lens?" This question has resulted in quite some argument. Some of our best projectionists claim there is a positive and a negative in a projection lens. Others claim there is not. We would appreciate an opinion from you as to who is right and who is wrong. Have your latest handbook and, like so many others, could not get along without it. In closing allow me to wish for yourself, and for our department, that large measure of success which both deserve."

Whether all projection lens formulae call for the use of negative lenses or not we could not say. What is called a negative lens is really not a lens at all. It is usually termed a diverging lens. It is thicker at its edges than in its center. It disperses instead of converging the rays. Diverging or negative "lenses" are: the double concave (concave on both sides), the plano concave (flat on one side, concave on other), and any convex-concavo (meniscus) in which the concave side has the greater curvature. Negative, or dispersing glasses, is a more correct term than lenses.

As to the ordinary projection lens, say the Bausch and Lomb, for example, John Solar, Watertown, N. Y., gives us the following data: "The first lens is a bi-convex (positive) lens; the second has the first surface concave and the second convex, the first surface having the greater curvature. As a whole, the lens is a meniscus negative. The first surface of the third lens is plano and its second surface concave, hence it, too, is negative (plano concave negative). The fourth lens is a bi-convex positive."

In order to be entirely certain as to this matter, which is one never before brought to our attention, we are addressing Dr. Kellner, Bausch and Lomb Optical Works, who is a high authority on such matters, asking him whether or not all projection lens formulas call for the use of negative lenses.

Rheostat Problem.

C. L. Drake, Chicago, Illinois, desires answer to the following:

"Have had an argument, and both sides have agreed to leave the matter to you. There is a bet up, so give us the right dope. The question is this: Current 110 volt D. C. Having one 50 ampere, 110 volt rheostat in series with a projection arc, what would be the result of connecting a 15 ampere, 220 volt rheostat in series with the 50 ampere one? A claims it cannot be done. B claims differently. Who is right?"

That would depend on what A means by "cannot be done." If he means the combination could not be used to supply current for theatrical projection he is correct. Here is the dope, the 50 ampere rheostat would have 110-55 (approximate arc voltage at 50 amperes) = 65 ÷ 50 = 1.3 ohms resistence. The 220 volt 15 ampere rheostat would have 220—48 (don't know what arc voltage would be at such small amperage, but assume 48) = 172 ÷ 15 = 11.466 amperes. The total resistence of the two rheostats connected in series would therefore be 1.3 + 11.466 = 12.766 ohms, to which must be added the resistance of the arc, which we will assume to be 1.5 ohms. The total resistance opposed to the line voltage would therefore be 12.766 + 1.5 = 14.266 ohms, and 110 ÷ 14.266 (E ÷ R = C) = 7.7+. You would therefore get 7.7 + amperes at the arc, which is only practical with a very small picture, a brilliant screen and ¼ or 5/16 inch carbons.

I note headlines on page 1450, March 15 issue, as follows: Pathe Repudiates Will Fox who is operating in Texas.

Query: Why should Pathe become excited over an operator?

A Butter Butts in.

W. E. Dickson, Winnett, Mont., hands us the following:

from dispensing near-beer at the fountain, posting show advertising, caring for gas engine and electrical equipment, I project my own pictures, though falling somewhat short of meriting the title 'projectionist.' Can't ride 'em straight yet; still pull leather! But I am, nevertheless, continually trying to improve my screen results, and submit the following for your criticism: Distance of projection, 87 feet; drop in projection, 4 feet; picture size, 9x12; metallic screen; width of house, 24 feet. Am using 35 amperes D. C., supplied by a 2-cylinder, 8-h. p. gas engine, belted to a 4-pole, 60-volt, 4.5-k. w. dynamo. Power's 6-A motor-driven projector. Gundlach No. 2 lens, 3-wing shutter, set 3¼ inches from front lens. Projection lens is 4.75 inches E. F. It is 20 inches from aperture to center of condenser, with a 6.6 meniscus next to arc and 8.5 biconvex in front, set fraction of one-sixteenth of an inch apart; 3.25 inches from arc to condenser. Carbons, ⅝ cored upper and 7-19-inch Silver tip. What h. p. gas engine would be required to run two arcs and what size rheostats would be required? Have third edition of handbook. Should you assist me in improving my projection I will assure you a clear board should you ever pull a brass collared bunch through here."

Which last means that you are also lightning jerker for the railway company, I suppose. Don't see a danged thing to criticise except that if you could get condenser back to 22 inches it would be better. If you can't do that, suppose you try two 6.5 planos, for which 20.24 inches is just right. If you do that please let me know which works best. I am inclined to believe the planos will be best under your condition. As you will see by the charts soon to be published, with a 4.75-inch b. f. and a two-inch diameter projection lens you are losing a lot of light. Remove projection lens, hold sheet of white paper 4.75 inches from aperture. Strike arc, let it get burning well, open dowser and machine gate and look at size of light ray on paper, then look at size of your projection lens. That's the answer. As to power, if as you say, you have a 60-volt, 4.5-k. w. generator, you have 75 amperes capacity, which is enough if 35 amperes is enough for one arc, and 4.5-k. w. only calls for about six horse power, so you are all right. You see, 75 amperes at 60 volts (75x60) equals 4,500 watts, or 4.5 k. w. There are 746 watts in an electrical h. p. and 4,500 divided by 746 equals 6 plus. As to rheostate, get one exactly the same as you have now. As to the chaps, et cetera, I lived in the West many years, and my experience was that a man in chaps was about as great a curio as he is here in New York—especially the hairy kind. On the cattle ranges of Texas when I was on the Denver, Texas and Fort Worth, I did see a pair of hairless chaps occasionally in rainy weather. So butt right in, Brother Dickson, just as you are.

Requirements for License and Membership.

Clarence A. Martin, Ithaca, N. Y., orders handbook and asks:

"Is it possible to send me outline of requirements for membership in I. A. T. S. E.; also for projectionist's license?"

Requirements for membership in the I. A. are that you be a paleface, of the male persuasion. That you be of good character. That you reside within the jurisdiction of the union you desire to join and that you have so resided for at least six months. You are in jurisdiction of local union the least number of miles from you. That you be a competent projectionist, according to the lights of the local union examining board, which same boards exhibit a marvelously wide difference of opinion as to what constitutes competency. As to the license, why that is a matter of local law here in New York. It is left to the various cities, whose examining boards for the most part are in sad need of examining themselves, if the product that most of them declare to be competent projectionists is any evidence.

Projectionists' Dance.

Edward D. Hamilton, Secretary Local Union 223, Providence, R. I., sends a most cordial invitation to the editor, as follows:

"Enclosed find complimentary to our first Grand Movie Ball, to be given in the State Armory, this city, the evening of April 24. It goes without saying that your presence is desired on this, to us, great occasion. We expect to put this ball over in a way that will surpass even the Boston affair. Of course we may make a few mistakes in this our first effort, but the chap who never made a mistake is the chap who never did anything, so we are not at all worried on that score. From present indications (April 15) the ball promises to be a pronounced success. We would appreciate it deeply if you would make a special effort to be with us that evening."

Under other conditions I certainly would, brother Hamilton, but I am not yet fully recovered, and must conserve every ounce of strength to get by with my routine work. I well remember the way you "put over" the banquet affair the time I visited your local, and feel assured that whatever local 223 attempts will be well done. Success to the ball. Maybe next year the editor will be able to yield to inclination and be with you. Let us hope it will be so. This year I must be absent in the flesh, but will be present in the spirit.

Danish Projectionists Not Licensed.

H. C. Sorensen, Carmangay, Alberta, orders question booklets and remarks:

"Received handbook and like it very much. I believe that if all small town projectionists would get and study the handbook the results would be highly beneficial to theatres and the business throughout the country. It may interest you to know that I projected pictures in Denmark for three years, and that without knowing anything about electricity or the details of projection machines. License was not required for projectionists in that country. But I am now making up for lost time, studying the handbook; also I get lots of useful hints from the department. Am a subscriber to the World."

All right, brother Sorenson, suppose you give us a little dope as to working conditions in the projection rooms of Denmark. What kind of projectors do they use? What wages do the men get? What are the working conditions in general?

Sergeant H. A. Fitzpatrick, Ordnance Dept., Camp Custis, Va., desires information as follows:

"Dear Richardson: You will undoubtedly be surprised to hear from one of the craft in this long-forgotten hole. Like all the rest, I seek information. I hope, however, it is practical and not like lots I read in the department. (Wonder if he means the information we give or the questions asked. (A) Cannot tell you. Depends on size picture and skill of projectionist in ery large degree. The man who has horough understanding of the problems volved will or may get much better re- ults with 60 amperes than the less able an would with 80. He must especially nderstand how to plan his projector op- cal system so as to utilize as much of ne light as possible. Then, too, it de- nds on kind of screen and auditorium ghting. You will therefore see that any nswer I might give to question A would entirely impractical. By application lens tables you ought to get fair re- ults with 60 amperes, provided you are reful and skilful in handling the crater, nd provided the screen be a good one nd the auditorium lighting as it should e. ### Lens Chart Data Wanted.

Maurice Price, Chicago, Illinois, wants know more about lens chart instruc- ons, as follows:

"In first example, December 28 lens hart instructions, the B. F. being 4 inches ould decide distance of revolving shutter om aperture—8.8 inches. Now looking extreme left column I find it headed .F. and here is where I am stuck. Which it, E.F. or B.F.? Have a handbook nd a set of Hawkins, but fail to find how measure the E.F. of a condenser com- bination. Does the rule on page 103 ap- ply to E. F. as well as to single lenses?"

You have confused the instructions for the two charts. The B.F. gives you the lens diameter and the E.F. its distance from aperture. Rule on page 103 does not apply to E.F. Quoting from memory, adding the focal length of the two separate lenses and dividing the re- sult by four gives the E.F. of the com- bination, when spaced with apexes bare- ly out of contact. Am writing this in bed, without my library available, but that is the way I recollect it. Thus the E.F. of two 6.5 lenses would be 6.5 + 6.5 = 13, which divided by four gives us 3.25 as the E.F.

Back on the Job.

H. Merrill Young, Reading, Pa., is on the job again. He says:

"Greetings from Reading! Sincerely hope that you are entirely recovered from your illness. Have just returned to the job again after a year spent in service of our Uncle Samuel. It certainly was one great experience!

"I can very well remember nearly all the address you delivered before our local here (and the exhibitors) when you last visited Reading. It certainly did do good, as nearly all the men showed signs of improvement. Attached find check for handbook. Left mine in projection room when I went away and it lost itself dur- ing my absence. The boys tell me there is something new on the lens system since I left. If so please send it to me."

Get hold of a December 28 issue of M. P. World. If you cannot find one there remit 15 cents to the office and they'll send one—whoap, nope. Can't be did. Re- member the office told me a few days ago they were all gone. However send 50 cents and we'll send you the thing (lens charts and directions) on heavy paper, 11 x 17 inches, for framing. That's the new dope you were told about. Glad you're back. My best regards to the Reading men. If you fellers want me to I might make a trip through Pennsylvania next fall, lecturing on the optical system of the projector. Depends on how many locals would be interested. I've had slides made and it's up to the minute hot stuff.

Horrible Examples.

F. Roemun, Jersey City, New Jersey, took note of the letter, March 15 issue, regarding parasites. He says:

"Don't think the name nearly bad enough for those who make such splices as those I hand you herewith. What earthly use is an exchange inspector who lets such splices remain, sending the films to us in a condition of absolute un- safety as to fire hazard? Seems to me the New York City exchanges are going from bad to worse. The proof is the samples I send. It is enough to take the heart out of a man who tries honestly to place his show on the screen as it should be. Cannot something be done to wake up the exchanges? Only a few years ago I ran six 'commercial reels,' all from one to two years old and had less trouble with them than I now have with films five, four and even three months old. I do hope you can start something which will wake up the exchanges in this matter."

Brother Roemun, it seems just about as impossible to get "under the hide" of a modern exchange manager as it is to puncture battleship armor plate. To all seeming they are not business men, or even good imitations of business men. Apparently all a certain, too numerous type of exchange manager can see is the actual dollar lying on his desk. One would think a ten year old boy, of average in- telligence, would see and know that there is something more to the running of a film exchange than the mere selling to a theatre a film service, which service it apparently is not intended to deliver, ex- cept in part. Take the exchange you get films from, for example. I have examined the samples you submit. I would like to have the pleasure of personally rubbing the exchange managers nose on them. It is an infernal outrage on common decency to send out such stuff. The exchange sold your theatre "service" presumably. Well, if it did then the exchange is a plain, un- varnished swindler, for the sending of such junk does NOT constitute service.

There are just three ways by which this outrage might be stopped, viz., (1) Theatre managers to bring suit for good, heavy damages for breach of contract. (2) A law making it a penitentiary of- fense to send out films to a theatre in any other than mechanically perfect condition. Such a law could easily be based on fire hazard safety. (3) For unions to use their power to curb the evil by prohibiting their members from accepting for projection reels which have not been put into safe running condition.

This department would cheerfully sup- port either of these plans. By sending out junk films, or films in junk condition rather, exchange managers are doing their little level best to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. They are doing their best to bludgeon the motion picture industry. They are proclaiming them- selves to be shyster business men, though that's an awful slam at shysters. They are swindling the theatres they do busi- ness with, as well as endangering their audiences, to say nothing of perpertrating a shameful outrage on the projectionist. But let a projectionist rip up ten feet of their junk! My, my, my what a howl.

You would think a think a devil straight from sheol had hurled his spear at an angel!

What you say about some New York City exchanges seems to be absolutely true, friend Roemun. I could wish the managers of these mis-called business institutions no worse fate than to have to project the fearful wrecks they hand projectionists. Boiled down to real facts what they appear to have in mind is the forcing of projectionists to do their film repairing and inspecting free of charge. That seems to be about the size of it. If your local feels like holding a joint meeting with the exhibitors in its territory on this subject, I will be glad to attend and help map out some course to compel exchanges to live up to their contracts and supply films in runable condition.

I have absolutely NO APOLOGY for the harsh language contained in this article. The thing has long, long gotten past the stage where even decent language can begin to do justice to the matter. The men managing the offending exchanges apparently are devoid of any sense of shame, and one can only deal with that sort of individual with a club. Decent exchange managers will, we are very sure, thank us for thus plainly setting forth the truth, because they must suffer for the bushivists of the business. Projectionists are invited to show this article to New York exchange managers—the guilty and innocent alike.

Ray Duhem Takes Up Novel Work.

Ray A. Duhem, of the Duhem Motion Picture Manufacturing Co., has purchased two Martin TT airplanes from the Government and is preparing to engage in commercial aerial photography. He has joined the Pacific Aero Club and has secured the services of experienced aviators as pilots. The first work will be the mapping of San Francisco from the air and then commercial work for large corporations will be undertaken. This work will not be entirely new to Mr. Duhem as he and Robert Fowler flew over the Panama Canal six or more years ago and made the first and only moving pictures of that engineering project from the air.

To Project Pictures in South Sea Jungles

When Martin Johnson prepared to return to the scenes of his former film exploits he looked over the market for a suitable projector to display his now famous films to the savages who were originally pictured therein.

After careful investigation he selected the Peerless Standard Projector and Hand Generator as illustrated.

With this outfit two husky lads on the cranks can generate enough electric current to show a ten-foot picture.

We can imagine some excitement among the natives of the South Seas when this show is "put on"!

the recent organization of

The A.R. Bullock Electric Products Co.

MADE up of men with wide and successful experience in the electrical and motion picture equipment industries, for the purpose of distributing some new and vital products designed by A. R. Bullock, one of the world's greatest engineers and inventors of electrical and mechanical apparatus and appliances.

Of particular interest to those in the Motion Picture Industry is a Current Rectifier, designed on an entirely new principle and possessing greater possibilities with fewer limitations, for converting Alternating Current line voltage to Direct Current voltage needed at the projection machine.

This important invention promises to revolutionize and greatly improve projection. The Bullock Rectifier will insure high-efficiency service, and is much more compact, simple, fool-proof, and less costly than present types of equipment.

There are other new Bullock Inventions which are equally valuable.

THE UNIVERSAL WAS PUT TO EVERY TEST

by the photographers of the U. S. Signal Corps who recorded the American participation in the Great War and came through with flying colors every time. It was used in the mud and wet of the trenches on the firing line, in the observation balloons, in the military bases and camps, and everywhere the signal corps photographers went, because the Universal was the only motion picture camera found suitable for over sea service by the United States Government.

This was not only an honor but an endorsement of the principles which enter into the construction of the Universal. The work which the Universal turned out for the government is the strongest testimonial to the value of the camera.

If considering the purchase of a motion picture camera, learn all about the Universal—the one piece construction which assures permanent adjustment, perfect operation at all times and protection against displacement through rough handling and climatic changes. One large gear controls all moving parts, simplifying the machine giving the most efficiency, and making every piece accessible.

There are many unique and valuable features on the Universal which are fully described in our booklet on the camera. Write for a copy of this.

By Lieutenant Carl Louis Gregory

Many of the former readers of the Mo-on Picture Photographic Department of he Moving Picture World may have ondered why it was discontinued, and resuming it again the editor of the orld has been kind enough to ask that give an explanation of the reason. Like any of the rest of you to whose eyes his may come I have been in the army; ot over there with the big show; as I ould have liked to have been, but over ere engaged in a prosaic job of teach-g men in the photographic section of he Signal Corps "how to shoot,"—not with rifles and machine guns or heavy artillery, but how to shoot with a motion picture camera or a Graflex.

Up until the armistice was signed it was against the army regulations for an officer to engage in literary work for compensation, and while I was fortunate enough to have had some little material ready for publication, which appeared after I had received my commission, it was not possible for me to continue to contribute to these columns. Even had it being permissible, I should not have been able to find time to devote to this column, as the instruction work which I was doing absorbed nearly every waking moment of my time.

Training Photographers for Army.

In January of 1918 it was decided to establish a school at Columbia University for the training of men for the photographic section of the Signal Corps. I was highly complimented to receive the offer of a commission, if I would take charge of the photographic instruction at this school, which at that time was called the United States School of Military Cinematography. As the instruction was not confined alone to the use of the motion picture camera but also included a great many branches of still photography, this name was later changed to the Signal Corps School of Photography.

Under the efficient administration of Captain Joseph D. Sears, who had been for a number of years connected with Columbia University and who was well acquainted with all of the ins and out of that institution, the school was speedily organized and laboratories for instruction purposes were installed in Havemeyer Hall, the chemical building of the University.

Scarcity in Equipment Handicaps.

The limited number of motion picture cameras upon the market at the opening of the school seriously handicapped us in the equipment of the motion picture laboratory, so that it was a considerable period before we had enough equipment for adequate instruction purposes, and the demands of the units going over-seas were such that many times we were compelled to relinquish some of our cherished equipment to help fit them out.

At the time of the formation of the school the army regulations provided that the Signal Corps do all photographic work and records pertaining to aerial reconnoissance and such photographic work as may be assigned thereto, but as the air service was shortly afterward made separate and distinct from the Signal Corps this took the work of aerial reconnaissance out of the province of the Signal Corps, but left it practically every other kind of photographic work performed for any branch of the service.

Photographic Units Organized.

By order of the Adjutant General a photographic unit of three men, consisting of a lieutenant, a sergeant, and a private, was ordered to be attached to the field signal battalion of each division of the army, and that a still larger unit be attached to every army corps and army headquarters, so that the demand for photographers to do army photographic work called for hundreds of men especially trained in military photography.

In contradistinction to the work of aerial reconnaissance, the work of the Signal Corps was designated as being land photography, although numbers of our men made both still and motion pictures from airplanes and observation balloons. The principal object of the photographic section of the Signal Corps was to secure a pictorial history of the great war, and to do this many thousands of still photographs and many miles of motion picture films were made by the men who were trained at Columbia.

Much Detail Work to Be Done.

In addition to the historical work there was a great deal of record work, propaganda, scientific and identification photographs and motion pictures to be made for the General Staff and Committee on Public Information and other departments and bureaus of the military and civilian establishments which needed such pictures for military purposes or for civilian activities pertaining to the war.

It will be readily understood that the Signal Corps School of Photography in training men for the photographic units and developing men for the other special lines mentioned, require a considerable diversity of training. The urgent need for men necessarily limited the length of training to the shortest time possible, but by intensive instruction and careful selection of students of considerable previous training most of the subjects were covered in an eight weeks' term.

The location of Columbia at 116th street and Broadway in New York made it a centre from which it was but a short journey to many outlying cantonments and flying fields, where practice under conditions closely approximating field work could be obtained.

Organize Many Departments.

Two large chemical laboratories in Havemeyer Hall, the chemical building of the University, were converted into a still and a movie laboratory, while a large number of smaller rooms were utilized for lecture and recitation purposes and for the administrative offices of the School. A large building adjacent to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the basement and gymnasium in other buildings served as barracks for the students, and their meals were served to them in the University Commons under the supervision of the department of domestic economics of Teachers' College. Offices for the force of instructors were for convenience located in the same building as the laboratories. The gymnasium, swimming pool, and shower baths were at the disposal of the students at certain periods every day, so that the advantages enjoyed by the men were much superior to anything that existed in any of the temporary training camps.

The physics and chemical departments of the University placed their apparatus at the disposal of the school for use in lectures in photography, optics and chemistry. The university library purchased an assortment of books upon photographic subjects and made a special collection of the most recent and approved photographic authorities and placed them in a special reading room in the same building as the laboratories, so that they would be readily accessible to the students.

Still Laboratory Well Equipped.

In the still laboratory were four individual darkrooms and a development demonstration room, an enlarging room, lantern slide room, a copying room, a rinting room and a finishing room. Anther separate room was utilized for a tockroom to hold the enormous amount f supplies and photographic equipment ecessary for the use of hundreds of tudents. The rooms were equipped with unning water, large sinks, red, orange, nd green safe lights, and apparatus for ll ordinary photographic operations. In he individual darkrooms were safe ghts, stock developing solutions, trays, xing tanks, wash boxes, sinks, and runing water.

The plate demonstration room was quipped like the individual darkrooms, ut on a larger scale, with sufficient pace so that a number of students could itness the demonstrations. To render his more easily visible the rooms were ainted white and lighted by the latest ethod of indirect lighting which made ll objects in the room visible and yet ctinicly safe. In addition to this nlarging outfit, there were nearly a dozen nlarging lanterns of various kinds. Also here was an elaborate equipment of ameras and printers.

Complete Motion Picture Laboratory.

A small but complete laboratory for he production of motion pictures was stalled in the space which was former- a large chemical laboratory. The rinting room, from which printed film ould be passed directly into the develop- g room, was equipped with a double uplex printer, with automatic light hift.

The developing and wash rooms were uilt in a specially constructed waterroof tank of cement and asphalt, 2½ et deep, so that all of the washing anks and surplus water could be ejected irectly on to the place underneath the aised deck of slatted duckboard.

The developing room was a double one, quipped on one side for negative development and upon the other for positive. All the walls were painted white, and by means of indirect lighting, every portion of the room was easily visible without having to use light strong enough to fog even the most sensitive negative film.

well illuminated by daylight, supplemented by artificial light over all of the tanks. The washing room opened directly into the drying room, which was large enough for two 2,000-foot drying drums.

From the drying room the films passed directly into the assembling and cutting room, so that the entire cycle of operations in the finishing of the films took place in a series of contiguous steps.

On account of the scarcity of motion picture cameras already alluded to, it was necessary for the Government to make use of a large diversity of cameras, so that at one time or another, more than a dozen makes of cameras were used for instruction purposes at the school. Among the different makes used were Bell & Howell, Akley, Debrie, Provex, Prevost, Moy, Universal, Pathe Professional and Pathe Portable.

How the Men Were Trained.

In the training of the men in the use of the motion picture camera, after they had been taught the preliminary operations of setting-up, threading, cranking, tilting, and panoraming, they were first permitted to take short sample scenes of familiar subjects about the University, and then after having demonstrated their ability to handle the camera, they were given definite assignments to obtain certain kinds of pictures, at events which were happening in the city or of various activities in the near-by camps.

Direct requests for special work for the Government or for the Committee on Public Information kept a number of the advanced students and instructors busy in turning out pictures for propaganda work for educational purposes, and records of various kinds.

It was my good fortune to make a great deal of film of the work in the air service, and I hope later to be able to tell you something of the interesting work which I did at the various flying fields.

I cannot help feeling that I myself was as much of a student as any of the boys who passed through the course at Columbia and that I learned fully as much in contact with the various men who came from all over the country as did any of them. For one thing, it gave me the privilege of accumulating a great mass of instructive material.

Motion Picture of Great Help.

It has been admitted by many prominent men that the motion picture was one of the greatest contributory factors to the success of our war activities; that had it not been for the great amount of propaganda and publicity disseminated through the motion picture theatres it would not have been possible to arouse the amount of enthusiasm and the consequent liberal subscriptions to the Liberty Loans and various charitable drives, had it not been for the medium of the motion picture theatre.

In consequence of the great amount of photographic work done, both still and motion, there has been a tremendous impetus given in the interest taken in the technical side and use of photography for other purposes than that of the purely amusement side; and where one camera was in use before the war the interest aroused in the use of photography will bring twenty into use now that peace is declared.

All of the students at the school were required to keep notebooks with the record of various formulæ which would be of use to them in their work in the army and equally as much use to them afterward in civilian life should they continue their work in photography. As near as I can ascertain from the men with whom I have come in contact with since their discharge from the army, it is evident that very few of them have any idea of changing their occupations.

Many Had Had Photographic Experience.

As the students of the school were selected from their experience cards for their previous training in photographic lines most of them had been actively engaged in the photographic profession before entering the army.

It was flattering to me to find that a large proportion of these boys who came to the school already had notebooks of some kind or other, many of which had extensive clippings from the motion picture photographic department in Moving Picture World, and I was thus able to meet personally a large number of readers of these columns, whose acquaintance I would not have otherwise had the opportunity to make.

The work in motion picture photography done by the Signal Corps School of Photography proved an inspiration to Columbia University, so that they have instituted a course in motion picture photography, of which they have asked me to take charge, so that when any of you are in New York I shall be glad to have you visit me at Havemeyer Hall.

The laboratories formerly used by the Signal Corps have been turned over for this new course, and already other universities and educational institutions are turning with interest to this new course of instruction and thinking about giving more serious consideration to this important subject, which will doubless, before many years, be found in the curriculum of all large colleges and technological institutes.

BOYLAN EVEN TENSION REEL

FOREVER ENDS ALL TENSION TAKE-UP TROUBLES

TESTIMONIALS

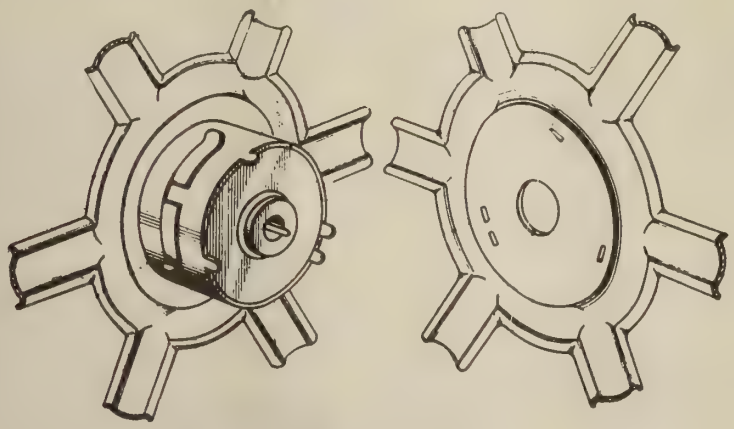
"The sprockets on our machines have been used in connection with the automatic reel for eighteen months and are still in good condition. The reels are indispensable to us, and we could not be without them."—F. H. YOUNG, Manager, Iris Theatre, Salisbury, N. C.

"It has our unqualified endorsement. It works perfectly."—F. H. RICHARDSON, Editor, Projection Department, Moving Picture World.

Patented April 23, 1918



It's All in the "Hub"
Otherwise It's a Standard Reel

"They are entirely satisfactory in taking care of the tension, operating with practically an even and easy tension throughout the run, yet firmly winding the reel."—JOHN GRIFFITHS, Ansonia, Conn.

"I have used the reel several days and it meets every requirement at the take-up. I O. K. the reel and believe it to be a valuable asset to high-class equipment."—CLAUDE E. LINSTRUTH, Carthage, N. Y.

Increases Life of Lower Sprocket Many Times. Also this Reel Does Away with the Necessity for a Take-Up Friction in the Projector Itself.

The take-up friction of the projector is set tight so that it cannot slip at all and the tension on the film is entirely taken care of automatically by the friction between the two hubs of the reel, the friction becoming automatically greater as the weight of the reel increases by the film being wound on it.

It has no springs or weights or complicated mechanism and can be used on any machine using the standard reels, without making any change whatever.

It has been tested out under all kinds of conditions for more than eighteen months.

It will save the operator all his present worries from variation in take-up tension, losing the lower loop, etc., and will save the moving picture industry many thousands of dollars annually through the elimination of the various kinds of damage done to the films through excessive tension.

INTEREST GROWING IN SUNLIGHT ARCS

Good Reports from New Pacific Coast Offices President Harmer Enthuses Over His Machine

FRANK ELLIOTT, who recently opened Pacific Coast offices for the Sunlight Arc Company, Inc., in the Wright & Callendar Building, Los Angeles, is sending back East reports of the success of his exploitation which are highly gratifying and lead J. Justice Harmer and his associates at the home office on West Forty-eighth street to believe that their thought that they had introduced something really revolutionary in studio lighting devices was well founded in fact. A number of the big studios on the Coast are already using the lights and several of the recent releases have been made almost exclusively with Sunlights.

In the East a particularly attractive contract seems about to fall into the lap of the company coincident with the opening of the new Fox Film Corporation studios which are under course of construction in New York City.

It is quite apparent that not a little of the success which has attended the Sunlight company's efforts to introduce the new light has been due to the spontaneous enthusiasm of Mr. Harmer, president of the company who has done most of the work of perfecting the device. Mr. Harmer has prepared the following article which sings the praises of his product. The Moving Picture World prints it because Mr. Harmer is ready for any "Doubting Thomases" who care to pay him a visit at his place of business in New York.

The Sun Light Arc places at the disposal of motion picture photographers a new source of illumination. The Sun Light Arc is not merely an arc using a greater current than has previously been employed in studio work, but it is radically a different source of light. The main part of the illumination from the Sun Light Arc is produced by a very intense white flame vapor which is confined in a deep crater in the burning end of the positive electrode. In the ordinary flaming arc the light is produced by the entire arc flame between the two electrodes, and there is no localizing of the brillancy and no crater is formed in the electrodes.

Has Special Advantages.

The advantages of the Sun Light Arc for motion picture photography are numerous. In the first place the confining of the bright vapor in the intensely hot crater makes the light very steady and free from flicker. Small disturbances do not effect the light or change its intensity in the manner that is so noticeable in the small flaming arcs where the light emanates from the arc flame itself. Another reason for the extreme steadiness of the light is the fact that the high current used (150 amperes) makes an arc which has considerable inherent stability due to what might be called its own inertia. The advantages of a steady light of high candlepower are universally appreciated by motion picture photographers.

It is extremely interesting to know that in this form of arc more candlepower has been squeezed into a small space than has heretofore ever been accomplished by man. In order to conceive of what it means to produce one hundred thousand candlepower from the end of a five-eighths-inch carbon let us suppose that a small portion of the vapor from the positive crater might be dipped out of the arc on the head of a pin. This amount of light would give about 800 candlepower. The concentration of the light has the advantage in effect work and artificial sun light work of casting extremely clean cut and sharp-edged shadows, such as cannot be produced with the same effectiveness with any present illuminant available in the studios. The point may be brought up that concentrated source of light has only a limited use. This is appreciated but it must be realized that it is very simple to cause diffusion of a concentrated source of light by any one of a number of means, but it is impossible to concentrate a diffused source of light.

Another feature of this arc, which is partly responsible for the unusual efficiency of the unit, is that nearly 80 per cent. of the total amount of light from the arc falls in the hemisphere toward which the positive carbon is facing. This useful distribution of the light is due to the fact that such a large percentage of it is emitted from the crater, hence when the arc is viewed from some point where the crater face is not visible, the candlepower is extremely low. The Sun Light Arc is the first illuminant for general studio lighting within the zone to be illuminated other sources of light all have a uniform light distribution in all directions, and hence must use some form of white reflector in order to reflect the 50 per cent of the light which falls away from the scene, back onto the scene.

Another important application of the arc is for spot lighting. With a concentrated form of light of this intensity and a small parabolic reflector 24 inches in diameter a beam of light can be produced which will give very high intensities for indoor and outdoor work at near ranges, i. e. from 10 to 80 feet. For special work outdoors, it is possible to photograph sets by the light of the beam at a distance of over one fourth of a mile.

the advantages of the Sun Light Arc in intensity and concentration of the brilliancy. There is another very important feature of the Sun Light Arc. This might be called the quality of the light. All photographers agree that the ideal light for photography is sunlight and North skylight. The ideal artificial illuminant is that one which nearly approaches daylight in quality. Daylight is not highly colored, but is usually referred to as pure white. In comparison with most artificial lights it would be called slightly bluish in hue. Daylight is also very actinic. The standards of photography are, in general, set by the results which the photographer obtains by daylight. When the photographer can obtain results of a similar sort by artificial illumination, such illumination will be considered ideal. The Sun Light Arc is very similar in quality of light to brilliant daylight; it is clean bluish white in color, and is also extremely actinic.

This explains very conclusively why the results obtained with the Sun Light Arc appear not only true to the eye but also true to the camera's eye.

There is probably no equipment in existence from which it is possible to obtain so much light with so little weight of apparatus. This feature combined with the remarkable photographic qualities of the light makes it ideal for portable equipments. The complete unit is easily handled by two men. The lamp with its container, trunnion arms and swivel base weighs 150 pounds. A tripod is furnished which weighs about 70 lbs. In addition to those units a 75 pound rheostat is necessary when the apparatus is operated from a standard 110 volt circuit.

Equipment Business Improving.

The management of the Breck Photoplay Supply Co., of San Francisco, notes a steady increase in business of late, with more inquiries than for many months. Recent sales have included two Simplex machines for the Verdi Theatre, San Francisco, whose other machines have been shifted to the Allies Theatre; two machines and a rectifier for the York Theatre, also of this city; one Simplex for use at Folsom prison, Folsom, Cal.; two for the Mission Theatre, Dinuba, conducted by Walter Evans; two for the Willows Airdome, soon to open at Willows, Cal., and two for the theatre at San Leandro, Cal., opened on April 15 by George Freitas and David Wilson.

Film Developing Corp. Will Increase Capacity

PLANS have just been announced for the enlargement of the already splendid commercial laboratory and printing plant of the Film Developing Corp. at No. 216 Weehawken street, West Hoboken, N. J. Additional machinery is to be installed and an even more efficient system inaugurated which will increase the capacity of the plant from 500,000 feet per week to 1,000,000 feet.

The Film Developing Corp. is not a new business and is already favorably known throughout the moving picture trade. Within the past few weeks, however, many important changes have been made. As at present organized the company has for its officers: Harry Houdini, president; Theodore W. Hardeen, vice-president, and Alfred Davidson, secretary and treasurer.

Houdini's recently developed interest in the moving picture industry has excited no little comment. His initial venture was recorded when he starred in the Houdini serial, a series of two-reel pictures which are said to have met with a degree of success rarely equaled. Mr. Hardeen, who is associated with Houdini in the Film Developing Corp., will be recalled by amusement men as a recognized theatrical performer who has, like Houdini, specialized in "escape" work. Mr. Davidson, secretary and treasurer of the company, has just returned to civil life after having served as a first lieutenant in the American army.

The Film Developing Corp. at present occupy an entire three-story building in West Hoboken. The large corps of expert workmen who have been assembled use standard Bell & Howell equipment and the appointments of the plant throughout are modern.

Among the results of the first advertisement placed in Moving Picture World by the Exhibit Supply Company were sales to Apollo Theatre, New York, where the entire supply of pictures was sold in one day; Blue Mouse Theatre, Fort Worth, sold out in three days, and Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y., sold out in one day; a few scattered instances of results.

DEEP MYSTERY FINALLY LAID BARE

J. E. Robin, Aided and Abetted by Messrs. Edwin S. and B. F. Porter, Explains Hectic Signs on Godfrey Building Which Have Been Annoying Film Trade—Cinema Equipment Center

SOME weeks ago the Godfrey Building, at 729 Seventh avenue, broke out all over with queer and mysterious eruptions. On the windows, in the elevators, and everywhere one looked were to be seen hectic signs in red and black, reading "Something New in Movies."

No one knew what it was all about.

Repeated inquiries brought no satisfactory answer. It was just "something new" in a field which has been worked forward and back and through the middle until it seems perfectly reasonable to assume that there can be nothing really new in it.

Now comes J. E. Robin, flanked by Edwin S. Porter and B. F. Porter, to make a brief preliminary statement—for these are the men who are behind this "something new in the movies."

A projection laboratory for demonstration and experimental purposes— a salesroom where one may purchase anything and everything that has to do with the equipment and operation of a moving picture theatre or a moving picture library—this is the answer.

The new enterprise is officially listed as the International Cinema Equipment Center, operated by the Cinema Equipment Center, Inc., a closed corporation of which Edwin S. Porter is president, J. E. Robin, vice president and general manager, and B. F. Porter, treasurer.

Backers Experienced Men.

The gentlemen mentioned are all well known in the moving picture industry and the records they have made for noteworthy achievements in lines allied with their new venture is of interest in that it has much to do with the Cinema Center's chances for success.

Edwin S. Porter's most important connection at the present time is with the Precision Machine Co., whose activities he has directed with striking success for the past couple of years. In the earlier days he was the mainspring of the Famous Players company where his ability as a technical director of moving pictures was used to splendid advantage.

J. E. Robin, vice president and general manager of the new enterprise, has had a hand in the perfection and exploitation of a number of the best known makes of moving picture projectors, including the Simplex and the Baird. His work in the projection field has attracted considerable attention at the various world's fairs; at the San Francisco Exposition he was given the highest award as a cinematograph engineer.

B. F. Porter, treasurer of the new company, is best known as New York sales manager for the Precision Machine Co. In this capacity he has made some of the most important projection installations in the United States.

Have Building's Entire Second Floor.

The Cinema Equipment Center is being established on the second floor of the Godfrey Building which it will occupy to the exclusion of all other business. Ten thousand square feet of floor space have been taken. About $14,000 is being expended in fitting up the place.

As has been suggested, the Cinema Center, in a sense, will be a permanent exposition at which may be seen in actual operation every device necessary to the most efficient operation of a picture theatre or a laboratory. There will be booths for approximately fifty manufacturers who have wares to sell the picture trade. A number of these manufacturers are planning to keep their own representatives constantly in attendance; others will entrust their interests to the corps of experienced salesmen who will be employed by the Cinema Center people. The manufacturers assembled will be in non-competitive lines and a point is being made of the fact that those being accepted are the cream of the field, and those with established reputations for reliability and fair business dealing.

There are a score of angles to the new enterprise which can better be elaborated upon in the near future after the business is under way. With this preliminary announcement is reproduced a floor plan of the new laboratory and salesroom which will do much toward explaining the general idea. Of particular interest is the method which is being worked out for the demonstration of all kinds of electrical and mechanical devices commonly used in a moving picture theatre.

Model Theatre and Booth.

One part of the big sales room is being fitted up as a model theatre, expensive portieres closing it off when it is to be darkened for use. At the rear of the theatre seating space there is being installed the finest and most complete projection booth which has ever been constructed. Special switchboards which will almost perform miracles with electrical current have been devised. Simplex projectors will be used and it will be possible to rig them up at a moment's notice with the various types of motor generators, transformers, etc., which are offered as aids to perfect projection. This means that a prospective purchaser of a projection set will be able to visit the salesroom and laboratory and see any equipment he may contemplate purchasing operating under exactly the same conditions which he will encounter in his home town, whether it be in Indian or Indiana.

The theatre will be equipped with two or more screens which can be used simultaneously, making it possible to compare projection results under varying conditions. Meters and other measuring devices will provide accurate knowledge of any savings in current which are possible as the result of various combinations of projection machinery.

The facilities provided by this model theatre and projection booth will be available for the manufacturers interested for experimental work and it is hoped that the Cinema Equipment Center will be the birthplace of many new ideas for the general betterment of the entire moving picture industry.

Conveniences for Buyers

The Cinema people expect that what they will have to offer will make their place of business attractive as temporary headquarters for the many prospective buyers who are to be found in New York from day to day, and their plan calls for a lot of comforts and conveniences for these visitors. There will be a big telephone exchange, a telegraph office, public stenographers, and private offices for the use of those who may require them. Visitors will be asked to register and information as to their particular whereabouts in New York during their stay in the city will be available for all those whom the visitors desire to have it.

Work on the new business place has been proceeding rapidly for some time. Booths and show cases are being installed, the theatre and projection booth are being fitted up, and soon the decorative refinements will be installed. It is hoped that the doors may be thrown open for business about May 15. Practically all of the booth space has already been contracted for.

Two Tourneur Pictures Ready for the Public

THE Maurice Tourneur Productions announce that two of Mr. Tourneur's pictures will reach the public about the same time. "The White Heather," the first one filmed by this well known director on the Pacific Coast, will have its premiere at the Rialto Theatre, New York, during week of May 4, and "My Lady's Garter," which was filmed by Mr. Tourneur before leaving New York, will soon be presented to the public.

These two productions are in marked contrast to each other, and show the versatility of the producer, who has a number of high-class motion pictures to his credit.

"My Lady's Garter" is from the successful novel of the same title written by Jacques Futrelle, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster. The screen rights to this novel were retained by the author, who took the view that "the day will come when good stories will command big prices from producers of motion pictures."

After Mr. Futrelle's widow witnessed Mr. Tourneur's production, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," she was impressed with his work, and arrangements were finally made by which Mr. Tourneur secured the right to use this story for a special production.

The cast of "My Lady's Garter" includes Sylvia Breamer, H. E. Herbert, Wyndham Standing, and the well known French actor, Paul Clerget.

Simplex Canadian Agent in New York.

George F. Perkins, of the Perkins Electric Company, with offices in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, was a visitor at the Simplex factory this week. The Perkins Electric Company are Canadian Distributors for the Simplex Projectors and reports from that section indicate a heavy Simplex business.

Mr. Perkins had just completed a busy week at Atlantic City, where he played an important part at the Electrical Convention, also taking part in the three days' convention at the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at Philadelphia.

Simplex a Feature at Movie Ball.

At the big Movie Ball held at the State Armory, Providence, last Thursday, the Precision Machine Company included in their display the $1,400 nickel-plated prize-winning Simplex Projector, which has been exhibited in all parts of the country.

Among those prominent at the Simplex display were W. C. Francke, of the Precision Machine Company; Harry Asher and Cecil Wood, of the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company, southern New England distributors for the Simplex, and David Davidson and his manager, George Butler, of the David Davidson Studios, Providence, distributors for Simplex.

Moving Pictures as Aid to Insane.

Dr. Ross, superintendent of the institution, State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Dannemora, N. Y., declares to C. C. Charles, Simplex Distributor at Albany, that the use of motion pictures has proven one of the best mediums for controlling unruly inmates, all of whom are very much interested in the weekly exhibition of movies. In the event of misbehavior on the part of any of the patients, the privilege of viewing the pictures is taken from them, with the result that the morale of the institution has greatly improved since the introduction of motion picture exhibitions through the use of the Simplex.

To whom it may concern

Referring to the announced intention of Mr. Oliver Morosco to give or authorize the giving of motion picture performances of the play of which the undersigned is the author, attention is called to the following provision contained in the contract with Mr. Morosco, dated the 19th day of January, 1912, to wit:

"PEG O' MY HEART"

"No alterations, eliminations or additions shall be made in the play without the approval of the author."

The undersigned will not consent to any alterations, eliminations or additions in his play, if used for purposes of motion pictures, and will not consent to the introduction of additional characters or incidents or scenes, should the play be used for motion pictures.

On a violation of the above provision, application will be made for an injunction.

The undersigned has also instructed his counsel to file, without delay, an application in the Supreme Court of the United States, for a writ of certiorari, to review the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals, recently rendered in his suit against Mr. Morosco, the court not being unanimous on the question of the right of Mr. Morosco to make a picture of the play

COOPER HEWITT HAVE NEW SPECIALTY

Elevator Winged Stand Latest Device Contrived to Save Time, Money and Inconvenience in Studios

Consistent with the reputation established by the Cooper Hewitt Electric Company, as the premier exponent of artificial illumination for motion picture studios, when they equipped the first artificially illuminated studio fifteen years ago, they have continued to hold their position in the vanguard by keeping pace with the rapid strides of the industry; by foreseeing its needs and supplying them as fast as they developed.

The newest addition to its long list of special lighting equipment is the Elevator Winged Stand.

The Elevator Winged Stand is a combination of the skylight or overhead light with the floor stand or side light. This unit is especially flexible, and is particularly useful where the studio roof does not permit of the installation of the overhead crane system of light distribution.

The Elevator Winged Stand.

The eight vertical tubes of the lower portion of the unit are built in two swinging frames or wings, and may be swung out to each side of the stand where "close-ups" are wanted with particularly good illumination in the near foreground. By posing the subject in front of the unit and shooting through the uprights of the frame an even illumination from both sides by means of the swinging wings and top light from the overhead portion is quickly secured, while the ease with which each section may be adjusted makes the attainment of an artistic balance of light and shade the work of only a few seconds.

Conserving Directors' Patience.

The director who has had to fume and wait for the tiresome adjustment of a number of lamp stands and who has witnessed the inroads on precious working time entailed in getting the "close-ups" for cut-ins on his big scenes will immediately recognize that the saving in overhead charges will pay for one of these new units in a very short time.

The outfit shown in the cut is for direct current—the alternating current outfit is similar, except that the alternating current type tubes and auxiliaries are used instead of the direct current type.

Another very useful unit recently developed by the Cooper Hewitt Company is the Foot-light Unit, which is a low truck on ball bearing castors carrying four of the long lamp tubes mounted horizontally near the floor. Each tube is mounted in a white enameled reflector, and the entire unit of lamps is covered by a heavy galvanized wire guard to protect it in "rough-house" scenes, where its position on the floor might render it more susceptible to accident from the movement of props or the unrestrained action of a violently moving actor.

Concerning Early Days.

As the name implies, these stands give a source of light from almost the level of the floor, throwing the light up into the set and illuminating shadows cast by overhead lights. They eliminate the heavy shadows cast by large hats, show details under tables, furniture, beds, etc., and are invaluable for "close-ups" of feet or objects on or near the floor, and for fire light effects from a fire place or similar situations.

The motion picture industry has grown to enormous proportions since the first studio was lighted with Cooper Hewitts fifteen years ago. Where there were five firms making pictures then, there are several hundred now; where there were a hundred actors, there are now thousands; where there were a hundred thousand dollars invested in equipment, there are now a hundred million.

Wonderful progress has been made in every department of the business. From the crude and for the most part slapstick work done by a few people have grown the elaborate plays and brilliant spectacles participated in by many artists with their huge companies. Scenes made in all parts of the world are combined to make the completed story.

The development from the "movies" of fifteen years ago to the dramatic, historical, educational and feature productions of today has been brought about by the growth of the public demand. At the very foundation of this demand is the insistence that the pictures on the screen be portrayed truly. This can only be done by the highest excellence in photography, and its first essential is proper lighting.

It requires light in a considerable quantity of short wave length and high actinic quality to reduce the silver on the film so it may be developed into a satisfactory photograph with light and shade and modeling.

Quantity and quality must go hand in hand. The motion camera makes sixteen exposures to the second. At this speed there must be sufficient light to act on the sensitized film. The quality of the light must be equal to the best north light in diffusion, and both quantity and quality must be uniform and constant as long as required for the picture.

The Cooper Hewitt fulfills the specifications for the ideal light; it is extremely actinic, i. e., rich in the green, blue and violet rays; it is free from glare; it is perfectly diffused and steady at all times; it has daylight quality; it is ideal for portraiture; it is available at an instant notice; it is highly efficient, has long life and requires no trimming or attention, and may be perfectly controlled. Over one hundred studios both in Europe and America have demonstrated that the Cooper Hewitt lights, conforming as they do to the above specifications, produce in motion picture studios results superior to daylight, in that daylight is a most variable quantity and only available a few hours per day.

With a large payroll, a long program and a release date, the manager of a studio must have the best light to be efficient. A good scenario cleverly acted and beautifully set will waste a lot of film for the producers if not properly lighted—the final test is the quality photographically. Insufficient and improper lighting is a danger to avoid. It often costs more to "retake" than the lights cost originally. Light is cheaper than labor.

Cooper Hewitt on the Coast.

"Overhead," that bugbear of all managers, can be cut in half if the studio can take "as good pictures at midnight as at midday." Many studios in that "Land of Sunshine," California, have put in Cooper Hewitt equipment for this very reason.

The lights are installed in the most modern glass studios, and blend perfectly with daylight; they make it possible for all "dark" studios to secure results equal, and some producers say superior, to the daylight studio.

A motion picture company which originally installed Cooper Hewitt lighting equipment in their indoor studio contracted for nearly a thousand of the Automatic Cooper Hewitt Lamps when they erected their modern plant, a testimonial which speaks convincingly for itself. Many manufacturers have added two, three and up to ten studio lighting equipments to their original installation.

"THE RED LANTERN" STARS NAZIMOVA

Wonderful Spectacle, Based on Edith Wherry's Story, Presents Great Opportunity for Business Getting Through Publicity Methods Suggested to Showmen

By Epes Winthrop Sargent and Walter K. Hill

THE best advertisement you can possibly have for this production is a person who has seen the play. This does not mean that you do not need to bring into play every advertising device you can, but the word-of-mouth advertising of those who have seen the production will clinch the effect of all your other work.

Do everything in your power, but bear in mind that the personal indorsement of those of your patrons who have seen the production will mean much additional money to you, so make a special effort to get a big turn-out of intelligent spectators for the opening matinee. If you are not in the habit of giving matinees save on Saturday, give one for this in any event. If your matinee business is apt to be small, take means to increase it.

Assemble 500 Personal Boosters.

The simplest scheme is to give away large numbers of tickets good only for the first matinee showing. A better way would be to arrange with women's clubs, social organizations or church aid and especially foreign mission societies to sell special matinee tickets on 25 per cent. commission. If you cannot get these to work with you, then give a special matinee at a nominal admission and tell just why you do it. Get out an announcement that runs in effect:

We want 500 press agents for "The Red Lantern." We want 500 patrons of the Blank Theatre who will go out and tell their friends just what a wonderful production "The Red Lantern" is. We want 500 persons who will tell others just how great Nazimova is in this greatest of all her pictures.

For this reason we shall make a special presentation of this play on (date), when an admission of only (price) will be charged. We are going to charge the difference in admission to the advertising account.

Personal Publicity Will Count.

If you work this stunt properly and fully, the moral effect will help, but your chief gain will be the scattering through the town of several hundred persons who will tell others that your advertising has not overstated the excellence of the offering.

It is to be presumed that you have played Nazimova in her other productions. If you have, tell your patrons that this play has the charm of "Revelation," the dramatic quality of her best, and as a spectacle far exceeds "Eye for Eye," both in elaborateness of scenes and in the crowds and their handling.

Get the strip of seven portraits shown in the press sheet. Run this before you start your full advertising campaign. Under it ask who can name the seven picture players shown. Offer a small prize or, better still, have the paper offer the prize. Few will guess that all seven are Nazimova.

Open Campaign with Guessing Match.

When the campaign is started you can declare the winner and make this your text for an article on the wonderful dual role she plays. The contrast in character and appearance is wonderful. Lay stress upon this whether you use the prize scheme or not.

Start your actual campaign with the snipes offered by the exchange. Get plenty of these. Get enough to cover a mile radius in cities and your own town and the next in the country. Two days later post your regular paper. Get as many of the 24-sheets as you can and get a few extra ones to guard against a washdown.

Use some of the smaller sizes, too, but don't try to do without the 24s. You cannot afford to. For your smaller sizes get a variety, but more of the numbers 1, 4 and 10A. Use the No. 8 for window displays as well as the window cards.

Don't Overlook Any Chance.

Get a large supply of the door hangers. If you cannot afford sufficient to place on all doors, at least get a supply sufficiently large to enable you to hang them in all stores, on projections along the main streets, around your house and in the street cars.

You will probably have to pay a small sum for permission to tie these in the cars, but it will be worth the expense if the traction company is reasonable. It will be worth more if you can hang in the inter-urban cars. Start using these a week in advance and have a sufficient surplus to renew any which may be torn down or defaced.

Light with Red Lanterns.

Start a week in advance to show a couple of red lanterns in your lobby. If you cannot procure the real Chinese lanterns, get red cloth or tissue and make straight sided lanterns, simply pasting the paper over small hoops and hanging them over incandescent lights. Start with a couple and add two or three more every day until you have your lobby filled by the day of the first showing. If you cannot get the time to make these, you can at least dip your incandescent globes and paint the large globes of your arcs. Get the dip used for outdoor work.

Along the same lines use red-dipped bulbs for store windows where you have displays. You can use a hook-up with the stores handling the song (details in the press book), but do not rest content with this. Get artistic displays in other store windows, particularly stores dealing in Japanese novelties of any sort, combining your stills with the store's stock and with the red lights in plenty.

Pay the merchant for the extra current used, if you have to. You can at least dip the bulbs for him. Don't be afraid to give the merchants an argument. Don't let them tell you that you should pay for the display. Make them see that they profit through the attention your display attracts to the store. Go to some pains to get an attractive layout and get a different display for each window.

Here's a Phonograph "Stunt."

You can work a novel phonograph hookup if you start in early enough. Any phonograph dealer can order for you some genuine Chinese records. In the smaller towns these are never heard. Buy half a dozen and play a record at each performance while you run slides telling of the play and one slide telling that your local phonograph man can order records in any language. Then display the records you are not using at the moment in the window of the phonograph store.

The labels are in Chinese ideograph and their novelty will attract. Show stills of the Chinese scenes and have a sign: "These records will be played all this week at the Blank Theatre to advertise the coming of 'The Red Lantern,' Nazimova's wonderful Chinese production. Hear them. They're great."

You can use the same records for a lobby ballyhoo while the house is coming in. Most of them are infernally loud and will catch the crowd, and yet they are in keeping with this production. Advertise largely that you will give a free Chinese concert in the lobby before each show.

Nazimova in "The Red Lantern."
The star in costume as Mahlee, the girl without caste.

Have your dealer write the company and tell what the selections are wanted for, and you will get instrumental records with gong effects. You can knock out a small town with this stunt. But don't play them during the showing.

Link Up with the Bookman.

You can get another hook-up with the book stores. They can get one or two copies of the book and can take orders for others after the showing. There is no motion picture edition, but many will want the book at regular price. Tell your bookman that it is "The Red Lantern," by Edith Wherry, published by the Bodley Head. Run a slide for the book, telling where it may be had.

Organize a street parade of "The Red Lantern," either providing the lanterns or telling the boys that each parader can have a free matinee ticket for the following week. Start and end the parade at your house. Stipulate that the lanterns must be red and raised on four-foot poles. Provide some lanterns of your own to ensure a sufficiency.

Bill the Feast of Lanterns.

In your advertising for this explain that the feast of the Red Lantern is the Chinese New Year, and that on that night thousands swarm the streets of Chinese cities with red lanterns to propitiate the Goddess of the Red Lantern, the character assumed by Nazimova to further the ends of the Boxer plotters. If you have the parade, carry cut-outs of the goddess, including the steps and circle, and also the figure of Buddha. Burn incense or red fire before each.

Get plenty of incense for your lobby. Burn a little in the house, but keep most of it in the lobby and burn enough to let the scent get up and down the street. Use the same cut-outs for your lobby display and burn the incense before these figures.

Go Heavy on Newspapers.

You can get a splendid effect by gilding the Buddha, using red tinsel or red bronze for the flames. If you do this, paint out the figure of the girl and touch in the character lines with black. If you can, enshrine the figure in a canopy of red cloth with gilt paper strips lettered in red for hangers. Take your decorations out beyond the building line if you can get permission.

In your newspaper work take big spaces, but take two half pages or four quarters rather than one full page. Keep on hammering right up to the last day, though you can cut down gradually as your patrons spread the word. Use plenty of cuts. You have a fine assortment of scene cuts. Play up No. 14, but use as many of the others as possible. Use 11 and 12 in the same advertisement, pinning the text of this on the wonderful versatility of the star and telling that Nazimova plays both roles.

Use both the dramatic and spectacular angles in all your advertising. Do not permit anyone to get the impression that this is merely a spectacle. Tell that first of all it is a smashing big story of the Boxer rebellion, told with gripping suspense and shown in a succession of wonderful scenes, many of which are remarkable for their size and accuracy of color. Tell that in every advertisement you write.

Nazimova's Greatest Screen Play.

Then work on your story angles. Tell of the little Eurasian girl, half Oriental and half Occidental, cursed by the Chinese for the blood of the Foreign Devils which flows in her veins and rejected by the Europeans because she is not wholly white. Make this curse of mixed bloods the theme of your talks and tell of the situations it arouses.

Tell of Wang, also a Eurasian, who turns Boxer leader to avenge himself upon the whites who have done him wrong. Tell of Mahlee, raised in the home atmosphere of the Mission, loving the son of the head of the Mission only to lose him to her half-sister, who is wholly white. Tell how the curse of blood moves her to give aid to the Boxers, who, through her impersonation of the Goddess of the Red Lantern are able to sway the superstitious coolies to open rebellion.

The Story.

Mahlee is a Eurasian—tainted by white blood that makes her an outcast among Chinese, while the whites will not accept her because of her Chinese blood. At the death of her grandmother, who has raised her since Mahlee's mother died in child-birth, the girl goes to the Christian Mission, in Pekin, where she is converted to Protestantism and becomes a sincere and active mission worker.

She meets and falls in love with Andrew Templeton, son of the American minister who heads the Mission. Templeton's admiration is constrained by his knowledge that she is but half white. At the mission also lives Sam Wang, who professes Christianity, but is in fact a Boxer leader. Wang covets Mahlee, but she loves Templeton and spurns Wang's advances.

One day Blanche Sackville (a role also played by Nazimova) comes to the mission, and in her Mahlee recognizes the daughter of the Englishman of whom Mahlee's grandmother has told her. Immediately an attachment springs up between Templeton and Blanche, and into Mahlee's heart goes the steel of jealousy and the realization that Blanche's father, although he is also Mahlee's father, favors Templeton's suit.

Sam Wang realizes the tempest that is surging in Mahlee's breast and is ultimately able to influence her to join him—to become the Goddess of the Red Lantern, queen of the Boxers. But Mahlee still feels the call of both bloods, and while she serves the Boxer's cause she cannot bear to have those she loves fall a victim to barbarism and superstition. She goes to the Christian Mission to warn her friends of their danger.

When she here meets Sir Phillip Sackville and pleads with him to acknowledge her as his daughter and to take her away from China, Sackville refuses. Then Mahlee goes back to Sam Wang and celebrates the Feast of the Lanterns. Suspicion and distrust enters the Chinese mind, and the Boxers would kill Mahlee; but Wang saves her. Armed conflict between the Boxers and the Allies ends in the rout of the Chinese.

Mahlee repairs to the Boxer's palace, and while seated on her throne drinks from the bottle of poison Sam Wang has given her. There Sackville and Blanche go with Andrew Templeton and find her dead. Nazimova, in "The Red Lantern," will lead a host of players through a beautifully mounted spectacle of intense dramatic power at the (insert name of theatre and date) as the crowning event of the period.

and the brilliant "Feast of the Lanterns" there are hundreds of supernumeraries.

Every few months, out of the multitude of productions prepared for the screen, some really great photoplay is delivered to public gaze. The last great spectacle was Griffith's move in the game of war—"Hearts of the World." In the months that have passed there have been good plays and bad—but now comes to the (insert theatre and date) the greatest spectacle of the year with Nazimova the star. "The Red Lantern" will mark an epoch in film production. It is the really great play of recent times. It will amaze beholders. These statements are based on matters of fact—for great is Nazimova and great is "The Red Lantern."

Famed on stage and screen Nazimova seems to have definitely settled into a calling where her great art and impelling personality is best appreciated—as the central figure in great photoplays she is seen at her best. Recently she has appeared in "Eye for Eye," "Out of the Fog," "Revelation" and other distinctive screen efforts, but now she comes with her greatest vehicle—"The Red Lantern," to entertain at (insert name of theatre and date) in Metro's masterly production. Hosts of people appeared before the camera in making the hundreds of scenes; the stupendous sets cost thousands of dollars, and greatest of all, the achievements is the work of Nazimova in dual roles. Edith Wherry's splendid novel has been given a fitting setting, with Nazimova the central jewel.

Publicity for "The Red Lantern."

The Feast of the Red Lantern! The Forbidden City of Royal Purple! Ages of Chinese history and superstition! The unending efforts of Christian missioners! The struggle between two bloods that flow through the veins of a dainty girl who loves China and feels the call of her English parentage blends into a drama that combines all these elements of interest into one mammoth photoplay will have Nazimova as star of "The Red Lantern" at the (insert theatre and date) to mark an event in moving picture history.

Romance of the Mysterious Orient.

Superstition, suspicion and mistrust of all who are not natives fanned the Boxer uprising into a wild flame of riot and disorder.

Leading this carnival of hate and crime was a girl who had been born with both English and Chinese blood in her veins. Her mother had been sold for gold.

Spurned by Chinese and outcast by the whites, love called her, and then changed her heart to a burning inspiration of vengeance.

Nazimova, the incomparable, will keep the interest at grips when she presents "The Red Lantern" at the (insert theatre and date). A great drama; a moving spectacle; a tragic story of a crushed ambition and hopeless love.

"Salome" Smashes Records for Western Exhibitors

EXHIBITORS in the West have long ago broken all attendance records for William Fox pictures with the Theda Bara super-production, "Salome." Reports are coming into the Fox offices daily showing that the picture is crowding houses.

"Salome" has just completed a two weeks' engagement at the Olympic Theatre, Pittsburgh. It is the only motion picture that has had a two weeks' engagement in a regulation picture house in Pittsburgh, it is said.

In the northwestern part of the country A. L. Brown, proprietor of the Colonial Theatre, Aberdeen, S. D., booked "Salome" for four days. The box-office records he established were unprecedented. Arthur E. Weld, manager of the Strand Theatre, Cedar Rapids, had a similar experience. Mr. Weld played "Salome" from March 4 to 8, and found at the expiration of the run that the picture had made more money for him than any other production he ever had shown. Mr. Weld invited all the ministers of the town to attend the showing, and practically every clergyman accepted.

Tom Arthur, of the Cecil Theatre, Mason City, Iowa, presented "Salome" March 17, 18 and 19, and stated that it was the biggest success he ever presented at his theatre.

So many persons had to be turned away when J. E. Hostettler showed "Salome" at the Plaza Theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, and the Casino Theatre, at Marshalltown, Iowa, that he had to book the picture for a return engagement at each house.

Capt. Langford Plays Lead in Thomas Play

Capt. Edward T. Langford is the only man of nine who escaped with his life when a detachment of the Seventh New York Regiment (107th Infantry, 27th Division) was searched out by a 9-5 German shell which plunged on their billet near Peronne and exploded right in the middle of the bunkhouse. Mr. Langford is cast as a captain in Harry Raver's new Four Star feature picture—by Augustus Thomas, distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Capt. Langford was formerly in the Belasco forces. He supported Clara Kimball Young in "The Dark Silence," played opposite Alice Brady in three pictures and has also supported Ethel Clayton and Gail Kane in some of their best known productions.

"Unpainted Woman" Is Mary MacLaren's Newest

PRODUCED under the working title of "Prairie Gold," Mary MacLaren's latest Universal Special Attraction picture, will soon be released under the title of "The Unpainted Woman." A more suitable part for Miss MacLaren has never been found and her personality is shown to advantage in this picture.

"The Unpainted Woman" has been adapted from a story by the well-known short story writer Sinclair Lewis. Waldemar Young adapted the story to the screen and the picture was produced under the direction of Tod Browning.

In this photodrama Miss MacLaren has the role of Gudrun Trygavson, a servant girl who is loved by one of the aristocratic sons of a small Western village.

Supporting Miss MacLaren in the leading masculine role is Thurston Hall. Others in the cast are David Butler, Laura LaVarnie, Fritzie Ridgeway, Willard Louis, Carl Stockdale, Lydia Yeamans Titus, and Mickey Moore.

"The Unpainted Woman" is in six reels.

Big Demand for Prizma Pictures.

The undeniable success attained by Prizma Pictures has aroused the exhibitors throughout the country of the box office possibilities of this motion picture novelty. The only complaint made by the exhibitors at this moment is that it is impossible to secure prints. However, World Pictures, which is the distributors for Prizma, state that in the near future every one will have an opportunity to secure bookings through the increased facilities that is being provided by a laboratory six times as big as the one Prizma started out with.

A Prizma photographer recently left for Borneo where he will go into the interior to secure subjects and thus be able to afford picture patrons an opportunity to see and learn something about this mysterious island.

June Elvidge Has Started Another Picture for World

ACTIVITY at the World Studio at Fort Lee is at high tide these days. June Elvidge having finished "The Social Pirate" commenced work on a new five reel picture which Tefft Johnson will direct. It bears the working title of "Love and the Woman."

The cast engaged to support Miss Elvidge is headed by George Masquarrie, who having finished a spring theatrical engagement with Grace George, has come back to the picture game. Others in the cast are Rod LaRocque, Laura Burt, who it will be remembered was the original Madge in "Old Kentucky." Marion Barney, another well known screen artist, plays an important role. Among the well-known members of Miss Elvidge's company are Donald Hall, Lillian Lawrence and Edward Roseman.

The story was written by Phil Lonergan and was put in scenario form by Giles R. Warren under the direction of Charles Sarver, scenario editor of World Pictures.

Human Reality a Feature of De Mille's New Artcraft

IN "For Better, For Worse," Cecil B. DeMille's latest Artcraft Special production which was released April 27, it is said that all the characters are real human beings, grappling with human situations, and the sympathy of the audience goes out to every one of them, in spite of their mistakes and rash actions, Edgar Selwyn, author of many Broadway successes, wrote the story, and the scenario was written by Jeanie MacPherson.

The picture deals with the most vital of modern problems raised by the war. Moreover, those who have seen it claim that it is by far the finest piece of work Mr. DeMille has yet given to the screen, from every standpoint—theme, story, dramatic suspense, acting and production. The cast maintains the high standard set by Mr. DeMille in his previous productions and includes, among others, Elliott Dexter, Gloria Swanson, Wanda Hawley, Sylvia Ashton, Tom Forman, Theodore Roberts, Jack Holt and Raymond Hatton.

Corbett Serial Again Held Up.

The James J. Corbett serial "The Midnight Man" has been held up from further production through the illness of James W. Horne, who is directing the serial production. He became ill soon after his wife, known as Cleo Ridgely, the film star, returned from a hospital. It will be necessary to operate on Mr. Horne, and meanwhile the production will be held up until his recovery.

Lillian Russell Attends Private View.

Among those present at the large private showing of "As a Man Thinks" in Pittsburgh recently were Lillian Russell, her daughter, Dorothy Russell, and her husband, Alex Moore, owner of the Pittsburgh Leader. Miss Russell was enthusiastic over the picturization of Augustus Thomas' stage play, and pronounced it an intense drama with a wide appeal.

Goldwyn Heads Acclaim Beach's "Crimson Gardenia"

AN advance showing of Rex Beach's latest picture, "The Crimson Gardenia," at the Goldwyn projection room has convinced Goldwyn executives that this picture will be one of the screen sensations of the spring showing. The picture is scheduled for release May 18.

Unheralded, except as a good picture with strong plot interest, the first showing of the picture at the Goldwyn offices amazed its audience by the power of its narrative, the artfulness with which suspense has been sustained to the last moment, and the beauty and novelty of the settings.

In the midst of so many screen releases that depend upon merely exotic atmosphere for their interest, the new Rex Beach picture has almost every quality that theorists of the screen demand, and in abundance. Hugo Ballin's amazing realism in his projection of New Orleans, old Creole houses and all, done on the green grass of Culver City, is one of the unique successes of art direction.

But this is after all only the dressing for the story. Stripped to the bare skeleton of its narrative, as an expert scenario editor would judge it, "The Crimson Gardenia" possesses every requirement for great picturization, skillful and subtle interweaving of themes, the finished acting of Owen Moore and Hedda Nova, a steady accumulation of interest to an explosive point, and an ending that in the quality of delicate humour surpasses anything in recent screen history.

Big First Run Bookings on "A Stitch in Time"

FIRST-RUN bookings preempting the foremost screens of the country are recorded for Vitagraph's new Gladys Leslie production, "A Stitch in Time." Interest in the new production has been whetted by its successful presentation in stage form at the Fulton Theatre, in New York, in the past season and in restricted stock territory during the past fortnight. Irene Fenwick scored an emphatic hit in the role of Phoebe-Ann, the heroine, and this achievement is said to have been more than duplicated by Gladys Leslie in the screen version.

This photoplay was directed by Ralph Ince.

New York's near-Latin quarter in historic Greenwich Village is the scene of "A Stitch in Time," thus transplanting to the screen a section of life of peculiar interest to the average fan, whose acquaintanceship with the mode of life obtaining there does not extend beyond book-covers.

In the supporting cast are Eugene Strong, Julia Swayne Gordon, Agnes Ayres, Charles Walton, Cecil Chichester, Earl Schenk and Charles Stevenson.

Pathe News Records Hold Much for Army and Navy

THE Pathe News has come to be regarded as the popular unofficial record of all arms of the war service. It has touched the high points of achievement of the Army and Navy, with most attention to activities in the air. Admiral Usher recently expressed his appreciation at a specially arranged showing. A Pathe News exhibited at a dinner given in honor of the Admiral on occasion of his retirement from active service, a selection of subjects showing activities in the different branches of the Third District.

These pictures included scenes showing submarine chasers at work, firing of the depth charges, balloons in flight over New York, the contest between foreign nations for trans-Atlantic flight. All were enthusiastically received.

Pathe News, at this dinner, took exclusive pictures of Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Admiral Usher.

Holmes Shows "Filipino School Days."

School life today in far-away Manila and other towns of the Philippines shows the fatherly interest of Uncle Sam in the bringing up of our "Little Brown Brothers." In the current Paramount-Burton Holmes' Travelogs, Mr. Holmes takes one first to join the festivities at the school in Kawit, near Cavite. The famous Aguinaldo appears with the Governor-General to review the parade of the high school cadets of Manila, who are also the guests of this celebration and will perform certain fancy evolutions.

Another school is a typical Provincial school near Baliuag, where the girls play baseball. These same girls are wonderful lacemakers as well.

Hall's 10–20–30 Series Meeting with Big Success

FRANK G. HALL'S series of 10-20-30 releases, now numbering six, are meeting with big success throughout this country and abroad, according to reports received from representative exhibitors.

The manner in which this series is going over in some of the largest cities is set forth in the letter received by Mr. Hall, published in the trade press, from Harry Crandall, the owner of seven of the largest picture theatres in Washington, D. C. In this letter Mr. Crandall states that one of the 10-20-30 series, "Suspense," starring Molly King, was played first-run in his Knickerbocker Theatre, because as he expressed it "the picture was too good to play his smaller houses."

Before the year is up, Mr. Hall will have released twelve of these special attractions at the 10-20-30 rentals. Six have already been released and are now before the public of this country and abroad. The Independent Sales Corporation, of which Mr. Hall is president, is releasing this series and the physical distribution is being handled by the Film Clearing House, Inc., of which Mr. Hall is supervising director. These two companies are also handling the distribution of Mr. Hall's special releases, including "Wanted for Murder," starring Elaine Hammerstein and Lillian Hall; "A Romance of the Air," starring Lieut. Bert Hall, famous American Ace; "The Littlest Scout," a J. Stuart Blackton production; "The Other Man's Wife," starring Stuart Holmes and Ellen Cassidy, and "A House Divided," Mr. Hall's most recent release on the special program, produced under the personal supervision of Commodore Blackton and starring Herbert Rawlinson and Sylvia Breamer.

In addition to handling the distribution of this product, the companies named above, are handling the distribution of the Rothapfel Unit Program the first Unit of which is released in May.

Charter Pullman Train for Goldwyn Film.

It is no unusual thing for a locomotive to be chartered by the producer of a photoplay. Sometimes, indeed, it is bought outright for a wreck or the possibility of complete demolition in a collision. But all precedents were broken when Madge Kennedy's new Goldwyn Picture, "Leave It to Susan," was produced.

Not only was a locomotive chartered but a complete train of Pullman cars and an entire crew. Furthermore, the scenes involving it were supposed to be on the American desert and nothing would do but to enact the episodes on the spot. Madge Kennedy, Director Clarence G. Badger, a company of twenty-five players and a dozen other associated in the production of the photoplay were sent to the Mojave desert. Already the train had been chartered and for two weeks the company worked, making it their headquarters day and night.

Vitagraph Issues Plan Book on Its New Serial

VITAGRAPH has issued its campaign and plan book for the new Antonio Moreno-Carol Holloway serial, "Perils of Thunder Mountain." The publication contains sixty-four pages, plus a two-color four-page insert and covers in colors. It is the most comprehensive plan ever released by the company.

In spite of the fact that the serial will not be released for another month, the book covers the serial in its entirety. It contains poster reproductions of the first four episodes of the serial, press matter and a novelization of each of the fifteen episodes and no end of suggestions and advertising aids for the busy exhibitor.

Blackton Signs Two Prominent Players.

Two of the principal supporting roles in J. Stuart Blackton's next feature film in which his missing team, Sylvia Breamer and Robert Gordon will be reunited, have been assigned to Julia Swayne Gordon and Van Dyke Brooks, respectively.

Miss Gordon has been loaned to Commodore Blackton for this special picture by the Vitagraph Company with which she has been associated for several years. Mr. Brooks is also well known for his work in Vitagraph releases.

The theme and title of the new Blackton picture which was begun at the producer's Brooklyn studios May 1 are a secret. Several players well known in screen and stage circles are to be signed for the supporting cast.

Ascher Brothers Book "Fire Flingers."

The entire group of theatres in the Ascher Brother's circuit of theatres have booked the Universal Special Attraction "The Fire Flingers" which Rupert Julian directed and in which he plays a leading dual role. The story was written by William J. Neidig and appeared in The Saturday Evening Post. It was adapted to the screen by Waldemar Young.

Bill Hart in New Locale in "The Money Corral"

WILLIAM S. HART has tried just about every spot on the American continent as locale for his Artcraft pictures. He has done pictures laid in Alaska, the North Woods, the Mexican Border, New York, San Francisco. In his newest Artcraft picture, "The Money Corral," which is released May 4, he ventured into a new field and takes a fling at the Chicago underworld.

The story of "The Money Corral" starts out in the West, and finishes up in the lower section of the second biggest city of the country.

The big opening feature of the drama is the rodeo, where wild riders, crack shots and plainmen from the ranges, compete before a great audience of excited spectators. This rodeo was staged near the Hart studio and over a thousand people appeared in the ensemble scenes. Mr. Hart does some of his most startling stunts in this portion of the picture.

Jane Novak is seen as Hart's leading woman. Rhea Mitchell also appears in a type the opposite of Miss Novak's interpretation and is said to give an excellent performance. Patricia Palmer is another feminine member and Herschel Mayall has a most effective heavy role. Winter Hall, familiar to all film playgoers, is cast for a dignified and patrician part.

The story was written by Lambert Hillyer and Mr. Hart, and they also combined their talents in the direction.

Lila Lee in Straight Dramatic Role.

Lila Lee is said to surpass the expectations of even her most enthusiastic admirers in an essentially dramatic role in "Rustling a Bride," her new Paramount picture by Edith M. Kennedy, which is released April 27. The story is a Western and the star has the role of a little New England girl, Emily, who starts a correspondence with a rancher in the West. When her grandmother dies he persuades her to come out and marry him.

Monte Blue plays the leading male part, that of Nick McCredie, the cowboy. L. J. Shumway plays the villain, Pen Walton. Pedro, Walton's Mexican accomplice, is ably portrayed by Manuel Ojeda. Guy Oliver is said to be well cast as Ezry, while Ruby LaFayette and Alice Knowland have important parts.

The picture was directed by Irvin Willat.

"Getting Mary Married" Goes Over Big.

"Getting Mary Married," Marion Davies latest and best picture, exhibited to an enthusiastic audience at Loew's Circle Theatre, and run throughout greater New York during the week, is undoubtedly one of the superior comedy-drama releases of the season and one which will prove a big box office success and a personal achievement for its star.

It is a five-reel Emerson-Loos comedy, brimming with subtle comedy touches; with unusually clever sub-titles; with resplendent settings; with a cast carefully selected for type; always interesting and filled with odd twists and turnings. It is a human story too. One reason why it will go so big is because of its popular of appeal, because of its humaness and because of the very human quality of Miss Davies' unaffected and excellent work throughout.

Gibson Writes New Burns Comedy.

Tom Gibson, who wrote the Eddie Polo serial "The Bull's Eye," is the author of "Rings and Things" a new comedy starring Neal Burns and which was produced at Universal City under the direction of Al Santell. Gibson conceived the idea of the sketch while touring California with a vaudeville act which he wrote and produced.

Mabel Normand Excels in "When Doctors Disagree"

CROWDED with the subtle comedy touches by Mabel Normand, "When Doctors Disagree," the Goldwyn comedienne's newest vehicle of mirth, bids fair to surpass in popularity her previous Goldwyn comedy successes.

"When Doctors Disagree" calls for animation and action, for ridiculous situations, for superior clowning and funmaking—in fact, no other Mabel Normand production was so rich in opportunities for exploiting the many phases of the Goldwyn star's talents for broad comedy. The comedy was written expressly for Miss Normand by Mrs. Anna F. Brand. Victor L. Schertzinger, director, is supervising the production.

Miss Normand has the role of Millie, the terror of her town. Right from the start Millie incurs the enmity of everyone in the staid old burg when she breaks up a gala May party.

Among the players in Miss Normand's support are Walter Hiers, George Nichols, Fritzie Ridgeway, William Buckley and Alec B. Francis.

Dorothy Dalton Returns to Western Characterization

IN her coming Paramount picture, "The Lady of Red Butte," which is scheduled for May 11, Dorothy Dalton, the Thomas H. Ince star, returns to the type of character in which she excelled early in her career as a Paramount star. In short, she is a Western girl, untutored to a large extent, living amid rugged surroundings, but developing a fineness in her inner nature that renders her entirely lovable despite her somewhat uncouth exterior.

C. Gardner Sullivan wrote the story. Victor L. Schertzinger directed, and Thomas Holding is leading man. In the cast appears Tully Marshall, William Courtwright, Joseph Swickard and May Garcia. The photography is by John S. Stumar.

Among the features will be seen the destruction of an entire village by fire. The action takes place in a little desert town known as "Suicide's Paradise."

Vivian Martin in "Home Town Girl."

Vivian Martin, the Paramount star, returns to the Paramount schedule May 11 in "The Home Town Girl," an adaptation by Edith Kennedy of a story by Oscar Graeve, which appeared in Collier's under the title, "You Can't Just Wait."

Miss Martin plays the role of a little New England belle who had many suitors among the young men of the town.

Robert Vignola directed the picture, Frank E. Garbutt was the cameraman, and the cast supporting the star includes Ralph Graves, Lee Phelps, Carmen Phillips, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Herbert Standing, Pietro Sosso, Edythe Chapman, William Courtwright, Tom D. Bates and Thomas Persse.

Work Progressing on Elmo Serial.

Work on the forthcoming Universal serial, "Elmo, the Mighty," featuring the strong man of the screen, Elmo Lincoln, is progressing rapidly under the direction of Henry McRea. The entire company is at work in the hills near Universal City, and are working on the eleventh episode of the serial. Grace Cunard, heroine of many Universal serials and photodramas, is in the leading feminine role.

To Start Work on New Morrison Comedy.

"Hate Everlasting" is the title of a two-reel comedy about to be produced at Universal City, with Pete Morrison in the lead. This comedy comes from the typewriter of William Pigott, chief of Universal's continuity department, and will be produced under the direction of George Holt.

Mary MacLaren Is Appropriately Pale in "The Unpainted Woman."
The whole trio in the above scene from the Universal feature have no time for rouge and the like.

Robertson-Cole Units Start Big Production Drive

THE big spring production drive of the Robertson-Cole Company's various units is on and is far ahead of the Exhibitors Mutual release schedule.

The Haworth Pictures Corporation, B. B. Features, Inc., Jesse D. Hampton Productions and other units are working at top speed.

"His Debt," in which Sessue Hayakawa is expected to further enhance his reputation as one of the premier actors appearing before the camera, has been completed in the Brunton studios by the Haworth Pictures Corporation. William Worthington is the director. The story was written for the screen by L. V. Jefferson and scenarioized by Frances Guihan.

William Desmond, whose latest production, "Whitewashed Walls," is going great all over the country, has completed "The Mints of Hell," a throbbing story of the Yukon, and is now filming "Bare-Fisted Gallagher," a romance of the West. The picture was written especially for Desmond by William Parker.

"Modern Husbands," with its love pirate and its story of everyday life, has been completed with Henry B. Walthall in the leading part. Lee Royal wrote the original story.

In "His Debt" Jane Novak is seen opposite Sessue Hayakawa. There is only a small cast, with Miss Novak and Frances MacDonald lending the chief support. "His Debt" is thoroughly dramatic, with every opportunity presented to Hayakawa for the type of repressive acting he so ably handles.

"Bare-Fisted Gallagher" is being filmed in a remote but picturesque section of the San Gabriel Canyon, Cal., under the direction of Joseph J. Franz.

"Josselyn's Wife" has been completed with Bessie Barriscale playing the leading role, and it has been acclaimed the finest work the star has done since joining Robertson-Cole. Howard Hickman, who directed the production from the novel by Kathleen Norris, did himself proud in the handling of this drama, in which Nigel Barrie, little Ben Alexander, Tom Guise, Kathleen Kirkham and others acquitted themselves proudly in support of Miss Barriscale.

Miss Barriscale is now working on "Broken Threads," which was written by M. B. Havey, and put into screen form by Fred Myton. Mr. Hickman is also directing this production.

In the cast are Rosemary Theby, Nigel Barrie, Henry Kolker, Thomas Holding, Ben Alexander and Mary Jane Irving.

"Unknown Dancer" Second Hale-Caprice Production

THE UNKNOWN DANCER" is announced as the production on which Creighton Hale and June Caprice are now at work at the Capellani studio, Fort Lee. The picture is adapted from the French play, "Le Danseur Inconnu," by Tristan Bernard, which ran in one of the leading Parisian theatres for over one year. George Archainbaud is directing the production under the personal supervision of Albert Capellani. "The Unknown Dancer" will follow "Oh Boy" as the second of the series of super-features co-starring Creighton Hale and June Caprice to be produced by the Albert Capellani Productions, Inc., for release through Pathe Exchange, Inc.

"The Unknown Dancer" is described as a romantic comedy-drama which has for its background the sumptuous country estate of a millionaire as contrasted with the Montmartre of Paris.

The story is said to be of a light and wholesome nature and to be rich in contrasts, bringing to the fore the carefree unconventionality of bohemian life as compared with the rigid propriety maintained in the upper stratum of society.

"Lion and Mouse" Going Big.

Unabated business is reported by Vitagraph on its Charles Klein picturization, "The Lion and the Mouse." The extraordinarily extensive billboard and publicity campaign waged in the interests of this Alice Joyce offering has had the effect of extending its popularity even beyond the lengths usually approximated through sheer merit inherent in a production.

William Duncan Coaches the Firing Line from the Side Line.

Many Prominent Screen Actresses in Morey Play

BEATING THE ODDS," a coming Vitagraph release in which Harry T. Morey is starred, is anything but a one-woman play. It has been usual to so bend or warp the construction of plays as to centre all sex interest in the leading man and woman, with the major share of dramatic values falling to the lot of the star, whether male or female. While Betty Blythe as Mr. Morey's leading woman carries off distinct acting honors in the production, proving a capable foil in bringing to the surface all of Harry T. Morey's talent, there are other women in the cast who figure prominently on the screen. Seldom indeed has a male star been surrounded by such faminine nebulas as that comprised of Betty Blythe, Jean Paige and Eulalie Jensen.

Here are stars and satellites to spur Morey to his best efforts. Therefore, a statement that "Beating the Odds" represents the high watermark of Morey-made film plays, such as has emanated from Vitagraph's private home office projection room, where a few days ago the production was viewed in its pre-release form, is easily credible.

Since appearing in support of Mr. Morey, Miss Blythe has achieved real renown as a screen actress. Miss Jensen has had the unusual distinction of appearing in support of Sarah Bernhardt. Stock and musical comedy alternately claimed her until she came to the silent drama under a Vitagraph contract. Jean Paige stepped from her home directly into the realm of motion pictures.

"Beating the Odds" was directed by Paul Scardon. It is a picturization of "The Money Maker," a novel by Irving R. Allen.

The male equation in Mr. Morey's support comprises George Majeroni, Robert Gaillard, Robert Mowbray and Frank Norcross.

Another "Out of the Inkwell" Cartoon.

This third of the "Out of the Inkwell" cartoons, a film novelty which has created a big sensation, is one of the interesting features of the May 4 release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph. The incongruities of a life dominated by the mastery of the artist's pen are pictured in a most amusing fashion.

"Bath Towel Beasties" is an interesting picturization of the new fad in towels.

"Our Humble Servant—the Electric Bell" takes the motion picture patron behind the scenes and illustrates with animated diagrams the inside secrets of the bell which plays such an important part in our daily lives.

Another diverting bit of screen entertainment is found in "Camera Studies of Wild Life in Canada." The camera brings one face to face with the wild deer of Canada, and numerous intimate views of wild life are flashed upon the screen.

Frank Keenan Supported by Big Cast in "Master Man"

FOR "The Master Man," first of the "Frank Keenan Specials" to emanate from the Brunton studios at Los Angeles, Mr. Keenan has selected a cast in his support which can be described as well-night an all-star combination.

The cast includes Kathleen Kirkham, who gives an exceptionally fine rendering of "Janice Ritter," the heroine; Hardee Kirkland, Joseph J. Dowling, William V. Mong, Joseph Rae, J. Barney Sherry, Jack Bramhall and Joseph McManus. To this roster must be added Ernest C. Warde, the talented director who has been so long associated with Mr. Keenan.

"The Master Man," a triumph of the art of character delineation, with Frank Keenan playing the part of Emanuel Blake, attorney-general, political boss, the head of the party "machine" which holds fast the State within its corrupt grip until a woman's influence shows Blake the error of his ways and leads him through splendid self-sacrifice to a realization of the real meaning of life.

Ormi Hawley Is Female Lead in "Road Called Straight"

A CAST of uncommon merit was assembled to support Louis Bennison in "The Road Called Straight," the fourth and most powerful of his series of Betzwood productions, which Goldwyn offers for release May 11.

Once more have Betzwood executives scored a ten-strike in the selection of a screen vis-a-vis for the smiling cowboy star. Ormi Hawley is Louis Bennison's leading woman.

A welcome addition to Bennison-Betzwood production is Henry Mortimer. Jane Adler, prominent for her grand dame characterizations on the stage and screen, is another player, who is well cast in the new Louis Bennison picture. Burton Churchill has a part commensurate with his ability. Little Evelyn Ruth, engaging child actress plays her part of Baby Shirley brilliantly.

John Daly Murphy, a comedian well known to the screen and stage, completes the roster. This marks Murphy's second appearance in a Bennison picture.

Many Thrilling Stunts in Mix's "Coming of the Law"

DURING his career as a star Tom Mix has enacted many roles. He has been a cowboy, a miner, a member of the Canadian Northwest mounted police, a trapper and a number of other characters of the Great West. But in his latest picture, "The Coming of the Law," which is the current William Fox Victory release, Mix will be seen as the editor of a newspaper.

It is not, however, as the editor of a big metropolitan daily that Mix appears in "The Coming of the Law." His paper bears the apt title of "The Kicker," and is published in Dry Bottom, New Mexico, where the publishing of a fearless, live newspaper carries with it certain excitements and adventures not to be found in the daily occupations of the editors of journals of the East.

The picture is an adaptation of the novel of the same name written by Charles Alden Seltzer. It was directed by Arthur Rosson, who, with Denison Clift, also wrote the scenario.

In the supporting cast are Brownie Vernon, George Nicholls, Jack Curtis, Sid Jordan, B. M. Turner, Charles LeMoyne, Pat Christan, Lewis Sargent and Harry Dunkinson.

It is in this production that Mix performs one of the most daring feats of his career. A gang of cattle rustlers fire at him, and the bullet goes through the knot of his necktie. Mix insisted that in filming this scene a real bullet be used.

This, it is stated by the Fox office, is but one of numerous thrilling stunts which Mix performs in "The Coming of the Law."

First National Managers Vote for Outing-Chesters

AT the meeting of First National managers in the Hotel Astor, last week, an informal vote was taken as to the sentiment regarding Outing-Chester pictures, which are being handled largely by First National Exchanges, and every manager who has them put in an enthusiastic ballot in their favor.

Floyd Brown, manager of H. Lieber Company Exchange, Indianapolis, stated that in addition to the contracts now operating he has a great number which will begin as soon as other contracts have run out and that his territory is building up rapidly. Lieut. Jim P. Anderson, general manager of the First National Exhibitors Circuit of Virginia, who handles the pictures in nearly all the Southern states, started two months ago with his territory's full complement of prints, and three weeks ago ordered another.

Louis Bache, manager of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, Philadelphia, is one of the most enthusiastic boosters for the travel pictures. In regard to the two startling releases, "Cameraing Through Africa," Mr. Bache writes:

"'Cameraing Through Africa,' Parts 1 and 2, is the best that has ever been done along the animal line. I though so much of them that I screened them personally for Mr. Schwalbe and several others and they claimed that they are better and have more action even than the pictures Rainey had."

"Little Boss" Next Bessie Love Release.

The title of Vitagraph's next Bessie Love picture is "The Little Boss." It is a lumber camp story, written especially for Miss Love by Rida Johnson Young, and is being directed by David Smith. Wallace McDonald, Otto Ledderer, Harry Russell, J. Morley, Joe Rickson, Clara Knight and Karl Formes are in the supporting cast.

Much of the drama of the story is set in a lumber camp, and some of the scenes show the transportation of the immense California trees from the lumber camps to the sawmills.

Comedy a Big Element in "A Yankee Princess"

COMEDY is more liberally admixed than is usually the case in "A Yankee Princess," the new Bessie Love picture, which has swamped Vitagraph's booking staff.

Miss Love, herself, is revealed in a comedy aspect to a greater degree than ever before. In fact never has she essayed a role quite as many sided as that of Patsy O'Reilly. From a back alley to a mansion represents quite a social span, and this is bridged by Miss Love with perfect fidelity to details of characterization and costuming.

Especially happy was Director David Smith's choice of Max Asher, a noted screen comedian whose appearance in support of Miss Love affords him greater opportunities than heretofore. That he adheres to the demands of characterization indicated by the script does in no manner detract from the humor of the situations in which he is the pivotal character.

In Miss Love's support is seen for the first time Robert Gordon. He proves a delightful vis-a-vis. Lydia Yeamans Titus, the daughter of Annie Yeamans, a noted actress of the stage, makes her Vitagraph debut in this production. In the cast besides those mentioned are George Price, Aggie Herring, J. Carlton Weatherby and Katherine Griffith.

Gladys Brockwell Begins on "Sadie."

Following the completion of "The Divorce Trap," described as "a powerful tragedy of modern divorce," Gladys Brockwell, the William Fox star, has begun the filming of "Sadie" at Hollywood. The story of "Sadie" was written by Karl Edin Harriman and the scenario by Ruth Ann Baldwin. The picture is being directed by Frank Beal.

The supporting cast includes William Scott, Richard Rosson, Harry Dunkinson, Irene Aldwyn, Walter Long and Claire McDowell.

Pathe Announces Its Next Serial.

An announcement made recently by Pathe Exchange, Inc., named "The Great Gamble," produced by Western Photoplays, Inc., as the serial to follow the current Pathe serial, "The Tiger's Trail," in which Ruth Roland is starred. It is to be released August 3.

The co-stars are Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison. The author and director of the production is Joseph A. Golden, director-general of Western Photoplays, Inc.

Adorable Situation
Presented by Marion Davies in Select's "Getting Mary Married."

Elaborate Gambling Set in Hayakawa's "His Debt"

IN "HIS DEBT," featuring Sessue Hayakawa, which Robertson-Cole will release through Exhibitors Mutual, most of the action takes place in a luxurious gambling house—where all the games are played "on the square." Rarely has there been a set constructed on such an elaborate scale as this gambling set. For weeks before the making of the picture was started the country was combed for photographs and prints of private gambling houses that used to flourish. The Haworth company was successful in securing photographs of several well-known gambling institutions, and from the collection the construction of this set was made.

Mrs. Carlos E. Moore
Known to the screen world as Miss "Sadie Bain."

Augustus Thomas Names Cast for Second Picture

AUGUSTUS THOMAS announces the complete cast for his second play, now in the first stages of production by Harry Raver for Four Star pictures, distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Leah Baird plays the role of a young school teacher. Edward T. Langford is playing his first part since his recent role of captain in the 27th Division, U. S. A. Before Mr. Langford went to France he played leads with Alice Brady, Gail Kane and Ethel Clayton.

The remainder of the cast is headed by William H. Gibson, the wooden-footed dancer of vaudeville who is known far and wide as "Cheero Bill." J. Kingsbury, Harry Bartlett, Vera Amazar and Becky Bruce are assigned to important roles. George Irving is directing the picture.

Morey's Next Adapted from Novel.

Harry T. Morey's next release, which is called "Beating the Odds," was adapted from the popular novel by Irving R. Allen, called "The Money Maker."

"Beating the Odds" was directed by Paul Scardon, and supporting Mr. Morey is a splendid cast, including Betty Blythe, Jean Paige, Eulalie Jensen, George Majeroni, Charles Stevenson, Robert Gaillard, Robert Mowbray and Frank Norcross.

Charles Hutchison
Who stars with Anne Luther in Western's serial, "The Great Gamble," released through Pathe.

Viola Dana Has a Comedy Role in "Pliant Patricia"

VIOLA DANA, Metro star, has an aptitude for farce, as well as the more serious drama. This could not be better illustrated than by her in "Pliant Patricia," which she started recently, contrasted with her role in "False Evidence," just completed.

The bedroom-parlor-and-bath type of farce has leaped to popularity on the screen, as well as on the stage, and, while "Pliant Patricia" is by no means the so-called bedroom farce, it has some delicious comedy scenes that might easily be taboo were they treated with less satirical nicety by June Mathis in making the scenario and by Miss Dana in playing the name-role.

Miss Mathis wrote the continuity from the original play by Anne and Alice Duffy, of San Francisco. Irving Cummings has been engaged to support Miss Dana.

Santa Catalina Island will be the background for portions of the production. Henry Otto is directing the picture.

"A Stitch in Time" Directed by Ince.

The release of Gladys Leslie's next picture, "A Stitch in Time," marks the return of Ralph Ince to the staff of Vitagraph directors.

"A Stitch in Time," which was a Broadway stage attraction early this season, has been done into a photoplay in typical Ince style.

Supporting Miss Leslie are Eugene Strong, Julia Swayne Gordon, Agnes Ayres, Earl Schenk, Charles Walton Cecil Chichester and Charles Stevenson.

Sam Polo in Cast of Corbett Serial.

Sam Polo, brother of Eddie Polo, the Universal strong man and serial idol, has been assigned to a leading part in the new James J. Corbett serial "The Midnight Man." He will take the place of Orral Humphrey, who has been the villain of the serial to date. Polo will have an admirable part in the second half of this episode screen play and says that he intends to win himself a crown similar to that of his brothers.

There is a saving of $4.80 to those who pay the annual subscription rate of $3 to Moving Picture World. The newsstand price is 15 cents.

Big New York House Breaks Record with "Common Clay"

M. SOLOMAN, manager of the Crescent Theatre in the Bronx, is one of the New York exhibitors who put over "Common Clay" big. He lined up his lobby with attractive signs, and in the centre of the lobby placed a clay model of Fannie Ward. He played the picture three days—Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Saturday he broke all records of his house, and was compelled to stop selling tickets five times on Sunday. His business held up on Monday, and the first two days played to 11,000 admissions. Further exploitation of the picture consisted of putting out 25,000 programs and 83 twenty-four-sheet stands.

"Common Clay," with Fannie Ward, adds to its phenomenal success in the United States "the complete capture of Canada," is the manner in which the fact is announced by L. Ernest Ouimet, president of Specialty Film Import, Ltd., in a letter to the Pathe Exchange home office. H. W. Conover, of the Imperial Theatre, Montreal, called it "one of the greatest offerings of the year."

W. P. Dewees, of Vancouver, a leading Western exhibitor, and purchasing representative for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and the Western Canada Exhibitors' Circuit, has bought "Common Clay" for the entire circuit.

"Some Liar" Is the Next William Russell Picture

THE second attraction on American's May program is "Some Liar," sixth of the new series of William Russell productions. Release date has been set for the eighteenth.

James Oliver Curwood wrote the story, which appeared originally in a popular monthly magazine. The screen adaptation is the work of Stephen Fox, and the direction is by Henry King. As in "Brass Buttons" and "Where the West Begins," Russell's leading woman is Eileen Percy. The tale progresses with a lively gait from the opening scene.

Hayward Mack gives an excellent impersonation of the canny blackmailer, and John Gough carries off double honors as a village half-wit and a white-haired old codger who invests in both cradle and coffin to be prepared for all emergencies.

There are some remarkably fine long shots in the picture, one in particular showing a woodland scene to whose serenity "the liar" is dragged with the idea of making him swing for the murder that existed only in his imagination.

Duncan Completes "Man of Might" Serial.

After weeks of hard work and accepting many risks, William Duncan and his co-players have finished the Vitagraph serial, "The Man of Might."

The conclusion of work on the serial comes at an opportune time for the Los Angeles Victory Loan Committee. Mr. Duncan's co-operation was asked immediately after this committee had been organized, and as the two heaviest weeks of the campaign still loom ahead the committee is especially delighted to be able to avail itself of his services.

"Oh Boy!" Is Minus a Villain.

The villain of stage and screen tradition with his mischief making machinations and his penchant for harassing the heroine, will be among the missing in "Oh Boy," Albert Capellani's (Filmusical-Comedy) co-starring Creighton Hale and June Caprice. Neither will the vampire have a chance to weave her web of evil in the production for it is essentially a picture of the gloom-dispelling variety in which shadows have no place.

An Old Favorite,

Kate Price, who appears in support of Antonio Moreno and Carol Halloway in Vitagraph's serial, "Perils of Thunder Mountain."

Arrange Special Showings of Select's "Cavell Case"

THE body of Edith Cavell, the British Red Cross nurse who was executed by the Germans in 1915, in Brussels, will be removed to England from Belgium on May 15 and taken to Westminster Abbey, where ceremonies will be held. In commemoration of this event General Sales Manager J. S. Woody, of Select Pictures Corporation, is arranging special showings of Select's special, "The Cavell Case," in all the theatres of the country where the attraction has not been shown.

"The Cavell Case," in which Julia Arthur portrays the life and death career of Miss Cavell, was released in the fall of 1918. It has been shown in every section in the United States, and at the present time is playing in the Canadian provinces in connection with a personal tour by Miss Arthur.

General Sales Manager Woody's plan for Cavell Day in the United States on May 15 include, in connection with the showing of the picture, special musical programs and the co-operation of local chapters of the American Red Cross.

Miss Clayton in "Vicky Van" Has Big Mystery Role

IT is a familiar fact that in New York one may live in the same house for twenty years without having seen one's next door neighbor once during that time. This has been utilized in a satiric manner by several authors, including O. Henry, but it remained for Carolyn Wells to treat it in a mystery vein and build around it a genuinely unique story. This is "Vicky Van," in which Ethel Clayton is starred for Paramount, and which is released May 4.

Noah Beery has the role of Schuyler, the taciturn husband, and Emory Johnson is the young man she learns to care for. Clarence Geldart is the sleuth. Others in the big cast include Jane Wolfe, Katherine Griffith, Genevieve Blinn, Josephine Crowell, C. H. Geldart, Mae Hughes, Belle Travers, J. J. Underhill and Edward Martin.

The settings are said to be especially effective and include among other things a handsome art gallery.

The scenario was written by Marion Fairfax and Robert G. Vignola directed the production. The photography is the work of C. Edward Schoenbaum.

"Castles in the Air" Is Latest May Allison Film

METRO releases "Castles in the Air" with May Allison in the stellar role on May 12, adhering to their schedule as recently announced.

"Castles in the Air" is a tale of the theatre and its folk; the ups and downs of the professionals and the managerial staff of the theatre; the adventurous life and love of Fortuna Donnelly, a poor but proud daughter of the tenements, who reaps the reward of happiness and love by her kindness toward her fellow creatures.

"Castles in the Air" is the screen title given the original short story by the well-known writer, Kate Jordan, which appeared within the covers of a popular weekly magazine under the name of "Orchestra D-2."

The manner in which this production has been staged, including several novel vaudeville acts, is a credit to the art of George D. Baker, who also adapted Miss Jordan's story to the screen. As a director of the silent drama, Mr. Baker has built up a reputation for accuracy of detail and human appeal, which puts him in the ranks of the foremost producers of the present day.

Prominent in the cast of principals supporting May Allison are Ben Wilson, Walter I. Percival, Clarence Burton, Irene Rich, "Mother" Anderson, Viola Hale and Ruth Maurice.

Select Barbara Castleton as Warner's Leading Woman

WHEN Jesse D. Hampton engaged H. B. Warner to star in productions released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual he considered a long time before he decided upon a leading woman for his new player. Finally, he was enabled to obtain Barbara Castleton in New York.

In her first appearance with Warner she plays the part of Ethel Lambert, an American girl who is captured by a band of Bedouin bandits and is carried off to their lair in the desert. Then it is she makes the discovery that the head of the band, Ali Zaman, played by Warner, is a white man masquerading as a Bedouin and preying upon the caravans of the desert.

She discovers, too, that he is a cashiered army officer, and that is why the story is entitled "The Man who Turned White," because eventually she rescues him from the life he has adopted and through another officer proves he never should have been dismissed from the army.

Annual Pass Goes to Mrs. Todd.

During a recent showing of "What Every Woman Wants," which Robertson-Cole release through Exhibitors Mutual, Gifts Theatre, Cincinnati, offered an annual pass to their theatre for the best answer to the question, "What Does Every Woman Want?"

The award fell to Mrs. F. F. Todd, who replied: "She thought every woman wanted an honorable man, true love and pretty clothes."

Gifts Theatre is managed by McMahon and Jackson.

Pathe to Release "Bishop's Emeralds."

Louis Meyer, president of the Virginia Pearson Photoplays, Inc., announces that "The Bishop's Emeralds," its first photodrama, will be released on June 8 through the Pathe Exchange, Inc.

The completed film, cut and titled, was shown recently to a specially invited gathering, including several European representatives and American technical experts. They indorsed it as a notable production.

Kerrigan Is a Dress Suit Hero in "The Best Man"

IF "THE BEST MAN" had been built to order for J. Warren Kerrigan it could not better fit the star of Jesse D. Hampton productions. A novel by Grace L. H. Lutz, scenarioized by Arthur F. Statter, "The Best Man" met the approval of star, producer and distributor, all declaring it the type of picture in which the Kerrigan fans prefer him.

Swift moving, the story is that of a young Secret Service agent who is sent to recover a coded paper stolen by a gang of smugglers. He gets the paper, but delivery of it is delayed and greatly complicated when he gets into the wrong taxi, is taken to a church and married to a girl he has never seen before. He has been mistaken for a bridegroom who has been absnt for fifteen years. It is very evident to the young hero that the girl is an unwilling bride.

How he evades his pursuers while honeymooning with a wife who is not his, delivers the papers and proves to the girl that he can be both bridegroom and best man" to her make one of the most delightful romantic adventures J. Warren Kerrigan has figured in on the screen. Thomas Heffron directed the production.

As the heroine who believes she is marrying a rotter to save her mother's name, Miss Lois Wilson has a role calling for more intense dramatic action than usually falls to her lot as Kerrigan's leading woman.

Alfred Whitman, Clyde Benson, R. D. McLean, Bert Appling, Ed. Tilton, Frances Raymond, Mary Land and Fred Montague complete the supporting cast. "The Best Man" is being released this month by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Chester Picture Shows "Dude Ranch" in Action

SCATTERED throughout the West are ranches which are frankly termed "dude ranches" because they make a specialty of entertaining eastern tourists. And they do entertain them in the way the easterner has pictured. They stage hold-ups, brawls, real rough-riding sprees, shooting scrapes, and all.

C. L. Chester has gone after one of these histrionic ranches, and in "Wrangling Dudes," which will be one of the regular Outing-Chester releases, he will show how they wrangle 'em.

The picture will combine many of the fascinating elements of the usual Western film story in that it will have most of the cowboy stunts and pranks—and a few new ones. And along with the human interest the audience will get beautiful natural setting.

Mae Murray in Loan Film

Mae Murray is the star of the Universal Fifth Liberty Loan picture "The Taming of Kaiser Bull." The picture is being distributed by the Universal exchanges for use during the drive.

As "Miss U. S. A.", Mae Murray is shown trying to stop the bull by shooting a pistol, but the bull is determined to rush again. This represents the First Loan Drive. Miss America then throws a stone at the bull and he is again temporarily stopped, this representing the second loan. Again he charges and Miss America ropes him but the bull continues to tug and pull and will not give up. This is symbolic of the third drive and then the cowboys come to the rescue of Miss America and the bull is tied and thrown to the earth. With this representing the fourth Liberty Loan drive the Fifth Victory Loan is pictured with the cowboys branding the bull for life. The brand carries the wording "Fifth Victory Loan."

"Fear Woman" Is Laid in Present-Day Environment

THAT Pauline Frederick's return to modern emotional photodramas has given her world of admirers cause for exultation is attested by the marked praise accorded the artiste's first two Goldwyn productions, "The Woman on the Index" and "One Week of Life" not only by her public but by newspaper and magazine critics the country over.

Miss Frederick's third Goldwyn production, "The Fear Woman," by Izola Forrester, author of Geraldine Farrar's newest Goldwyn Picture, "The Strongest Vow," is a powerful drama laid in a modern, present-day environment. Not only is the star provided with a splendid story, up-to-the-minute in its very detail, and which gives her the opportunity to dominate one absorbing situation after another, but she is enabled to appear in a succession of ultra-fashionable costumes more gorgeous than she has ever worn on the stage or screen.

Pauline Frederick has the role of Helen Winthrop, daughter of an old and distinguished family.

Surrounding Pauline Frederick are Milton Sills, Harry Northrup, Walter Hiers and Beverly Travers.

High Standard Maintained in Fox's Excel Pictures

DECLARING that "The Love That Dares," featuring Madlaine Traverse and "Miss Adventure," starring Peggy Hyland, are the best pictures in which these stars have appeared, officials of the Fox Film Corporation are pointing to these as pictures which give peculiar emphasis to the high standard of excellence which prevails in the William Fox Excel Pictures group. These pictures, it is declared, are better than many big special attractions and have a strength of drama and elaborateness of production which will make them stand with the best pictures of the season.

But "The Love That Dares" and "Miss Adventure," it is asserted, are only a natural development of the policy laid down by William Fox when the Excel Pictures group was inaugurated last fall. At that time Mr. Fox declared that this program would contain stories which for strength, variety and magnificance of production would suit the need of the most diverse types of theatres.

The Exhibitors Service Bureau asserts that "Miss Adventure," totally unlike "A Love That Dares," furnished a striking example of the diversity of entertainment furnished by the Excel Picture program. "Miss Adventure" is a swift, exciting drama, full of pathos and humor and thrills, but propounding no problems. Its scenes are laid on the sea and in the atmosphere of the sea, and all the mystery and romance and excitement of sea-life are woven into it to make it a delightful, thrilling adventure play.

Latest Kinograms Release Covers Many Subjects

THE latest Kinograms release is one of the most interesting news weeklies of the year. The variety of subjects photographed have that element of novelty that insures popularity.

It starts out with the first pictures of smoke screens for motor transport, for tanks in action, of incendiary bombs and fire projectors developed by the chemical warfare section.

It next shows Lieutenant Vincent Astor, a millionaire who joined the navy and served during the war, making a trip home in a captured U-117 and help bring her safe into New York.

Rather remarkable is the picture showing thousands of Californians who make their way up steep sides of Mt. Roubidoux to take part in service as Easter morning breaks.

To those who are interested in sports, Kinograms offers Yale Crews in Work Out, showing the oarsmen who will represent the famous university in coming contests, given strenuous work out by their coaches at New Haven.

This should appeal to women: Crowds gather for first of bathing season at Venice, California, throng the casino, where novel display of beauty is being staged.

The next subject is pictures by a Kinograms staff photographer aboard a destroyer 200 miles out at sea show how tin fish swim the deep. The destroyer that he is on is escorting a captured German submarine to a U. S. port.

Five other equally interesting subjects are shown.

"Vicky Van," Ethel Clayton's Next.

Ethel Clayton's new Paramount picture, "Vicky Van," which is released May 4, is an adaptation of what is considered to be the best story ever written by one of the greatest of all mystery story writers. Carolyn Wells is the author.

The central character is said to provide an ideal role for Miss Clayton. Marion Fairfax did the scenario and the production was directed by Robert Vignola. C. Edward Schoenbaum was the photographer.

In the cast are Clarence Geldart, who plays the part of Fleming Stone, the detective; L. J. McCarthy plays the role of the butler, Ed Martin is the valet.

Sidelights and Reflections

THE GOOD old adage, "What's one man's meat is another man's poison," is just as true of the moving picture as of everything else in the world. Several months ago this publication rated a certain feature as a one hundred per cent. production. An exhibitor in a one day town in Iowa does not agree with the Moving Picture World's rating. His published report is short and to the point:

"Poor. The only thing that saved it was the beautiful scenery."

No qualification! No remark such as, "My patrons did not like this picture." In his judgment it is a poor picture and that settles it.

Well, if he's right, the reviewer, who happens to be the writer, is either stupidly or criminally wrong.

Let us be fair to the picture and state the qualities that prompted the one hundred per cent verdict:

Theme: One that has inspired some of the greatest writers the world has ever produced.

Treatment: In keeping with the strength and dignity of the story, the development of the mental action being logical and leading to a climax of great force.

Direction: Equal to the best.

Acting: Also equal to the best.

Commercial Aid: Features one of the widest known stars of the amusement world.

As to the picture's ability to please a body of spectators: that depends upon the spectators.

The writer was standing at the door of a theatre, once upon a time, when one of the foremost actors of this country was playing in the greatest play that had ever been written. In the middle of the second act, a man pushed open the door, walked out into the lobby, paused long enough to deliver this unqualified opinion; "That's a rotten show!" and went out into the night.

Of another picture this same exhibitor's report reads:

"Would call this a good show for city trade. Will please the better class of women in the small towns, but had more walkouts than on any show in a long time."

Of the same picture another exhibitor in a one day town reports:

"The drawing power of this will astonish any one who will bill it well. Play for double your usual run and one-third more than your usual rates."

There is no law that says a man is bound to like a picture just because it pleases someone else. But there are clearly understood rules which guide the reviewer in his estimation of a screen product. Judged by these rules, the writer still maintains that the picture under discussion is a one hundred per cent. production. WEITZEL.

"The Homebreaker"

Paramount Presents Dorothy Dalton in a Bright Comedy of the New Woman.

Reviewed by Lous Reeves Harrison.

SPARKLING with live theme, gay incidents and snappy subtitles, "The Homebreaker" is the story of a woman who does things, the up-to-date, healthy, vigorous girl who is capable of taking care of herself in almost any emergency. The Paramount production gets away from that stupid characterization which forever represents woman in the dependable role. What a relief to see on the screen the kind of girl we meet in everyday life!

Miss Dalton responds to the quickening of her opportunities with enthusiasm. She is at home in her role. She is admirably supported by Douglas McLean and others of the cast. The story moves with the spirit of the times it depicts, and the sub-titles, humorous in themselves, are given an entirely new snap by their illustrated symbols. "The Homebreaker" is a winner.

The Story.

Mary Marbury is not by inclination "The Homebreaker" she becomes in a social emergency. She is a traveling saleswoman for Abbott & Sons, in love with the junior partner, and in high business favor with the senior, but the son and his sister are in the midst of an excitement of social dissipation, led along by a bogus nobleman and his alleged sister. Mary originates a cure. She and the senior Abbott start out to cut up a few high-jinks themselves, and they stagger the children by their antics. This worries the pretended nobleman so that he alters his plans, steals a large amount of money and conceals it aboard the Abbott yacht for a quick get-away. In pursuance of Mary's plan, she and Abbott senior go aboard the yacht, and its accidental release from its moorings imposes on them a scandalous situation, that of an involuntary elopement. But it results in the discovery of the money placed there and of the bogus nobleman's true character. Greater result of Mary's little comedy is that the junior partner is brought to his senses, to a realization that he loves Mary, and he thus gets a very wise partner for life.

BY following "The Road Called Straight" the Betzwood Film Company, starring Louis Bennison, has produced a picture that will make many friends. Not a great picture in any sense of the word, it starts out as a style of entertainment known as comedy-drama and proceeds right along these lines. There is just enough story, plenty of easily understood humor, good love interest and a lively settlement between the hero and the villain, in which an ice-boat and a deep snowdrift take part. ## "The Red Lantern"

Mme. Nazimova is Seen in a Truly Royal Spectacle of the Boxer Rebellion.

Reviewed by Epes W. Sargent.

HUGE settings, lavish decorations, masses of humanity do not make a real photoplay, but when there is added to these factors one of the greatest actresses of the screen in a dramatic play commensurate with her rare skill, the combination is one greatly to be desired. "The Red Lantern," based upon Edith Wherry's story of the Boxer uprising in China, stands not only as the most satisfactory production Nazimova has yet given us, but it ranks with the really big stories of the screen catalogue. Placed in one of the most eventful periods of modern China's history, this story of an Oriental Joan of Arc possesses both human interest and strong dramatic quality and affords Mme. Nazimova unusual opportunity. As the Eurasian, neither white nor yellow and accursed by both races with the stigma of no caste, she is permitted naturally to run the entire gamut of human emotion. The subject is produced by Richard Rowland and Maxwell Karger and released by Metro.

Nazimova

As she is seen as the "Goddess of the Red Lantern."

As the girl of the native quarter Nazimova strikes a note of quaint simplicity. Then follows the mission girl, naively seeking to dress her hair in the style of the picture of the Virgin in her room; as the girl awakened by the danger of the man she loves, the growth of the realization that she can never hope to win a man with a white skin, and her reversion to the Buddhist faith of her Chinese ancestors, responding to the call of blood; her last unavailing effort to gain the acceptance of her white father, and lastly her despair over the failure of her cause and acceptance of the death which is the penalty of ambition unsuccessful reveal the star in many moods, while for contrast we have the white half-sister, also played by Nazimova, and played with a technic so different that the spectator knowing the fact is at a loss to realize that the two women facing each other in the double exposure as the same.

Purely as a characterization Mme. Nazimova's work is unusual, but she also brings to the playing of the part a rare measure of dramatic skill. In her supporting cast the work of Noah Beery as the Eurasian mission pupil who has turned to the Boxer movement to avenge upon the white race the stain of his mixed blood stands out prominently. He shares to a large degree the honors with the star. E. J. Conelly in a minor Chinese role also contributed an effective characterization, while Frank Currier as the father of Mahlee acquits himself with credit.

Darrell Foss is natural as Andrew Templeton and Mrs. McWade is unusually convincing as the Chinese grandmother. Many of the minor characters are taken by native players, who give realism to the stage pictures, notably in the mission scenes and in the home of Mahlee. As an acting drama, without the aid of the production, the story would hold interest and is more acceptable to American audiences than "Eye for Eye" because the Chinese are better known than the Arabs.

As a spectacle the production is a revelation. The scenes of the Feast of the Red Lantern are wonderfully well handled, both as to lighting effects and the direction of the mobs, while the scenes of the street fighting are well carried out. The Temple of Buddha is a wonderful setting and in the reincarnation of the fictitious goddess the illusion is so striking that one might almost imagine the gorgeous colorings which alone are lacking to complete the effect. From every angle of acting and production "The Red Lantern" is noteworthy.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

FOX'S new Walsh picture, "Help! Help! Police!" a five-reel attraction, has among other good things one of the best directed races between a train and an automobile that this reviewer has ever seen. The widely popular hero, George Walsh, has in this film one of his best picture incidents. It includes a train of events that ends with the bagging of a van load of crooks without their knowing that things are not all right with them. He delivers them over to the police, who bring them up before a judge waiting to try him for their crimes.

The setting is Palm Beach. The first steps of the story are weak compared with the best films that have been directed by Edward Dillon, but the latter half more than makes up for this. The latter part is exciting to a degree and will make the picture good for quite a long run.

Cast.

The Story.

The hero in "Help! Help! Police!" is George Welston, son of a wealthy rubber manufacturer. Another rubber man, Pendleton, is also staying at Palm Beach with his daughter, Eve. George and Eve are interested in each other. Their respective fathers are anxious about a rubber shipment worth $100,000, which both need, and they are at sword's points.

George has been arrested two times for speeding. One night he sees a man going into Eve's room through the window and climbs the roof and enters. The thief sees him coming and locks himself in closet. The house detective sees George enter and nabs him. While they are arguing, the thief escapes. Eve enters and her father comes. He makes the detective let George go, but still suspects him.

The thief enters another room, gags a girl sleeping there and takes the jewels. A cigarette sets the room on fire. George sees the smoke, rescues the girl and is taking her still unconscious to a hospital when he is stopped by a policeman. The girl accuses him of the robbery. The trial is set, and George's father has put up $10u,000 as bail. This keeps him from buying the rubber unless the boy turns up. The crooks have stolen Pendleton's $100,000 too. George gets on the trail of the crooks, after a very hot fight, and chases them in an automobile. He manages to imprison them in a van without their suspecting anything is wrong. He is just able to deliver them over to the court as the clock registers the hour for the trial. The money is saved for both rubber manufacturers. It makes Pendleton want George for his son-in-law.

"Greased Lightning"

Paramount Presents Charles Ray in a Humorous Character Comedy of Today.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

FULL of life and simple good humor, essentially American and for the most part effectively so, with a dash of melodrama thrown in for sauce, the Paramount picture, "Greased Lightning" gives Ray new opportunity as an inventive blacksmith, without departing materially from the awkward roles he portrays with marvelous fidelity. The dominant idea of the story briefly illustrates Yankee ingenuity and persistence under great difficulty and a quick handiness in small tribulations. Village life far removed from large centres of activity, where characters are more marked, is the background, and the types presented by Wanda Hopper, Willis Marks, Bert Woodruff and John P. Lockey, are amusing characterizations in themselves, all admirably depicted without being theatrical. Robert McKim is such an unmistakable high-class villain that his role is instantly felt—it needs no announcement.

Charles Ray is fortunate in having such stories to frame his own characterizations and give them plausibility. Most realistic is the potato-peeling machine of his invention, a success in spite of its tendency to run amuck, and the scarecrow automobile for which he swaps his potato peeler. These mechanical accessories are elements of humor in themselves. "Greased Lightning" is the name of a racing machine the young inventor finally makes, with which he wins an exciting chase for bank robbers.

The Story.

Andy Fletcher is a country blacksmith of keen native ingenuity and of activity akin to the "greased lightning" machine he ultimately constructs. He loves the daughter of the village banker so much that he decides to use all his savings, twelve hundred dollars, to gratify her desire for an "ottymobile." Her father will not permit it. Andy has demonstrated an ingenious potato-peeling machine to the village characters and he manages to trade this for a motor car that is a mere patchwork of repairs and defects. In this comical vehicle he attempts to take the banker and his daughter to a county gathering and dashes through Main street at the terrific speed of fifteen miles an hour, but he breaks down and is mortified to see the banker and his daughter carried on by a young adventurer, none other than a skilled bank-robber. In order to operate effectively, the bank-robber gets up a town celebration at the fair grounds which all attend. There is a motor race for two hundred dollars. Andy has secretly built a genuine racer for this event. He is on the track and winning when news comes that the bank has been cleaned out. An exciting chase leads to the capture of the robbers, and Andy is doubly rewarded by fame and love in the end.

Keep it in the business section and have plenty of engine trouble, necessitating frequent stops for tinkering. Press the driver to look as much like Ray as possible. ## "Just Squaw"

Beatriz Michelena Sustains Reputation for Skillful Interpretation in Production for Exhibitor's Mutual.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE performance of Beatriz Michelena, the well-known stage star, in "Just Squaw," a five-part Western melodrama appearing on the Exhibitors Mutual program, is but a repetition of the colorful work which has characterized her former screen efforts. The production is wholesome and entertaining, and will appeal to the average audience, particularly because of the work of the star, who gives a notably graceful portrayal of the role of an Indian-reared white girl. As a melodramatic achievement the production is not strong, and is lacking in breadth of development. The story is set in the beautiful hill country of the West, and its traditional bad men are convincingly impersonated. Andrew Robson heads the list as Snake Le Gal. The role of the half-breed is well interpreted by Albert Morrison.

Cast.

Fawn.....Beatriz Michelena
The Stranger.....William Pike

The Half Breed.....Albert Morrison

Story and scenario by Earl Snell.
Directed by George Middleton.

The Story.

The story of "Just Squaw" centers around a young white girl who has been reared by the squaw who kidnapped her, ignorance of the fact that both her parents were white. The half-breed mother of the girl, Fawn, who, at the death of the squaw is the only one in possession of the secret, lives in hiding because of a murder committed by him in a dispute over a game of cards, and watches over the girl's destiny, bearing at the same time the blame for certain robberies by an unsuspected gang.

A white stranger, coming on the scene, wins the love of Fawn, who is warned by the half-breed that the union of a white man with a squaw is always attended by sorrow. The white man, learning of this and believing the "breed" to be an admirer of Fawn's, lends a willing ear to the story of Snake Le Gal's gang. He is about to lynch him when one of the robber gang, who has been stabbed by Le Gal, managing to crawl to the scene, reveals Le Gal's double dealing and also tells that Fawn is held a prisoner in his cabin. The truth of her parentage and her relation to the half-breed is also revealed, leaving her free to marry the man she loves.

"Daughter of Mine"

Madge Kennedy Is Delightful in Best Moments of Goldwyn Picture of Uneven Merit.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

WHEN a picture is as excellent for two-thirds of its length as the Goldwyn production, "Daughter of Mine," starring Madge Kennedy, it is a pity that the spirit in which it opens could not have been held to the end. Its uneven merit will not be a bar to the enjoyment of the large class of spectators that are willing to be abruptly transported from an atmosphere of honest romance into extravagant burlesque and as abruptly landed back into every day life, but the possibilities of the story for entertainment of the best grade has been only partly realized. Starting off as the love story of pretty little Rosie Mendelsohn and Charles Howard, her Christian sweetheart, it presents an appealing if simple romance and gives a truthful picture of the Ghetto in lower New York.

Rosie's lover aspires to become a novelist. After Rosie has been forbidden to marry him by her father, Howard goes away without letting the girl know where he is to be found. She has copied the beginning of a novel for him and conceives the plan of writing it again from memory and selling it to a publisher for whom she is now working, with the understanding that he is to advertise for the finish. In this way Rosie hopes to meet Howard again. The plan works but involves the girl in a disagreeable situation with her employer. He tries to make Rosie pay a disgraceful price for his help in publishing the story. She escapes and runs into Howard just as she is leaving the publisher's place of business. Papa Mendelsohn relents and there is a happy ending.

The Keystone comedy comes in when Rosie sits down to read her version of Howard's story to the publisher. It must have been rather weird stuff in its original form, but Rosie's version turns it into burlesque of the Mack Sennett sort. Lady Diantha is loved by a poor peasant and a wealthy baron. Her father, Lord Noblebrow, objects to both suitors, and locks his daughter up in the tower. She slides down a rope onto a horse and is kidnapped by the baron. This is told by Rosie, and the other characters, who assume the characters in Howard's story. It is funny enough in a way, but contrary to the mood of the opening scenes. It will be difficult for many persons to take the picture seriously at the finish.

The production is excellent from every angle. Madge Kennedy plays Rosie with her accustomed charm of personality and engaging earnestness. It is her native refinement and obvious intelligence that gives the lie to the version of her lover's novel she is supposed to write. As Lady Diantha she reveals a natural gift for impersonation of the heroine of the highest form of comedy which even the business of the burlesque cannot hide.

Madge Kennedy
Reads "I sent thee late a rosy wreath" in "Daughter of Mine."

Tully Marshall's study of a familiar type of Hebrew is photographic in its likeness, and beautifully human in its tenderness and obedience to the tenets of Papa Mendelsohn's faith. John Bowers as Charles Howard, Arthur Carew as Joseph Rayberg and Abraham Schwartz as Rabinowich are competent.

Cast.

Papa Mendelsohn / "Lord Noblebrow" ..... Tully Marshall
Joseph Rayberg / "Baron Landsandhome" ..... Arthur Carew

Story by Hugo Ballin.
Directed by Clarence G. Badger.

The Story.

The Goldwyn picture, "Daughter of Mine," allows Madge Kennedy to play two parts—a girl of the East Side and a titled lady. Rosie Mendelsohn is the important character. Rosie loves a Christian, but consents to give him up at her father's request. The young chap is an unknown author, named Charles Howard. His sweetheart has helped him by typing the opening chapters of his latest novel. When Charlie takes his dismissal quietly and goes away without letting Rosie know where he is to be found she realizes she can never be happy without him. She gets a position as private secretary to a publisher. This puts a scheme into her head. She rewrites the opening chapters of the novel as well as she can recall them, takes her work to the publisher and tells him she found the manuscript in a street car. He consents to hear it read, as he hopes to make the most of his opportunity to ruin the girl when she comes to his house on her mission.

Rosie's plan is to have her employer publish the uncompleted novel and then advertise for the author to bring in his finish. Rayberg, the publisher, consents, after getting Rosie to promise she will do as he wishes when the last chapters arrive. The girl reads her version of her lover's work, and it is acted out by the original characters of the picture. Rosie has turned Charlie's story into wild burlesque during which the haughty heroine, her titled father and her pair of lovers take part in a romance that resembles a Keystone comedy. Charlie sees the publisher's "ad," and forwards his finish. Rosie finds it on the publisher's desk, shows it to him and is immediately reminded of her promise. She escapes from Rayberg's private office and runs into Charlie as he is getting out of the elevator. The two go back to Papa Mendelsohn and tell him they just can't live without each other. He smiles and relents.

"Caleb Piper's Girl"

Five-Reel Astra-Pathe Production Features Helene Chadwick in Light Comedy.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE story devised by Tom Cushing for this five-reel Astra-Pathe subject, "Caleb Piper's Girl," is one of agreeable quality, but rather trivial in certain respects. It has certain scenes of a polite comedy character and at times dips into old-time melodramatic situations. Helene Chadwick is bright and captivating in the leading role, that of a young girl who decides to go into the "movies" in order to earn money to pay off the mortgage on the cottage, where she and her father live.

The story is one that is content to remain on the surface and never stirs up the emotions of the spectator to any great extent. The characters are rural types dwelling in a seacoast village. The girl decides to convert their home into a hotel, and hangs out a sign inviting guests. A conspiracy is on foot among the townspeople to foreclose the mortgage on her father's property. The manner in which the girl entertains her first guests, two moving picture men whose launch becomes stranded on the beach, and afterward decides to enter the movies, is amusing, but not overly convincing. The number as a whole is one of about average entertainment value.

Cast.

The Story.

Mary Piper and her father live in a cottage in a small town on the seacoast. The father is a delightful old dreamer and incapable of raising money to pay off the mortgage on the property. Certain townspeople have conspired to take over the property, because of stories circulated by Wesley Briggs, an unsuccessful suitor for Mary's hand.

The girl is determined to earn some money and turns their home into a hotel. Among the first guests are two moving picture men, whose launch is stranded near by. One of them forms a liking for Mary, but treats her in a rather cavalier manner, which gives Wesley further grounds for scandalous talk.

Mary, seeing that the townspeople are criticising her, decides to join a nearby moving picture company. Here she once more meets her former admirer, Tracey Carter. He helps her to earn a living, but again compromises her by paying her wages out of his own salary. In the end, however, he proves her true friend and asks her to marry him. The mortgage is paid off by Mary's earnings and the story ends happily.

"A House Divided"

Presented by Frank G. Hall This J. Stuart Blackton Production Is a Fairly Good Photonovel.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ADAPTED from an English novel by Anthony P. Kelly and produced by J. Stuart Blackton, "A House Divided" has all the virtues and also all the draw-backs of its class of story writing. On its credit side it has a full share of human interest, entertaining characters, a number of excellent dramatic situations, and has been written to catch the popular taste. The defects in its making are too much story and too great a desire to pile up the agony and to weight down the plot with too many needless incidents. All this is accentuated in the screen version. A more direct method of handling the narrative and the elimination of the symbolism used at intervals by the director would help the picture immensely. It touches life too directly and too practically to be aided by anything but the most straightforward means of carrying along the plot. In spite of these defects the story has vitality, and a well selected cast and good quality of production make it acceptable to many screen patrons.

The most engaging performance is that given by Laurence Grossmith as Ben Baldwin. His good humor, manliness and convincing naturalness are irresistible. Sylvia Breamer plays Mary Lord with real feeling, excellent artistic method and much personal charm. Herbert Rawlinson is a capable Philip Carmichael, and Sallie Crute makes Sheelah Delayne a flesh and blood creation.

The Story.

"A House Divided" follows the fortunes of Mary Lord, an English girl whose guardian, Sir Arthur Stanhope, loves her. Mary does not return the feeling and cares only for Philip Carmichael, a young man who is destined for a career in Parliament. Philip has never thought seriously about Mary, and has lead rather a gay life. One night, while a member of a lively party, he is the bridegroom in a mock marriage, the bride being Sheelah Delayne, a Music Hall actress. The pair separate the next morning. Feeling that Philip will never love her, Mary accepts her guardian. Her new life changes her from a retiring young girl into a fascinating woman. Philip falls desperately in love with her, and Mary encourages him. Sir Arthur finds out the true state of affairs. His anger brings on a fatal stroke. After his death Philip and Mary go to France and are married. On their return to London Philip meets Sheelah and is dumbfounded to learn that he is the father of her boy and that the marriage ceremony performed the night of the wine party is legal. Sheelah has her husband arrested for bigamy. At Philip's trial Mary swears that she has never been married to him.

Saved from prison by Mary's devotion, Philip does not see her again until he meets her near the French village where they had spent their honeymoon. Her troubles have shaken her reason and she does not know him. Her memory is finally brought back to her by hearing a group of soldiers sing a favorite old song she used to sing to Philip. Sheelah's boy dies and his mother, realizing the unhappiness she is causing, has her marriage annulled, and Mary becomes Philip's legal wife.

Tower falls in love with Kiku-San and she returns his affections, but her father has pledged the girl as security for a gambling debt to Suzuki, who owns a geisha house. Suzuki gets the girl and carries her to the geisha house, but Tower and an American friend, Thompson, enter the place and rescue her, after a hand-to-hand scuffle with the owner and his patrons.

Tower marries Kiku-San, against the advice of his American friends, and with the consent of Okuma, who has returned from America. Kimura, the father, commits suicide as the result of his general depression over the course things have taken.

The bride and groom are happy until the night of the ball at the American club, where Kiku-San is treated badly by those who do not approve of such matches. From that moment both she and Tower become discontented, though Kiku-San still loves him devotedly. Tower refuses to cast the girl off, according to custom, but her brother induces the girl to discard Tower, threatening to kill the American unless she takes this step. The story closes with Tower sailing back to America, with a pretty American widow, who has long loved him, and Kiku-San sitting unhappily among the cherry blossoms.

"Something To Do"

Paramount Presents Bryant Washburn in a Live Comedy Melodrama.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

FULL of zip and action when it gets under way, "Something to Do" is the story of a wealthy young man who has virtually nothing to do, indolent and indifferent, a mere idler almost bored to death with the eternal sameness of his existence, but not a profligate. He is clean enough physically, though he suspects he may be the victime of some disease. He does not suspect that his trouble is that lack of adventure and excitement, which all healthy men enjoy. Through an almost infantile simplicity of character he is an easy mark for those who prey on the vanity of the idle rich, particularly a valet, whose excursions in his master's clothes and car, posing as a nobleman, brings about an adventure active enough to suit the most exacting of young bloods.

From the time Bryant Washburn, in the role of a wealthy idler, really has "Something to Do," the unsuspected resources of character called into activity through romance and adventure, the story travels swift enough to suit any lover of melodrama, with an element of high comedy added to the general sum of values. Bryant Washburn is equipped for the role and plays it with enthusiasm. Anna Little plays the heroine with grace and intelligence. Lively impersonations are those of Adele Farrington as Mrs. Perkins and Charles Gerard as the valet, with the rest of the cast well typed. Though the material of this Paramount production is not well put together, there is plenty of it, and the activity, mostly physical, of the later scenes is compensating enough to make "Something to Do," an entertaining feature of almost any program.

The Story.

Jack Merrill, though in the flush of youth and strength, finds himself oppressed and disheartened, almost bored to death, from lack of "Something to Do." His thieving valet, Thompson, using his master's dress suit and motor car, is having plenty to do in the society of newly-rich Mrs. Parkin, where he is lionized as a titled Englishman. Mrs. Parkin has obtained possession of her brother's fortune, by declaring him incompetent and placing him in a private asylum. Living with her, but disgusted with social pretense, is her brother's daughter, who suspects that her father is sane, but who is without resource to protect herself and gain his freedom. The girl writes an appeal to a friend, asking for help, and slips the letter in the cardboard frame of her own photograph until she can mail

it. The valet, posing as a nobleman, is attracted by the girl and steals her photograph. On returning to his master's rooms and being compelled to give up the borrowed dress suit he becomes an unwitting messenger between the girl and the young gentleman who badly needs "Something to Do."

The materials for romantic adventure thus supplied, the indolent Jack Merrill is suddenly transformed to a dynamo of active effort. He does some posing as an English nobleman himself by way of getting into the Renwick household, now in the power of socially ambitious Mrs. Parkin, and finds that Miss Renwick is making a brave effort to secure evidence which shall set her father at liberty. He is so charmed with the girl that he becomes her active aid, even tearing out a wall safe that contains the testimony she is seeking. The tremendous activities of the indolent young clubman, most of them of physical struggle, result in restoring her father to his own, in convicting the conspirators, in winning a fine girl, and in giving his life some definite object.

"The Unpainted Woman"

Universal Production, In Six Reels, Features Mary MacLaren in Strong Rural Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS six-reel number, "The Unpainted Woman," was adapted by Waldemar Young from the original by Sinclair Lewis, and produced by Tod Browning. In certain respects it breaks virgin soil in the presentation of a film story of American farm life in the Middle West. It is a tale of the wheat country, firm in its portrayal of varied rural types and gripping and vivid in its pathetic picture of the heroine's struggles to find happiness in her difficult environment.

Mary MacLaren is an excellent type for the Swedish girl, Gudrun, "descendant of a hundred Vikings." The early reels are almost flawless in depicting Gudrun's marriage to a worthless scion of one of the town's best families. The scenes from their unhappy existence are realistic and true to life. There is no sacrifice of artistic effect to the usual surface style of incident; the anniversary dinner is one of the best bits of screen pathos this reviewer has seen.

The story is original in conception and unusual in development. Only in the final reel does it descend to the ordinary. The burning of the grain-filled barn and rescue of Gudrun and her child are excellently staged, though conventional after what has gone before. The attempted lynching at the close is the weakest feature of the story, though it will satisfy many observers. The production as a whole is one of unusual strength.

and Mrs. Hawes informs the youth's mother and sister of this. The latter "cut" the girl at the dance, as do various others. Charley becomes enraged at this and determines to marry Gudrun. They are wed, but he is addicted to drink, and their life together is unhappy. A child is born to them, but after five years' hard drinking, Charley is fatally injured in a saloon row. He dies under circumstances distressing to Gudrun, though she knew but little happiness with him.

Gudrun, who had been born on a farm, takes up some farming property, with a small cabin on it. Here she works in the wheat fields to support herself and child. Later a "bird of passage" named Martin O'Neill comes to the farm. She feeds him and he works for her in gratitude. O'Neill helps her with the harvest and later saves Gudrun and her child from death in the burning barn. O'Neill is suspected of starting the fire, and narrowly escapes a lynching by the excited townspeople. But it develops that the fire was started by a jealous rival. In the end Gudrun and O'Neill are married.

"The Birth of a Race"

An Ambitious Production That Is a Striking Example of What a Photo-Play Should Not Be.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A FEW words will suffice to do justice to "The Birth of a Race." Starting with the creation, it attempts to follow the development of mankind down to the present day, and throws in a disconnected war story for good measure. About everything has been applied to the production but common sense. There are numerous scenes from sacred history which employ mammoth sets, large mobs and the services of actors of established reputation. The Garden of Eden, the Tribes of Noah's Time, the Land of Egypt, Jerusalem at the time of Christ, and on down to the present are presented at an outlay of time, labor and money that are astonishing—and all to no artistic purpose. The structure is without form and is a striking example of what a photoplay should not be. The disconnected modern story is no better than the biblical history in its handling. The producers have attempted to impress by bulk and have been overwhelmed by their lack of skill.

The names of three men are given as the authors of the scenario. It will be a deed of charity not to reveal their identity nor the names of the members of the cast. All have well earned reputations and are probably anxious to live down their connection with the entire affair.

"The Stronger Vow"

Goldwyn Presents Geraldine Farrar in a Spectacular Melodrama of Spanish Feud.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

PLEASING to the eye, especially in the costume ensembles and in picturing Geraldine Farrar very much as she appears in grand opera, "The Stronger Vow" is the story of a feud between two Spanish families, Dolores, the interesting representative of one, nd Juan of the other, with a cousin f Dolores, Pedro, as the villain. The oldwyn product becomes highly melo-ramatic when Pedro kills the brother f Dolores, carefully plants Juan's andkerchief by the body of his victim, nd Dolores takes the "oath of blood" o slay the murderer with her own and. It becomes somewhat operatic hen innocent Juan courts and wins ovely Dolores without her knowing he s the one falsely accused of murdering er brother, and when she marries him n Paris with a church wedding, where hurch weddings are not legal. The tory permits a pretty spectacle, how-ver, and it also permits the villain to nvade the bride's chamber right after he wedding dinner to tell her that the han she has married is the murderer of er brother.

In grand opera many inconsistencies nd impossibilities are excused for the ake of the enchantment of music, espe-ially when the stage picture pleases the ye. Miss Farrar takes full advantage f these operatic opportunities, grace-ul in attitude and expression, superb n elaborate costume. Milton Sills, Kate Lester and Tom Santschi give Miss Far-ar admirable support. The whole pic-ure is spectacular, the carnival scenes very attractive to the eye.

The Story.

"The Stronger Vow" deals with the vow which Dolores de Cordova takes when her brother is murdered during a carnival and with the vow she takes at the altar when she unwittingly marries the man who is almost immediately after the wedding accused of the murder. Dolores believes her cousin, Pedro Toral, the real murderer, when he accuses the man she has just married, Juan Estudillo, because there has long been a feud between her family and his. Pedro makes the accusation immediately after the wedding dinner, insisting that she must keep her oath of blood to kill the murderer of her brother with her own hand. To enforce this he carries her off from the church where she is praying to the den of Apaches, whose leader he has become. He sets a trap for the husband also, but Juan is connected with the secret police, and he arranges for a timely raid of the den. He goes there alone, is seized and bound, then Dolores is commanded to kill him to keep her oath of blood . The place is raided by the police at this moment and the villain is killed by a man he has wronged to whom he has previously confessed his crime in a spirit of bravado. This clears Juan of the false accusation and enables Dolores to keep the stronger vow she made at the altar.

Work heavily on the situation of a young wife who is told on her wedding night that her husband is the man she has sworn to kill for the murder of her brother. Make this your big talking point. Use the Spanish and apache angles for side approaches and play a little on the vendetta idea as apart from the situation it creates. If you can get a good lithograph make a cut-out for the lobby. ## "A Place in the Sun"

Triangle Picturization of Cyril Harcourt's Play Made in England With English Players.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE screen version of the Cyril Harcourt play, "A Place in the Sun," which had a run at the Comedy Theatre, New York, during the present season, is rather disappointing. Presented as a comedy-drama it is unsatisfying for the reason that the theme of the play is totally opposed to comedy and the screen version quite devoid of it. The production was made in England with a cast of English players. As shown to the press the entertaining quality of the picture was interfered with by the character of the subtitling, which persisted in emphasizing the narrative style in which the story is presented.

Margaret Blanche
Believes in looking up to others in "A Place in the Sun."

The idea behind the plot of the play is one which affords ample opportunity for dramatic development. The moral of the play defined as the retaining of self-respect and the respect of others combined with other possessions which make for happiness is unquestionable; and it is a pity that more efficient direction had not been given the production. The star of the picture, Margaret Blanche, is hardly strong enough for the role of Rosie Blair. The best work of the cast is done by Lydia Billbrooke.

The Story.

The story of "A Place in the Sun" covers a brief period in the lives of a son of the English aristocracy whose father denies him the right to carve his own destiny, and the daughter of a servitor on the estate. Thrown in each other's company the pair fall in love. The girl is compromised and the man refuses to marry her for fear of being disinherited. The girl's brother, escaping from the drudgery of the farm, becomes a novelist of note, and is befriended by a society woman, who brings him again in touch with the sister of the young aristocrat for whom he has fostered an affection. His own sister, arriving at his city apartment, finally tells him of her trouble. The appeal of the brother to the lover is fruitless; and not until the latter's sister interferes to the extent of placing herself in a compromising position in the home of the novelist does he realize the unmanliness of his attitude and proposes marriage to the girl that he has wronged.

"The Boomerang"

Seven-Reel Picture Released by Pioneer Film Corporation Needs Skillful Editing.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

UNFORTUNATELY, the mere bringing together of a lot of material does not result in a convincing moving picture. "The Boomerang," released by the Pioneer Film Corporation, is an ambitious effort but, in its present shape, is in need of skillful editing. In place of action the story is told principally by the subtitles and there is such a mass of motives, sidetracks and unnecessary detail that it is difficult to follow the plot. A commendable attempt has been made to secure a capable cast and give the picture the correct backgrounds, but the complications of the scenario have prevented the worth while material in the story from appearing to the best advantage. Properly cut and altered "The Boomerang" would prove a fairly interesting picture.

The best known members of the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Melbourne McDowell, and Helen Jerome Eddy.

Governor Montgomery...Gordon Sackville
Ann Montgomery.....Maryland Morne
Wager Ames.....Lloyd Whitlock
Daniel Nathaniel.....William Ryne
Jim Hardy.....Bert Appling

The Story.

A fight between millionaire meat packers to corner the food market is the main motive of "The Boomerang." There is a love interest between the daughter of one of the packers and the son of his rival. The stronger of the two men is Peter Cameron. When he finds it to his advantage he makes Rose, his daughter, break off her engagement with young Gray on the pretext that he has been intimate with another woman. Her brother has disappeared and it turns out that he is the father of the child that is used by the woman's brother-in-law to blackmail the elder Cameron.

Disowned by his father, George Gray starts out to earn his living as a common laborer and eventually becomes Prosecuting Attorney of New Jersey. He then starts in to prosecute the meat packers for selling bad meat, and convicts his own father, as well as Peter Cameron. There are other complications along the same line, including a labor strike and an attempt on the part of one of Cameron's trusted men to beat both his employer and his rival in a stock jobbing scheme by which Cameron loses twenty millions. It turns out that young Cameron was legally married to the mother of his child, and George Gray and Rose Cameron are brought together again at the end.

"Miss Adventure"

Peggy Hyland's Adventurous Propensities Shown in Fox Film.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

IT is not so much the story as it is the leading woman that will commend "Miss Adventure," a five-reel Fox film, to the many admirers of Peggy Hyland. In it she is as charming and as delightfully irresponsible as ever. The story is clear, fresh and interesting. The attraction will be liked by all.

The background is the California Coast and many of its scenes are beautiful. Director Lynn F. Reynolds has handled the action in a commendable way. Several of the scenes between the heroine, Jane, and that fine old salt, Captain Barth, played by George Hernandez, are especially pleasing. There are many good bits of action in the film.

The Story.

In "Miss Adventure," a Fox picture, Jane, the heroine, is as a child cast away from a ship on which a mutiny has taken place. She is brought up by Captain Barth, a well-to-do seafaring man, and when she is introduced again, played by Peggy Hyland, he wants her to marry his nephew, Albert Barth.

There is a letter from her dead father which will identify her as an heiress. This is now held by a man in prison for smuggling. Albert doesn't want to marry Jane. He knows that she is an adventure lover and gets her to go away in a boat with the man who has the letter, of which Albert knows nothing. This man is knocked overboard and drowned leaving Jane alone on a small island.

A young man, Richard Hamilton, who is looking for the lost heiress, is passing in his yacht and gets Jane's signal. He hears her story and suspects that she is

"After His Own Heart"

Hale Hamilton Leads in Strange Story Told By Metro Film.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

STRANGENESS of situation is the marked feature of the Metro five reel picture, "After His Own Heart." The picture has also touches of fresh humor. Hale Hamilton has the lead with Naomi Childers opposite to him. The character most strikingly acted is Dr. Spleen, by Harry Carter. This part fits him to perfection, and he makes the situation quite convincing. The climax is astonishing.

The title suggests a love story, but there are two persons after the hero's heart. One is the girl and the other the Doctor, who wants to give it to a rich patient, uncle of the girl. The series of scenes in the doctor's hospital seems to be something new. At least, it gets hold of the spectator with the grip of new things. The hero is a captive and knows what kind of an operation is to be performed—it was tried on the two dogs that died. The foolish old man thinks it is going to make him young.

The acting shows no weak points. Director Harry L. Franklin has made his action run with no uninteresting padding and kept it graceful and with no slack places. His hospital scenes are masterly.

The Story.

In the Metro picture, "After His Own Heart," the hero, Thomas Duncan, is discovered with a letter telling him that his fortune is gone. At a party he meets Sally Reeves, an old flame with whom he again falls in love. On reaching home, he finds a note asking whether he wants to make $250,000, and writes "Yes" across it. He needs the money.

He is taken to Dr. Spleen's and finds the doctor is to exchange hearts between him and another patient, an old man. He has some tragic-comical experiences in the hospital before he can get word of his predicament to Sally. Sally arrives and is also locked up by the doctor, who is determined to perform the wonderful operation. Of several characters, one dies most unexpectedly and the action is turned toward the happy ending. To tell who dies would spoil the story; the picture keeps it hid till near the close.

Advertising Angles: Play on the star's popularity, but make your big bid with the unusual offer of Dr. Spleen. Work this in scarehead fashion with such lines "Offered $250,000 to have his heart cut out." Run an advertisement offering $250,000 to any man who will assist in a scientific experiment, using a box in the newspaper office. Run this two days before you launch your advertising campaign and repeat a second day, then get the paper to run a new story on the advertisement, using some of the replies if you receive any. Even in the cities you can work this stunt and get real publicity out of it. Then take the clippings and replies into your lobby. The replies will probably be facetious and make good reading.

"Beating the Odds"

Harry T. Morey Has Absorbingly Interesting Role in Vitagraph Film.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE novel, "The Money Maker," by Irving R. Allen, has been picturized by Vitagraph in "Beating the Odds." It will be liked. It is the story of a character growing from a slum politician to a man of power, and ably played by Harry T. Morey. Not a foot of the film which shows the step-by-step growth of this man's mastery of life lacks for compelling interest. The love story part at the end is also good, but is more commonplace than the scenes which show the politician's earlier experiences on his way up.

One of his early female entaglements is played by Betty Blythe in a way that presents her as attractive. Jean Paige takes the part of the good woman, his final sweetheart and wife.

What stands out in the picture is the number of clearly drawn and distinct bits of real life it presents. Director Paul Scardon once again shows his ability as a picture maker. It is a real attraction.

The Story.

In the Vitagraph picture, "Beating the Odds," David Powers, the hero, is introduced as the graft collector for a ward politician. He meets Hebe Norse, a cabarette singer. Caught by detectives and forced to leave the city, she goes with him.

In another state he shows his salesmanship as a patent medicine vender and is taken on by a real-estate speculator. In this line he is so much of a success that a great steel manufacturer, Gail Rogers, makes him an offer.

The steel man's daughter, Rosalie, and the politician fall in love, and in a year or so they get married. Rogers brings home a new wife and it is Hebe Norse. Powers can not tell Rogers of the past. When Rogers finds out about Hebe, there is a break between the two men. When Rosalie finds about it she too breaks with Powers. In the meanwhile Rogers has tried to wreck a company headed by Powers; but straight hard work keeps it off the rocks. The final scene is a pretty making-up of the man and wife by their little girl.

Should he expose her and lose his wife or permit her to carry on her schemes undetected?" A good main angle would be to hammer on the fact that Morey plays the role of a graft collector who tried to go straight.

SI, SENOR (Rolin-Pathé), May 11.—Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels are featured in this comic number. The scenes are laid in a small Mexican town, where Harold plays barber, meets a beautiful senorita and gets into trouble with the latter's mother. The fun is characteristically amusing and will bring several laughs.

BEFORE BREAKFAST (Rolin-Pathe).—This comic number features Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. Harold plays the role of a young man whose dreams are shaken by his father's insistence that he get a job and go to work. He becomes a waiter in a restaurant, and has some funny adventures. The number contains numerous laughs.

Vitagraph.

THE MAN OF MIGHT (Episode 11).—In this episode the heroine is left a prisoner in the hold of a ship with Scarface and his gang in possession. Her friends have just walked the plank, and we don't know whether they are drowned or not. The girl has worked off her bonds and discovered an automatic pistol. But before this has happened the adventurers had suffered other untold indignities on shore at the hands of the villains, and had always escaped. Here is surely a serial with a punch. It is made as carefully as though it were a feature.

Convention of Managers of First National Exhibitors' Circuit Exchanges, The Hotel Astor, New York, April 22, 1919

RESOLVED: That we, the undersigned managers of First National Exchanges, express to Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co. of Chicago, our appreciation for the splendid co-operation he has given us and for the extremes to which he and his organization have gone—far beyond the usual limits of business practice—to relieve emergencies and assist us in giving satisfactory service to our exhibitor customers.

FURTHERMORE: We feel that it is both merited and fitting that Mr. Rothacker be told that to each of us here it is a fact, proven by the statements of exhibitors to us, that no other group of exchanges can boast of prints with superior tinting and toning, with clearer definition, with more carefully printed lighting effects, or with greater quality in any particular, than that in the prints made by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co. for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

FURTHERMORE: The excellent system installed by Mr. Rothacker for filling emergency orders for replacements of short lengths of torn or destroyed scenes and titles operates greatly to our advantage in the promptness and accuracy with which they are filled.

FURTHERMORE: We know, from our experience in the past with the laboratory work of other concerns that the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co., in comparisons of quality, service, accuracy and promptness, eminently deserves the tribute of an uninterrupted continuation of all laboratory work for First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

FURTHERMORE: It is resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to Mr. Rothacker, and to the Board of Directors for First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

*Signed: Harry Weiss, R. C. Seery, Chicago; Boyd Cunningham, Washington; W. E. Lusk, Cleveland; C. R. Beachman, Atlanta; James Skirboll, Pittsburgh; L. # LUCKY AS A 4-LEAF CLOVER!

That's what the 4 Essanay-Chaplin revivals are to the exhibitors showing them. Read what these critics say of "A Night in the Show," "The Bank," "Police" and "Shanghaied" and you will know why:

"Charles Chaplin in his old Essanay pictures proves conclusively that he deserves all of the affection which his followers have given him."—New York Tribune.

"The audience which filled the Rialto enjoyed Chaplin in an Essanay of the vintage of 1915 as though it had been made last week and released yesterday."—New York Review.

"See Charlie Chaplin in the roaring Essanay comedy 'Police.' You will enjoy it from the very start and it will make you forget your troubles and drive away the blues."—Cumberland (Md.) News.

"Charlie Chaplin delighted Majestic Theatre audiences in a revival of his Essanay comedy triumph, 'A Night in the Show,' regarded as one of the funniest things he has done."—Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman Review.

" 'The Bank,' the Essanay-Chaplin comedy, appeals to all lovers of real humor."—Erie (Pa.) Herald.

" 'A Night in the Show' shows the great comedian at his best. The picture was enjoyed the second time more than the first."—Helena (Mont.) Record-Herald.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME"

A
Paramount-Artcraft Special

From Arctic to Tropic

THE whole world is the stage for this great picture-drama of a woman's soul. Alaska, Southern France, Egypt, rural Scotland, India, London—these are the scenes through which the men and women of the picture-story play at their game of hearts.

Staged with all the sumptuous luxury and beauty at the command of a great director, Hugh Ford, and played by artists of real distinction, Katherine Macdonald, Milton Sills, Theodore Roberts, Jack Holt and Fritzi Brunette, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" offers an opportunity for exhibitors to cash in on a story with immense emotional appeal, beautifully acted, wonderfully staged and universally popular.

"in The Knickerbocker Buckaroo"

An ARTCRAFT Picture

Directed by ALBERT PARKER.

Twenty-three!

IT'S twenty-three weeks since a new Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft picture was released.

In that twenty-three weeks, $264,000 has been spent in making seven reels, 6,700 feet of the all-firedest, wallopingest Fairbanks' picture that ever saw the light of the screen.

They're waiting for him—they've been waiting these many weeks, and when they see him in "The Knickerbocker Buckaroo" they'll come back and see it all over again.

They'll tell their friends and come along with them. Their friends will pass the good word along. They all want to see it.

Therefore—make your arrangements now for a run. It cost $150,000 more to produce than any previous Fairbanks picture. It's good for three times your ordinary run.

By J. Clarkson Miller

Like Millions of Americans She Loved Tom Moore

She had him "broke"—disgraced and demoted. For, you see, this traffic cop had had the effrontery to stop her speeding chauffeur and save her life.

Why? Just the eternal feminine? Maybe. BUT that young fellow was—

Tom Moore.

Tom Moore, the "90 horse power romantic star," as a trade reviewer called him.

Tom Moore, the youngster with the love of a fight or a frolic in his Irish eyes.

Tom Moore, who has established himself with exhibitors and public as the find of the season.

To the exhibitor who booked Tom Moore or watched his success in a competitor's theatre, there is only one thing that need be said about "One of the Finest."

It is another of those Tom Moore pictures—a hundred per cent star, a hundred per cent story, and Goldwyn quality through every foot of it.

Bennison—Box Office Star

There are machine-made stars. There are stars manufactured in the publicity departments. And good old strong-arm bunk accounts for some.

Louis Bennison is none of these. He won his stardom at the box office.

His warm, vibrant personality, his skill as a player, and the prompt recognition of his worth and his pull by second and third run exhibitors, have landed Bennison securely with the "big fellows" of the first run houses.

Under all Bennison's work has run the rangy,. good-natured Western Americanism of his first pictures—an even, buoying ground-swell. Through this—like the up-lash of some deep hidden ledge of rock when seas run heavy—there flashes now in "The Road Called Straight" another Bennison of hard, raw power and sure decision.

This is the Bennison of stronger and stronger productions yet to come.

Out from the far places he comes once each year bringing with him the matchless treasure of his long labor.

Up from the South with "THE BIRTH OF A NATION," the most popular dramatic entertainment ever created.

Then from Babylon and glorified Palestine with "INTOLERANCE," the mightiest spectacle man has ever conceived.

Last, from the Fields of Flanders with "HEARTS OF THE WORLD," the epic of the war made for the French and British Governments.

And now, from London and China, DAVID WARK GRIFFITH brings for its first showing to the world

"BROKEN BLOSSOMS"

As startling an advancement in the cinema art as were the other triumphs of this world genius.

A drama of profound emotion; of exquisite delicacy; of terrific strength.

It is a worthy expression of Mr. Griffith's great talents in their rich maturity.

The offering will be introduced by an impressionistic prologue of original conception.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Repertory Season denotes a world-epoch in the history of the theatre.

Following the premier of "BROKEN BLOSSOMS," other offerings are to include "THE FALL OF BABYLON," an expansion and amplification of the thrilling Babylonian episode in "Intolerance," and a modern American story, "THE MOTHER AND THE LAW," based on the original story, as first related in "Intolerance," with additions and changes.

Broadway and 76th St.
New York City.

My dear Mr. Holmes;

Permit me to take this opportunity of thanking you for your recent tour of our theatres, with your picture "It's A Bear".

The excellence of your work in the picture, combined with your unique and distinct ability as an entertainer, resulted in an unusual personal success for yourself.

I look forward to the showing of your other picture "Taxi". "A Regular Fellow" proved even better than its predecessor, establishing a new and unique line of comedy, which at this time is so welcome to screen patrons.

The high esteem in which you are held by the patrons of our theatres indicates their increased interest in your future work.

Very sincerely,

IN producing the Rothapfel Unit Programme, Mr. Rothapfel has striven in every detail, to make it in its entirety the acme of artistic work in motion pictures.

EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA

SIX distinct features characterize the first Rothapfel Unit Programme: Music, Effects, Magazine, Novelty Prelude, Dramatic Feature and Comedy.

The whole is distinguished by the artistic touch of one who has demonstrated that he knows the public's likes and dislikes, appreciates the high standard of the motion picture as an art, and is able to present to this public quality in entertainment.

The Effects represent his idea of synchronization—making the action of the picture on the screen speak through the orchestra, the stage settings, the general environment—the whole worked out with a view to accentuating and making more vivid and more realistic, a pantomimic performance.

The result is what is perhaps the most appealing complete motion picture programme ever presented in any theatre.

Arrange your bookings immediately and announce the Rothapfel Unit Programme at your theatre as soon as possible so that you may profit by the tremendous amount of advertising and publicity it is now receiving.

Yours very truly,

First of the Reviews on NAZIMOVA in The RED LANTERN

From the Motion Picture News

"IN "The Red Lantern" Metro has turned out a photoplay which will challenge attention with any production ever presented."

"IT is a superior achievement—realized not only in the scope and magnitude of its lavish scenes, all of them conceived with painstaking care and accuracy, but in the graphic and logical development of its story and characterization."

"NAZIMOVA, undertaking a dual role in which the characters are entirely different, displays the highest form of histrionism. Her performance is superb in its vividness, poignancy and sympathy."

"WOULD not have scored so effectively were it not for the appreciation of Metro in selecting appropriate material. Theirs will be the distinction hereafter of having produced The Red Lantern".

Founded by J. P. CHALMERS in 1907

BINGHAMTON VOTES FOR OPEN SUNDAY

Hudson and Oswego Also Sweep Into Favorable Column for Triumph of State Exhibitor League

ANOTHER big triumph for the New York State Exhibitors' League came on Monday, May 5, when the Binghamton city council, by a vote of 8 to 5, decided to legalize Sunday showings. After putting the Sunday bill through the Legislature, the Exhibitors' League put its shoulder behind the wheel for the cities upstate, and Binghamton is the first big city outside New York to show the results. Oswego and Hudson, helped by League backing, also have voted for Sunday motion picture showings.

A strong representation of the State Exhibitors' League pleaded the Sunday case before the Binghamton council. The Binghamton exhibitors, who are hearty backers of the League, were there in a body with petitions signed by 8,200 residents, favoring Sabbath showing, as opposed to the 1,500 petitioners against.

The Rev. W. H. Jackson of the Moving Picture World added to the strength of the exhibitors' cause by a fine, broad-minded appeal to the council to legalize the Sunday opening. Dr. Jackson has been interested in the Sunday question since its inception in New York, and at every opportunity has done his best to influence a favorable attitude toward the Sabbath showing.

The labor unions of Binghamton had a large delegation present, and the opinion of labor men, standing for a big percentage of the residents, could not help but act for affirmative decision from the council.

The New York State Exhibitors' League is utilizing all its organization and strength in getting Sunday showing legalized in the towns and cities throughout the state which do not now enjoy such condition. The Sunday bill left the question of an open Sabbath up to the local authorities, and the exhibitors already are beginning to reap the benefit accruing from their membership in the League. Sydney S. Cohen, president of the League, hopes to have 100 per cent membership within a short time.

A. S. Black to Build Big Playhouse in Bangor, Me.

BANGOR, ME., is to have one of the finest opera houses in New England, within six months, to be erected on the site of the old Bangor Opera House, which was destroyed by fire in January, 1914. The house will be leased for ten years by the Maine Theatre Company, Inc., of which the president, A. S. Black, came to Bangor for the purpose of signing the lease. Construction of the new playhouse will begin at once and it is expected that it will be finished before next Christmas.

The interior will be a delight to the eye and there will be found all the conveniences for patrons such as to be found in the country's best theatres. The stage equipment will include the latest devices for the effective presentation of the largest and most elaborate productions. Present plans call for one of the largest stages in Maine.

Glynne and Ward to Build $40,000 Theatre in Astoria

THE Glynne & Warde interests, owners of the big Alhambra and Century theatres in Brooklyn, New York, announce that they will begin at once the erection of a $400,000 motion picture theatre in Astoria, Long Island. The new house will be built on the block fronting on Grand avenue, running from Steinway avenue through to Ninth—the hub of an active community centre.

Plans for the new amusement palace show that it will be one of the most modern and handsome buildings of its kind in Greater New York. The auditorium of the house proper will seat 3,000, in addition to which there will be an Air Roof Garden seating 1,800, which will be used for the regular show on warm summer evenings.

In addition to a big, handsome lobby, the front of the building will contain modernly-equipped and appointed stores, while much space above ground will be devoted to office suites.

The house will be under the personal management of Michael Glynne and Joseph P. Ward, who will inaugurate a policy of super vaudeville and feature photoplays at popular prices. The house will open in the fall, and is expected to be popularly acclaimed by Astoria's population.

Oregon Exhibitors Disband League; Sell Furnishings

EXIT the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Oregon, or at least the concrete evidence thereof. Secretary-treasurer Joe Brandt called a meeting for the first Tuesday in May for the purpose of disposing of the club room furnishings, which will be sold to the highest bidder. Business in Portland has been extraordinary; censorship difficulties have been negligible; the municipality has apparently been busy with wartime and other activities, and it has neglected passing any new measures to take the joy out of life of the theatre men; the members who used to shuffle the cards occasionally in the league rooms have found more remunerative occupations. The result of all these things has been a heavy accumulation of dust on the league's lavish furnishings, and a hole in the bank account, by reason of useless rent paid for the club rooms in the Commonwealth Building.

The League was formed in March, 1917, when Lee Ochs made his tour of the Pacific Northwest.

Minneapolis Exhibitor Factions Fail to Unite

EFFORTS to unite rival exhibitor factions in Minneapolis failed when a motion to disband the Motion Picture Exhibitors Corporation of the Northwest and the Theatrical Protective League and to form a new organization out of the combined membership was defeated at a meeting in the West Hotel of Minneapolis, April 28.

For some time the two Minneapolis organizations, which have been at loggerheads, have been considering the matter of getting together and settling their differences. The outcome was the meeting at the West Hotel.

Under a proposed amendment the old organizations would have been done away with and a new one started with the understanding that none of the present officers would again be candidates for election.

C. E. Hansing, proprietor of the Nahomis Theatre, acted as chairman.

Mr. Degman, speaking as a member of the Board of Directors of the Theatrical Protective League, offered the Motion Picture Exhibitors Corporation free membership in the Theatrical Protective League. He assured the Northwest members that at the next regular meeting of the T. P. L. the by-laws would be open for debate on any changes suggested. The offer was refused.

Form Michigan Screen Club.

The Michigan Screen Club was organized last week in Detroit. So far the membership comprises Herb L. Weil, Port Huron; W. S. McLaren, Jackson; Claud Cady, Lansing; Paul J. Schlossman, Muskegon; Charles Garfield, Flint; J. R. Denniston, Monroe; Elwyn M. Simons, Adrian and Lew Barnes, Kalamazoo.

The object of the club is purely one of business and social co-operation. So far no definite plans have been worked out although many important things are under contemplation. The membership is to be limited. Herb Weil is temporary secretary. Meetings will be held once or twice a month subject to the call of W. S. McLaren, temporary chairman.

COAST PLAYERS SELL MANY BONDS

"Victory Ship" in Pershing Square, Los Angeles, Manned by Different Studio Crew Each Evening

Los Angeles, May 2.

THE "Victory," a miniature ship erected in Pershing Square for headquarters of the Los Angeles film players' Victory Loan drive, draws immense crowds every night. The ship is manned by a crew from a different studio each evening.

Thursday night, April 24, Sessue Hayakawa, his wife Tsuri Aoki; William Worthington, director; and other members of the company were in charge of the ship and $50,100 in bonds were sold. Twenty-nine thousand two hundred dollars of this amount was subscribed by Mr. Hayakawa, Mr. Worthington and other members of the studio.

Friday night the Vitagraph players, including William Duncan, Bessie Love, Earle Williams, Antonio Moreno, Montgomery and Rock, Carol Holloway, Robert Amador, city sales manager, and others were in charge of the program and $53,850 was added to the total.

Rain Stops Program Saturday.

Saturday was to have been Famous Players-Lasky night, but rain caused a postponement of their program.

Monday night Madge Kennedy, of the Goldwyn Studios, was the attraction and $67,150 in bonds was sold. Forty thousand and fifty dollars of this amount was subscribed to by players and employes of the Goldwyn plant.

Tuesday evening the Hampton Studio players manned the ship, and H. B. Warner, Kathleen Clifford, Grace Darmond, Margarite De La Motte, Agnes Vernon, Carmen Phillips, Barbara Castleton, Vivian Rich, Fritzi Brunette, Lois Wilson and Mary McIvor disposed of $63,000 in bonds.

Metro Players Hold Forth Wednesday.

Wednesday night the Metro players held forth at the Square and Bert Lytell, who qualified as an orator of the first rank in the bond drive for the Fourth Loan last October, again made good with a spirited and inspiring talk. Finis Fox delivered a telling speech also. Emmy Wehlen, Viola Dana, Hale Hamilton, May Allison, Alice Lake, George D. Baker, Herbert Blache, Edwin Carewe, Joseph Kilgour, June Mathis, Henry Otto, John Ince, H. L. Franklin, Frank Currier, Maxwell Karger and Joseph Engle, as chairman in charge, increased the totals by $20,900 sold to the public and $34,700 to themselves.

Thursday night Harry Leonhardt was on hand with the Poppy Comedians, headed by Lottie Cruse and Mack Swain, and $31,000 in bonds were sold.

Small Towns in Middle West Opening Many New Theatres

RECORDS in the exchanges of Omaha show that more small towns throughout the Middle West are opening motion picture theatres than ever before. Some little towns that exchange managers, in the field for years, say they had never heard of before, have booked pictures.

Most of these small village houses are booking for only one or two nights a week, but there are a number who are booking pictures for every night except Sunday. The number of moving picture theatres in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and the Dakotas has grown twenty-five per cent. since last September, according to the conservative estimate of one of the leading film men of Omaha. One chief reason for the new houses is that merchants, bankers and other business men in the small towns deem theatres necessary to keep up the trade. Farmer Jones and his family, in their high-power automobile, find it no chore at all to go three or five miles farther to a town with a motion picture show, there to do their shopping as well as to go to a show. While Mr. Jones stands about the streets and talks crops, or visits the barber shop, his wife and children take in the show. Sometimes he goes along.

In several instances the business men of the town have opened a motion picture theatre themselves, just to keep such trade. One such instance is at Abie, Neb., where the merchants and bankers opened a house and booked Fox pictures for every Saturday night. Several such instances are reported from Iowa.

Brandt Leaves for U City to Start Two New Serials

JOE BRANDT, manager of Universal's serial department, left Wednesday, May 7, on one of his quarterly visits to Universal City, Calif., where he expects to start two new serials within the near future. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, is convinced of the value of serial pictures, and is planning on the production of serials that will outrank any productions of this sort that have been made in the past.

Mr. Laemmle has supervised the building up of the Universal scenario department, which is one of the largest in the motion picture industry. This department, of which Mr. Brandt has charge, has a separate serial department, a separate publicity department and a separate still department. At the present time there are four producing companies working on serial pictures at the Universal studios. The four directors for the serials are Henry McRae, Jack Jaccard, James Horne and J. P. McGowan.

The stars in these four serials are Marie Walcamp, James Corbett, Elmo Lincoln and Eddie Polo.

"Mexico Virgin Gold Mine for Films"

"For the man with nerve and a good live feature film to freelance, Mexico lies as a virgin field to make the silver pesos come a-rattling," says Phil Fox in the opening paragraph of his story on another page of this issue.

Representing the Moving Picture World, Mr. Fox made a 3,000-mile trip through Mexico, hitting big cities and little villages. Everywhere he found a crying need for good pictures—found that the Mexicans are fairly pleading to spend their money for amusement.

Also he found physical conditions that would put many obstacles in the path of the man who would go after some of the Mexican coin.

To the man looking for a new field—and to every other reader—Mr. Fox's article should prove exceptionally interesting. Read it.

Irene Castle Marries; to Continue in Films

IRENE CASTLE, famous motion picture actress and dancer, was married at noon Saturday, May 3, to Captain Robert E. Treman, of Ithaca, N. Y. The wedding took place at the Church of the Transfiguration, on Twenty-ninth street, known as "The Little Church Around the Corner," the ceremony being performed by the rector, Rev. Dr. George Clarke Houghton.

The bride was accompanied to the altar by her godfather, Philip Boyer, and was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. Elroy Foote. Her only attendant was Mrs. Clement Amory, of Morris Heights, N. Y., a lifelong friend.

Although Mrs. Castle's engagement had been persistently rumored for several weeks, the wedding arrangements were kept secret by the bride. Mrs. Castle was working at Fort Lee in her new Famous Players-Lasky picture, "The Firing Line," until nearly 4 o'clock Saturday morning. After a few hours' rest she met Captain Treman and they went to the Municipal Building for the marriage license. The ceremony over, it was only a few hours until they were on their way to Lake Placid, where exterior scenes were to be made for "The Firing Line." Although Mrs. Castle has given up dancing as a profession, it is stated that she will continue her work in motion pictures.

Pickford Denies He Was Dishonorably Discharged

JACK PICKOFRD has broken his long silence relative to the recent charges that he was discharged from the navy "because he was unfit to be in the service of the United States."

In a statement issued by him this week he denies emphatically that he was dishonorably discharged from the service, and added that he had not talked on the subject previous to this because he had been ordered by the president of the court martial to maintain silence relative to the matters regarding which he testified in a naval investigation.

His discharge from the navy, he claimed, came four months after the court martial of officers in the east and was granted so that he could engage in a propaganda picture for the army.

Pickford said: "I was granted an honorable discharge, which shows that my standing was of the very highest, and which recommends me for further enrollment.

"The reason I have not denied recent newspaper reports which declared I was dropped from the service was that I had been ordered by the president of the court martial not to discuss the naval case in which I testified and I felt I owed it to the Government to abide by this order."

MEXICO VIRGIN GOLD MINE FOR FILMS

World Representative, During 3,000-Mile Trip, Finds Mexicans Eager to Spend Money for Motion Picture Shows—Lack of Pictures Due to Unstable Conditions

By Phil Fox

FOR the man with nerve and a good live feature film to free-lance, Mexico lies as a virgin field to make the silver pesos come a rattling.

Nobody but a downtrodden peon would stand for some of the screen atrocities which pass for comedies and dramas in the land of Montezuma and mescal. Ancient and beribboned films coming from nobody knows where—stolen from Spain, smuggled across the border or exiled from France because they were too rich for a Parisian censor—form the piece de resistance of the occasional moving picture shows which are to be seen in the shell-shattered rural districts in the republic south of us.

Mexico City, with one or two film exchanges, is the lone hub of screen civilization in Mexico. There you may see for fifty centavos genuine American pictures such as pleased the "10-20-30" houses long before the signing of the Armistice. But the express service, while fairly regular on the main lines of the National railways of Mexico between the border and the capital, does not branch outward to other Mexican towns, chiefly because of the aptitude of sundry disgruntled individuals to detonate sticks of dynamite under perfectly good locomotives, and then again because, owing to the chaotic business conditions of the country, there is little of value to send by interstate express at any time. The service consequently is irregular.

World Man Makes 3,000-Mile Trip.

The Moving Picture World's representative during a 3,000-mile trip through the Mexican republic to study business conditions traveled on a passenger train at the front of which was a machine gun guard in an indented armored car, while the rear was brought up by a boxcar load of Mexican Federal troops, who traveled with their wives, babies, dogs and household cooties. Despite many bandit scares the expedition never got into a single battle.

Under such railroad conditions film service must be irregular, if not unusual. The outlying cities of Mexico, while they possess enterprising showmen, are forced to show what they can and when they can. An enterprising American with a good film and a smattering of Spanish could clean up a small fortune by traveling with his film case as a pillow and showing at every smaller town in the country.

Filthy Films All Over Mexico.

While the shows in Mexico City are decent and sanitary for the most part, there are sections of Mexico where the censor censeth not. An alleged comedy in what supposedly was a reputable theatre in Guadalajara, presented to an audience which numbered as many mantillas as it did serapes, was so putrid that one wondered how the writer escaped unhung. This was followed by a much tattered film of Senor Carlos Chaplino, evidently taken during his boyhood days, and which the Smithsonian Institute would be glad to get as an antique. Most of the laughs had either been cut or had moulded out of the celluloid. Nevertheless both presentations called for hearty laughter and applause.

At Irapuato, where the dead and wounded were piled in the streets a few months ago, there was a picture show up stairs over a grocery store and saloon—Charlie Chaplin again and a Spanish film which had no plot and which apparently suffered from the hoof and mouth disease.

July 1 Worries Not the Mexicans.

One pleasing thing about a few of the Mexican shows is that the impending drought of July next worries none of the showgoers. In one Mexico City theatre a neat balcony leads out from the gallery of the play house to the open air. There one may sit and sip Carta Blanca, Monterey beer—or, if one wants to slap down 70 cents, an amber brown bottle of the brand that made Milwaukee famous.

None of the picture shows are allowed to make too much money in Mexico. City, State and Federal governments all keep close watch on the receipts, and, while there is no organized war or luxury tax, the exhibitors are not permitted to go too far ahead of the game financially. A few packed houses results in a call from a uniformed official who in pure Castilian demands the customary rake off. Most of the movie men keep duplicate sets of books, one for their private information and one for the Government.

Conditions Better Near Border.

Nearer the border the American film market is closer at hand and conditions are better. It is said that many stolen films are on exhibition along the borderline. At Torreon, at the time the World representative was there, everyone, including the proprietors of the two theatres, had sent their spare cash and valuables to Aguas Calientes for safe keeping. The rumor was out that Villa, who had taken Parral, about 100 miles away, was on the way to Torreon to clean house. Federal soldiers from Morelos, where they had killed Zapata, were pouring into the city to stop Villa's return to the place where he had held sway for two long years. All the banks were closed; stores had moved their stocks, and troops of Federal cavalry patrolled the streets or bivouacked on street corners.

Despite the excitement the picture shows were running in full blast. One picture show in Torreon is in a huge and ragged tent. It has been in operation for the past six years despite changes of government in the city. The canvas top is torn and slashed by shrapnel and rifle bullets.

Tom Moore in Goldwyn's "City of Comrades" Has Light Food, a Heavy Fall, and a Heavier Beard.
And they are thrown together in such a manner as to evolve a satisfying photoplay.

Big Theatre Being Built in Torreon.

In the other picture show, a mediocre structure, several Chinamen took refuge when Villa ordered a clean up of Chinese a few years ago. They were dragged out and rebel horsemen roped them by their heads and their heels, and, riding in opposite directions, tore them in two while the onlookers cheered.

A magnificent theatre is in course of erection in Torreon. It will be devoted to moving pictures should it ever be finished. Workmen have been laying one brick at a time for the past six years and it is now about three-quarters complete. When finished it should be the finest moving picture theatre in Mexico.

At Nuevo Laredo, across the international bridge from Laredo, the theatres were burned to the ground or shattered by shell fire when Huerta troops abandoned the town to Carranza. Only one small theatre has been patched up for use. In Piedras Negras, opposite Eagle Pass, two fairly good play houses are in operation, using modern American films.

McCLURE TO MAKE TWO REEL PICTURES

War Department Co-operating in Series of Films Dealing with American War Activities

OFFICIAL announcement comes from A. Blaikie Dick, treasurer of McClure Productions, Inc., of a new series of two-reel pictures to be produced under the name of the Silver Chevron Series, telling the story in fiction form of the drama, romance and gigantic achievement behind the development of America's fighting machine to its present-day efficiency. The pictures are being made under the official sanction and with the co-operation of the War Department. For the first time in pictorial form they will show what the silver chevron and the mighty army of American workers did to win the war. They will reveal America's most closely guarded war secrets.

The heroine in each one of the pictures will be Alice Mann, who has appeared in several Vitagraph and Paramount releases, notably in support of Taylor Holmes.

The first picture in the series, which is now in process of production, is called "The Yellow Eel" and introduces the mysterious character by that name who figures in the whole series.

Series Based on Facts.

While the background of the Silver Chevron Series will be one of the facts, each picture will be a full fledged movie tale in fiction form, involving the elements of mystery, romance, and dramatic situations. The assistance which the War Department is rendering in the production of the series has enabled McClure Productions to give the stories the most unique and unexampled settings. Scenes are laid in places where no civilian has ever before been allowed to set his foot. Properties are used which the Kaiser's spies spent thousands of dollars and risked their lives to get a glimpse of and fathom their desperate efforts of Germany's agents to secrets. Stories of bomb plots and other desperate efforts of Germany's agents to prevent America from being a factor in the war—facts heretofore forbidden to be published—have been provided from official records for use in this series.

While each picture in the series will be a complete drama in itself, there will be a well defined connecting link between all the pictures. In every respect it will fulfill all the requirements of a gripping motion picture serial.

Copy is now being prepared by the advertising staff of McClure Productions, Inc., for an advertising campaign for the Silver Chevron Series. All the mediums which McClure's have found so effective in the past will be used. Every sort of special advertising and publicity aid possible will be brought into play to exploit this series to the greatest extent.

A Few "Marsh" Roses
By which Oliver Films helped Margaret Marsh celebrate another birthday.

More Improvements for Ince Studio.

Two more important improvements have just been introduced at the Culver City plant where Thomas H. Ince produces pictures for Paramount and Artcraft release. One is a new big laboratory where positive prints of every picture are to be turned out, plans and specifications for this department having already been approved by the producer.

The other improvement is the installation of a duplicate lighting plant, to be used in case the one now in use should ever get out of working order.

Texas Honors Texas.

The Frohman Amusement Corporation announces the bestowal of a unique honor upon Texas Guinan. As implied by her name, she is a native of that state, and the Legislature has offered the use of the official seal of the State of Texas in the advertising matter to be got out in connection with the series of productions she is making for the Frohman company.

E. R. Anderson
Fine idealist of the industry who died in France.

E. R. Anderson, Gold Screen Pioneer, Dies in France

E. R. ANDERSON, pioneer in the manufacturing of gold fibre screens, and a fine character in the development of the industry, died in France early in March of this year. Mr. Anderson, although one of the mainstays of the Minusa Cine Screen Company of St. Louis, enlisted soon after the outbreak of the war in the 138th Missouri Infantry, which sailed for France in May, 1918, as part of the 35th Division.

Mr. Anderson was soon given a sergeant's chevrons. He went through the attack in Argonne Forest, during which engagement his regiment fought from September 26 to October 2. According to his last letter, written on March 3 Sergeant Anderson was in good health.

The Minusa Company and Mr. Anderson's many friends feel his loss greatly. He was the first man to manufacture a gold fibre screen, accomplishing this feat in 1907.

A letter to Mr. Anderson's mother from Lieutenant William J. Schern, of B Company of the 138th, is a fine tribute to the spirit and ideals of her son. The letter reads in part: "Let me say that no matter how high your ideals or true, loyal manhood were, Eddie's thoughts, deeds and actions were ever higher. Everyone he met he could number as his friend, and I pride myself in being one of his closest friends."

Sergeant Anderson is buried just outside the town of Commercy, France, on a little hill set aside for the boys of the army of America.

"The New Moon" Opens at Rivoli.

Norma Talmadge's coming Select picture, "The New Moon," which is one of the three attractions that will be released by Select during May, has already been booked for the week of May 11 at the Rivoli Theatre in New York while other advance Metropolitan bookings include the entire Loew circuit beginning with May 19, the Goodwin Theatre in Newark for the week of May 18 and Proctor's Troy Theatre on June 1, 2, 3 and 4.

F. I. L. M. CLUB HOLDS OPEN MEETING

Official Adjusters of Disputes Between Exchange and Exhibitor Throw Open Session to Showmen Who Suggest Number of Reforms in Heated Discussion

HE open meeting of the F. I. L. M. Club in the Nimrod Room of the Hotel Astor on Wednesday evening, April 30, a gathering of local import, developed ideas of such value to exchange managers and exhibitors all over the country that it lifted itself out of the scope of New York City application. The meeting, called on the initiative of Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors' League, was brought about for the purpose of suggesting reforms to the F. I. L. M. Club, which, through the Hoy Reporting Service, settles all disputes between exhibitors and exchange men. Although the World printed an account of the meeting in its last issue, it is devoting herewith more space to the reforms suggested, believing that exchange managers and exhibitors all over the country can profit by the interchange of ideas which took place. It is possible that such agencies as the F. I. L. M. Club do not exist in many cities, or if they do, that they may not be so equitable in their decisions or so fitted to enforce them as the New York organization. The reforms suggested are country-wide in their application.

F. I. L. M. Club's Stabilizing Influence.

In his outline of the work of the F. I. L. M. Club since its organization three years ago, I. E. Chadwick, chairman of the meeting, stated that it has broadened its work until it now includes everything for the mutual benefit of exchange man and exhibitor. The Club is made up of exchange men only, but it has been broadminded and generous to the exhibitor in the enforcement of its rulings, and has done much to stabilize the industry in New York City.

Sydney S. Cohen, in presenting a list of definite reforms of the present methods of the F. I. L. M. Club, emphasized the necessity of having exhibitor representation on the grievance committee which settles disputes between the showmen and exchanges. He also pointed out the need of a uniform rental contract which would eliminate a lot of underhand practices used by the selling forces of many producers. Mr. Cohen also asked for the acceptance or rejection of contracts by exchanges within a period of seven days after signing, and for the elimination of the deposit system or the payment of 6 per cent. interest if the deposits had to be maintained.

Exhibitors Win Grievance Debate.

The debate on each one of these questions waxed hot between the members of the F. I. L. M. Club and the exhibitors. Sam Eckman, of the Goldwyn exchange, and chairman of the Club's grievance committee, stated with emphasis that exhibitor representation on the committee was impossible, since the affairs of the latter body were too closely interwoven with those of the F. I. L. M. Club. Moreover, the committee had always exercised fair judgment in dealing with the claims of showmen, and the State Exhibitors' League had given no assurance that the Club would be accorded a voice in the dealings of the League.

All these objections of Mr. Eckman's were answered almost before they were out of his mouth. Sydney S. Cohen voiced the opinion that if the workings of the grievance committee were too closely interwoven with the affairs of the Club to permit of exhibitors sitting in at the committee's sessions, the constitution of the Club should be altered and broadened. Charles O'Reilly, one of the strongest backers and organizers of the State League, interposed with a witty reply to the effect that it is no crime to be judged by your peers, that life is short and the grievance committee might not always have so just a chairman as Mr. Eckman. John Manheimer, a big Brooklyn exhibitor, stated that the League would be only too glad to arrange an exchange of powers on the enforcement of the committee's rulings.

Standardized Contract for Distributors.

Representatives of the Exhibitors' League, in regard to a uniform contract, stated that American producers sold films to England and Ireland under such a contract, and that a standardized contract should be given to American exhibitors. President Cohen was willing to delegate the League's counsel to meet with the counsel for the F. I. L. M. Club and draw up a common form of rental contract, but the most Mr. Chadwick could promise was a careful consideration of the proposal by the Club at its next meeting. The uniform contract, according to Mr. O'Reilly, would eliminate a lot of unnecessary verbiage which now conceals harmful "jokers," and would still permit additions to the contract necessitated by local conditions. In this connection, Mr. Eckman stated that wherever the F. I. L. M. Club dealt with a dispute wherein a salesman had promised the exhibitor certain things not in the contract, and which the exchange did not give, in every case the exhibitor was given the decision.

Deposits Business Crime, Says Cohen.

The whole subject of commercial credit was opened on the discussion of the deposit system. Mr. Cohen stated that it was nothing less than crime to subject honest and reputable business men to the payment of large sums of deposit money. The exhibitors present in the Nimrod Room were of the emphatic opinion that the least the producers could do would be to pay 6 per cent. on the deposits. The Goldwyn policy of paying 6 per cent. was cited as the exception, and was the means of bringing the house to applause.

Sam Zieler, of the Universal exchange, rose to register disapproval of exhibitor combinations for the purpose of beating down the price of film. One exhibitor in the room then rose likewise and excitedly waved a contract which he as a partner in a "combine" had signed with Mr. Zieler for film at a price which was nothing if not sky-high. It was some minutes before Mr. Chadwick could calm the man who insisted that his name had been taken in vain. The whole question was then given a thorough overhauling, and as fast as an exchange man would cite instances of exhibitor combination, a showman would rise and take out a collective bargaining skeleton from the exchange men's closet.

Mr. Chadwick promised a serious and careful consideration of all the points by the next meeting of the F. I. L. M. Club's executive committee. The results are awaited with interest by the exhibitors.

Those present included I. E. Chawdick, acting president of the F. I. L. M. Club; Charles Hoy, of the Hoy Reporting Service; Sydney S. Cohen, S. I. Berman, Charles O'Reilly, John Manheimer, William Brandt, Henry Cole, Charles Moses, Leo Bracher, Sam Scheer, Sam Eckman, of Goldwyn; Sam Zeiler, of Universal; John Dacey, of Pathe; Henry Siegel, of Select; Harry Dandot, of Famous Players-Lasky; Sol Title, of Film Clearing House; Louis Rosenbluh and Abe Blumstein, of Fox; Sam Adler, of Select; Sidney Ascher, H. Manus, Charles Cranides and Dave Picker.

Montagu Love Back at World Studio.

Montagu Love, after having played a stellar engagement in the legitimate and taking a fling at vaudeville as a headliner for a few weeks, is back at work at the World Studio at Fort Lee. Mr. Love is working on "Through the Toils," a five-reel feature that will be released in July on the World program. He is being directed by Harry Hoyt. Mr. Love will have as his leading woman Eileen Cassidy.

Wanda Hawley

Southern Exhibitors to Be in Washington May 15

MAY 15 is going to be a big day in film circles in Washington, D. C., for exhibitors from North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia are going to get together in a sort of convention. Harry Bernstein, of Richmond, has notified Harry M. Crandall that the Virginians will be here on the date named.

The convention is the outgrowth of the recent meeting of a committee of exhibitors from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia with the local exchange managers. At that time there was a general discussion of the newly-adopted trade rules, to which the exhibitors had taken exception. The differences existing between exhibitors and exchangemen were ironed out. The suggestion was made by Mr. Crandall, who heads the District of Columbia exhibitors, that it might be well if a general meeting could be held and men from North Carolina invited.

It is expected that a great deal of good will come from this convention. It is going to be a thorough business meeting with all the frills and fancies eliminated, although the tentative program provides for a banquet at Harvey's, to be tendered by the exhibitors to the exchange managers.

Southern Leagues to Confer with Washington Managers

A GRIEVANCE committee of five, from which one will be selected to represent the Exhibitors' League of Maryland at the conference of the state organizations from North Carolina, Virginia, the District of Columbia and Maryland, which will be held in Washington, with the Managers' Association of that city, on May 15, was appointed by the Maryland organization at a meeting which was held on Monday, May 5.

Those appointed on the committee include E. C. Sandell, Frank A. Hornig, J. Rabinovitch, B. Rosenbauer and Charles B. Eyer.

Lou Tellegen.

It is the purpose of the League in states mentioned, it is understood, have their representatives meet Washington on May 15, a commit from the Washington Managers' As ciation to discuss whatever contro sies have arisen between the exhibit and the film exchange men. Large tendance is being depended upon.

Goldwyn Announces Famous Husband and Famous Wife Will Play Opposite in Series of Features

THE latest featured player in the Goldwyn roster is Lou Tellegen. Mr. Tellegen will play opposite his wife, Geraldine Farrar, in a series of photoplays under the direction of Frank Lloyd, also a recent Goldwyn acquisition. The couple will leave New York May 10 for the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, California, where they will begin work immediately.

Mr. Tellegen has had a most colorful career in the drama. Though his nationality is primarily a blending of Dutch and Greek, Mr. Tellegen is a typical product of the French school. His acting is terse, flexible, subtle in the shadings, quick in its turns and its surprises, yet never false to a sense of line or of proportion. He knows how to rise to a climax as only French actors can. He possesses the famous "Bernhardt touch," which he acquired under her careful tutelage.

In the last few years Mr. Telle has achieved widespread popularity this country, representing among critics the delicate artistry of the E ropean theatre. Perhaps his most n able appearance was with Dorothy D nelly in "Maria Rosa." He has peared in "The Ware Case," "The K from Nowhere," and several other pla His most recent performance was "Blind Youth," which he himself wr in collaboration with Willard Mack.

UNIVERSAL OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY

Seventh Year of Pioneer Film Firm Ends in June— Carl Laemmle Tells of Organization's Future Plans— Past Recalls Industry's Growth Despite Obstacles

ELEBRATING its seventh birthday, the Universal Film Company announces that the entire month June, 1919, will be a memorable anersary period. The anniversary ings to a close the most successful ar of Universal's history, and marks e beginning of a new era in Universal oduction.

n announcing the celebration of Uniersal's seventh anniversary, Carl emmle, president of the company, d: "Universal has about completed e most successful year in its history. ring the last year and in preceding ars Universal pictures have become own the world over and the company w has exchanges in every part of e world. The Universal advertising mpaign is soon to be launched and the Universal Exchange managers e preparing for the greatest year in iversal history. There is not the ghtest doubt but that Universal's siness within the coming year will increased at the very least, 50 per nt.

Many New Stories Purchased.

Many new stories by some of the st authors in this country have been rchased, and pictures much better an were made last year are to be proced next year. New stars will be ded to the Universal banner and with the coming year the Universal comny will announce several events that ll astound even the most wise of the tion picture industry. The Universal m Manufacturing Company was rmed on May 20, 1912, and Universal's ccess is due, without a doubt, to its licy of playing the game squarely d in giving the exhibitor every coeration and first consideration."

The formation of the Universal comny was brought about by the conidation of the interests of several dependent film manufacturers who re at that time distributing their picres through the Motion Pictures Sales mpany, with offices at 111 East Fourenth street, New York.

On May 20, Mr. Laemmle, at that time nufacturer of Imp films; Charles Bauan of the New York Picture Company; and W. H. Swanson, manufacturer of Rex pictures, combined their interests and the Universal Film Manufacturing Company became a reality.

Attempts to Capture Organization.

Attempts were made to capture control of the Universal company after it had been founded, due to the antagonistic attitude of Charles Bauman, then president of the company, he was voted out of the presidency on June 27, 1912, and Carl Laemmle elected president. Mr. Laemmle has been president of the company ever since. At one time a pitched battle took place at the plant of the New York Motion Picture Company on West Nineteenth street, New York, and at the same time the Universal plant in Los Angeles was surrounded by an armed guard to prevent the taking over by contending interests.

Carl Laemmle
President of Universal.

The offices of the Universal Company were first opened at 1 Union Square, and on October 1 the offices were moved to 1600 Broadway, their present location. In July of 1912 Mr. Laemmle made a trip to Europe and opened the first American independent manufacturers' foreign offices. In September of the same year the announcement of the purchase of land in the San Fernando Valley, California, was made. Universal City was later erected on this land, but at the time of the purchase, the Universal Western plant was at Hollywood, Cal. These studios are now used by the L-Ko Motion Picture Company.

Universal Expanded Steadily.

On October 1, 1912, the Universal announced that it would increase its output to 28 reels a week. Later that month the Crystal Film Company added its productions to the Universal company. In 1916 the Fort Lee studios were erected, and many Universal photoplays were produced at this location. Recently it was decided to produce all Universal pictures at Universal City, but the Fort Lee property is still owned by the Universal. The directors at Universal in 1912 were Otis Turner, Herbert Brenon, Thomas Ricketts, and David Powell.

The Universal company claims credit for many of the important events in the history of the motion picture industry.

Practically every well-known star of the screen today at one time was in the employ of the Universal, and many of them began their careers under the Universal banner. A list of the stars of the screen who have appeared in Universal productions includes Owen Moore, Florence Lawrence, Ethel Grandin, King Baggot, Philip Smalley, Ann Little, Vivian Prescott, Fred Mace, Francis Ford, Marion Leonard, Marguerite Fisher, Lois Weber, Fritzi Brunette, William Robert Daly, William Shay, Harry Pollard, Grace Lewis, Vivian Rich, Leah Baird, Barbara Tennant, Mary Pickford, William Clifford,

In 1912 the Universal company was commissioned by the Democratic National Committee to produce a campaign reel booming Woodrow Wilson for president.

Brandt Entertains.

On Monday evening, May 5, Joseph Brandt, assistant Treasurer of Universal, entertained a gathering of representatives of the trade press at a dinner at the Hotel Astor. Outside of the business of eating, the dinner was arranged for the purpose of giving any desired information to the trade journals outside of that carried in Universal's story of the anniversary.

MORE RECORDS SMASHED WITH "MICKEY

Exhibitors Continue to Report Big Business and Find This Feature Unusually Good for Repeats

REPORTS received by the W. H. Productions Company continue to indicate that "Mickey" is proving to be an exceptional box-office attraction and profit-making feature. Many exhibitors who have already shown this picture advise that it has proven unusually profitable as a repeat photoplay.

Sam Ackerman, manager of the East Side Theatre, Detroit, writes Joe Horwitz, distributor for Michigan: "I wish to state that although I have been in the show business for nine years, I have never played to such crowds as I have while showing 'Mickey.' I played this picture after all the theatres on Gratiot avenue and could not control the crowds. It is without doubt the greatest drawing crowd that I have ever had at my house."

Sidney Lust, who controls the rights to Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia, stated that in Baltimore at the Parkway Theatre "Mickey" played to approximately 40,000 people on a six days' showing. At the Strand, which was the next house, it also playe a six days' engagement, and the recor at this house were smashed, and Washington, "Mickey" is repeating all of the theatres that have alrea played it.

Leon Victor, who controls the righ to Missouri, Kansas, Virginia a Nebraska, states that "'Mickey' play to $26,000 in Kansas City on a thr weeks' showing. That at the Rialt Des Moines, it played to over $7,0 on the week."

In New York State, "Mickey" brok all records for box office receipts at th Eckel Theatre, Syracuse; at the Lelan Theatre, Albany, and at the Griswol Theatre, Troy, on two weeks' show ings.

In Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Vi ginia, Harry Grelle, of the Suprem Photoplay, states that in all of his e perience, he has never handled or hear of a photoplay possessing the pullin power of "Mickey."

In New York City and Chicago th picture has been taken off the board for the past two months, and will b revived in the Fall in both cities fo showing at a legitimate theatre, an then booked over the entire circui again.

How Press Sheets Help the Showman.

TO GET publicity for his attraction the exhibitor must have a press sheet thereof. It is so helpful—especially when it is written from synopsis, before the publicists see the completed product.

Here is a feature (title deleted by Archie MacArthur, Jr.), lately released, that has the rubber business as the basis of its action. But the press sheet ambles along to great and snappy length all about safety razors. Just imagine!

Business of Making Mistakes.

Despite the fact that Allison Smith conducts a very excellent movie department in New York Globe it is possible all of THE industry do not read the paper. Hence we reproduce from S. Jay Kaufman's column the following:

When a plumber makes a mistake he charges twice for it.

When a lawyer makes a mistake it is just what he wanted, because he has a chance to try the case all over again.

When a carpenter makes a mistake it's just what he expected.

When a doctor makes a mistake he buries it.

When a judge makes a mistake it becomes the law of the land.

When a preacher makes a mistake nobody knows the difference.

But when an editor makes a mistake—Good night!

Keene Thompson, who went to Los Angeles from Broadway, New York, to take the fat job of publicizing Roscoe Arbuckle, is still living, but is very lonesome. And Al Christie's "Victory Blondes" were out boosting the Victory Loan!

Keene and the V. B.s met the other night. The bunch of beauties were downtown doing their boosting and Keene happened by. He was lonesome, as above mentioned, and was attracted.

But others—even some who weren't lonesome—were also attracted, and Keene couldn't get very close.

However, he edged as near as he could and listened. The girls were shouting "Buy a bond! Buy a bond!" "Fifty dollars! Buy a bond!"

And Keene, poor lonesome soul, didn't get them quite right. He dug his hand deep into his pocket and shouted, loud enough to wake up Hollywood:

"Here's a hundred! Gimme two blondes!"

Hail "Continental Sunday" with Four Big Pictures on Broadway!

ON MAY 4 New Yorkers enjoyed their first legalized Sunday ball game to the tune of 80,000 joint (Manhattan and Brooklyn), with moving pictures also perfectly "within the law." It seemed so sinful to have all those "fans" out in the fresh air and sunshine, enjoying themselves and the national game!

As to the pictures "Overflow Night" was celebrated among Main Street's cinemas. The crowds walked in chain formation from place to place, trying to horn in where others had preceded them.

Discouraged by the long line at the Rivoli hundreds left the glare of "The Red Lantern" to take a chance, at the Strand, on seeing "Mary Regan." There they picked up other "stand outs" and ambled to "The White Heater," at the Rialto, only to find everything filled and "The Unpardonable Sin" only two blocks away—but reaching the Broadway meant only another "turn away."

What a week it would be for pictures if these four attractions, plus "Fires of Fate," at the Harris, had been advertised in a full-page "pool" with every morning and evening paper having its turn at the display throughout the period!

Illogical? No. Why not an allied movement with direct local appeal to demonstrate that THE industry is pulling together for the good of "pictures."

Have you seen the full-page series of advertisements now running in weeklies of national circulation "issued by the Educational Committee representing the Paint, Varnish and Allied Industries"? Not a brand or firm mentioned—just paint and varnish boosted in an "educational campaign."

New York Opens the Ball

THE residents of Binghamton have lost no time in taking advantage of the opportunities afforded them through the passage by the legislature of the Sunday opening measure. When the local option bill was presented to the City Fathers on May 5 the Councilmen considered it together with petitions signed by 8,200 persons who wanted to see pictures on Sunday. The opponents of the plan to open the theatres on the Sabbath could muster but 1,500 protestants. The ratio of the petitioners did not obtain in the final disposition of the measure. In others words, it was not 11 to 2. The vote was, however, 8 to 5, which is not half bad—especially in view of the fact that before the opening of the session there was a fear the measure would fail.

Pushing the bill over the hill were the State Exhibitors League, which was represented by a strong delegation; the labor organizations of the city, and the Rev. W. H. Jackson, who for his strong presentation of the situation was heartily thanked by the local exhibitors.

Two other communities in the state also have been granted the right to see pictures on Sunday—Oswego and Hudson. These are but beginnings. The motion picture showmen have a militant organization—the kind that wins battles once given a cause that will stand the light. It is an organization led by men who possess skill in presenting their case—and also an experience gained in many controversies with well-organized and pushful opponents.

Just How Much Will Prohibition Benefit?

RICORD GRADWELL, president of the World Film, in an article printed in a Wall Street publication, answers the question: "What will be the effect of nationwide prohibition on the motion picture theatre?" Mr. Gradwell accepts the judgment of amusement purveyors that the motion picture theatre will become the Mecca of those who formerly spent a portion of their time in saloons. "The motion picture theatre will experience the greatest prosperity in the history of the industry," he declares.

Mr. Gradwell suggests that even if after five or ten years the saloon again comes into its own the generation that has grown up in its absence will know of the present saloon only as hearsay and that once the motion picture going habit becomes a necessary part of their daily existence it is evident that a change from this condition is going to prove exceedingly difficult if at all possible.

The effect of prohibition upon the business outlook of picture showmen is bound to be one largely of environment. In communities where there are few theatres and many saloons the advantage should be in favor of the theatre. Where the conditions are the reverse the increased business naturally will be slight.

One man as to whose ability to speak authoritatively on both forms of entertainment there will be no real dispute declares in one spot in New York City there are four theatres and one hundred saloons. The closing of one hundred saloons undoubtedly will mean the building of at least one more theatre. This will be conceded to be an unusual, not an average, case. There can be no doubt of one thing, however. The closing of saloons, the coming of prohibition, if they do have effect on the motion picture business, must be for the better.

Sunday Baseball a Real Competitor

THOSE persons who so vigorously have combated the showing of motion pictures on Sunday may find some consolation in the active competition developed for the screen through Sunday baseball. The afternoon of May 4 afforded an excellent chance for a tryout—for a demonstration as to just how hard the diamond will hit the screen.

Weather conditions on that day were pretty near ideal in and around New York. Under the law passed at Albany a few weeks ago Sunday baseball became legal. In Manhattan and Brooklyn advantage was taken of the opportunity to get out in the open by approximately threescore thousand persons, 35,000 being reported present in the former borough and 25,000 in the latter.

As was expected, the exodus to the Polo Grounds and to Ebbet's Field had its effect on the attendance at the Broadway show houses, where it just happened there were being displayed four subjects of above the average calibre. Patronage was slim throughout the earlier part of the afternoon, but the regular "push" was on during the evening.

Possibly some of the managers who for the first time experienced this novel competition may have now a better understanding of the feelings of the clergymen who for several years have blamed the screen for a slim attendance at the churches. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has intimated on one or two occasions that the pastors might do much to offset the disparity in attendance by making their meetings more interesting. There is a temptation right here to suggest to the managers that they must make their shows equal in attractiveness that of the baseball field. Some one may rise to remark that on a balmy afternoon, with two well-matched teams scheduled to cross bats, it simply cannot be done. Perhaps it can't.

There's one thing sure, however. No complaints from managers over the new competition should be permitted to go on record unless those registering them have remained on the job in the theatre and have refrained from following the throng to the sunlit diamond.

Universal's Seventh Anniversary

THE seventh anniversary of the Universal Film Company, which will be celebrated next month, again brings to mind the aged youth of the motion picture industry—an industry so young in years yet so old in experience. And in the sometimes chaotic but nevertheless phenomenal growth of the motion picture industry Universal always has taken a leading part.

Universal today is one of the big factors in the field, and perusal of the firm's early history gives only a faint idea of the struggles the organizers had to go through—the shackles they had to shake off, before they could even start on the path that has led to their present prosperity.

And on its seventh birthday we offer Universal our heartiest congratulations.

When, Why and What Is a "Broadway Star"?

LEE KUGEL, bat in hand, steps to the rubber, pats it with the polished ash and intimates that somebody has been taking liberties with our more or less well known "Broadway Stars"—that too often an attempt is made by press agents to confer stardom with a lineage on players that never have attained a dignity higher than "also rans."

Not so many years ago being a "Broadway Star" meant something in the lives of theatregoers west of the Hudson and beyond Mott Haven. The fact that a play ran more than a week on New York's Main Street was something to tell about in the advertising. It's different now—and well Mr. Kugel knows it.

In his own day as a theatrical manager he has "made" a star out of excellent material that was not of star class until he ordered the lithographs. But printer's ink and bill-poster's paste "put the star over" and Lee was (and is) a "good showman"!

In the film business stars are made much the same way. There must be a "name" to bill in front of the theatre, and if the producer and distributor does not supply the name—the exhibitor will. For the producer has so thoroughly impressed the showman that "stars" are necessary; so many talented young men and women have been made stars overnight on the screen, that "stars" the picture showman must and will have.

We are not taking serious issue with Mr. Kugel. He, being a born and reared showman, should know more about it than an editor. But we do feel that neither the exhibitor nor his public are being seriously wronged when a pretty girl, playing a good part in a good picture and playing it well, gets her name in big type as a star.

Where elsé shall we get the stars for tomorrow?

Los Angeles Takes Belated Action

THE Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce is waking up. For several years its members have been aware of the importance to the city and to Southern California of the motion picture industry. Nevertheless the possession of this knowledge has not impelled them to action intended to prevent the occasional sticking of pins into the producers and the exhibitors who made the city their home. From time to time there have been mild threats from the picture men that if conditions did not change for the better there was a possibility they might fold their tents and seek neighbors if not climes that were more congenial. As an evidence of its change of heart, or at least of attitude, the Chamber proposes to entertain the picture men at a luncheon.

It is suggested that the motion picture interests be organized within the Chamber as one of its stated departments under the general direction of an expert to be named by the producers. "As it is felt that the motion picture industry is in Los Angeles to stay, the members of the Chamber of Commerce believe that it should become affiliated with that association's activities," reports our Los Angeles correspondent.

Very likely the Chamber has for a long time felt the industry was here to stay, felt it so strongly that it did not believe any special attention was necessary to insure this permanency. Very likely also the recent remarks of P. A. Powers, the veteran producer, and Myron Selznick, the youngest representative of the manufacturers, wherein the two declared their preference for the East as a country in which to make motion pictures, had nothing whatever to do with the seemingly sudden determination of the Chamber. It is just a coincidence, of course.

The members of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce will display wisdom if they assume the position that the permanency of the industry in the City of Angels is not to be taken for granted; they will be still wiser if they do all they legitimately may be expected to do to foster an industry that has done more to put their city on the map—and keep it there— than all the rest of the municipality's boosting factors put together.

The Barriers Are Falling

TWO events took place in New York this week which mark the falling of the barriers which have prevented the general use of the moving picture by two of the leading religious organizations of the world. The Salvation Army has put its official sanction on the screen as a means of helping its work for Humanity. "Fires of Faith," which tells of the activities of the Army in the war, and introduces Commander Evangeline Booth and other officers of the organization, is an out-and-out entertainment that will compare with the best of the regular releases. Dealing as it does with the Salvation Lassies and the part they played just behind the firing lines, it affords the people of this country an opportunity to show their appreciation of the noble work done by the faithful women and their male companions for our boys at the front. During the Victory Loan Parade last Saturday down Fifth Avenue, which was four hours in passing a given point, the most enthusiastic reception was reserved for the line of doughnut makers of beloved memory. This feeling is shared by every good American. An effective way of giving it practical demonstration is to support their picture, the net profits of which goes to the Salvation Army.

The other example of removing the barriers is the intention of the Methodist Society to give a program of moving pictures selected from the regular releases each day of the Conference which is to be held in Columbus next July. The attendance will number over two hundred thousand and will come from all parts of the world. A committee is now in New York selecting the pictures. The National Association is affording the committee every facility in its selection of pictures, which will include such stories of fiction as meet their approval.

Personal and Otherwise

IN conversation with Jack De Lacey, whom we knew as a member of the Screen Club, we were surprised to learn that he had directed the last eight episodes of the Craig Kennedy serial, "The Carter Case." The first seven were directed by Donald Mackenzie.

Ronald J. Macadmus, of the Casino Theatre, Halifax, N. S., was in New York, Saturday, May 3. He reports much activity in Halifax.

E. L. Ouimet, of the Specialty Feature Film Exchange of Montreal, was in New York last week after a three months' vacation in Los Angeles. He was called to California by the death of his daughter and remained much longer than he expected, on account of his wife having had to undergo an operation. Notwithstanding the circumstances that took and kept him in Los Angeles, it is his intention to make frequent trips to the Coast to keep in direct touch with the production of pictures. He spoke enthusiastically of the Brunton studios, and expressed surprise that somebody had not thought of the plan before. Mr. Ouimet returned to Montreal on Saturday, May 3.

J. A. Quinn, of the Rialto, Los Angeles, gave us an idea of his new community studio he is about to build on the Coast He was enthusiastic about his plans and greatly encouraged by the way his project has been received by Eastern as well as Western producers. Mr. Quinn said he was going to stay in the East about ten days.

Directors Congratulate Each Other.

There was an exchange of congratulatory telegrams between Maurice Tourneur and Alfred Capellani on the occasion of the first showing of "The White Heather," at the Rialto, New York, and "The Red Lantern," at the Rivoli. Both of these French directors have kept up the warm friendship which began when they were students in Paris and struggling to make a name in the world of the cinema. Since coming to this country there has always been a friendly rivalry between them, but it is the first time that their pictures have been shown simultaneously on Broadway.

Another Vitagraph by Shannon Fife.

Shannon Fife, whose duties as Sergeant in the army for a time halted his customary speed, is back again with a new play for Corinne Griffith. The story will be given an elaborate production as a feature by the Vitagraph Company. It is the fifteenth play by Fife to be produced by Vitagraph, in a feature sense.

Miller Resigns from Stewart Pictures.

Bernard L. Miller has resigned as assistant to the president of the Anita Stewart Productions, to accept the presidency of the Juvenile Photoplay Distributors, Inc., with offices in the Godfrey Building, New York.

Mr. Miller was formerly secretary to Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

Harry Weiss and Miss Ranke Victims of Cupid's Wiles

MR. and Mrs. Ranke, Logansport, Ind., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Pearl Druscilla Ranke, to Harry Weiss, of Chicago, on Saturday, May 3, at their home in that city.

The bridegroom is well known in Chicago film circles and throughout the middle west, having filled important positions for many years. At the present time Mr. Weiss and R. C. Seery are co-managers of the Chicago office of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, in the Orpheum Theatre Building. Mr. Weiss is secretary of the branch managers association of the First National.

The marriage of the contracting parties is the consummation of a pleasant romance which had its birth two years ago, when Miss Ranke became secretary to Mr. Weiss in the First National office. The young woman, at the end of the first day's work, wanted to quit her position, but was persuaded by Mr. Weiss to remain, and then cupid began weaving the web which reached its finish in the happy event just chronicled.

The honeymoon is being spent in an automobile tour through the south. The Derby, at Louisville, Mammoth Cave, the Lookout Mountain regions, in Tennessee, and other favorite spots will be visited.

Mr. and Mrs. Weiss will be at home, after May 15, at 568 East Fifty-first street, Chicago.

Brady Sails for Europe.

William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, has sailed for Europe, accompanied by Mrs. Brady, known professionally as Grace George. Their plans call for an extended tour of England and the battlefields of France.

While abroad, President Brady will make a thorough study of motion picture conditions, both as to the popularity of the silent drama in the countries visited and the general trend of the pictures being shown.

Invitations have been extended to President Brady to visit the leading cinema organizations of London and Paris, and it is not improbable that consideration will be given to an International affiliation between these bodies and the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Herbert Standing a Goldwynite.

Herbert Standing, the veteran English actor, father of Wyndham Standing and of the late Jack Standing, is playing a leading part in Tom Moore's production being made at the Goldwyn Studios under the direction of Harry Beaumont. This is his first Goldwyn Picture. Wyndham Standing, however, played with Mae Marsh at the Goldwyn Studios in "The Glorious Adventure," and with Pauline Frederick in "The Woman on the Index."

Houdini Arrives on the Coast.

Harry Houdini has arrived at Hollywood, Cal., where he started work at the Lasky studio under direction of Irvin Willat on the big six-reel mystery picture written specially for him by Arthur B. Reeve and John Grey.

INDORSING "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN"

Harry Garson's Screen Version of Rupert Hughes' Powerful Novel, Directed by Marshall Neilan and Featuring Blanche Sweet, Has Premiere on Broadway

By Edward Weitzel

NEW YORK has been waiting for several weeks to learn if her own verdict on "The Unpardonable Sin" would be as favorable as that rendered by Los Angeles and Detroit. Harry Garson's production of the screen version of the novel by Major Rupert Hughes, opened at the Broadway Theatre, Friday evening, May 2, to a packed house, and there was every manifestation of approval. The picture is not without its faults but the story is powerful and the production is far above the average. It has the advantage of possessing a title that excites general interest, and it lives up to the promise of its title. The story is not at all complicated but the pathos of it and the righteous anger it engenders against the authors of the crimes committed in Belgium on helpless women and children gives the theme great strength. Dramatic tension is relieved by flashes of humor that convulse the spectators and are supplied by a resourceful young American refugee, aged ten, whose audacity is enough to dismay the whole Hun army.

The Message from Belgium.

No time is wasted in getting the story started. An American family consisting of father and mother and two daughters and a young student who has volunteered for service with Hoover in Belgium, are the central figures. Mrs. Parcot, the mother, is in Belgium with her daughter, Alice, when the war breaks out. Dimny, the other daughter, is in the United States, and Stephen Parcot, the father, is on an exploring expedition in the Arctic regions at this time. A letter to Dimny from her mother tells of a terrible crime committed by the German soldiers. Mrs. Parcot and Alice have been assaulted by the brutes and both women will eventually become mothers. They ask only to be left to their fate, that their disgrace may be kept hidden.

Dimny's one thought is to get to the sufferers. She starts for Washington to arrange for her passport. An accident to the train she is on causes her to accept the escort of a male passenger to a station on the other side of the small town where the delay takes place. It is late at night and her companion tries to take advantage of the situation. Dimny, overwrought by the horror that is always in her thoughts, falls in a dead faint, and the fellow hurries away. Noll Windor, who is destined to play an important part in her search, sees her fall and carries her into his mother's house.

The Beginning of the Search.

For days she remains in a state of coma and is tenderly nursed by Mrs. Windor. In the meantime, Noll has learned to love the unconscious girl. When she recovers sufficiently to travel she resumes her journey without letting the Windors know she is going. Noll has learned of her mission while searching for a clue to her identity. A member of the Belgian Relief Commission, he starts for Washington. At the capital Dimny learns that passports are not granted to unmarried women. She runs into Noll, explains her difficulty and he offers to go through a marriage ceremony with her. Driven to desperation, she consents. Noll holds strictly to the agreement that the marriage shall be in name only. Once in Belgium, the search for the helpless women is aided by Noll's connection with the commission.

Alice and her mother are on their way to Germany when they see Dimny on a passing truck. Shame seals their lips and the two women are driven onto a cattle train and sent across the border.

Dimny Meets Colonel Klemm.

One of the big dramatic moments comes when Colonel Klemm, the German officer who ravished the sister, meets Dimny. He thinks she is Alice and plans to get her again in his power. Believing that she does not recognize him, he offers to help Dimny and Noll. The girl goes to the headquarters of the general of the district, at Klemm's suggestion, to get her passports verified, and the Hun has her wait in a bedroom on the ground floor of the house.

While these events are transpiring, the mother and sister for whom Dimny is searching are being drawn closer to her. Escaping from Germany they get back into Belgium and are wandering about looking for some sort of shelter when they chance upon a remarkable little chap from Kansas, who boasts the proud name of George Washington Sticker.

A True American.

George is a refugee who was touring Belgium with his mother when war was declared. Lined up against a wall with a company of other innocent and inoffensive men and women, the boy's mother was murdered by the invaders. From then on the orphan had shifted for himself. Freckled faced, quick-witted, and with courage enough to stock a regiment of soldiers young Sticker forces the spectator to believe in him and in his ability to pull himself out of every situation, no matter how great the odds.

When the kid from Kansas dashes across a stream of water with a detachment of Huns close behind him the sheer pluck of the boy demands a howl of delight from the excited beholder. And there isn't any question about his getting away. There wouldn't be any screen left, by the spectators, if he didn't! The scene where he and a Belgian boy-scout march down the street, halt in front of a number of German soldiers, point ahead with their wooden swords as George exclaims, "On to Paris!" and then makes a rapid retreat, to the indignation of the onlooking Huns, is another incident that will never fail to receive its howl of delight.

The Return Home.

It is through the help of this human cyclone from Kansas that Noll reaches Dimny in time to save her from her sister's fate, and the girl's search ends. She is too late to rescue Alice. A German soldier repeats the unpardonable sin against her and only her lifeless body is found. Mrs. Parcot returns home with Dimny, Noll, George, the boy-scout, and two little orphan girls whom George has adopted. The arrival of the explorer in New York sees the family united, and Dimny more than willing to accept Noll as her protector for life.

One of the points to be commended in the picture is the restraint with which the scenes dealing with the unpardon-able sin is handled. The subject is always made clear and this horrible page in the history of Germany is told with unvarnished truth, but is not dwelt upon unnecessarily. Marshall Neilan's direction is of excellent quality and the members of the cast have been selected with skill.

Blanche Sweet's Fine Performance.

Blanche Sweet is the featured player. Her performance of both Dimny and Alice is finely imagined and as adroitly carried out. Matt Moore as Noll Windsor, Wallace Beery as Colonel Klemm, Edwin Stevens as Stephen Parcot and Mary Alden as Mrs. Parcot are the leading members of the support. Wesley Barry as George Washington Sticker deserves a separate mention. If any boy actor ever succeeded in making more out of a part than Wesley does out of Sticker, neither the screen nor the stage has any record of the event.

"The Unpardonable Sin" is a winner up-to-date and there is every reason to believe it will continue on its triumphant way for months to come.

STRENGTHEN EXHIBITORS MUTUAL STAFF

William J. Clark Announces Reorganization of Executive Office Force—No Change in Personnel

WILLIAM J. CLARK, president of Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation, announced this week the reorganization of the executive office staff. It was effected without change in the personnel of the organization and in line with the policy Mr. Clark announced upon his election to the presidency of the company in filling vacancies from the ranks.

The office of the assistant general manager, which was created some years ago, was abolished, and the position of director of sales and exchanges created. Mr. Clark appointed S. J. Rollo, sales manager, to the newly created position and announced that henceforth he would, as president, be in active, general charge of the company's affairs.

Organization of Executive Staff.

Mr. Clark announced the following organization of the executive staff: H. C. Cornelius, vice president and secretary of the corporation, will take an active part in the management of its affairs. Mr. Cornelius has arranged his business affairs at Grand Rapids so that he can devote most of his time to Exhibitors Mutual. He will make New York his headquarters.

G. Munro Hubbard, treasurer of the corporation, who has been a member of the executive office force since January 1, will be in complete charge of the company's finances, with S. F. Juergens as auditor. Colvin W. Brown, director of publicity, will have charge of publicity, advertising, exploitation and special sales promotion.

Mr. Cornelius was interested with Mr. Clark in purchase of control of the Mutual Film Corporation from its old stockholders and in its reorganization as Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation. He is associated with Mr. Clark in the ownership of Consolidated Theatres, Inc., Grand Rapids, and has taken an active part in the management of Consolidated's five motion picture houses.

No Radical Changes in Personnel.

"There will be no radical changes in the personnel of our old field organization," announced Mr. Clark. "We have a splendid body of men in our sales force. I have convinced myself, during my six months as president of Exhibitors Mutual, that one of the most wasteful practices of the moving picture industry is a hysterical shakeup of the sales force every few months.

"I announced early in my administration that vacancies occurring in the organization would be filled, so far as practicable, from the ranks, and I was happy that when the first important vacancy occurred that we had a man in the organization who could be promoted.

"I intend to take a more active part in the management of the company's affairs than I have in the past so that there was no need for the office of assistant general manager. I have selected Mr. Rollo to be director of sales and exchanges because has has proven his ability as a member of the organization."

Boston Exchange Men Will Have Hoy Circuit Service

AT its recent meeting the New England Film Exchange Managers' Association engaged the services of the Hoy Reporting agency, which will work under a contract with the exchange men. President Fred B. Murphy and secretary W. H. Jenner, of the Association, had been delegated to investigate the field of credit agencies, and after a survey recommended the engagement of the Hoy Service, which has its headquarters in New York.

The Hoy agency will operate in Boston along the same lines as it now does in conjunction with the F. I. L. M. Club in New York. Exhibitors will have the privilege of entering without charge claims against the exchange men. An arbitration committee will settle disputes between the showmen and the distributors.

At the meeting, the Portland and New Haven exchanges of Famous Players-Lasky were elected to memoersnip in the association.

Broadway Theatre's Attractive Lobby.

With the change of management at the Broadway Theatre came new ideas of lobby display for the biggest "Main Street" on the Western hemisphere. The "museum" type has been replaced by a most artistic display for "The Unpardonable Sin," installed by the Kraus Manufacturing Company, which specializes in this class of ornamentation.

Pictures of Blanche Sweet and scenes from "The Unpardonable Sin" are fixed in attractive frames. Six small panels are fastened to the main entrance doors and on the wall are eight scenes and portraits of large size and excellent workmanship. These pictures are all done in fac simile oil paintings that give an attractive effect. Gauze drapes trimmed with "gold" lend an added touch of "class" to the entire display.

Finnegan Joins Famous Players.

Frank X. Finnegan, noted short story writer, has been placed under a year's contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to work in the scenario department at the West Coast studio, which is under the supervision of Frank Woods. There are now ten prominent writers connected with the Lasky scenario department.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Los Angeles Correspondent Features Cheese in His Scenario Seance on Morosco Lot

By Giebler

MOROSCO Studio—Chas. Eyton, general manager—fine chap, didn't pull secretary stuff, showed me around plant himself. (Give him good write-up.) M. Clark working—V. Martin will be working next week. Bob Vignola will direct.

V. Martin has fine Persian cat named Dixie (get picture Wednesday). Walter Edwards directing Clark in Clyde Fitch comedy "Girls." Making scene in kitchenette.

M. Clark: "First time I ever acted with a cheese." (Make joke about strong support—old stuff, but always good.)

All Right, Here's Your Cheesy Joke.

Play up Edwards—works very quietly but smooth as oil—fast—made four scenes and three close-ups in time other directors would take to fiddle around. (Maybe cut this out—might make other directors sore.)

Joe, the electrician, gets unexpected shot of juice. Mrs. Una Nixon Hopkins best art director in business—subtle touch—great on atmosphere—things no man could think of. (Quote Eyton on this.)

Frank E. Garbutt, James Van Trees, Hal Young, cameramen. Young came from New York with Clark.

Inspected Clark's dressing room—whole cottage devoted to star.

The Safe Is Strong Enough.

Tom locks cheese up in safe. (Might work in strong stuff here.)

Modern laboratory—turns out 60,000 feet film a day—complete, from title to tailpiece. Frank Biggy, expert in charge.

Big stage across street from main studio—prop rooms—very complete. Planing mill makes all moulding and mill work used in sets. Expert organ maker here—use him for fine finish to woodwork in sets. Eyton says sets best in business—believe him.

Scenario dept. across street. Three writers—Julia Crawford Ivers, head—fine record—Alice Eyton, sister of Chas. —Edith Kennedy. Eyton says all do fine work.

Scenes—Taking grandfather's picture down from Wall—shaking down china cat for jitney—"A button, and a male button at that." Kid curlers, powder puffs, toothbrushes, girl atmosphere. Mary Warren working with Clark—Helene Chadwick—Harrison Ford supporting lead.

M. Clark Likes M. Clark's Husband.

Clark pleasing person—not up-stage—appreciate this. Lieut. Williams, husband, here. (Make paragraph about women who talk about husband all the time must be in love with him.) (Work in stuff about seeing Miss Clark in Peter Pan at Old Suburban Garden, St. Louis, before she went into movies—and about Marguerite Clark Theatre on Olive near Sarah street. Proprietor of candy store on corner said: "There is one sweet little lady as well as a fine actor. Paid people around theatre out of her own pocket when company busted up. Wouldn't let any of attaches lose a cent. Didn't have to do it, either, just good-hearted square little kid.")

The above is not intended as an imitation of a chapter heading of a De Morgan novel—it is a scenario of a Rubbernecking trip to the Morosco studio, a thrilling tale with a Camembert cheese as a strong heavy—there it is! I got that off my chest early in the game. I just can't keep the wit from cropping out that way—it's a gift.

But to get on with the continuity.

Here We Get More About Cheese.

The Morosco studio is on Occidental —wait a minute. Just to show you how hard I work, and how I try to give the readers of this column a good run for their money—I stood around on a corner for an hour, hoping that some of the road lice that infest that neighborhood would get into a smash-up so I could make a crack about the studio being situated on Accidental instead of Occidental Boulevard.

But nothing happened.

Rubbernecker Never Stretches Truth.

Of course I could fake something up—I've got a wonderful imagination that way—but my strong love and veneration for verity will not allow me to do this, so you will have to go without any pun on Occidental, accidental or otherwise.

It was a typical Sunny California spring day—shivery. There was a high fog—there is a difference between a high and a low fog, but it would take more time, space, ability and profanity than I possess to speak at length on either—it was one of those dark, clammy, goose-bumpy days that made P. A. Powers and Myron Selznick say what they did, or words to that effect, about Los Angeles not being any better place than New York to make movies.

There are only two companies operating at Morosco now, since Norma Talmadge went back East, and of the two, only one was working.

Vivian Martin Between Pictures.

Vivian Martin was between pictures, a fact I regretted very much, because I have never had the pleasure of seeing Miss Martin in action. But she promised me a picture of herself and her cat, Dixie, which took away a little of the disappointment—and allowed me to inscribe the name of C. O. Post in letters of shining gold upon the roster of "still" men who keep their promises by getting pictures out when they say they will.

Marguerite Clark and her company was at the studio, working on Clyde Fitch's comedy, "Girls."

All new arrivals on the coast speak in most glowing terms about our climate, if they can be interviewed soon enough after their arrival.

Miss Clark had been here only two weeks. I interviewed her with this in mind.

Please Page The Booster Club.

"Miss Clark," I said, "everyone who comes out here from the bleak and chilly East has many nice things to say about our climate. You are expected to use works like 'superb,' 'delightful,' 'glorious' in speaking about our weather. The phrases 'God's country,' and 'golden sunshine' are also very appropriate. Go right ahead now and rave as much as you like, with the assurance that your remarks will be quoted verbatim."

Everything's Peaches with Vivian Martin and "Dixie," and the Same Is True with Hal Young, Cameraman; Marguerite Clark, Star, and Lt. H. P. Williams, Husband.

Miss Clark looked thoughtful, then said:

"I like the fruits, the flowers and the photography of California very much."

And never a word about our weather! I had waited too long. You have to catch them early to get the kind of stuff the Native Sons and the coast defenders like to hear.

Miss Clark is a clever diplomat as well as a clever actress. That remark was one of the best examples of passing the buck I have ever listened to.

Again Friend Husband Enters.

"I am having a good time, though," Miss Clark admitted, "going to ball games—my husband is a regular fan, and I am fast becoming one—and Mr. Eyton and the entire studio staff are making things nice and pleasant for me.

"You ought to see my dressing room—or rooms, rather, there is a suite of them. They have fitted up an entire cottage just for me."

And Miss Clark and Mr. Eyton took me over and showed me through the dressing rooms, complete, practical, artistic, dainty, comfortable, convenient, and all furnished in blue. Blue hangings, blue draperies, blue china; canary birds in the windows, and flowers in tall vases and short vases and in bunches.

I was in hopes that we would find Lieutenant Williams, Miss Clark's husband, but I never got to see anything of him but his smoke.

"He's been here," said Miss Clark, as we passed from room to room, "I recognize the scent of his cigarettes."

But we never found him.

Cheese Again Hogs the Act.

After this I saw Miss Clark make several scenes for "Girls." First, with the Camembert, a cheese with a vigorous and forceful personality.

The scene was shot in the kitchenette. Miss Clark and Mary Warren are looking around for something for supper. There is nothing to eat but cheese. "Maybe it will do," says Miss Clark. She opens the cheese box. No, it will not do. Decidedly not.

Miss Clark's work when she decided that the cheese would not do was a fine bit of dramatic acting, quite impressive, in fact. I wondered how she did it, it looked so true to life, so real. The expression on the star's face was exactly the expression one uses when one passes a glue factory or a rendering works.

A few minutes afterward, when Director Edwards said to the property man, "Joe, take the cheese and lock it up in the safe," and Joe took the cheese and passed by with it, all was clear.

Cheese Wasn't Young Enough to Last.

I do not wish to say that Miss Clark is not a good actress—her record on both stage and screen attest to great artistry and great ability—but I do say that almost any one could have acted with that cheese. The merest novice could have opened that box and said, "It will not do" in firm and convincing tones, accompanying the words with a facial expression that would have left no doubt on the minds of those who saw her of the deadly earnestness of her work.

After the cheese episode the girls decide to shake down the bank, a little china cat with a slit in its back.

Miss Clark rattled the cat.

Button, Button! She Got the Button.

"There's something in it," she declared. "I hear it rattle." Mary Warren heard it rattle, and an ecstatic smile spread over her face. The something in the cat's back rolled out into Miss Clark's hand and she held it aloft.

"A button! A male button at that! Away with it!" A flip, and the button was gone.

All clever stuff, with indications that "Girls" is going to boil up into every bit as good a movie as it was a speakie.

Much That Is Left Unwritten.

The trouble in making out a synopsis of an article of this kind is that about one-half of the things in the synopsis do not get mentioned.

I wanted to say quite a few things about Charles Eyton being a regular guy, and I could have raved on and on about Marguerite Clark being such a friendly little person who has not allowed her success and popularity to go to her head, but I don't want to establish a precedent by stretching this Rubbernecking too far.

From the Robust Gentleman on the Left Whose Wavy Locks the Wind Caresses

To the ditto gentleman on the right, we have with us Smiling Bill Parsons, W. H. Hayward, Henry Walthall, Isadore Bernstein, and Jack Dodge, all pleased that the National Studio was the plant to go over the Bond top first for the third successive time.

Nebraska Towns Fighting for Sunday Opening

HERE and there over Nebraska cities and towns are starting fights for Sunday opening. Elections to be held during May will decide the question in some instances, while the question is at present up to the local city administration elsewhere.

Probably the most important fight is at Lincoln, the capital city of Nebraska. Exhibitor L. M. Garman is the chairman of the showmen's organization waging the fight. The Omaha Film Board of Trade has voted financial aid to the Lincoln exhibitors. Newspaper space is being used to advertise the cause of the open theatre.

In Fremont, Neb., where an "open Sunday" city administration was recently elected, nothing has been done by the new city officials toward opening the motion picture houses on Sunday. Local exhibitors are getting ready to fight for their rights.

Beatrice and North Bend, Neb., larger than the ordinary country town, are now in the midst of fights for Sunday opening. At Falls City, Neb., the showmen have opened their theatres on Sundays and are getting away with it.

The Omaha Film Board of Trade has made an offer to help any city or town in the Omaha territory in its fight for Sunday opening.

It is expected that this aid will be frequently extended as the fight progresses.

Minneapolis Film Board Condemns Booking Agencies

THE Minneapolis Film Board of Trade has gone on record as being strongly opposed to the practices and principles of so-called booking agencies. Explaining this action, taken at a recent meeting, the Film Board of Trade issued a statement to exhibitors as follows:

"The reason for this action on the part of the members of the board is because all organizations and booking agencies to date have not been conservant to the interests of the industry. Obviously, the individuality of the distributor and the exhibitor is lost by a combination of this kind. The exhibitor, in his turn, relinquishes his right to patronize the distributors and the subjects which, in his judgment are deserving of exploitation. The distributor, in turn, loses the right to choose the outlet for his product.

"The board's attention has been called to the promotion of two or more joint booking organizations, and in a spirit of co-operation and foresight, we sincerely recommend thorough investigation of the advantages, so-called, by these organizations, before entering into final agreement."

Diplomat Visits Metro Studio.

Frederick Oederlin, Swiss Charge d'Affaires at Washington, who transmited the diplomatic exchange between Germany and the United States which terminated the world war, turned briefly from diplomacy to motion pictures when he paid a visit to the Metro studios in Hollywood. Mr. Oederlin, accompanied by Louis Henri Junod, Swiss Consul at New York, enjoyed his glimpse of movie-land during a vacation trip to Southern California.

ILLINOIS FILM MEN HOLD CONVENTION

Motion Picture Association Fires Opening Gun In Campaign Against Buck Censorship Bill

THE convention of the Motion Picture Association of Illinois, as announced in my last letter, was held in the Hotel Morrison, Tuesday afternoon, April 29. It was largely attended by film exchange men, exhibitors and supply men, and all the officials of Chicago Local 110, I. A. T. S. E., were also present. The Chicago dailies were all represented.

The roster of officers was completed and is as follows: W. W. Watts, of Springfield, president; Peter J. Schaefer, vice-president; Dr. Sam Atkinson, Evanston, field secretary; Harry Loper, Springfield, secretary; W. D. Burford, Aurora, treasurer, and Louis F. Jacobson, Chicago, general counsel.

Buck Bill Campaign Outlined.

Mr. Jacobson occupied the chair during the proceedings and he outlined the plan of campaign, which will be carried vigorously to every section of Illinois, so that every man and woman in it will become thoroughly acquainted with the purpose of the Buck censorship bill. To effect this thoroughly a committee representing the Motion Picture Association will be formed in each of the fifty-one senatorial districts in Illinois, and will carry on the work of advising moving picture patrons of the dangers menacing their chief amusement.

Petitions regarding censorship will be placed in the hands of the public for signature, in answer to the question, "Are you for or against?" and these will be collected and submitted in mass to the members of the House of Representatives at Springfield. Each of the senatorial districts has three representatives and one senator, and all will be acquainted with the stand of their constituents on the Buck bill.

Thousands of Slides Distributed.

Thousands of slides, made and furnished by the N. A. M. P. I. in New York, were distributed abong the exhibitors present at the meeting, and will positively be shown in all their theatres during the campaign. A flood of editorials and other articles showing the evils of censorship is also being furnished exhibitors throughout the state for publication in their home papers, so that few voters can escape a thorough acquaintance with the purpose of the Buck bill.

Dr. Sam Atkinson delivered an able address on censorship before the convention, which was roundly applauded again and again, and many of those present congratulated him heartily at its close. A motion was immediately made and passed that the Atkinson speech be printed and a copy mailed to every senator and representative in the Illinois Legislature, and also to every editor throughout the state.

Public Hearing on Bill May 20.

It has been learned that the Judiciary Committee of the House has arranged that the proponents of the Buck Bill will have a hearing by invitation before that committee Wednesday, May 14, the metting being held out of session.

It also became known that the Judiciary Committee has invited the Moving Picture Association of Illinois to a public hearing before the Legislature while the House is in session on Tuesday, May 20. The association accordingly has issued a call to all branches of the trade to attend a convention which will be held at Springfield on that date. A large gathering from all parts of the state will be in attendance, judging from present indications.

Goldwyn's President Is Encouraged by Outlook

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, stopped over for a day last week on his return from Los Angeles to New York.

During a brief conversation with him at the Hotel Blackstone, Friday morning, May 2, before he left for New York, he had little to say except that he had spent four of the five months just passed at the Los Angeles studios, for the sole purpose of gearing up his producing companies to the pitch required to meet the requirements for the longer runs which worthy features must have, in order to maintain solvency for the producers.

He has taken pains to impress his working forces that the time consumed in making a picture must be held subordinate to the merit of that picture—both in drawing power and as a work of art, so that the owners of the better class of picture theatres can run it for at least a week to good paying business. He is confident that in point of stories, stars and supporting companies, direction and happy local atmosphere, the forthcoming product of Goldwyn will surpass all former efforts.

The truth of this, he holds, cannot fail to be established by exhibitors for themselves, as the appeal of each story, combined with all the essential requisites just mentioned, cannot fail to create a tide of popular favor.

Mr. Goldwyn expressed himself as being encouraged by the present outlook, which shows a broader vision on the part of the exhibitor. With the constantly increasing number of high class moving picture theatres and the growing tendency of intelligent exhibitors to shelve the ruinous practice of one-day runs, Mr. Goldwyn is gradually substituting a healty optimism for the disintegrating pessimism which threatened him a short time ago.

Shurtleff to Produce in San Francisco.

H. L. Knappen, manager of Select's San Francisco office, was seen last week during the short stopover made by him on his way from New York to the coast. He was accompanied by C. E. Shurtleff, formerly sales manager for W. H. Hodkinson and now head of the Jack London Pictures Corporation, which controls the exclusive picture rights to all the stories written by Jack London. Mr. Shurtleff will begin work in the near future on the first of the London productions, "The Mutiny of the Elsinore." All the pictures will be produced in San Francisco.

Mr. Knappen answered a query concerning the present condition of the picture business in San Francisco by exclaiming: "Fine! Great! Wonderful! The fans are actually moving picture mad out our way. All meritorious productions are showing to capacity. Admissions run from 10 to 15 cents in the smaller houses and to 50, 60 and 75 cents in the larger. 'Cheating Cheaters,' with Clara Kimball Young, showed to capacity for a week at the California Theatre."

Dee Robinson Building Big Theatre in Peoria

DEE ROBINSON, owner of the Apollo, Hippodrome, Empress, Princess and Duchess theatres in Peoria, was in the city last week and interested me not a little in his plans for a big, modern picture house on the best site in the city. He had just closed a 99-year lease on a plot which has a frontage of 177 feet on Main street and 144 feet on Madison, and on this he will erect a building costing $250,000.

Architect C. Howard Crane, of Detroit, has charge of the plans and construction, and work will begin at once. It is expected that the theatre will be in readiness for opening January 1, 1920. The new house will seat 2,200 people.

Incidentally, Mr. Robinson mentioned that he uses an escalator at the Hippodrome Theatre to take his patrons up to the balcony. This is the first instance, to my knowledge, of the use of this device in a picture theatre.

Merit Film Company Buys Rights to Garson Feature

M. M. KRAVETZ, general manager of the Merit Film Company, Denver, with headquarters in the Guardian Trust Building, spent a few days in the city during the week of April 27, in consultation with Harry Garson's representative concerning a publicity campaign for "The Unpardonable Sin," the rights to which have been purchased by the Merit Film Company for the states of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico. Mr. Kravetz, personally, has purchased the rights for Nebraska.

It is the intention to present the feature by means of road shows, two of these being assigned to the mountain states and two exclusively to Nebraska. The campaign will start about May 15, and top prices for the shows will be 75 cents and $1.00.

Mr. Kravetz has had considerable experience in the exchange business. He started with Universal, in the Denver office, in 1910, as salesman in that city and tributary territory, and filled a similar position with the World, and later with Metro.

Louis Goldstein, partner with Mr. Kravetz in the Merit Film Company, is also well known to exhibitors in the mountain states, having been manager for Universal in the Denver office for some time. Mr. Goldstein only recently returned from service in an officers' training camp for engineers, being honorably discharged as second lieutenant.

New House for East St. Louis.

H. G. Redmond, owner of Redmond's Majestic, East St. Louis, was a visitor at the convention of the Motion Picture Association of Illinois, held in the Morrison Hotel last week. During a brief conversation he informed me that he was showing to very good business at the Majestic, which seats 1,200 people. The prospects are so encouraging that Mr. Redmond has decided to build a new house that will seat 2,000. Owing to the present high prices of material, work on the new theatre will be postponed until prices have lowered, but he expects to have it all ready for opening in about a year.

The Majestic is the leading picture theatre in East St. Louis and caters to the best people in the city.

"Mickey" Continues Big Run in Illinois.

F. O. Nelson, general manager of the Mickey Film Company, reports continued remarkable business for that attractive feature in territory outside of Chicago, in which it is being exclusively shown at present.

The writer read a recent telegram from Miss Olga Heilsted, owner and manager of the Marquette Theatre, La Salle, in which she states: "Broke all house records. Pouring rain all day. Come again with another like it." The Marquette seats 450 people and the telegram refers to the first day of a three-day run.

American Film Company Cheers Writers of Scripts

A LETTER from John F. Bonnell, an "outside" script writer, of Oxford, Ga., to the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, has given rise to an interesting announcement by General Manager R. R. Nehls, of that organization. Mr. Bonnell's letter follows:

"Dear Sirs: May I ask you to note this paragraph from a letter received by me from the editor of a motion picture monthly:

"'It is no secret at all that producers very seldom purchase or produce a story written by an outside amateur writer. I think everybody, the producers included, would agree that great improvement is needed in the screen stories. I doubt, however, that this improvement would come by buying more stories from amateur writers.'"

In his reply to the editor Mr. Bonnell made the following query: "Since that is the settled practice and purpose of producing companies, why are amateur writers encouraged to write by producers who announce they are in the market for stories?"

Mr. Bonnell concludes his letter to the American Film Company as follows: "Submitted to you by one of those who imagined a market implied possible negotiation, who were driving to get beyond the 'amateurity,' but for this shell shock."

"Outsider" Has Chance Says Nehls.

"For Mr. Bonnell's encouragement, we hasten to assure him that we, too, believe a market implies possible negotiation," says Mr. Nehls. "The plan in force in our scenario bureau compels us to look to the market for material. In brief, our plan is this: We will not purchase a story from a staff reader, and on the other hand, we will not allow staff writers to read submitted scripts.

"The reason for this policy is plain. It is not without the bounds of possibility that a staff reader in submitting an original story for consideration may incorporate an idea which might have been contained in a story previously read and rejected, and which had been submitted by an outside writer. It is a case of the sub-conscious mind asserting itself innocently.

"We maintain that a man or woman who reads stories day after day, in an effort to find suitable screen material, cannot help absorbing an idea here and there without any intent ultimately to make use of it. Consider then the risk we would run, were we to allow staff readers to submit stories occasionally. The sub-conscious mind might resort to an idea that had been absorbed months previously from a rejected story. We might buy the story and produce it. The outside writer might recognize his original idea as having been apparently plagiarized, and although there might not have been any wilful intent to appropriate the idea, the fact remains that the company would be liable to a lawsuit.

"My advice to Mr. Bonnell and other aspiring writers is to 'keep trying.' If he has the story-telling gift, it will find recognition. If we can use one of his stories, we'll buy it. If not, we'll return it, in which event, he need have no fear that it has been appropriated for future use."

Fox Film Corporation Notes.

The Fox production, "Help! Help! Police!" with George Walsh, who is a big favorite in Chicago and territory adjoining, was shown to exceptionally good business at the Rose Theatre during the week of Sunday, April 27. Numerous bookings for two and three days' runs have also been made in Chicago.

M. Whitmoyre, Fox salesman in Wisconsin territory, was called to his home, in Nebraska City, last week on account of the serious illness of his father. Mr. Whitmoyre rejoined the Fox sales force recently, after receiving an honorable discharge from service overseas for a period of nine months. He has been very successful since his reinstatement, District Manager C. W. Eckhardt has informed the writer.

Chicago Censorship Must Be Fair.

The Chicago Censorship Commission, at its meeting, Friday, May 2, voted to give careful consideration to the protests of producers against censorship. Chairman Hurley gave voice to the prevalent opinion of the members by saying: "I believe these people should be met half way." A motion was carried to have the new city ordinance on censorship so worded as to provide that only portrayal of direct violations of the law would constitute grounds for ordering cut-outs or the rejection of pictures.

Judge Harry M. Fisher proposed that the censorship authorities should act as a critical body as well as a censoring body, and that their opinions on the morality of a film should be published in connection with each picture inspected. The motion was carried.

"Daddy Long Legs" Greatest Yet.

A trade showing of Mary Pickford in "Daddy Long Legs" was given in the Universal exhibition room, in the Consumers' Building, Friday afternoon, May 2, under the management of Harry Weiss and R. C. Seery, who have charge of the Chicago exchange of the First National Exhibitors. The capacity of the projection room was taxed to the utmost so eager was the rush of Chicago exhibitors to view the great production. It is needless to state that the general opinion of those present was in favor of pronouncing the picture the greatest of Mary's many triumphs on the screen.

Orchestra Hall Opens Picture Season.

Orchestra Hall started its summer season for pictures on Monday of last week. The programs will be comprised of Paramount and Artcraft productions, Marguerite Clark, in "Come Out of the Kitchen," being the attraction for the opening week.

FIND WOMAN: AROUSE HER CURIOSITY

That's One First Step in Practical, Everyday Motion Picture Showmanship or in Any Other

SHOWMANSHIP is a form of salesmanship—a highly specialized form of salesmanship; and the secret of filling the seats of a theatre is analagous to the secret of selling any other standard commodity—know your market. Motion pictures are a variable commodity only insofar as individual pictures are concerned. The Motion Picture (Capital M and Capital P) is a standard commodity for which there is a great demand, but it is the exhibitor's job to divert that demand through his own particular box office.

The producers take care of the supply. The supply at the present time is ample to meet the demand—and is becoming more ample all the time.

Empty seats in a theatre is certain proof that the showman-salesman does not know his market. His market is every man, woman and child in his community—and very often in surrounding communities. Therefore it follows that to be able to offer on his market what his market demands, the showman-salesman not only must know his public, but he must also know how to tell them that he has what they want. A close study of newspapers—particularly evening newspapers—will give a fairly comprehensive idea of what interests people. By that is not meant specifically some one thing that is wanted, but what emotions, what appeal, can most successfully be used in getting folks interested in your pictures.

The Woman Holds the Pursestrings.

Psycho-analysis of the widely-circulated evening newspapers and weekly and monthly magazines must prove to the showman that it is to the woman he must direct his advertising appeal. It is the woman who holds the purse strings; who controls the dimes and quarters that pay admissions for the family; who is the head of the house always when it comes to a question as to what movies her family is going to. And there is an unfailing method of reaching woman through advertising—arouse her curiosity and your sale is made.

The eternal feminine has not changed since Eve's times. It was Eve's curiosity that impelled her to pick the apple. Later on, in Greek Mythology, Pandora was the woman who again proved the lengths to which a woman would go to satisfy curiosity. It was she who, having been warned, opened Pandora's Box and loosed on the world all its evils. Helen of Troy was a woman, and her curiosity as to what the mysterious White Horse contained resulted in the fall of Troy. All through the ages we have proof that a woman can be relied upon to seek to satisfy her curiosity. The response of woman to curiosity is unfailing and can be relied upon. It is an appeal that can be coupled up with all the emotions that a human is capable of.

Don't Tell Too Much About Picture.

It therefore follows that an exhibitor dealing in a commodity that plays upon every emotion in the category of sentiment, must make his big appeal to women. And his biggest response will come when he arouses their curiosity.

Often the mistake is made of telling too much about the picture you are to show. While in this manner several additional admissions may be obtained from those who want to see the picture because they know so much about it, it is a better scheme to make them just interested enough to want to know more—to come and see the film for themselves.

Rothacker Accorded Unique Tribute for Print Service

A UNIQUE tribute was accorded Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, by the exchange managers of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in a resolution framed in convention at the Hotel Astor, New York, April 22. The statement given under the signatures of the exchange managers, and officially ratified by Lieutenant Jim P. Anderson, chairman, and Harry Weiss, secretary of the meeting, was entirely unsolicited by Mr. Rothacker, and came as a reward for efficient, prompt and accurate service.

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, the first and largest of its kind in the country, has the contract to make all the prints for First National's pictures. The resolution of the exchange managers who saw daily evidence of the Rothacker service, gave their appreciation for the "splendid cooperation" accorded them, and "for the extremes to which he and his organization have gone—far beyond the usual limits of business practice—to relieve emergencies and assist us in giving satisfactory service to our exhibitor customers."

After stating that no other group of exchanges could boast of "prints with superior tinting and toning, with clearer definition, with more carefully printed lighting effects than those made by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company," the resolution went on to comment especially on the excellent system installed by the Chicago plant for filling emergency orders for prompt and accurate replacements of short lengths of torn or destroyed film.

A copy of the resolution was sent to Mr. Rothacker and to the Board of Directors for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Loan Stunts Aid Bond Sales.

The daily Victory Loan meetings in front of the Aeolian Building, New York, where the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is giving a motion picture attraction of some kind every noon hour have become widely known and are attracting many Victory note buyers.

The stunt of taking motion pictures of bond purchasers and projecting these films on the screen at the Strand Theatre made a big hit, and itself accounted for some $50,000 worth of Victory note sales to date. This stunt has made such a hit with the fans that it will be repeated before the drive is over.

ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN ROCHESTER

To Be Guests of Eastman Company—National Industry Members' Third Annual Meeting September 23

THE third annual meeting of the members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will be held in Rochester on Tuesday, September 23, 1919. This decision was reached at a meeting of the executive committee of the National Association held at the Hotel Claridge Wednesday, April 3, presided over by Walter W. Irwin, chairman, and attended by William A. Brady, president; Richard A. Rowland, Gabriel L. Hess, J. E. Brulatour, P. A. Powers, Paul H. Cromelin and Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary.

In view of the decision which had been previously reached to proceed with the nation-wide organization of censorship, Sunday opening and other national committees during the summer months, it was deemed inadvisable to hold the annual meeting of the members during the summer. J. E. Brulatour, treasurer of the National Association, thereupon extended an invitation on behalf of the Eastman Kodak Company for the directors to hold their meeting in Rochester on September 23, when the members of the board will be the guests of the Eastman Kodak Company, and a private car will be chartered for carrying the officers and directors of the Association to Rochester and return.

Annual Meetings in September.

Under this plan the annual meetings of the members of the Fifth Division for the purpose of naming directors to be elected at the annual meetings will not be held until the third week in September. These meetings will be held at the offices of the National Association, Times Building, New York.

The executive committee unanimously adopted resolutions aproving of the adoption by the National Fire Prevention Association for the protection of motion picture films as formulated by the committee on hazardous chemicals and explosives as an effective means not only of providing safety, but as a practical standard by which to adjust insurance rating problems.

The resolutions are to be presented at the annual meeting of the National Fire Prevention Association to be held in Ottawa next week, at which the Fire Prevention Regulations Committee for the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will be represented by Albert DeRoode.

Other business was transacted, including the presentation of reports showing the association to be in the most prosperous condition since its inception three years ago.

Empire Exchange Managers Hold State Convention

THE first convention of the Motion Picture Exchange Managers' Association of New York State was held at the Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, on April 23. Thirty-five exchange managers of the association, which excludes New York City managers and salesmen, met to formulate ways and means for better co-operation between the distributors and exhibitors.

Exhibitors may file complaints against the exchanges in case of mistreatment, and distributors may do likewise against the showmen, according to the rules of the association. At the convention a grievance committee was named to handle all disputes, while a corresponding secretary and investigator with offices in the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce were also appointed. Bicycling and subrenting practices were condemned.

Officers of the association are Arthur Hopkins, president; George A. Hickey, vice president; R. C. Fox, treasurer; C. A. Taylor, secretary. The convention arrangements were made by Fred F. Hartich, Syracuse, representative of Vitagraph.

Second row: H. R. Wimsatt, Hodkinson; F. S. Jensen, Goldwyn; Mr. Saunders, Metro; F. S. Hopkins, Universal; G. A. Hickey, Goldwyn; R. C. Fox, Famous Players-Lasky; C. A. Taylor, Pathe; R. C. Gardiner, Gardiner Film Syndicate.

Third row: H. S. Gans, First National; Mr. Dobson, Famous Players-Lasky; E. C. Markens, Metro; G. M. Blackman, Universal; F. M. Zimmerman, Gardiner; Thomas Brady, Fox; H. W. Kahn, Metro; F. Frayne, American; F. F. Hartich, Vitagraph.

Held at Syracuse April 23. The names appear in the story above.

Another Promotion in Select Forces.

In accordance with Lewis J. Selznick's announced policy of promotion from the ranks, Walter J. Porges has just been appointed secretary to the director of sales of Select Pictures Corporation Charles R. Rogers. Although a young man in years, Mr. Porges has had quite an extensive experience in the film industry, and has been in Mr. Selznick's organization for a considerable term.

From the San Francisco branch, Porges was sent to Seattle to act as assistant manager there under John S. Woody; when Mr. Woody became field manager for Select, Porges returned to the home office in New York. Later, Mr. Woody was appointed sales manager for Select and Porges assisted him. With Woody's resignation from Select and Mr. Rogers' appointment as director of sales, Porges has been officially designated as secretary to the Director of Sales.

Big Feature Rights Moves.

The Big Feature Rights Corporation, of Louisville, Ky., has just finished moving into its new home in the National Theatre Building, Walnut between Fifth and Center. This building occupies an entire block and the Big Features has the entire second and third floors. It shares the building with B. F. Keith's National Theatre. The house is new, built a few years ago at a cost of $300,000. The Big Feature Company offices will be handsomely decorated and equipped. As the Big Feature Rights holds the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise for Kentucky and Tennessee, this is also the First National's "Old Kentucky Home" and "Down in Sunny Tennessee" address.

To Film Daily Activities of Stars.

A new scheme for the exploitation of his stars and pictures is to be inaugurated by Thomas H. Ince, producer of Paramount and Artcraft pictures, at his new studio in Culver City. Every week a film will be produced which will be called "The Off Stage Film Weekly," and which will show intimate shots of the different stars, Charles Ray, Dorothy Dalton and Enid Bennett and others, at their homes and during their leisure hours. The film will also show how the scenes are filmed and will be in effect just like a visit to the studio. These weeklies will be furnished free of charge to exhibitors of Paramount-Ince pictures.

COMMERCE CHAMBER URGES AFFILIATION

Los Angeles Board Wants Film Men to Get in Closer Touch with Other Business Men of City

THE Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles proposes to give a big luncheon within a few days at which the guests of honor will be people prominently and substantially connected with the film industry. The avowed purpose of this meeting is to bring the makers of moving pictures and the business men of Los Angeles into closer relationship.

It is proposed to effect a complete organization of the motion picture interests inside the Chamber of Commerce along the same lines as the organization of the foreign trade bureau, the trade extension bureau, and other departments of the Chamber, with an expert, to be named by the motion picture men, in charge.

Picture Output Annually $100,000,000.

It has been estimated that the motion picture industry in Los Angeles represents an annual output of not less than $100,000,000. The annual payroll in this city is said to be around $18,000,00, and the annual expenditures for supplies, materials and studio necessaries approximate $12,000,000, or $1,000,000 a month.

Los Angeles is recognized as the world capital of filmdom, and as it is felt that the motion picture industry is in Los Angeles to stay, the members of the Chamber of Commerce believe that it should become affiliated with that association's activities.

George Goldsmith, vice chairman of the membership committee of the Chamber of Commerce, is in charge of the details of arranging for the big meeting.

"Castle Rosamond" to Be a Studio.

Fred Kley, studio manager of the Lasky plant in Hollywood, closed an option last week on Castle Rosamond, a magnificent mansion of about forty rooms, which faces the Hotel Huntington in Pasadena. Kley is holding this property for an Eastern concern which will come West within the month to begin elaborate film productions in Pasadena. The present building will serve as offices and dressing rooms, and a large studio is to be erected in the rear.

Orran Humphrey to Retire.

Orral Humphrey, for many years a Broadway actor, and leading man in Morosco stock companies in the West, and late of the Universal serial, "The Midnight Man," in which he played the heavy role, has retired permanently from the screen, according to a recent announcement from him. Mr. Humphrey, whose screen career ended in a dramatic and tense moment when another villain in the play fired a blank cartridge at him and "killed" him, intends to take up active ranching on his estate in Happy Valley near San Francisco. Before joining Universal, Humphrey played in both Essenay and American pictures, the "Beauty Comedies" having been created by the latter company to feature him. He has also had experience as a director of American and Keystone comedies.

Give Orphan Benefit on Location.

While on location at Palm Springs, California, just last week, making scenes for "The Lone Star Ranger," the William Farnum Company gave a vaudeville entertainment and dance for the benefit of the French orphans at Desert Inn, where the company was stopping. Members of the Farnum company decorated the grounds and took part in the entertainment, and the sum of $300 was realized for the fund.

New Ince Laboratory Plans Approved.

Plans and specifications for a big new laboratory at the Ince plant in Culver City have been approved by Thomas H. Ince, and construction work on the buildings will be begun immediately. The laboratory will enable the Ince company to make all the prints of films for distribution which have heretofore been made at a commercial laboratory, as well as the negatives. A second lighting plant has also been installed at Ince, so that in the event of an accident to one of the plants, the other will always be in readiness, and no delay need be caused in the finishing of work begun.

Newlyweds Give Newlyweds Party.

Being themselves only just recently married, William Parsons and his bride, Billie Rhodes, felt it incumbent upon themselves to give a party for other newlyweds at their home, "Laughter Hall," on the evening of April 26. The four couples who were the guests of honor were William Desmond and his bride, Mary MacIvor; Bert Bracken and Mrs. Margaret Landis Bracken; James Young and Mrs. Clara Whipple Young; and Mr. and Mrs. Earle Williams. Among the guests were many film notables of the West Coast colony. The decorations were of white roses, lilies of the valley and carnations, with miniature brides and grooms of sugar as a novelty.

Henry Lehrman Building a Studio.

Work was begun last week on the new studio in which Henry Lehrman will produce his comedies in the near future. The site of the new film plant comprises ten acres on Washington Boulevard in Culver City, and is located in the neighborhood of the Ince and Goldwyn plants. The administration building will be of Spanish architecture with stucco exterior finish, and the plant will include both glass-enclosed and open-air stages, with property rooms, dressing rooms, and all of the latest improvements in studio equipment. The Milwaukee Building Company has charge of the construction work.

Pickford Buys Beach Site for Home.

Mary Pickford has purchased a lot 100x200 feet on Adelaide Drive, in the Palisade district of Santa Monica, on which she will build a home, which will be shared with her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, and her sister, Lottie Pickford, and Lottie's little daughter, Mary Pickford Rupp. The property was bought from H. M. Gorham, president of the bank of Santa Monica, who has a home near the property purchased by Miss Pickford.

Peacocke Writes Another Sea Play.

Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, author of "Neptune's Daughter," has just sold a scenario based on his story, "The Birth of Venus," to Julius Stern. The story requires many elaborate settings depicting beautiful myths and legends of the sea, and the heroine must be portrayed by a young woman whose perfections in physical beauty must be equalled only by her aquatic and histrionic ability. Captain Peacocke is the author of "Platonic Love," a recent Kitty Gordon release.

Fatty Arbuckle a Baseball Magnate.

Fatty Arbuckle has bought controlling interest in the Vernon Tigers, a baseball club, from Thomas J. Darmody, and will succeed that former head of the club as president. "Puss" Halbriter will serve as vice-president and business manager. Lou Anger, manager of Arbuckle's film affairs, also bought a block of stock in the club and will be one of its directors. Bill Essick will be retained by Arbuckle as manager of the team.

Ince Making "Off Stage" Films.

Thomas H. Ince is making short films depicting off stage events in the daily life of his stars, which will be furnished free to the exhibitors of Ince pictures to be used as advertising novelties and announcements of coming attractions. The films will show Dorothy Dalton, Enid Bennet and Charles Ray in various employments and diversions at their homes as well as during off stage moments at the studio.

Father of Comedian Dead.

Earl Montgomery, of the Montgomery and Rock comedy team at Vitagraph, learned last week that his father, living at Juneau, Alaska, had died, after but one day's illness.

Clock Made of Coal.

Earle Williams has just received a belated wedding present in the shape of a clock carved out of a solid piece of anthracite, and polished so highly that it will not mark the whitest of linen, from D. T. Williams, inspector of the sixth anthracite district of Pennsylvania.

Kinema Theatre Changes Policy.

Manager Dumond, of the Kinema Theatre, has changed the policy of his house by giving only two shows a day during the week and three on Sunday, instead of continuous performances, as formerly. This policy was adopted during the run of "The Unpardonable Sin," featuring Blanche Sweet.

Los Angeles Theatre Notes.

Manager Little, of Clune's Broadway Theatre, is giving all soldiers and sailors in uniform from overseas, free admission to his show.

Billy Elmer, general manager of the Burbank Theatre, has also announced his intention of permitting the boys who have seen service overseas to see a free show upon their showing the little gold service chevron and paying the war tax.

Robert H. Poole, house manager of the California Theatre, and his partner, "Sunshine" Mary Anderson, won the prize, a beautiful silver cup, in the dancing contest held at the Exhibitors High Jinks at the Dome in Ocean Park last Saturday night.

Studio Shots

DOROTHY GISH came back from location one day last week with a case of mountain fever, and work had to be stopped on her picture until she was able to return to work.

Frank Borzage, who celebrated his twenty-seventh birthday a few days ago, was on that day given a contract to direct Fred Stone, who is coming west soon to make pictures.

"The Red Glove," Marie Walcamp's new serial, was finished last week at Universal City.

Sam Polo, brother of Eddie Polo, has taken the role of chief villain in Jim Corbett's serial, "The Midnight Man," upon the retirement of Orral Humphrey from the production.

"The Spitfire of Seville," is the title of Priscilla Dean's new picture, which will be directed by George Siegman, recently returned from France.

Thomas Holding has been engaged to take the part that Albert Roscoe was to have played in Bessie Barriscale's new feature, "Broken Threads." Roscoe became ill and had to give up the part.

Katherine MacDonald Strauss has been granted a decree of divorce by Judge Crail, of Los Angeles, from Malcolm A. Strauss, New York artist.

Earle Williams is working on "The Hornet's Nest," his newest feature for Vitagraph.

John J. Conley, who has been employed in the reading department at Metro, has been promoted to the position of assistant director to Charles Swickard.

Clark Irvine is rallying together all the members of the old Scream Club for a party at the Dome Cafe at Ocean Park on the evening of May 10. The last Scream Club party was held "befo' the wah."

Blanche Sweet leaves this week for New York City.

The Hale Hamilton company from Metro made scenes for "Full of Pep" on the Government freighter, The West Sequana, when that vessel made its trial trip out of the Los Angeles harbor last week.

E. Richard Schayer is collaborating with King Vidor on a new play for Brentwood which will feature Florence Vidor as the star.

Priscilla Dean, who has been dangerously ill with double pneumonia, is reported as being on the road to complete recovery.

Director Henry King has taken the William Russell company to Yoca Lake for scenes in the new Russell picture.

James O'Shea, formerly of the technical department of the Morosco plant, is now acting in the Neal Burns comedies at Universal.

R. A. Walsh has begun an elaborate production of Longfellow's "Evangeline," in which Miriam Cooper will star, at the Fox studio.

Mary Alden has gone to New York to meet her brother who has just returned from France.

William Duncan, star and director of Vitagraph serials, is selecting a cast of players for a new 15-episode serial to be filmed from a story by Cyrus Townsend Brady.

Irving Cummins is leading man for Viola Dana in her coming Metro comedy-drama, "Pliant Patricia."

Harry Houdini will return to the stage in November, after he finishes his work in the films for the Lasky company, according to recent announcements.

Winifred Westover will be leading lady for William Russell in the new production just begun at the American studio.

Frank Lloyd, former Fox director, will have charge of the Geraldine Farrar productions at Goldwyn when the prima donna arrives to begin her picture work.

Enid Bennett begins this week on a new production at Ince on a story by C. Gardner Sullivan, under the direction of Fred Niblo.

Edmund Lawrence, director at the Fox studio in the east, has come to Hollywood to augment the directorial force in the western plant.

Bessie Love, Vitagraph star, has returned from Fresno, where she has been spending a short vacation.

"In His Brother's Place," a dual-role comedy written by Hale Hamilton, will be that star's next feature for Metro.

Fatty Arbuckle's chief topic of conversation these days is the pennant that his ball club is going to win.

Chester Conklin, who has been with the Mack Sennett organization for five years, has gone over to the Fox company to star in Sunshine Comedies.

Elinor Fair, of the Fox company, motored to San Diego during a short vacation following the completion of "Words and Music."

Thomas J. Hopkins, a promising young writer, has been added to the scenario staff at Ince.

Edward J. Le Saint, Fox director, leaves next week for a visit to his old home in Cincinnati.

George D. Baker, Metro director, left for New York on May 2, but will return later in the summer to direct special productions now being planned.

Negotiations are under way between Anna Nilsson and a firm of film producers whereby Miss Nilsson may soon become a star at the head of her own company.

Frank E. Woods, Lasky supervising director, leaves on May 7 for a three weeks' stay in New York.

Harry Carey has begun on "The Man of Peace," under direction of Jack Ford.

Ruth Roland poured tea at an entertainment given on April 28 by the emergency committee for the relief of returned soldiers and sailors.

Walter I. Percival, who has just finished work in a May Allison picture at Metro, has gone to Connecticut to spend the summer on his farm.

Howard Hickman, director, and husband of Bessie Barriscale, who has been seriously ill of pneumonia, is recovering.

Ethel Ritchie, former leading woman in Balboa films, is supporting Mary McLaren in "The Weaker Vessel."

Robert Warwick received notice last week that he has been promoted to the rank of Major in the United States Army Reserve.

Herbert Standing is supporting Tom Moore in "Lord and Lady Algy." Naomi Childers is Lady Algy.

Prince Paul Troubetsky, the famous sculptor, was a visitor at Universal City last week.

Harry Depp, Christie comedian, is making four-minute speeches in the theatres of Los Angeles and vicinity in the interests of the Fifth Victory Loan.

Eddie Polo, having finished a series of two-reel westerns, is spending his vacation at Catalina Island.

Reggie Lyons, for a year in the U. S. aviation service, is back beside the camera at Vitagraph.

Mary Miles Minter and her mother have gone to New York to complete details of a new contract for Mary.

J. L. Frothingham, general manager of the B. B. Features, has bought the screen rights to "The Luck of Geraldine," by Kathleen Norris, for a Bessie Barriscale feature.

May Allison's new picture for Metro, which was produced under the title of "Orchestra D-2" will be released as "Castles in the Air."

Lloyd Ingraham, who directed the recent Lewis Stone production, has been engaged to direct Ince pictures featuring Douglas MacLean.

Claire Du Brey is supporting Frank Keenan in his latest production.

The purpose of Moving Picture World is to help exhibitors make money out of their pictures. There is value received, over and over again, in every issue of a $3 subscription.

"Fires of Faith" Opens at Harris Theatre, New York

THE Salvation Army picture, "Fires of Faith," presented by Jesse Lasky and produced by Famous Players-Lasky, opened Monday night, May 7, at the Harris Theatre, New York, to a packed house, and was a success in its own right and also in the special features of its presentation. The real novelty of the occasion, and one of the biggest hits, was the address made by Colonel William McIntyre in behalf of the Army and Commander Evangeline Booth. Briefly and simply the Colonel told of the Army and what the picture to be means to it. At the close of his remarks he asked a blessing on the work "Fires of Faith" would do for the organization and the good it would accomplish for the cause of humanity.

An appropriate setting for a song entitled "Fires of Faith" was next introduced, and the number was given by June Day and a male quartette. This part of the program was in the nature of a prologue and was designed and executed by Captain David Kirkland.

The reception given the picture and the interest manifested in following the story indicated that "Fires of Faith" is a fine example of moving picture making regardless of the sentiment attached to its birth. The engagement will extend for an indefinite time at the Harris.

Houlton, Maine, Has New Motion Picture Theatre

HOULTON has a brand new theatre, the finest the town has ever known, and its opening during the past week was one of the red letter events in the history of that thriving community. The Temple theatre, which is located in a new building erected by the late William F. Buzzell, at a cost of $80,000, accommodates 798 persons. Not only is it a great addition to the beauty of the town, but it fills a long-felt want, and is bound to be a great drawing centre. The depth of the lower floor is entirely given to the theatre, with offices in front. There are offices on the second floor and the third floor is to be utilized as a Masonic hall, with a large reading room, banquet hall and kitchen, an armory and many other smaller rooms.

NEILAN TO START FOR CIRCUIT JUNE 1

First of Eight Productions for First National Will Be Adaptation of Book Now in Ninth Edition

WITH one of his productions playing to record business as one of the greatest successes of the season, with another just concluding two and three week seasons in first run theatres in every territory, and with a third big special of which he is the director on the verge of release, Marshall Neilan on June 1 will become an independent producer and director. Active work will begin on the first of the minimum of eight special feature attractions he is to make under the terms of his contract with First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Three Big Attractions Last Year.

Mr. Neilan's record as a director in the last year is perhaps without equal in the producing branch of the industry. The first of the three big specials which he has directed in that time was "The Unpardonable Sin." This has broken house records in principal cities at high prices. The second production is Mary Pickford's "Daddy Long Legs," which will have its pre-release runs starting Sunday, May 11. The third is the adaptation of the story, "Kingdom of Dreams," starring Anita Stewart. Mr. Neilan will complete the production of this on May 24. It will be fourth in the series of Anita Stewart special attractions to be distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Big Money Involved.

The aggregate of the sums paid for the screen rights to these three famous stories intrusted to Mr. Neilan for production totals almost a quarter of a million dollars. To each, in screen form, he has given the human touches which have been among the outstanding features of their action. All of the novel and unique situations in "The Unpardonable Sin" are the conceptions of Mr. Neilan. In producing "Daddy Long Legs" he has given even greater evidence of his peculiarly individual method of interpreting humor and pathos. With Mary Pickford in the role of Judy Abbott, "an orphan mothered by an ash can," he has built round her experiences in the John Grier Home for Orphans innumerable bits of action made plausible and human by his genius for the unusual.

Neilan's first production for First National will be an adaptation of a famous book, now in its ninth edition. Announcement of its title will not be made until Mr. Neilan begins work on it. His contract for distribution does not provide for stars in any of his releases. His productions will depend entirely upon their value in story and direction.

"This," declares Mr. Neilan, "is the acid test for any director. An ordinary story can be made reasonably successful with the name of a star. I speak more in reference to gross rentals from exhibitors than I do from the viewpoint of the public. But when a story is offered strictly on its merits as entertainment it becomes a different matter. Then the material must be in its footage or the producer has no alibi.

Mr. Neilan is one of the youngest if not the youngest of the directors with big, recognized successes to their credit. He is little more than thirty years old.

Information received from Mr. Neilan by his personal representative, James Grainger, who is now in New York, indicated that the studios the director is having constructed will be completed and available for use by June 1, so that it will not be necessary for him to begin his initial independent attraction without the facilities he has provided for himself in the plans for the new structure.

"Daddy Long Legs" Requires Long Legging for Location,
So Mahlon Hamilton, leading man; Marshall Neilan, director; Mary Pickford, star, and Charles Rosher, cameraman, rest a while between locations on the first Mary Pickford First National release.

Will Cross Ocean to See Pearson Film.

Louis Meyer, president of the Virginia Pearson Photoplays, Inc., decided, upon the completion of Miss Pearson's first feature, "The Bishop's Emeralds," that he would cable the author, Captain Houghton Townley, who has been serving in the British army, that his story had been adapted to the screen.

Mr. Meyer sent a cable to Captain Townley. It read "Bishop's Emeralds" finished successfully. Sorry you can't see it."

Three days later a cable was received at Mr. Meyer's office at the Theatre Magazine. There was only three words in it: "Will be there. (Signed) Townley.)"

Hart with Johnny Dooley Comedies.

William V. Hart, one of the oldest film men in the business, is now associated with the Johnny Dooley Film Comedies, in the Longacre Bldg., New York, as business manager.

Mr. Hart was one of the first exchange managers of the General Film Company. At the inception of the Mutual Film Company, he became associated with them also in a managerial capacity.

For a number of years Mr. Hart looked after the booking interest of all the big Broadway houses, including the U. B. O. He is enthusiastic in his new connection, and is confident of the success of Johnny Dooley in films.

Quick Work by Kinograms.

The famous Seventy-seventh Division started its impressive march on Fifth avenue, New York, at 10 a. m., Tuesday May 6. Kinograms had posted camera men along the line of march, and at the matinee, the same afternoon, the Palace Theatre showed scenes as part of its vaudeville program. This is accounted quick action even in these days of lively stepping in the industry. Leo Kugel telephoned the above information to Moving Picture World shortly after the Seventy-seventh had marched across the Palace screen.

Theatre Opens with "Oh, You Women."

The new Cameraphone Theatre in Pittsburgh opened on May 1 with the Famous Players-Lasky special production, "Oh, You Women," by John Emerson and Anita Loos, and not with the photoplay stated in the May 10 issue of the World. Attention was called to this fact by H. Buxbaum, special representative of distribution in Pittsburgh.

The Rowland and Clark Enterprise have taken over the Cameraphone and have redecorated it entirely.

CHASING THE DINOSAUR TO HIS LAIR

"The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," Herbert M. Dawley's Single-Reel Super-Special, Is the Opening Number of a Series of Extinct Monster Pictures Now Being Made

By Edward Weitzel

WHEN a man starts out to make a super-special of a single-reel moving picture, he must have great faith in the novelty of his theme and in his ability to bring it to completion. Herbert M. Dawley, the creator of "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," showed himself the possessor of originality and great mechanical skill when he went back to prehistoric ages for the principal actors in his story and made the monsters of the carboniferous era live again after 40,000,000 years. The story of the picture is now a familiar one and spectators in all parts of the United States are marveling at the antics of the diatryma in search of a supper and the fierce fight between the three-horned triceratops and the tyranosaurus—and wondering how the thing is done.

That is a professional secret, of course, and the man who thought the matter out and then proceeded to experiment until his efforts were a success is going to keep that secret to himself. He is not averse, however, to telling how the idea of "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain" first came to him and of his plans for other pictures of a similar nature. Herbert M. Dawley has given the screen an important addition to its usefulness as a means of entertainment as well as of education, and considerable intrest is attached to his personality and to the events in his former career that led him into probing the antediluvian past for the benefit of the silent stage.

One of Uncle Sam's Three Million.

A surprise awaited the interviewer when a meeting was arranged at the office of the World Film Corporation, the distributors of "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," and a tall, well built man, with a pair of keen, gray eyes, walked into the room and was introduced as Major Dawley. There had been no previous intimation that Herbert M. Dawley was an officer in the United States Army and had seen service with the Allies.

"If you don't mind, Major, we will commence at the beginning," was the first remark of the Moving Picture World man after the formalities were over.

"That will be going back a long way, if you refer to the period of the picture," replied the Major, with a smile.

"We'll come to that later," was the response. Just now it will be interesting to know how and where you acquired the special information you have employed in making your first moving picture. Not only must you have made a close study of the natural history of the monsters you have recreated on the screen, but you show a technical knowledge of acting, scenario writing and trick photography that must be the outcome of practical experience. As the author of the story of 'The Ghost of Slumber Mountain,' the actor of its leading part as well as its director and the creator of its remarkable illusion that brings the extinct beasts and birds from the dawn of time again into being you are quite as much an enigma as your picture itself. You have been an actor, that is evident!"

"Yes, but not professionally. I was a member of the Studio Club, of Buffalo, for several years. We all worked hard to make our performances a success. In that way I picked up a number of hints about acting, stage managing and the construction of plays."

"Where did you pick up your knowledge of anatomy? Your monsters give that curious impression of being correctly articulated that only scientific accuracy is able to accomplish even with the uninitiated."

"My profession—I am a sculptor—helped me, and I sought the advice of the best zoologists in this country. Are my credentials satisfactory?"

"Eminently so, Major. How did you first conceive the idea of teaching natural history in so attractive a form?"

The Birth of An Idea.

"I have always been interested in the subject. When 'The Ghost of Slumber Mountain' began to take form in my mind I experimented with an ordinary pocket camera and took a series of photographs which I fastened together and made my animals move by running the pictures rapidly through my fingers, the same as the old Edison kinetoscope. This crude beginning encouraged me to continue, and gradually I developed the method that has resulted in the picture as you see it today. It cost months of labor and, now that the work is completed, I realize that the possibilities of this hitherto unexplored field for the moving picture have barely been indicated. An important step forward in my next picture will be the introduction of full grown human beings in the scenes with the ancient beasts. Comparison between a six-foot man and a monster that towers above him like a tree will be the surest means of making the spectator understand the great size of the brutes of the Mesozoic era."

Major Herbert M. Dawley,
Producer of the "Ghost of Slumber Mountain."

Inserting the Human Interest.

"Your method of putting human interest into your novel way of teaching natural history, Major Dawley, indicates that you have the instinct of the born showman."

The conjuror that produces living mammoths upon the screen did not resent the remark. On the contrary, he took it as a compliment.

"Thank you," he replied, with a pleased look on his face. "I have studied the show business closely enough to know that my picture first of all must be an entertainment. That is why I start off 'The Ghost of Slumber Mountain' with the two little chaps demanding a story of their uncle and lead up to the introduction of the strange beasts by the mystery about the hermit and the use of his magic glasses to look into the past."

"The wonder of the youngsters and their round-eyed awe of the ghost and the fight of the monsters supply the necessary comedy. I had no trouble in getting the boys to enter into the spirit of the thing. To them it was all real."

"It's all real to many of the grown-ups that see the picture, Major."

Disturbing a Doubter.

Once more Major Dawley smiled his assent.

"There was evidence of that the week the picture was shown at the Rivoli Theatre on Broadway," he said. "A couple sat behind my wife and me one evening and their conversation about the picture was amusing. When the first animal actor appeared on the screen the young man, who apparently had some knowledge of moving pictures, refused to be impressed and laughed at his companion for her astonishment at the size of the monster. She could not be convinced that it was all a trick of the camera and her wonder was further increased when the huge beast started to move around.

"'It's alive, I tell you!' she insisted. 'They couldn't make a stuffed animal walk around like that.'

"The wise young gentleman held to his opinion until the diatryma swallowed the snake that looks to be about ten feet long, and by the time the fight started between the tyranosaurus and the triceratops, his belief in his theory was weakening fast.

"'There now!' exclaimed his companion as the fight ended, 'tell me how that's done!'

"'I give it up,' he replied; 'but it sure was some fight!'"

GOLDWYN RETURNS FROM THE COAST

Spent Four Months at Plant in California Looking After Production—Sees Era of Prosperity Ahead

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, has returned to New York after an extended stay at the Western studios of Goldwyn at Culver City, Cal.

"I can only say now," said Mr. Goldwyn on his arrival, "that my trip through the West convinces me that exhibitors everywhere are aware that they face a time of greater prosperity and finer quality in motion picture presentation than at any other period in screen history. Everywhere I saw evidences of confidence and faith in the great future of the picture play.

"New theatres are going up everywhere and a good deal of money is being put into them to give the public greater comfort and greater artistic satisfaction. Naturally this is gratifying to producers, especially if they are doing everything possible to make the photo drama a medium of deep artistic appeal. All of this is a splendid preparation for the great events which we see ahead in screen history of the next few years.

Intends to Lead, Not to Follow.

"I do not want to say any more at this time except that Goldwyn is perfectly aware of the trend of screen evolution and intends to lead in the development, not to follow."

Mr. Goldwyn spent four of the past five months at the producing center of Goldwyn pictures in California. All of this time has been spent in gearing up Goldwyn productions to the standard set for the new Goldwyn pictures. Now the chief executive of the Goldwyn organization will devote his principal effort to co-operating with the Goldwyn distribution system, to make it ready in every way for the comprehensive activity awaiting it in the presentation of the Goldwyn product this coming season.

Famous Players-Lasky District Managers to Meet

IN response to a call issued by Walter E. Greene, vice president and managing director in charge of distribution, a meeting of the district managers and special representatives will be held at the home office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, 485 Fifth avenue, New York, during the week of May 12. Plans for the distribution of the company's product in the coming year will be discussed and perfected at the meeting.

Coincident with the issuance of the call for the meeting, Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution, has announced the following promotions in the department:

Frederic Gage, formerly sales manager, has been promoted to the position of secretary to Walter E. Greene, vice president and managing director in charge of distribution.

Sidney R. Kent, formerly special representative in supervision of the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines branches, has been promoted to the position of sales manager and took up his new duties in New York May 1.

Myron H. Lewis, formerly manager of the San Francisco branch, has been promoted to the position of special representative with permanent supervision of the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines branches.

John W. Allen, special representative, has been placed in permanent supervision of the Chicago, Detroit and Minneapolis branches.

John W. Hicks, Jr., has been appointed manager of the Minneapolis branch. Mr. Hicks was formerly branch manager for Goldwyn at Minneapolis and previously had been associated with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the St. Louis and Omaha offices.

Those who will attend the meeting in New York next week are the following district managers: Harry Asher, Boston; W. E. Smith, Philadelphia; C. E. Holcomb, Atlanta; Louis Marcus, Salt Lake City; Herman Wobber, San Francisco; and the following special representatives: H. W. Buxbaum, Pittsburgh; John W. Allen, Chicago; Myron H. Lewis, Kansas City.

B. P. O. Elks Sponsor Film for Disabled Service Men

THE B. P. O. Elks, through its War Relief Commission, has entered the motion picture field. This was announced at a recent meeting of the Commission, at which it was stated that a fund of $50,000 had been set aside for a motion picture program to be used as publicity for the Federal Board of Vocational Education, an institution created by the Government to aid disabled soldiers and sailors.

The program will consist of a five reel feature entitled "The Greater Victory," a three-reel subject and a two reel educational.

Herbert E. Hancock, director general of H. and H. Productions Inc., was chosen to produce the feature.

Mr. Hancock chose as his vehicle a story by R. J. Huntington, and contracted with Claire Whitney for the leading role. The story deals with two professional baseball players who, after being crippled in the war, are offered the helping hand of Uncle Sam through the Federal Board, which trains a disabled man for a job, pays him while learning, and then sees that he is given a position.

Oliver Films Signs Lease for an Additional Studio

OLIVER FILMS, INC., announces through Harry Grossman, vice-president and general manager, that plans for increased production on an elaborate scale have been perfected, calling for the addition of studio space. A lease has been signed for the studio which immediately adjoins the one already being used by this company.

Having completed "The Carter Case" serial, the company intends to continue the production of serials and is now busy building sets for a new episode picture based on the Craig Kennedy scientific stories which are being prepared for the screen by Arthur B. Reeve and John W. Grey, the name of which will be announced shortly.

To Broaden Scope of Production.

In this connection, I. Oliver, president of the company says: "We intend to broaden materially the scope of our production and will soon make an announcement that will be of no little interest to the industry. We have found it necessary to secure more space and were fortunate in securing space in the building adjoining our present studio. Mr. Grossman is now touring the country in connection with details of our new line of production and full details will be announced upon his return."

Will Write for Two Talmadges.

Beulah Livingstone, who, since January 1, has been acting as general press representative for the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, will, in addition to continuing in that capacity, also be at the head of the publicity department for the Constance Talmadge Film Corporation. Before signing with Joseph M. Schenck, Miss Livingston acted for two years as personal as well as press representative for Mme. Olga Petrova, and previous to that handled many Broadway productions for Messrs. Elliott, Comstock & Gest.

More Recognition for Ballin.

Hugo Ballin, Goldwyn's art director, has received a request to design for the new Art Theatre, which is to become an institution in Los Angeles. Mr. Ballin, before his association with Goldwyn Pictures, was the winner of the Shore prize of the National Academy of Design, the Hallgarten prize for a figure picture, the Isadore gold medal, the Thomas B. Clark and Shaw awards, and the medal of the Architectural League, of New York for the best design throughout the country of a swimming pool.

PROJECTION AN ART AT INTER-OCEAN

Export Corporation Enhances Films' Worth by Screening Pictures in Elegantly Appointed Room

OVER on Forty-second street, very close to the heart of the Great White Way, the Inter Ocean Film Corporation, whose specialty is the exporting of feature photoplays, with occasional releases in this country and Canada, has something quite out of the ordinary in the way of a screening room.

The room is about 20 by 60 feet. At one end is a Gardner Velvet Gold Fibre screen, upon which a ten-foot picture is projected. A pair of purple velvet curtains pass in front of the screen at the end of each photoplay. These curtains are motor controlled from the projection room, where they are handled by the projectionist.

Primarily the room was designed so that visitors could be entertained in refined, beautiful surroundings and see the screening of the pictures to the best possible advantage. To this end special attention was given the decoration, ventilation, lighting, furnishing, etc., of the auditorium and the projection room itself was planned and equipped with the view of enabling the projectionist to secure the best possible results on the screen.

Room Is Tastefully Artistic.

The length, breadth and height of the auditorium room is so balanced that a good foundation was provided for the decorator. The walls are paneled in Louis XVI. style. Between the panels are pilasters with ornamental caps, and above is a border effect in plaster relief. The wall panels are decorated in mauve color mottled effect. Surrounding stiles, mouldings and pilasters are in complimentary colors. All caste relief ornamentation is in soft pastel shades. The entire work is glazed, giving a quiet, restful effect, combined with richness.

The floor is a special cork, laid in diagonal squares, with parting strips in ivory color.

In the ceiling are four etched diffusing bowls, concealing incandescent globes. These bowls conform to the period of the room. Rich old-gold frames hold them in position. The wall brackets are also in old gold, with small back panels of old blue and ivory wedgewood. Miniature orange-colored silk shades, lined with purple, cover the candles. Ventilation is all that could be desired.

The furnishings consist of a luxurious divan at the rear, set on a raised platform. Leather was dyed to harmonize with the walls, and was used for this divan and some of the chairs. The chairs are all finished in enamel. Those not upholstered in leather are in old blue and gray silk damask. Small memorandum tables and telephones are provided. The screen is surrounded by rich velvet, purple in color. Care was taken that enough of this be used to serve the purpose, without unbalancing the decorative effect of the rest of the room.

Projection Room Remarkable.

The projection room itself is remarkable for an installation of its kind. It is of goodly dimensions for such a plant, has glass-covered ports, all necessary safety port shutters and ample ventilation by means of an adjustable opening in the exhaust pipe of the main ventilation system. Adjoining is a rewinding room, fully equipped for the purpose for which it is intended. The construction is of concrete and the floor, of course, of cement. The walls are painted in harmonious colors. There are toilet facilities, including wash basin with running water for use of the projectionists. Two Simplex projectors, late model, are installed.

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation is very proud of its screening room, as well it may be. The projection room and its equipment would do credit to some of our best theatres and is a thousand per cent. better than the projection room in very many theatres which call themselves high class. Projection is in charge of Donald B. Shepard. It is no unusual thing for Mr. Shepherd to project 12,000 feet of film in a day, same being, for the most part, for the benefit of foreign buyers.

Buys Rights to Garson Film for Kentucky and Tennessee

COL. FRED LEVY, of the Big Feature Rights Corporation, Louisville, Ky., has bought the Kentucky and Tennessee Rights to "The Unpardonable Sin." The corporation will put out the production as a road show at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1, percentage bookings only. Arrangements have been made already for two weeks in Louisville.

This is the second big deal Col. Levy has closed for the Big Feature Rights Corporation. He bought the Kentucky rights to "Mickey." The Big Feature Rights will handle these two pictures separately and will have special men in charge of them.

The two prints of "Mickey" have been booked solid to the middle of June. Kentucky towns that ordinarily hesitate to advance prices for one day, are booking "Mickey" for three days at advanced prices.

Joseph Steuerle, manager of the Walnut Theatre, in Louisville, which played "Mickey" a week has booked it for a repeat of a week. This is the first time the Walnut has ever booked a repeat.

M. B. Stockley of the Princess Theatre Hopkinsville, who shows "Mickey" May 18 and 19 was inclined at first to run it at 15 and 25 cent prices, but has advanced them to 35 cents on reports of the tremendous success of "Mickey" elsewhere, especially in Nashville, at the Knickerbocker.

Guest to Write Stories for Nelson Productions, Inc.

HARRY R. GUEST, for the past three years publicity representative for the John H. Kunsky corporation, controlling ten of Detroit's leading photoplay theatres, has resigned, to become affiliated with H. N. Nelson, of Nelson Productions, Inc., in the capacity of scenario writer and assistant to Mr. Nelson.

Mr. Guest won considerable prominence in film and amusement circles of Michigan through his editorial work on John H. Kunsky's Weekly Film News. Nelson Productions, Inc., are entering upon a new field of advertising with which it plans to cover the United States. The films are called "Posed from Life Photoplaylets," and Mr. Guest will supply the stories required for this enterprise.

SCIENTIFIC SHOWMANSHIP IS NEEDED

Selznick Points Out How Big a Problem Has To Be Solved by Exhibitors—What Select Proposes

SCIENTIFIC exploitation is to be the most important development of the moving picture industry," said Lewis J. Selznick, president of the Select Pictures Corporation. Exploitation was the principal theme of the recent convention of the Select branch managers in New York and since then the organization has been busy developing plans for co-operation with exhibitors along new and advanced lines.

Why It Has Become Necessary.

"Pictures are costing more money than ever before," continued Mr. Selznick. "The public is educated and will not stand for anything but the best. The best is expensive. The exhibitor to be successful must meet this demand and the producer cannot keep going ahead unless the improvements can be made profitable. Popular stars, great stories and high class directors all cost more than ever before. Consequently it is necessary that the exhibitor from whom must come the money to pay for these big productions, shall increase his receipts. The aim of the Select Pictures Corporation always has been to co-operate with the exhibitor and guarantees that he shall make a profit on every production.

"We now propose to help exhibitors become better showmen. We are organizing an exploitation department along these lines. We will have a staff of exploitation experts in every branch office who will go direct to the theatre, study the local conditions and show the exhibitor how he can boom his business.

Showmanship a Big Problem.

"The exhibitor has so many problems on his hands that in many instances he has overlooked one of the most important phases of his business. Staging his shows, making his theatre attractive, exercising care in booking only the biggest attractions and handling all the machinery of his house, he has no time left to devote to scientific exploitation. It makes no difference what he has in his theatre, if he does not get the news to the public, he is not going to get the results at the box office that he deserves.

"Quality in itself is not sufficient—publicity in itself is not sufficient. To get big business it is necessary to have quality and publicity go hand in hand. That is what Select stands for and we expect to open the eyes of exhibitors to possibilities of profits of which they have not even dreamed heretofore.

How It Worked in Practice.

The new Selznick plan of scientific exploitation has been put into operation at Providence during the pre-release showing of "Upstairs and Down," the first of the series of Olive Thomas productions, in the Strand Theatre.

Cooperation with Manager Charles H. Williams, of the Strand, began two weeks before the opening of "Upstairs and Down." First of all, advantage was taken of a movie ball, held at the State Armory in Providence Thursday night, three days previous to the opening. Miss Thomas led the grand march with Governor Beeckman. Lewis J. Selznick immediately assigned Randolph Bartlett of his publicity forces and Morris Safier, of the Boston branch of Select, to the task of conducting a big exploitation campaign.

Every Available Billboard.

The first move was to secure every available billboard in the city and its environs. The total poster display consisted of 110 twenty-four sheet stands, 75 six-sheets and a great number of handsome one-sheet portraits of Miss Thomas, the latter being framed and displayed prominently in stores and other public places. For the first week these stands were used in conjunction with the Movie Ball committee, the dates merely announcing that Miss Thomas would appear at the ball. The day after the ball every stand was posted with new dates, announcing the showing of the picture at the Strand Theatre.

One week before the opening at the Strand came the opening of a big, popular dancing pavilion at Hunt's Mills, in the outskirts of the city, owned by Edward Fay. The Fowlers, professional dancers, were engaged to introduce at this event the "Upstairs and Down" fox trot invented for the occasion and danced to the music of the "Upstairs and Down" song, which has just been published. Then an amateur contest was held, couples imitating the professionals and to the winners was donated a silver loving cup known as "The Olive Thomas Trophy," the presentation being made at the movie ball. The publicity given this contest brought three thousand persons to Hunt's Mills. The name of the picture, "Upstairs and Down," and of the star, Olive Thomas was indelibly fixed upon the minds of three thousand persons in this way.

An "Upstairs and Down" Race.

Through the Providence News, an "Upstairs and Down" marathon race was arranged. This race consisted in a two-mile run through the main streets of Providence, in the course of which the athletes were required to go up and down two sets of specially constructed stairs, set in the street bearing the Olive Thomas, "Upstairs and Down" advertising. Another loving cup was presented at the ball to the winner of this event. For eight days the Providence News carried a seven-column line on its sports page, working up interest in the race and the last two days it gained first page publicity.

Meanwhile, through the ball committee, slides were projected in all the theatres of the city, with this wording: "Olive Thomas says, 'Meet me at the Movie Ball, State Armory, Thursday evening, April 24, and we will dance 'Upstairs and Down,' the new Selznick Pictures fox trot."

Various window displays were obtained from merchants, one of the most striking being designed by the Outlet the largest department store in Providence. This store was featuring a "Gingham Week" and built a staircase carrying out the "Upstairs and Down" idea, from bolts of this material, with the one-sheet portrait of Miss Thomas in the centre.

Unique advantage of the opportunity

Billie Rhodes Has a Fancy Roadster for Her Road-Roaming Romance, "In Search of Arcady."
Which is her newest Robertson-Cole feature, released by Exhibitors Mutual, and not a road show.

for co-operative advertising was taken by the Anthony Furniture Co. This firm featured a one-week "Upstairs and Down" sale. Special articles were listed for all parts of the house, up and down stars, and each item of the newspaper advertising carried the line, "Upstairs and Down," price....$——." This ran all through the week that the picture was shown at the Strand.

Music Stores Featured the Song.

The local music stores stocked up with copies of the song, "Upstairs and Down," and big window displays on the main streets helped in the general boost. "Upstairs and Down" sundaes were served at the soda fountains of the Liggett Drug Stores and the Gibson Confectionery Company.

Cleveland Soon to Have Three More Theatres

INDICATIONS that Cleveland soon will be covered with large neighborhood theatres as well as big downtown houses, were given further notice the first week in May, when announcement was made of the sites and details for two new neighborhood theatres.

The first one to go up will be located at Hayden and Shaw avenues, East Cleveland, and is to be built by the Shaw-Hayden Amusement Company. It will cost $125,000 and be constructed of reinforced concrete, steel and brick. There will be a dance hall in it and also store rooms.

This theatre will seat 1,000 people and has already been leased to J. J. Mellert for ten years. A $20,000 organ will be one of the features.

The other theatre is the Fulton Square, which will go up at Bridge avenue and West Thirty-second street. It will seat 1,500. This house will be constructed by S. Somerfield, contractor, and has been leased for fifteen years to W. G. Montgomery, owner of the Golden Eagle and Camera theatres. The approximate cost will be $150,000.

The deal for the new Rialto Theatre, on West Twenty-fifth street, has been completed and will start at once. This house will seat 1,100. Sam H. Weis is the architect.

"All the King's Horses" Name of New Film Firm

IN the way of odd and distinctive names of concerns incorporating in the motion picture business, first honors unquestionably go to the "All the King's Horses Corporation," which was incorporated with Secretary of State Hugo a day or two ago by William K. Hall, Fred Calvin and Nevin Clark, all of New York. The company begins business on $50,000. Other motion picture concerns incorporating in this State last week were the Victory Theatre Corporation of Herkimer, $40,000; T. P. Griswold, William Manion and F. M. Baker; the M. L. B. Construction Corporation, $50,000, Robert Mintz, Jacob Prager and Jacob Landy, all of New York; the Feature Amusement Company, $1,000, Myron Sulzberger, Edna Egan and Claire Goldberg, of New York; the Hobart Henley Productions, Inc., $100,000, Harry P. Diggs, Frank L. Drum and William Eisenhardt; the Film Investing Corporation of New York, $100,000, Paul Kaiser, Jr., James B. Hopkins and Morris Panger.

DIRECTS ADVERTISEMENT TO AVIATORS

Ralph Ruffner, of the Rialto, Butte, Mont., Puts Sign on Roof of Theatre and Profits Thereby

CREDIT Ralph Ruffner with being the first to advertise his theatre to the birdmen. He is the first to make a direct and exclusive appeal to the airmen. For years it has been customary for tradesmen in the cities to letter the tops of their delivery wagons to advertise to those on the upper floors of tall buildings, but Ruffner seems to be entitled to the credit of being the first to paint a sign on the roof inviting the patronage of the flyers, as the accompanying illustration shows.

The Flying Circus, which has been touring the country in the interest of the Victory Loan, gave an exhibition at Butte, Mont., on Sunday, April 27, and early that morning Ruffner spread on the roof of his theatre white sign cloth letters nine feet high. He had just fastened them down to his satisfaction when the first of the planes appeared, an hour or more ahead of schedule, and Ruff congratulated himself that he was just in time.

Brings Passes to Flying Field.

He hustled out to the flying field with some passes in his pocket to look up the man who was to make photographs for the local Loan Committee and found Lt. Miller, who laughed when Ruff begged him to be sure to get the Rialto sign into the picture he was making. The lieutenant laughed and explained that it was he who formed the advance guard, coming in ahead of the others that the committee could get an early start on the plates.

"I could not overlook your sign," he said. "It was the most conspicuous thing in sight and I wondered who was advertising to get our business."

When the photographs came out the shots showed the theatre very clearly in some of the low altitude exposures and was to be seen even in those taken a mile above the town. Of course the local papers gave the house a triple column display and Ruff made the sign do double duty in appealing not only to the airmen, but to the rest of the town.

The idea came too late to be done in permanent form, but it is now duplicated in paint and will be kept freshly whitened to serve as a guide to cross-country fliers.

Wanda Hawley Signs with Famous Players-Lasky

WANDA HAWLEY, who has done such consistently good work in many Paramount and Artcraft pictures and special productions from the Lasky studio, has just been placed under contract for three years more to play leads.

Miss Hawley did very effective work in Cecil B. DeMille's "We Can't Have Everything," and is again seen to advantage in the same producer's new Artcraft Special, "For Better, For Worse." She plays the leading feminine role opposite Robert Warwick, the star, in "Secret Service," a Paramount-Artcraft special directed by Hugh Ford, and will also be seen as leading woman for Wallace Reid in "You're Fired!"

Possibly her most outstanding work of the year will be in the title role of "Peg o' My Heart," the Hartley Manners play which Olga Printzlau has scenarioized for Paramount-Artcraft special release and which William C. DeMille will direct.

TAX REGULATIONS TO BE ISSUED SOON

Bureau of Internal Revenue Compiles Regulations for Motion Picture Imposts—All Phases Covered

THE regulations surrounding the payment and collection of taxes affecting the motion picture industry will be issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue within a few days, according to officials of the Treasury Department, who are now engaged in their compilation. These regulations will go deeply into all phases of the taxes, and it is declared that, after they have been issued, nobody will have any excuse for not complying strictly and properly with the law.

No quarter will be given persons who attempt to evade payment of taxes. In all regulations now being issued, special attention is paid to possible ways of getting around taxes, and where and how the tax accrues is definitely stated in order that there may be no "misunderstandings" later. In this connection, special attention is being paid to "colorable" sales. Experience has taught the Government that persons liable to tax frequently resort to "gentlemen's agreements" for the purpose of evasion, and this question received consideration last winter when the tax bill was framed.

Tax Based on Market Value of Film.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue declares that if a manufacturer, through the device of a selling branch or in any other manner, contrives to sell under the market price, with the result of benefiting his business or with the intent to cause such benefit, the tax shall be based on the fair market value of the articles and not on their nominal selling price.

The bureau has also ruled that if a taxpayer overpays the tax due with one monthly return, he may take credit for the overpayment against the tax due with a succeeding month. Similarly, if he overcollects a tax, he shall refund the overcollection to the purchaser from him.

Provision is made in the new revenue bill for the exemption from tax of sales made for export.

Rembusch Manager Is Fined.

H. H. Cook, manager of the Manhattan Theatre, Indianapolis, a picture house owned by Frank J. Rembusch, at 136 West Washington street, that city, was fined $10 and costs by Judge Walter Pritchard in city court, Wednesday, April 30, on a charge of storing motion picture films without a permit.

J. H. Hilkene, director of the Indianapolis fire prevention bureau, said enough films were found in the basement of the theatre to have caused a disaster. Under city building ordinances, films cannot be stored in any building used as an assembly hall.

Jack Richardson
Popular Western "heavy" appearing with Texas Guinan in Frohman's two-reelers.

Hale Hamilton and Naomi Childers
In a heart-to-heart scheme to save Hale's heart in Metro's "After His Own Heart."

Flora Finch Returns in "Oh Boy."

The release of "Oh Boy," Albert Capellani's "Filmusical-Comedy," co-starring Creighton Hale and June Caprice, will mark the reappearance on the screen of Flora Finch after an absence of more than one year. It will be recalled that Miss Finch, immediately upon the completion of her work in support of Bessie Love in "The Great Adventure" announced her temporary retirement from the screen in order to devote her entire time to looking after her real estate holdings.

George Walsh Popular in Rio de Janeiro

Unique evidence of the popularity of George Walsh, the William Fox star, in South America was given last month by the production in Rio de Janeiro of a three-act stage comedy entitled "The Rival of George Walsh." The play was written and directed by Francisco Marzullom, one of the best-known actors in South America.

Ralph O. Proctor.

Ralph Proctor's Experience Assists United Artists

AT Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the birth of Ralph Proctor in 1889 preceded that of the motion picture industry by about five years. Mr. Proctor must have been a close student of the intricacies of the screen long before he started with the General Film in 1909. He remained with General until 1915, going then to Metro to take charge of its Chicago office.

Mr. Proctor left the Metro to go in business for himself as head of the Standard Film Company, which connection he discontinued to assume the branch management of the Pathe in the Central West and Coast territories. Mr. Proctor resigned from Pathe to associate himself with Hiram Abrams, general manager of the United Artists Distributing Corporation.

There is something about Ralph Proctor that attracts.

Omaha Board Adopts New Trade Rules.

The Omaha Film Board of Trade, at its regular meeting April 28, adopted trade rules and affiliated with similar boards of trade in Middle Western cities. The principal trade rules are those requiring that all film be shipped C. O. D. unless paid for in advance, and blacklisting any exhibitor who books a picture for one town or for a certain time, then exhibits it in more than one town or for a longer period than that for which it was booked. The exchange men also oppose the practice of canceling pictures for no satisfactory reason without living up to the contract with the exchange.

Pearson Given Farewell Dinner.

Members of the Minneapolis Film colony gave a farewell banquet at the Radisson Hotel in honor of E. R. Pearson, who has resigned as manager of the Minneapolis First National Exchange. All of the Minneapolis exchanges and a number of local picture houses were represented at the banquet. Mr. Pearson, whose successor with First National is J. F. Cubberly, plans to go to New York after a visit in Nebraska.

NO ALBANY NEWSPAPERS DURING STRIKE

Exhibitors Without Usual Advertising Mediums for Several Days—Telephones and Slides Do the Work

Albany, May 7.

WHAT would you do, proprietor or manager of a moving picture theatre, if you lived in a city where every single one of the newspapers suddenly suspended publication because of a strike among the employes? What means would you adopt to advertise your pictures? Does such a condition of things have a tendency to decrease or increase audiences?

This is the predicament which the motion picture theatres of this city of 113,000 population, the capital of the Empire State, suddenly found itself in one day last week when all four of the newspapers ceased to publish on account of differences over wages and hours.

There is no question but that the proprietors and managers of the moving picture theatres managed to get around the difficulty in a way that was decidedly interesting. With several large features booked, the managers found themselves confronted with a situation that offered no means of advertising their shows except through the ordinary slides.

Telephone and Slides Used.

George Roberts, head of the Albany Exhibitors Local, and proprietor of the Hudson avenue house, which plays to a more or less residential clientele, hit upon the idea of utilizing the telephone to the fullest possible extent. Slides each evening announced the features for the week and also informed the people to telephone the theatre each day and learn what pictures were to be shown and to spread the information to their friends.

"The first days, from 9 o'clock in the morning until evening, we probably had from 600 to 800 telephone inquiries," said Mr. Roberts. "The second day there were a thousand or more, the news apparently spreading over the city, and before the end of the week, the buzz of the telephone bell was almost incessant. The other managers adopted the same idea and I think that our audiences were just as large and possibly larger as the days passed, as though we had the opportunity of advertising in the columns of the newspapers. Of course, there were many who came to the theatres for the first show, deprived as they were at home from reading their evening newspaper."

Differences between the newspapers and the employes were at least temporarily settled to-day, the employes having returned to work with the understanding that the situation would be submitted to a board of arbitration.

Audrey Munson in Canada; Can't Get U. S. Passport

AUDREY MUNSON, one time a resident of Albany, and whose father resides in Syracuse, has been refused a passport by the United States authorities and may be forced to remain in Canada, according to a letter from Miss Munson which reached friends in Albany a day or so ago. Miss Munson went to Canada in connection with the examination of her film, "Purity," which was investigated by the Canadian authorities before being passed. Miss Munson is now in Toronto and, according to her letter, she may follow the suggestion which has been made by a number of Canadian friends to remain in Canada, organize her own film company and produce motion pictures there.

According to Miss Munson's letter, she is undecided and rather upset on account of the unexpected development in connection with her passport. She writes that there is a possibility of her going to England for some one of the film producing companies there. Miss Munson was recently received by Sir William Meredith, Chief High Justice of Canada, at Osgood Hall.

Charles Pathe in New York; Plans Several Months' Stay

CHARLES PATHE, Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and head of the great international motion picture organizations bearing his name, arrived in New York on April 29 for a stay in this country of several months' duration. He was met at the dock by Paul Brunet, vice president and General manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc. This is Mr. Pathe's first visit to this country in several years, his last being before the United States entered the war, and at a time when the German submarines were making trans-Atlantic travel dangerous.

As Mr. Pathe was much fatigued from his long journey he asked to be excused from making any statement at the time and left almost immediately for the house which has been leased for him at Forest Hills, Long Island. It is expected that he will grant an interview to representatives of the trade press on some day within the near future.

It was said at the Pathe offices that Mr. Pathe has expressed much satisfaction with business conditions as he finds them reflected in the Pathe Exchange; and that he feels a just pride in the great growth in the organization since his last visit, a growth which has been particularly rapid during the past year.

Famous Players Has Strong Press Book on "Fires" Film

THE idea of service to the exhibitors is forcefully presented by the twenty-four page press book put out by the Famous Players-Lasky publicity department on its company's Salvation Army picture, "Fires of Faith," with Catherine Calvert, Eugene O'Brien and Ruby de Remer. The book, clean looking, and artistically put together, goes off the beaten track in a number of respects.

The cover is the famous Salvation Army poster which appeared as the frontispiece of the Saturday Evening Post, and which is used extensively by Famous Players-Lasky in its exploitation of the picture. Wherever one goes one sees the reproduction of the Salvation Army lassie watching over a doughboy whose hands and mouth are full of doughnuts.

The press book shows a good layout of one, three, six, and twenty-four sheets, mats, stills, rotogravure displays for window and lobby, advertising cuts and mats, and well written publicity. Going aside from the usual run of ideas, the work prints a roster of Salvation Army officials in a number of cities in every state in the Union to whom exhibitors may go for co-operation on the exploitation of the picture.

The song, "Fires of Faith," the words for which were written by Louis & Young, and the music composed by M. K. Jerome, is printed with the musical score in the press book. It is dedicated to the photoplay and the refrain is well suited to the picture. Its rendition by the orchestra and a soloist in the garb of a Red Cross nurse at the showing of "Fires of Faith" at the Harris Theatre, New York, added much to the general effect of the production. Exhibitors planning a special setting for the picture would do well to keep the song in mind.

A tie-up with the book shops is presented by the possibility of using Charles Kenmore Ulrich's novelized version of "Fires of Faith" for a window display.

Emphasis is placed on the appearance in the film of Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army. The promotional value of linking up with the local Salvation Army organization is also given prominence.

Sally Crute Recovering.

Friends of Sally Crute, whose most recent screen appearance is in J. Stuart Blackton's "A House Divided," released by the Independent Sales Corporation through the Film Clearing House, will regret to hear that she has been confined to the Englewood Hospital for a week with influenza.

Miss Crute writes that she is much improved, however, and is impatient to get back to her film work. She expects to be able to leave the hospital this week.

ROBERTSON-COLE FILMS IN BIG HOUSES

Company Announces Large First-Run Theatres Booking Features Through Exhibitors Mutual

THERE is no more pronounced evidence of the rapid growth of the Robertson-Cole Company than the extremely large number of first run houses which are booking its pictures through Exhibitors Mutual. Less than five months after its initial feature had been distributed in the domestic field, Robertson-Cole is now placing its output in many of the highest type of motion picture theatres in the United States and Canada. From one end of the United States to the other, Robertson-Cole pictures are showing before the most approved audiences and are meeting with much popularity.

It was in December that Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas," which since has created a furore in the amusement world, led the procession of Robertson-Cole releases through Exhibitors Mutual. At that time, it was freely predicted that it would be impossible for Robertson-Cole to break into any considerable number of first run houses, inasmuch as they had been booked solid until this fall. Yet in a period of less than five months Robertson-Cole has an alignment of first run accounts that make these predictions look narrow and without judgment.

Decided Open Market Best.

Robertson-Cole entered the moving picture industry to accomplish results solely on the merits of its attractions. For this reason it decided that the open market plan of handling features would throw every company on the true box office value of its photoplay productions. Soon after inaugurating its distribution campaign through Exhibitors Mutual, it issued definite instructions to sell each production on its real merit.

The highest type of motion pictures were produced by the various units allied with Robertson-Cole. Some brilliant specials, in addition to "Cannibals of the South Seas," were added to the star series, among them being "The Turn in the Road" and "What Every Woman Wants."

It was only a matter of time before Robertson-Cole pictures began to meet with the approval of audiences all over the country. There followed the placing of Robertson-Cole offerings in the big-best theatres in the biggest cities.

The successful Martin Johnson feature paved the way for pictures starring Sessue Hayakawa, Bessie Barriscale, William Desmond, Henry B. Walthall and Billie Rhodes.

Naval Projection Expert Visits Simplex Plant

OLAN L. HAWK, chief electrician of the U. S. S. "Pennsylvania," was an interested visitor at the the Simplex plant this week.

Mr. Hawk is an authority on naval picture projection and is also credited with inventing a most novel and practical method of moving his Simplex Projector from one end of the ship to the other without "taking down" or disturbing the set-up of the machine.

This consists of a substantial four-wheeled coal truck upon which are mounted the projector, the rheostat, the film case and a reel of cable. At convenient places on the deck are located plugging boxes, so that the plug on the end of the cable can be plugged in at a moment's notice and the machine easily operated from any location.

Mr. Hawk, who has been supervisor of the picture projection for Admiral Mayo since the commissioning of the "Pennsylvania" in 1916, told of many interesting incidents attending some of the deep-sea exhibitions.

Nelson B. Bell Appointed Crandall's Press Agent

NELSON B. BELL, for the past thirteen years Sunday and dramatic editor and special feature writer on the Washington Post, has been appointed by Harry M. Crandall to the position of general press representative of the Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Bell is a native of Valparaiso,

Nelson B. Bell.

Indiana, but received his education and first newspaper experience in Chicago. For four years he was a resident of San Juan, Porto Rico, where he introduced the first slang baseball stories ever printed on the island, through the medium of the San Juan News, the first American newspaper established in the Carribean. In 1905 he moved to Washington and served for a time as tariff expert with the Interstate Commerce Commission. His affiliation with the Washington Post, followed soon and has continued without interruption since. He is the author of many short stories and a dramatic critic of recognized attainment.

For eighteen months Mr. Bell served as press representative of Moore's Theatres Corporation, resigning from that position April 12.

As a member of the Crandall organization Mr. Bell will have complete charge of the advertising and publicity for the Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Crandall's, Savoy, Avenue Grand, Apollo and Meader's Theatres, comprising the Harry M. Crandall chain—the most extensive in the National Capitol.

Selznick Promotes Two Salesmen and a Manager

FURTHER developments in keeping with the announced policy of Lewis J. Selznick, president of Select Pictures Corporation, to fill important vacancies in that organization by promotion from the ranks, were reported this week. H. E. Lotz, who has been branch manager at Select's Denver exchange, has been appointed Pacific representative; Oren F. Woody, a salesman at the Denver exchange, has been appointed Denver branch manager, and Archie W. Moses, salesman at Select's Buffalo exchange, has been elevated to the post of Buffalo branch manager.

H. E. Lotz, who has been appointed Pacific representative, will have his headquarters at San Francisco, and his territory will embrace Select's San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver and Seattle.

Woody Succeeds Lotz.

Mr. Lotz's successor at the Denver exchange will be Oren F. Woody. Mr. Woody has been in the motion picture business for more than fourteen years. He is well known on the Pacific Coast, having been associated with the General Film Company and later with the Mutual Film. Two years ago Mr. Woody came to New York to become sale manager for Triangle, but a short time ago he resigned that position in order to get back among his western friends as salesman for Select at the Denver exchange.

Archie W. Moses, who succeeds S. S. Webster as branch manager of Select's Buffalo exchange, first became associated with Select when Charles R. Rogers was manager of the Buffalo exchange. Before his association with Select Mr. Moses was a salesman for the Fox Film Company in Buffalo, and before that he was assistant manager of the Strand Theatre in Syracuse.

World Pictures Buys a Sarver Story.

World Pictures announces the purchase of an original story by Lucy Sarver which will be used as the next starring vehicle for Madge Evans. Work on the picture will begin Monday, May 12, at the World Studio at Fort Lee. "Home Wanted," the title of the tale, although written for a child star is essentially a picture play of interest to adults.

The story is such that it will appeal to grown ups because of its heart interest and the eternal affection that everyone has for children.

ORTH FORMS MARS COMPANY.

George Orth, who was recently discharged from the photographic detachment, has organized the Mars Film Corporation to produce one reel comedies and five reel features under his personal direction. One of the first to be produced will be "Fine Gold," written by Paul Price, to be photographed by Jack Young.

The supporting cast includes George Ross, Miss M. Block, Bert Baumell and Gladys Core.

ONTARIO EXHIBITORS HOLD CONVENTION

Canadian Managers Meet in Ontario May 5 and 6—Co-operative Exchange Proposition Discussed

MANY Canadian exhibitors gathered at Toronto, on Monday and Tuesday, May 5 and 6, for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, and for the first general meeting of the stockholders of the Canadian Exhibitors' Exchange, Limited, which is being promoted by the Ontario association.

The first day's program consisted of consideration of general business by the association members. On the second day more definite attention was paid to the new co-operative exchange proposition. The shareholders elected their permanent directors for the new company on Tuesday. The convention was held in the Sons of England Hall, with theatre men in attendance from all parts of Ontario and Quebec.

Out-of-town visitors were treated to a number of entertainments which had been arranged by a special committee consisting of Messrs. J. C. Brady, Alexander, Feighen, William Sturgess, Ferguson, Redway, Welsman and Cardie, and Secretary Thomas Scott.

Special Meeting Precedes Convention.

In preparation for the convention, the Ontario association held a special meeting on Tuesday, April 22, at the association headquarters, 143 Yonge street, some thirty members being in attendance.

A letter was received from the Toronto Operators' local in which it was pointed out that the organized projection operators had decided to do business with churches on the same basis as moving picture theatres. The Toronto local will supply union operators for moving picture shows in churches whenever asked to do so—which has been quite often recently.

The meeting also received a letter from Jule and J. J. Allen, the Canadian exchange managers, respecting the complaint by exhibitors that the rates for lithographs, heralds and other accessories were too expensive. After a thorough discussion, it was decided to appoint a committee to confer with the exchange managers on this subject.

Detroit Theatre Holds a Midnight Ball and Show

ANY theatre that has the facilities will do well to follow the original novelty worked out by A. J. Moeller, manager of the De Luxe Theatre, Detroit, recently, when he gave a midnight performance of "A Midnight Romance," featuring Anita Stewart, preceded by a free dance between the hours of 11 and 12. At least 500 persons were on hand for the midnight show, while those from the 9 o'clock show remained for the dance that lasted until midnight.

Mr. Moeller converted his foyer into a ballroom appropo with the atmosphere of the picture. The theatre orchestra of seven pieces furnished the music for dancing, and the floor was filled to capacity with dancers from the first to the last dance. At 11:50 the ushers escorted the patrons to their seats, and promptly on the stroke of 12, "A Midnight Romance" was unreeled.

In advertising the novelty Mr. Moeller called it a "midnight matinee," explaining that the word matinee is derived from matin, meaning early morning, so that the performance, commencing at the hour of 12 was a matinee in the truest sense of the word.

"The Perfect Lover" to Be O'Brien's First Selznick

THE PERFECT LOVER" is the title of the first production in which Eugene O'Brien will make his bow as a Selznick star. The story of "The Perfect Lover," which was adapted from "The Naked Truth" by Leila Burton Wells, which appeared in Harper's Magazine, was selected as the one best fitted to Mr. O'Brien, and the producers feel confident that it will give the star one of the most popular vehicles of his career.

As the title implies, "The Perfect Lover" is ideally suited to Eugene O'Brien's personality and talents. The picturization of the story offers brilliant opportunities, not only to the star, but to every other unit of the Selznick producing staff.

The story, which concerns a young man who through outward influences has become a personal magnet to which women seem naturally attracted, and who gets into serious difficulties because of it, is a strictly human play filled with dramatic moments, romance, love and adventure.

Frisco Exchange Board and United Theatres Body Meet

THE Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco recently held a joint meeting with the United Theatres' Association of Northern California in the rooms of the latter organization at 109 Golden Gate avenue. The organization of exhibitors, which was incorporated last month by Charles Godard, Sacramento; Louis Greenfield, San Francisco; James Beatty, San Jose; C. W. Midgley, Oakland; Peter J. Hanlon, Vallejo; Albert H. Moore, Berkeley, and Lawrence E. Lund, Oakland, is now ready to take up the work for which it was organized and invited the members of the Board of Trade to meet with it in order that its purposes might be explained.

The new organization now has eighty-four theatres affiliated with it, maintains elaborate offices in the heart of film row, has its own projection room, with a seating capacity of more than one hundred, its own operator, and is commencing to review pictures with co-operative booking in mind.

Ordynski to Make Polish Film.

Richard Ordynski, the famous director of the Metropolitan Opera House, has entered motion pictures and has sailed for Europe to supervise under his personal management the making of a film to be made in Poland, and featuring Premier Ignace Jan Paderewski. The production is being made by a company organized and financed by Polish capital, and including the representative Polish business men of the east. It is called the Tatra Production Corporation, named after the principal range of mountains in Poland. Among the directors are: Henry Sieminski, A. V. Piskorski and Mr. Mierzwinski. The offices are at 150 Nassau street, New York.

Virginia Pearson to Write a Book.

Virginia Pearson, following the completion of her first picture, "The Bishop's Emeralds," for Pathe, has decided to write a little book on "The Art of Motion Pictures."

There will be chapters in the new book on "The Art of Make-up," "Dressing for the Screen," "Pantomime as an Art," "The Difference Between the Stage and the Screen" and "Hints for Picture Aspirants."

The book will be privately printed by Miss Pearson and will be sent to those of her admirers whom she thinks from their letters that it will benefit. She has no ambition to enter into competition with professional writers on these subjects, only to express her own views.

George Siegmann Mustered Out.

George Siegmann, who created "My Unmarried Wife," Carmel Myer's screen success, has been mustered out of the army reserve list. He has again joined Universal's producing staff. Siegmann will direct Priscilla Dean in "Pretty Smooth," which is now being completed at Universal City. The story was written by Joseph Franklin Poland.

A Jewel of a 24-Sheet for "The Bishop's Emeralds."
Virginia Pearson's first independent feature released through Pathe.

LEE KUGEL GETS RID OF A GROUCH

Enters Seemingly Justified Complaint That Press Agents Too Frequently Draw Long Bow

THE difficulty of believing what they read must be a problem to the huge army of exhibitors scattered throughout the country. In looking over the trade papers each week I wonder how the motion picture theatre manager can reconcile fact with fiction. If it is hard for the salesman to convince his prospect no one is more to blame than the organization that will permit "wild-eyed" statements to go out under the guise of "selling arguments" put up by the publicity man. I see published each week biographical sketches about "picture stars" that credit them with having been the star of some big Broadway theatrical success when in fact they were only walking ladies playing a "the-carriage-awaits-you-my-Lord" sort of a part.

Announcement is made with great gusto by a film company that at an enormous price a most successful play, having had a record breaking run (with passes), has been secured for the use of Miss Aurora Borealis and would be put in work immediately under the direction of "Horace Slattery," the well-known director. Miss Borealis, it will be recalled, co-starred with Maude Adams in "The Little Minister," having been one of forty in the mob scene in this famous play of James Barrie.

Exhibitor Unconsciously Fools Public.

Now the poor exhibitor, reading the trade paper which for him is his guide and beacon to success, books the picture when it comes out. He uses his trade paper as the press book and clips these stories and unconsciously fools his public. He fools them once and maybe twice and then the public gets wise. Business falls off and he begins to ask why. He is told and then for an alibi he quotes the press matter from the producing company. When the salesman for the company comes around to see why his contract has been canceled he gets his answer in few but well-chosen words.

I am not trying to teach the craft how to put over or write publicity, but I do get tired of reading so many blamed lies that are founded on no possible value in selling film merchandise.

A case in point: I saw published a few months ago in one of the trade papers a biographical sketch of a film actress—or star if you want to call her such—who was co-starred with Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady." I was with the Henry B. Harris offices when Rose Stahl starred in "The Chorus Lady" and the woman in question played one of the small parts in the production.

Farrar to Make Pictures of New Calibre in West

GERALDINE FARRAR, who has just ended an opera season, will leave New York on May 10 for the Goldwyn studios at Culver City. Preparations that have been made for Miss Farrar's new work on the screen indicate that as a picture player the Goldwyn star is entering on the most important and significant part of her career. From every standpoint, play material, scenic elaboration, photography and picture direction, the new Farrar pictures will aim to set a new standard not only in Goldwyn production but in pictures everywhere. The component parts of the first picture in which Miss Farrar is to appear in her new series are of the highest quality obtainable.

Ohio Passes Law Against Bad Checks.

The Ohio Legislature has passed a bill making it a crime to pass a check when the signer has insufficient funds in the bank. The passage of this bill was welcomed by the film exchanges of Ohio, which are making a determined effort to eliminate bad accounts. The bill becomes a law July 10.

Exchange managers have been troubled time after time with checks which have come back from the banks marked "not sufficient funds." The new law makes it necessary to have enough money in the bank to cover at the time of issuing a check. It also makes the check itself prima facie evidence of intent to defraud in case it is refused by the bank.

No, He Isn't the "Heavy." He's Director Charles Miller
Rehearsing a scene for his first special production which will be released by Independent Sales Corporation.

Ernest Truex to Appear in Comedies with Mrs. Drew

ERNEST TRUEX, screen and stage star, has been signed for a series of comedy films by Amedee J. Van Beuren, president of the V. B. K. Film Corporation, producers of the Paramount-Drew comedies, and Timely Topics, Inc., producers of "Topics of the Day," released by Pathe Exchange, Inc.

"In signing Mr. Treux to appear in two reel comedies," stated Mr. Van Beuren, "I am continuing my policy established with my pictures starring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, in making refined comedies of feature quality with stars of ability and reputation I am firmly convinced that this type of screen comedy is a favored institution in America and abroad and that there is sufficient demand for comedies of distinction to warrant the appearance of stars of the calibre of Mrs. Sidney Drew and Ernest Truex in two reel pictures.

Mr. Truex began his screen career with Mary Pickford in "The Good Little Devil." The current release of Ernest Truex is the Famous Players-Lasky presentation of "Oh You Women," in which this jovial star shares honors with Louise Huff. His other screen productions include "Come On In" and "Good Bye Bill," both with Shirley Mason, and "Caprice," with Mary Pickford.

Mr. Truex is now appearing with Taliaferro in the featured roles of "Please Get Married," at the Fulton Theatre, New York.

Production plans for Mr. Truex comedies are now being formulated by Mr. Van Beuren and details will be announced at a later date. Good stories are wanted for the new comedy series and synopses should be sent to the V. B. K. Film Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, New York.

Karl Formes Joins Vitagraph.

Karl Formes, a distinguished member of the Metropolitan Opera Company until recently, whose creation of one of the principal roles in Henry Hadley's "Bianca" at the Park Theatre, New York, this season, is fresh in the public mind, has joined Vitagraph's acting forces. Mr. Formes will be seen initially in "The Little Boss," in which he supports Bessie Love, on June 2, and in "Rogue's Romance," supporting Earle Williams, on June 9.

Lucien Andriot With Capellani.

Work of enlarging the studio organization of the Albert Capellani Productions, Inc., to accommodate the increased activities of the company, is progressing rapidly. The newest addition to Director Capellani's staff is Lucien Andriot, formerly cameraman for the World Film Corporation and more recently an aviator in the American Cinematographic Division, who has been appointed a member of the photographic staff of the Capellani Studios at Fort Lee.

Don't Forget—Send This Magazine "Overseas."

Washington, March.—The boys overseas are asking for more reading matter. General Pershing has cabled the request that more magazines be sent to the Americans on duty in France and in other countries in Europe. The General says the boys need interesting reading matter as never before.

The supply of magazines has been reduced from ten to two tons a month due to misapprehension of the public that magazines could not be sent under the one-cent postage ruling. Put a one-cent stamp on the upper right-hand corner of the cover and deposit in mail box.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

DON'T wait for a full house in order to start your show. If you advertise to start at 7, and you have one patron at that hour, start the machine. When ple find that your show always starts the advertised hour they will be in ir seats at that time, but you may have play to empty seats for a few weeks get them trained. If you find that after weeks they still stay away, it is a n that your hour is too early. Move lown a little, but first try out the hou nty of display space, and it is made most of, yet the lobby is not crowded, most of the display rises above it.

Splashes.

Charles R. Roediger sends in two dis- ys he prepared for the Victory, Tacoma. e is four nineteens and the other four ls. There is so little difference between m that we think that the additional ce could have been saved on the longer play. The sketch for "Virtuous Wives" raphrases the invisible idea and gets I could only make myself invisible pass through walls and keyholes." think that a sketch better conveying s idea could have been evolved. There so many startling situations in the ry that there is ample material for an ractor suggestion that will be true to film and at the same time be stronger its appeal. The artist has buried the e and the story has to ride upon Miss wart's popularity. She will pull most the business, but here is a chance to ch many who would be drawn to the se through their interest in the widely- d novel, and both points of appeal uld have been played up clearly, par- ularly as there is so much space at mmand. The only reference to the vel is found in a couple of lines of eight point just below the design, to the left. The title should have run below the drawing and should have been clearly displayed. The artist seems to have only the design and not the selling value in mind. The panel below the cut is effectively written, but it is too heavy to be read clearly. This and the panels in the other display should not have been set in full face, for here the full face detracts from the display by making the lines more difficult to read. You seldom, if ever, see full face in McCormick's long leaders. He uses the type to which the eye is most accustomed and so makes it easy to read. That left hand display carries more message, but here, too, the title is obscured with drawing. Let the artist make all sorts of sketches, but put the title and star in type. Otherwise you lose much of the value of your space. Mr. Roediger has written some good copy, but he does not get a proper display for what he has written.

A Four Nineteens and a Four Fulls Which Have About the Same Advertising Value.

More Mickey.

The All-Star Features, handling "Mickey" out of San Francisco, made a record when the picture played the California Theatre. The Marines had several hundred A boards along Market street, and for this showing the boards showed the Government and the "Mickey" posters, both stripped "for action, the Marines and 'Mickey.'" This was decidedly good work, for it is no easy matter to horn in on Government advertising, but the Marine Corps seems to be more alert than the other branches of the service, and they realized the value of the tie-up. All of the hotels and dance places featured the song during the run, and one cabaret put on a "Mickey" number, with the girls in Mabel Normand overalls. Sheppard's song tie-up is about the best bet of the lot, for it presents so many strong angles.

In Reverse.

In some ways this advertisement from the Superba, Los Angeles, is better than the usual reverse cut, but we think that more might have been done with a four tens. The lettering is large enough to show white against the almost black, and it can all be read, but the sketch tells nothing that is apt to interest the reader, and so suggests a rather bare story, while the addition of a "The" to the title weakens it. Too often artist weakens a title by adding to or taking from it. He should be careful to get the exact wording and to adhere to that. Here the reference is to creaking stairs and not to some particular creaking stairs.

With an Elephant.

It's handy to be close to the studios, for you can borrow press stuff. This cut shows the Universal's elephant being driven to the Isis Theatre and back to help "The Lure of the Circus." Gertrude Astor was the chauffeur and the photograph shows her pretending to crank up the truck, but you don't have to believe the photograph if you do not want to. The elephant merely made a call upon the management, stood on his hind legs, bowed, climbed back into the truck and said "Home, Gertrude!" and that was all there was to it, but it was plenty, according to reports.

A Press Stunt Worked by the Isis, Los Angeles, in Conjunction with the Universal.

Reformed.

The Dayton, Dayton, Ohio, seems to have given up the hand lettered stuff and to have gone in for a combination of type and layout, which is far more effective. The cut shows a three tens and a three fourteens for recent bookings. The smaller has hand lettering for the title—and the title is the thing most necessary to be seen clearly, but the larger gets a better design for the lettering there. If Mr. Gates will get hold of an A. T. F. book he can find therein a number of large type faces which will give better results and he can buy a font for about what he pays an artist for the lettering of one advertisement. For what he pays out in a month he could have the finest assortment of special type in Dayton and it would last him for years. Still these display are a big advance over the all hand lettered stuff and the rest will come in time. That display for "False Faces" is unusually good.

Dual Advertising.

Here is an odd example of dual advertising from the photoplay page of the Baltimore Sun. The two houses are advertising the same attraction on succeeding days, so the main display works for both and the mortise in the signature names the days on which the subject will be seen at either house. This is the only display advertisement for these houses, but the directory carries the full bill. We are glad to see that the Sun is being more liberally patronized. It means better business for the theatres.

Ruff Stuff.

Ralph Ruffner has been rather quiet for him of late, and he has not sent in much stuff. This three sixes is almost regular stuff, but it carries a rather characteris-second example is more promising and carries a new Ruffner slogan down in the lower left hand corner. Apart from this it offers an oddly laid display, therefore one which probably will be read, though the hand lettering for the star and title is very badly done. It is plain wasting money to pay an alleged artist to botch a job like that, but we suppose some one got some money for this, though we don't see why. The third is a five nines which repeats the lettering monstrosity. Apparently the artist was proud of it, and thought it was worth an encore, but it is worse than some of the stuff that Ruff used to get up in Portland, and that was pretty poor. The stipple effect in this is so crudely done that we would have spanked the artist with a boot had he brought it into our office. It means nothing, and it spoils what little effect the cut might otherwise have possessed. There is nothing on earth quite so irritating as an artist who means well, but who does not know how to do things, and Ruff appears to have dug up a star. Unless this man is related to him he should kill him if he can do it without scandal.

McCormicks.

Not all of S. Barrett McCormick's best work is done in the large advertisements. We think that this three sevens is above the average of the longer displays, because the selling talk is strong and to the point and the attractor is well planned. If you will look in the lower left hand corner you will note that Mr. McCormick is coming out strong for the community singing. He seems to have gotten hold of an exceptional leader, and is playing it across the boards. This community singing has come to stay, and the sooner you put it into your own program, and hold it there, the better for you. It becomes a permanent feature, and in time it can be made as popular as the films themselves if only you have the right sort of leader. Twice lately we have seen Col. Ashley Nagle, of the War Camp Community Service, get more than four thousand persons singing in Carnegie Hall and the second time he returned by popular request. He has a knack of leading and he more than trebles the volume of tone between the first and the last song

Both sets of copy nge upon the telephone call and he play the line, "A drama of Alaskan Nights d Eastern Days," which is a good sumng up of the play. The same idea is peated in a three fifteens which is own here in connection with a similar splay for "His Parisian Wife." In this st, note a little of the space for the st of the Chaplin revivals. TO CIRCLE PATRONS:

Good Music never dies, good books are always re-read, good plays revived and played again and again.

The young art of the screen has likewise created classics, pictures good enough and old enough to be revived and enjoyed anew.

The Circle believes that in offering a revival of the "Chaplin Classics" it is not only contributing to the pleasure of its patrons, but is offering a tribute to a great artist.

A tribute to the art of a litle, wiry, curly-haired fellow with funny feet and an Idea, who rose in five years from a $75-a-week funmaker in cheap vaudeville to a million-dollar-a-year comedian.

"A Night in a Show" was filmed several years ago, when Charlie Chaplin was just starting on his sensational career. We know you will enjoy it.

S. BARRET McCORMICK.

There is no reason why good revivals should not take their places on the programs and be given mention. There is plenty of good stuff buried that needs only to be dug out. But it is not the mere fact of revival which counts. It must be stuff worthy of being revived.

Here is something new from the Mikadow Theatre, Manitowoc, Wis. It is a four-pager, pages five by six, with the attraction boxed at the left where the date usually runs alone, and with the selling talk where the attraction announcement usually comes. This make a neat com-

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Conductor of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World

A TEXT BOOK AND A HAND BOOK, a compendium and a guide. It tells all about advertising, about type and typesetting, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, how to write form letters, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. All practical because it has helped others. It will help you. By mail, postpaid, $2.00. Order from nearest office.

bination, and one worthy of keeping up, though the Mikadow does not seem to stick to one style or size. A larger program, made up almost wholly with Paramount one-column cuts, does not show to as good advantage. The Mikadow has set apart Tuesday as the regular sing night, and is going to keep up the idea. As the boys come home the sing idea will be stronger than ever, and it will pay to put in a song leader if you have not already one.

R. H. DeBruler, of the Macon Photoplay Theatres Co., controlling the Palace, Capitol and Princess theatres, Macon, Ga., sends in a copy of the Sunday paper in which his houses take a page, part of which is made up of reading matter to suggest a regular department page. This is a common idea down South, and it works well where the newspaper cannot be induced to run a department of its own, but most newspapers now realize that it pays to run their own department and cater to their readers instead of to the houses. He also sends in a neat vest pocket program, a four page, which gives the bills of the week at the three houses. This is compact advertising, and the composite is nicely done with just enough red rule work to set off the black text with not enough to make it look like a circus poster. To use red ink or any second color and not abuse it is a sign of a real advertiser, and Mr. de Bruler has the earmarks, for he makes a very restrained use of the red. It might almost seem to some persons to be a waste of a second printing, but it gives the program a certain distinction that probably brings back the cost of the second impression. The way to figure is not that the second impression costs a certain sum, but that by spending such an amount the program is given a certain greater sticking power in excess of the actual cost. More red ink would have defeated this end. It is reserved for rule work and not run in on the text. Red and black text would not have worked as well.

To Save War Plays.

War plays are rapidly working into the discard. If you have one you cannot avoid playing, get some returned soldier to lecture on it. You can announce the lecture above the play and take the curse off it. Ten dollars to the soldier will bring in a good return at the box office—and it will not be unwelcome to most soldiers just at present.

Projection Department

Important Notice.

OWING to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive projectionist should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Projection Lens Back Focus Differences.

In a recent article I requested from our optician readers an explanation of why two projection lenses of equal E. F. will or may have quite different back focus. John Solar, Watertown, New York, replies:

"For any lens, or any combination of lenses there are certain fixed centers. The location of these points is dependent, where a combination of lenses is considered, on the focal length of the factors of the combination and their separation. The formula for locating them is:

$$\frac{F_1 \times S}{F_1 + F_2 - S} = P_1 \qquad \frac{F_1 \times S}{F_1 + F_2 - S} = P_1$$

"Taking the accompanying drawing, A and B, which very nearly represent two 4 ins. E. F. Bausch and Lomb and Gundlach Manhattan lenses respectively, we have Figure A:

$$\frac{9 \times 6}{9 + 6 - 1.5} = 4 = \text{E.F.}$$

$$\frac{9 \times 1.5}{9 + 6 - 1.5} = 1 = P_1 \qquad \frac{6 \times 1.5}{9 + 6 - 1.5} = .666 = P_2$$

Figure B:
$$\frac{10 \times 6}{10 + 6 - 1} = 4 = \text{E.F.}$$

$$\frac{10 \times 1}{10 + 6 - 1} = .666 = P_1 \qquad \frac{6 \times 1}{10 + 6 - 1} = .4 = P_2$$

"The distance from object O to nearest surface of lens—B. F.—is not the same in both cases, but the distance from object O to principal point P, is the same; also the lenses in this position would both focus an object in the same plane. Back focus is always equal to first conjugate distance minus distance from surface of lens to first principal point. In this case it would be Fig. A, 4—1=3. Fig. B, 4—.666=3.333.

"The first conjugate distance of the lenses shown in Figures A and B are just equal to the E. F. of the lenses, hence the second conjugate distance would be infinity, or the rays emerging parallel. Suppose it is proposed to project a picture to a screen 60 ft. away, or 720 inches. The formula then is:

$$\frac{1}{F} - \frac{1}{V} = \frac{1}{U} \text{ or } \frac{1}{4} - \frac{1}{720} = \frac{1}{4.022}$$

"The lens would then be moved away from object 0—0 .022 ins. In this case the B. F. would be 4.022—1=3.022 ins. In the foregoing U represents the first and V the second conjugate distances."

For all of which we cordially thank friend Solar. His methods of arriving at the result is understandable to the ordinary man, which is a darned sight more than can be said for most optical dope. So far as concerns lenses under examination there is only a difference of .333 of an inch in B. F., which is not enough to make very much difference in practice. But I am sure I have seen lenses which showed a very considerably greater difference than that.

To Break the Ice.

G. Waldo, projectionist, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, arises to remark:

"Just a few lines (huh, two and a half pages single space. Huh!—Ed.) to bust the ice in the department. Mighty sorry to hear friend Sawbones got your number. By the way, did he have any trouble reassembling you. Suppose you can now run 90 feet a minute without a bit of jump or side movement (Nope, but I'll soon be able to make Nancy Hanks, the Go-Devil, do seventy per, which will hellup sum.—Ed.). Well, here is what is on my mind—besides my hair: What effect will oil have on an extra-lite shutter? Will it be harmful to the compound used in it? As to the new Simplex footage recorder, the projectionist who cannot remember his change-over scene will forget to reset the recorder after each reel, hence will be as bad off as ever. The way to overcome that would be to make a practice of threading the same every time, meaning by that to use the same moves every time, as, for instance, open the upper magazine with one hand and set the recorder with the other. If always done that way it becomes a habit. But the only change-over which can be used equally well by every one is to note the change-over scene, thus: Girl hands papers to man, cut. A slate from any ten-cent store will do to write the changes on. This can be hung on the front wall, where it can be seen all the time. After making one change you will remember thereafter, without reference to the slate. The projectionist who cannot make the change thus must have the same grade of sawdust in his upper story that the punch-mark artist has. Punch marks are the worst ever. The man who makes them should be a conductor. In that business he could enjoy himself. As a rule we find from four to six punch holes in each film. We figure that in the elimination of these punch marks from our program we are compelled to waste at least 125 feet of film each year, and all because some projectionists has a doll-head (china, with large air space) and a punch. I recently noticed, in a M. P. magazine, a projectionist advising brother projectionists to place a cross mark in the upper corner of one frame. From what he said I think he changes every day. Suppose he runs seven reels a day. This would mean from 2 to 6 marked frames per day—say three, to be conservative. This means 1,095 marked frames a year, or over 68 ft. 5¼ in. of film spoiled because of one little cross mark. Suppose there are 20,000 theatres in the country, and that 10,000 of them use the cross mark and the other half cut them out. That would mean a mere trifle of 10,000x 68 ft. 5¼ in. equals 732,500 feet of film, or 732½ 100-ft. reels gone bluey, said film having a money value of more than half a million dollars. And all that due to one little cross mark. There is one way to stop punching and cross-marking, viz., the exchange to really inspect each film, cutting out all marks. When the reel returns, the same inspector to re-inspect it and charge up to the projectionist the damage he has done, or else charge it to the theatre itself. But, anyhow, the type of projectionist who uses the punch and cross will always be at least four or five jumps behind the one who uses his head. Am sorry to say I cannot use the lens chart. Were I to get my lamps black where they belong (mean lamphouses, don't you?—Ed.), would have to get down on hands and knees to get past the projectors. They were up against a tough proposition here. Big steel beam in the front of projection room, about 5.5 feet from the floor. Note you ask for carbon stubs. We burn all our stubs in carbon savers and save something like a hundred carbons a year by so doing. If all theatres did this I figure there would be a saving of probably 18,000 packages (50 to package) of carbons a year. Hope you are back on the job again and hitting on all four."

Scat. Outside! I'm no common four-cylinder affair. Man, when I'm hitting right you hear sixteen (16) explosions, and good loud ones, too. Wheredaya get that four stuff? I have published the good brother's letter because it is really refreshing to find at least one projectionist interested in the item waste. The total wastage from causes he names really is tremendous, probably amounting to every bit as much as he has indicated. We have many times called attention to this matter. This waste is absorbed in the "overhead" of the industry, and promptly charged back to the exhibitor in increased film rentals. The real trouble lies in the fact that most of the waste occurs in small items—a little at each theatre, and no item is large enough to attract special attention, hence it is let go as not worth bothering with. But small things often reach huge importance when totaled. I have no doubt but that there are actually 18,000 packages of carbons' wasted each year, which means nearly a million feet of carbon. As to the extra-lite and oil, why how in the name of Caesar's ghost would even the most rabid squirt-it-on oil artist get oil on the revolving shutter? And if he did, it would promptly be thrown off by centrifugal force, hence I think we need not bother about that. The footage recorder idea will be put into considerably more practical and acceptable form, I am told, and I reiterate my opinion that it is the logical change-over signal. In my opinion it is far better and more practical than depending on memory of a scene. Also it often happens that a distinctive scene cannot be found just at the right point. But the advent of the counter will not prevent him who prefers the plan of friend Waldo from using it, hence we may still all be happy.

Abusive Letters.

Maybe once in six months, to the credit of the profession not oftener, the editor receives an abusive letter, invariably unsigned, from some one who disagrees with his policy in some respect, and unable to advance argument, spews forth instead a flood of abuse. An example just arrived from Los Angeles. This letter, like all its predecessors of similar character, abounds in misspelled words and crudities of wording. Such writers usually wind up with his supposed-to-be squelcher: "I hope I may see this in the projection department"! If they really did, they would regret the publication, even though their names be not known.

But the point is this: the man who is too cowardly to sign his name to an abusive effusion is really not worthy of notice; also abuse is an infallible indication of lack of argument. This particular shining example is peeved at the term projectionist. Claims that when he says "projectionist" he has to explain what it is. Well, I will bet him ten dollars to a plugged nickel that if he goes out on the street and says to a passer-by: "I am an operator," he will have to explain. In order to be understood, he will have to say, "I am a motion picture machine operator." Well, if he says, "I am a motion picture projectionist," I venture the assertion that nine out of every ten—yes, ninety-nine out of every hundred will understand him thoroughly. The real trouble with the Los Angeles atom is that he lacks gray matter sufficient to understand the underlying reason for changing the name "operator," which automatically places him forever in the mechanic class to projectionist, which places him higher. Tell him that the projectionist has to be something of an artist and that the projectionist, as Hugo Risenfield, Managing Director, Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York City, says, in effect re-directs the photoplay, and he, the Los Angeles flathead, would think you stark, raving crazy. It requires brains to grasp a proposition of this kind, and brains are something he may be justified in supposing that writers of un-signed, abusive letters have not, except, perhaps, in very rudimentary form

I. A. Convention.

The I. A. convention will meet soon in Ottawa. In fact it may have already met when this reaches you. We trust the convention will be a successful one, and will accomplish much good for all branches of the industry represented by the I. A., particularly the projectionist. We also hope a change of name will be adopted. The present title "International Association of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada" is so unwieldy that it is a bit absurd. We also have hopes that the "operator" will be eliminated, though that would perhaps be too much to expect—yet.

But whatever happens we wish for the convention a most successful meeting and for the delegates a profitable and enjoyable time.

Quite a number of correspondents have expressed the hope that they will meet the editor in Ottawa. Sorry, but it can't be done. Cannot spare the time for a joyride trip now, and would not care to represent the local I belong to just now, so there is nothing doing in the Ottawa line of convention time, so far as the editor is concerned.

Locate Him

Somewhere in the New York City territory is an imitation projectionist with a punch in the shape of a star. Cut shows it full size. I counted 97 of these punch marks in less than 3 feet of film. The intelligent (???) exchange inspector had calmly sent them along to the next theatre, instead of reporting the matter to the exchange manager and he charging the ruined film to the projectionist or the theatre. If this film butcher could be located this department would undertake the task of seeing if he could not be put out of the profession. Here is his mark.

Watch for him, tell us where he is and we'll do the rest. Incidentally I'm showing you a heart shaped mark which might well be watched for. The heart man seems to confine his efforts to a "mark" such as is shown, but that is in itself an outrage. Does any one know who he is?

Another Man Wakes Up.

The following is unique. We wish all men were as frank and honest. While permission is given to publish name and address, we do not feel it to be advisable, strong as the temptation is. This writer is a real MAN. There is no moral cowardice in one who, once convinced that he is wrong, fully, frankly and without excuse admits it. We have taken the liberty of writing the management of the theatre in which he is employed, calling their attention to the fact that it is most excellent business to recognize this kind of work in the pay envelope. This management could actually raise the projectionist in question $104 a year ($2.00 a week) and still be ahead of the game by $156 a year, and the raise would be a direct incentive to still further improvement and economies in operation. Nothing so quickly discourages advancement in knowledge and makes for inefficiency in the projection room as failure to give any sort of recognition to improvement. The man soon says to himself: "Huh, what's the use," and usually drops back to the old way. The letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: In February 1 issue you asked a question which set me scratching gravel to beat the band. Heretofore, I have, to be honest, and eat my full portion of crow, been against you. I, however, wrongly, firmly believed the projection department and handbook to be shining examples of pure bunk. Well, I'm cured—good and plenty. Me for you from now on, and you cannot possibly condemn my past stupidity (strong term, but I'm filled with disgust when I look back) any more emphatically than I do myself. You are at full liberty to publish this if you wish. Maybe it will serve to wake up some other slumbering wiseheimer up to the fact that he really does not already know it quite all, and that we projectionists (Yes, I've gone the whole hog and adopted the up-to-date name too. And its a corking good one, once you get used to it) merely throw a monkey wrench into our own machinery when we try (observe the "try" please. It can't really be done) to discredit you and the work you are doing. There, I've made full confession and feel better already. And now for what finally woke me up.

One afternoon while I was on duty, a brother projectionist called, and when he left he forgot to take along a Motion Picture World and Richardson's Handbook he had, with him. It was a February 1 issue of the World and with my nose in the air I glanced through your department. Just why, I cannot say, but the article "Here is One for You to Answer" held my attention. It asked this question: Suppose by getting new condenser lenses at $4.00 cost, moving the lamphouse to right position and revolving shutter to aerial image of condenser, it were possible to trim .25 of an inch from main blade of shutter and that by increasing projection lens diameter it was possible to utilize 6% more of the total light, what would this mean in dollars and cents in a year, current 8 cents per K. W. hour and show running 11 hours a day." Haven't a copy of the issue here now and have quoted from memory, but anyhow it was something like that. I pooh poohed the thing to myself, but for some reason pooh poohs failed to convince my mind. That evening I, for the first time gave your handbook a real lookover, and was greatly impressed, against my will. Incidentally, I believe that is the real trouble with a lot of the men who oppose you. They just simply don't want to be convinced. When the handbook owner came for his property, we certainly did have one grand go-round and argument, in course of which I showed him the article in February 1 issue. He informed me that the propositions therein contained merely meant the application of a "lens table" I had, up to that time, never heard of. He also took occasion to tell me I ought to be ashamed not to be up to date in such matters and other unpleasant things. Well, we very nearly had a fight before he left, and then, just to prove him a Richardson boosting sap head, I got hold of a lens chart and applied it to one, the optical system, of my projectors. One look at what it called for and I patted myself on the back with the idea that I was going to find it wouldn't work at all. I use 50 amperes D. C., through rheostats. Had two 7.5 condensers spaced nearly half an inch apart. Put in a 6.5 lens next the arc and, after considerable trouble (Powers' 6-B) succeeded in blocking the front lens back until the tips of the two lenses were just out of contact with each other. Tried it out. Result, just as I expected, rotten. Hooray! To be very sure, before sending for Mr. Handbook Owner and getting out my best crow against his coming, I glanced over the lens chart instructions again, discovering that I had failed to move the lamphouse to location directed. Remedied this little item, tried it out again and—was mightily glad I had not sent for said H. B. O. Could hardly believe the evidence of my own eyes. There certainly was good and plenty of improvement. Not only was the light much stronger, but also the focus was sharper. And then I did get busy.

This won't exactly answer your question as found in article in February 1 issue, because it is just a record of what happened when I remedied my own wrong conditions. I afterward replaced the optical system of one machine just as it had been, and borrowed an ammeter and found that the machines gave equal results at 42 and 50 amperes—8 amperes, or 880 watts, in favor of your lens charts. This figures out 14% saving, based on 5,500 watts, or 5.5 K. W. We run 13 hours a day (10 A. M. to 11 P. M. continuous) so that at .7 cents per K. W. (what we pay) the saving from condenser improvement alone is 10 K. W. hours, or 70 cts. per day and 70 cents per day is nearly $5.00 a week, or $260 per year.

Say, brother R., when I figured this all out and had proven it to myself thirty of forty times. I DID wake up. Went on a still hunt after that aerial image, I had so often sneered at and this is what happened: As nearly as I was able to measure it, I was cutting 56% of the light with the shutter. I have located shutter at aerial image and have reduced it to a true 50-50, though I may have to increase main bladewidth again slightly, as there is a very slight tendency to travel ghost occasionally. But suppose the gain to be only 5%, it means another 25 cents a day, or $6.75 a week or $351.00 a year saved on the two items, with a decidedly better picture on the screen. And if I can save that additional 6% by means of larger diameter projection lenses (haven't gotten that far along yet), the total saving would be boosted to $6.85 a week, or $420.20 a year! And at no expense except cost of two condensers and two projection lenses.

Maybe my old condition was exceptionally bad. I do not know. Anyhow the facts are now before you and I've eaten the crow that was my just portion. My head really isn't sold ivory—quite. I just needed waking up and—got it. If you publish this and some of the ivory domes around here laugh, it's all right. I should worry! I'm awake now, and don't care a (deleted by censor) what the back-number gang say or think. I'm going to try, though, to rub the noses of the brothers (some of them) of our local in the truth, as mine was rubbed in it, so if you see a cloud of dust off in this direction, its only me in the midst of a battle."

Well! What do you think of that? Of all the communications this department has received in nearly ten years we remember none that we value more highly than this, and if that battle comes off and aid, assistance or succor is required, just send a S. O. S. and I'll be on the job. We were especially impressed with the remark concerning those who simply don't want to be convinced that they are wrong. There is many an animal of that variety at large, and he is a bull in the china shop of projection.

Slow Acting Rewinder.

J. M. Lenney, Harrisburg, Pa., sends in department clipping describing and illustrating re-winder of the Gem Theatre, Palestine, Texas, which same appeared in June 23, 1917 issue. He says: "For ten years I have been a subscriber to the World, and from it get some timely and helpful hints and information. With regard to attached clipping, the picture is so dark I cannot make out all of its details. Will you kindly advise me as to size of motor necessary, how the automatic cut-off is made and installed, and size of pulleys. But it is the automatic cut-off I am mostly interested in. Anything I can make and install to make the work of the operator easier is not too much trouble, provided I can learn how to do it."

Brother Lenney, I don't quite like that last. Let me revise it a bit: "Anything I can make and install to make the work of the projectionist easier or (and) more efficient or better, is not too much trouble etc." There, does not that read better. Probably you really meant just that, but you failed to say it; also you are just a bit behind the times in using the term "operator." Do you wish to be classed with shirtwaist and straw hat makers—they are called "operators" you know. But that is not all. The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has officially, and unanimously declared the correct term to be Projectionist. Why not be up to date. There! Having administered that little verbal raking over, in entire good humor, we'll tell you about the re-winder. In the first place, it would be impossible to tell you the power of motor required. That would depend on speed of rewinding. But a very small one will do the work. An old wall fan motor is ample as to power. The necessary size of pulleys will depend on speed of motor and time of re-winding. Does any one know just how fast a reel must revolve in order to re-wind 1,000 feet of film in six minutes? If so, let's have the information. I don't know myself. The automatic cut-off may be made in several ways, one of which is herewith illustrated. The drawing is entirely self explanatory. When the film breaks or runs out the standard, being no longer supported on the film by its roller, drops, or is pulled down by the spring. This spring must be a very light one. It may not be necessary to have a spring at all. You will, of course, understand that in the main drawing only one side of the switch is shown. The face of it is illustrated in small, upper sketch. The black is insulation material. The motor current is very small, and the contact made by such a switch, if even reasonably well made, will be ample to carry it. Standard $B^1$ must not be made very heavy, and the roller it carries, or that carries it rather, must be exactly square with the film so that there will be no grinding action. For this reason standard $B^1$ might better be square. Standard holder E could consist merely of a square hole in the board and a square collar about where the top of standard holder E is, properly supported, of course. But all this is needless, I guess. By the drawing I merely meant to give you the main idea. You can build it to suit yourself. With a slow running re-winder there is no serious objection to the roller. The back reel must have a brake, of course, to insure tight winding and to hold the film taut. Who has a better scheme? Let's hear from you. We remembering publishing several excellent methods of accomplishing this function several years ago, but their details have slipped from memory.

A Queer Case.

John Meade, Blackwell, Oklahoma, has a case which has puzzled us quite a bit, and still presents doubtful points. He orders the lens charts, and here is his description of the trouble:

"With everything in the optical system (condenser combination and distance from same to film) as it should be, there is a shadow on either side of the screen and one at the bottom; also a faint, vertical shadow out about half way between center and right side of screen. This latter is only noticeable when white light is on screen. Side and bottom shadows sort of bow out onto the screen from corners to center. By this I mean they form a bow having its base, or tips, in the corners. Have tried different projection lenses and about everything else, including various condenser combinations and distances of condenser to film, without results."

The small, faint, vertical ghost has me stuck completely, but the sides and bottom shadows may be due to one of two things, viz., tension shoes or cooling plate interfere in light. That used to be a quite common thing years ago, with the old style tension springs, and before cooling plates were so well standardized. Don't see how it can happen with modern projectors (these are Motiograph De Luxe—new machines, too), but I can find no other reason for the trouble. It evidently is not in the projection lens. That much is proven. I don't see how it can be in the cause I have suggested, but if it isn't, will some kind soul be good enough to tell us where it is? I'm up a stump.

Has a Good Picture and Don't Care Who Knows It.

H. A. Matteson, Projectionist, Superior, Nebraska, orders question booklets and discourses thusly:

"My outfit consists of a 35-ampere transverter, a new Baird projector and a Gold King screen. Distance of projection 75 feet; picture 14 feet. And if I do say it myself, as oughtn't, it's some picture. Two union projectionists who were here with features said it was the best in this part of the country, so far as they had seen. I'm sure proud of my picture."

If you weren't, friend, you probably wouldn't have a picture to be proud of. When you see a chap who is indifferent and takes no pride in his work and its product, it's a pretty safe bet that he is worth not one danged cent more than the union scale, and it's no safe bet the boss isn't losing money on him even at that scale. When I'm on the road the boy I like to meet is the one who buttonholes me and, with pride sticking out all over, almost begs me to visit his theatre and see his screen result. It's a perfectly safe gamble that lad has something to show. True, it may not be perfect. It may, in fact, be far from perfect, but when I get there and show him wherein he can improve, he won't look at me with an indignant start or a fishy look of disbelief.

Yea, verily, do I like the progressive up-and-coming laddie buck who tries hard to produce the goods and is proud of the fact that at least he has accomplished something. It is in those men that the ultimate hope of the profession lies.

Boylan Reel Tested.

Recently we published an article saying we would have the Boylan Even Tension Reel thoroughly tested as soon as possible, and report. Since then it has been called to our attention that we did have this reel tested by six different projectionists in widely scattered localities two years or so ago. We find the records bear this out, and that the reports were all good. We therefore take pleasure in recommending to projectionists that as soon as these reels are available they get a supply for their projection room. The savings in lower sprockets alone will pay for the reel before they are worn out, and the saving in damage to films will be inestimable

CALIFORNIA AIRDOME SEASON IS COMING

But the Open Airs Will Be Fewer in Numbers Since Houses Have Installed Cooling Plants

EXHIBITORS throughout northern and central California are making active preparations for the opening of airdomes as soon as the period of hot weather sets in, which will be about the first of June. The number of these outdoor shows will probably not be as large as in some former years, owing to the fact that cooling plants have been installed in many houses, with daylight saving also cutting a figure. The Lyric Theatre, Tulare, conducted by Paul Reardon, plans to open an airdome about June 1, and the Theatre Tulare will also have an outdoor show. J. McCabe, of Coalinga, is remodeling his airdome and plans to have a very fine one.

Sacramento's Own Film Has Premier.

The Sacramento Film Company recently took over the Strand Theatre in the capitol city for a week and presented its first five reel attraction, "Twelve O'Clock." This showing attracted wide attention. Walter McGinn, head of the company, was formerly located at San Francisco, where he conducted a training school. Work on other productions will be commenced at once.

M. Calmy Visits Home Town.

M. Calmy, formerly of San Francisco, where he conducted a comedy film exchange, but now a member of the film of Calmy Brothers, Los Angeles, dealers in projection machines and theatre supplies, was a recent visitor in this city and purchased a lot of supplies from the California Film Exchange, which has gone out of this branch of the business. He installed several machines at Santa Barbara on his way up the Coast.

Select Exchange News.

The San Francisco office of Select has turned a nice piece of business since the departure of Manager H. L. Knappen for New York, having booked "Bolshevism on Trial" over the entire Turner and Dahnken Circuit, the first showing to be made at the Tivoli Theatre. The facilities of this exchange are being enlarged to acommodate the increase in business, extensive remodeling work being under way.

Poster Man Finds Business Active.

I. H. Lichtenstein, head of the Western Poster Company, has returned from a trip through the territory from Dinuba to the northern California line and reports unusual activity in amusement circles. Exhibitors are doing a splendid business, and many houses are being enlarged, redecorated and remodeled, with many new ones planned.

M. J. Cohen Becomes Historian.

M. J. Cohen, director of publicity for the Kinema Circuit, Oakland, Fresno and Los Angeles, has written "The Evolution of the Motion Picture," which is appearing serially in the Daily Post, one chapter appearing each Saturday. Mr. Cohen has been connected with the industry in one form or another since its inception.

Organists Given Practice Privileges.

The American Photoplayer Company has installed three large pipe organs in Photoplayer Hall, 109 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, and permission is being granted freely to organists in moving picture theatres to use these for practice work. Two of the instruments are from the California factory, the third being from the eastern branch.

Personals and Business Pointers.

Eugene H. Roth, of the California and Portola theatres, San Francisco, was called to Los Angeles recently because of the death of a sister.

Polly Moran, who has forsaken moving pictures for vaudeville for an indefinite period, was featured recently on the San Francisco Orpheum bill.

Mrs. Elizabeth Winterhode, wife of Amos S. Winterhode, former manager of the Alhambra Theatre, and connected with other San Francisco moving picture houses, passed away in this city on April 23. Mr. Winterhode recently underwent a serious operation and was confined in a hospital during the illness of his wife.

The Live Oak Church Federation, Live Oak, Cal., has purchased a projection machine from Walter Preddey.

Ryan's Theatre, Fresno, Cal., is to be remodeled at an early date, a new front being one of the improvements planned.

Mrs. F. E. Smith, of the Lyric Theatre, Marysville, Cal., has also taken over the Liberty Theatre of that place and plans to remodel both houses.

The Tuolumne Theatre, of Tuolumne, Cal., destroyed by fire some time ago, is being rebuilt and will have a seating capacity of about 1,000. Joe Knowles, of Sonora, will have charge when it is reopened in July.

S. N. Kanner, formerly of the Bay View Theatre, San Francisco, is on his way home from France, having seen service there with an engineering corps.

The Kearny Theatre, San Francisco, has installed a new Power's Cameragraph and a Preddey no-carbon outfit.

Walter B. Crooks has had plans and specifications prepared for a theatre to be erected at Benicia, Cal., at a cost of about $35,000.

Extensive additions are being made to the organ at the Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco, an echo organ being the feature of the improvements. A fine new stage set has been installed here by T. Thompson.

Beatrice Van in Society Role.

Beatrice Van has commenced work at the American studios in support of Margarita Fisher in "The Tiger Lily," Joseph Franklin Poland's absorbing Italian-American romance, under the direction of George L. Cox. Miss Van is playing the role of "Doris Van Renssalaer," a spoiled society flapper, who is "The Tiger Lily's" rival for the love of a young American millionaire.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew Had a Hard Time Making Up for Their Playlet, "Harold, the Last of the Saxons."

"THE HEART OF HUMANITY" HELPS LOAN

At St. Paul's Metropolitan the Picture Played to Capacity Houses and Proceeds Aided Drive

THE Heart of Humanity," in its second and last week's engagement at the Metropolitan Theatre at St. Paul, helped largely in raising subscriptions to the Victory Loan and in obtaining aid for the Fatherless Children of France Society.

The picture played to capacity houses during its run in St. Paul. J. V. Bryson, manager of the Minneapolis Universal Exchange, and L. M. Scott, manager of the Metropolitan agreed that net receipts of the box office at "The Heart of Humanity" showing should be turned over to the St. Paul Victory Loan organization. The result was gratifying.

At the showing of the picture Miss Julia Rogers, who is an active worker of the society, gave five minute talks on the need for funds to continue the work of the Fatherless Children of France Society.

The inspiring scenes of the "The Heart of Humanity" had a tendency to loosen the purse strings of St. Paul theatregoers after they had heard the talk by Miss Rogers. The war orphan fund grew steadily with Miss Alice Forepaugh, secretary of the society, in charge of collections taken in the theatre lobby. Miss Forepaugh said that in one week of the engagement St. Paul people had adopted three war orphans and agreed to keep them for a year. More than $800 was contributed to the society during the two weeks' engagement of "The Heart of Humanity."

"Cannibals" Draw Crowds.

Manager Billy Watson put over a clever publicity stunt which aided in pulling big business to the New Garden Theatre when he stationed two burly negroes, dressed as cannibals, at each side of the box office during a week's showing of Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas."

Schlank in Charge of Capitol Office.

Isadore Schlank, special representative of the Capitol Film Company of Indianapolis has taken charge of the Minneapolis Exchange. He will remain here until a successor has been appointed to take the place of Sam Aronowitz, who has resigned to enter the state rights field.

Shearer Opens Supply Office.

B. F. Shearer, former Montana representative for the Rialto Supply Company, of Minneapolis, has opened offices in Billings, Mont., handling supplies for Montana, Idaho and Wyoming. Mr. Shearer carries a large line of supplies and complete equipment for the theatre.

Northwest News Brevities.

Tom Foster, owner of the Star Theatre at Stanley, Wis., is a benedict. The bride was formerly Mrs. Helen Gillhuly, of Kankakee, Wis., a talented musician.

Lieutenant William Howard, A. E. F., visited for a few days in Minneapolis renewing old acquaintances. Lieutenant Howard was formerly manager of the local branch offices of Metro and Vitagraph.

The People's Theatre at Washburn, Wis., will be closed for sixty days awaiting the renewal of manufacturing activities. The big Dupont T. N. T. plant, which employed as many as 6,000 men during the war, is now using only 200. Washburn, however, expects to land a shipbuilding plant that will employ 1,000 men.

The Delft Theatre and the Opera House at Marquette, Mich., closed April 17 by a third influenza ban, are again open after a week of enforced idleness. The Marquette houses have been closed a total of fifteen weeks by successive waves of influenza.

Philadelphia News Letter

Mahanoy Theatre Installs Powers.

THE Elks Theatre in Mahanoy City, has undergone extensive repairs and improvements. Two Power's 6-A machines and new projection equipment have been installed. An old theatre in the same town, which is being altered and rebuilt, will be renamed the Stanley when completed.

Butler Takes Over Clearfield.

William E. Butler, one of the pioneer exhibitors of Philadelphia, has taken over the Clearfield Theatre. Mr. Butler is at present the sole owner of the Arcade and the Clearfield.

Brennen Is Back With Stanley.

J. M. Brennen, of the Stanley Booking Company, has been mustered out of the service and is back at his old job, much to the delight of all his friends.

Here's Your Hat, Prithee, Why Do You Tarry?

Write the Rambler, our Beatrice Fairfax, if your experience parallels this scene from Vivian Martin's Paramount, "The Home Town Girl."

Keeney Visits Philadelphia.

Frank A. Keeney, of New York, was in Philadelphia last week, and negotiated for several features for his Keeney Theatre in Williamsport through the Stanley Booking Corporation.

Fisher Improves Mammoth.

A. J. Fisher, of the Mammoth, is making extensive improvements in his theatre. Entire new equipment will be installed in addition to brand new chairs. The walls and ceiling have been artistically decorated with pictures of all the leading screen stars. A six-piece orchestra will supply the music for the pictures, which will be of the first order.

Philadelphia Ball Set for May 28.

The allied motion picture interests of Philadelphia have agreed to hold a motion picture ball on May 28 at Turner's Hall, Broad and Columbia avenue.

Clark Returns to His Desk.

Kendrick Will Shoot Local Events.

H. M. S. Kendrick, of the Fairmount Theatre, has secured a motion picture camera with which to take local events for the benefit of his patrons.

Lessy and Brown Take Over Palace.

Messrs. Lessy and Brown have taken over the Royal Palace at Twenty-eighth and Girard avenue, which has been closed for some time.

Pittsburgh News Letter

Industrial and Domestic Moves.

THE Industrial and Domestic Film Company, heretofore located at 2534 Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, has relocated in the former Public Baths building at 1538 and 1540 Penn avenue.

The new plant is two stories high in front, one in the rear. It occupies a plot 35x200 feet. The old quarters were vacated May 1, and the new building is now occupied by the company, although it will be several weeks before any laboratory work can be done, as there is much carpenter, plumbing and electrical work to be completed before the plant can be operated.

The I. & D. Company has made some pretentious films for many of the largest industrial concerns in the Pittsburgh section, and at the present time is producing a five-reel subject, of which several prints will be made, for a large coal concern operating in West Virginia and Kentucky.

Simeral Is Out for Himself.

H. C. Simeral, for the past year traveling representative for The Pittsburgh First National, was in New York recently and purchased "Virtuous Men" for western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

Mr. Simeral formerly represented the Automatic Ticket Selling Machine Company, and a year ago, when the Government shut down on the making of motors for these machines, he took up film work. He has been quite successful in this line and decided to branch out for himself. He will do business under the firm name of Co-Partner Attractions, and his address is Box 125, East Liberty Postoffice, Pittsburgh, Pa. He is now looking around for an office location.

Cameraphone Is Now Rivoli.

Thursday, May 1, saw new management and ownership of the Cameraphone Theatre, Fifth Avenue, Downtown Pittsburgh. The theatre will become a link in the Rowland and Clark chain. The name will be changed to the Rivoli and Roy Munson, formerly owner of the Paramount Theatre at Altoona, will be the manager.

The Cameraphone is one of the oldest of the downtown theatres. It was opened about ten years ago by H. P. Kester and W. C. Beatty. Several years ago Mr. Kester withdrew from the theatre, and

Mr. Beatty sold out to Mr. Guckenheimer two years ago. The house has always been a good moneymaker.

Globe Film Attractions Will Handle Parade Pictures.

The Globe Film Attractions, Pittsburgh, will handle exclusively here pictures of the parade of Pittsburgh's returned soldier heroes, which will take place sometime in May.

The pictures will be taken under the supervision of George Bates, who will have three cameras in operation, getting every detail, such as the arrival at the station, the triumphant march down Fifth avenue, and the crowds along the way, etc. The soldiers comprise the 15th Engineers and the old 18th Regiment—all from Pennsylvania, and the majority of them from Pittsburgh.

The picture will be released the day following the parade.

Young Represents Sherry.

J. F. Young, a film salesman of the Pittsburgh district, has been appointed special representative for the Sherry Pictures, formerly handled by the General. These pictures will very likely be handled by the Film Clearing House in the future.

Berg Organizes Keystone Music Company.

W. T. Berg, formerly manager of the automatic department of the Pittsburgh office of the Wurlitzer Organ Company, has organized the Keystone Music Company, which will handle the Violana-Virtuoso instrument, a combination violin and piano manufactured by the Mills Novelty Company of Chicago.

Sliter Gets Goldstein.

An addition has been made to the salesforce of the Pittsburgh Exhibitors Mutual Exchange, in the person of Leonard Goldstein, formerly of the Pittsburgh Universal exchange, and most recently the Goldwyn. Mr. Goldstein has been a film salesman in the Pittsburgh territory for the past four years and enjoys the acquaintance of practically every exhibitor in this section.

More Salesmen for Moore.

Manager Moore, of the Pittsburgh Hodkinson branch, has added two salesmen to his force. They are W. A. Young and O. F. Krugh. Mr. Krugh was formerly with the Pittsburgh Vitagraph and Pathe exchanges, while Mr. Young is a new man in the film game, having previously been a broker in New York.

Charles A. Graninger Dies.

Charles A. Graninger, formerly organist of the Regent Theatre, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, and lately of the Stahl Theatre in Homestead, Pa., died Friday morning, April 25 following an attack of the flu and pneumonia. Deceased was an able organist and prominent in musical circles.

Fred Hall Builds at Boyer.

Fred Hall is building a new theatre at Boyer, Pennsylvania, from present indications it will be ready for opening about May 15. The house will seat 300 and will be up-to-date in every respect. The projection equipment includes Power's machines and a Gold Fibre screen.

Personal Items.

J. A. Reilly, manager of the Belmar Theatre, Rowland & Clark's house at Homewood, Pittsburgh, has just been discharged from the hospital, where he was laid up for three weeks, following an operation.

W. E. Atkinson, business manager of the Metro and W. C. Bachmeyer, district manager, were in Pittsburgh several days recently. Mr. Atkinson is making a tour of the Metro offices throughout the country.

Wm. G. Schmidt, sales representative of the Pittsburgh Mutual branch, has been transferred to the Buffalo branch of the same company.

N. J. Sinnott, of the William L. Sherry Service, was in Pittsburgh recently.

Eddie Wheeler is now on the road for the Penn exchange, Pittsburgh.

WASHINGTON'S EXCHANGES ARE MOVING

Metro and Mutual Are Already in Luxurious New Quarters and the Others Will Soon Follow Suit

METRO and Mutual now occupy commodious quarters in the new film building on G street, near Ninth street, N. W., and it will probably not be long before the other exchanges which have leased space in the building will move in.

Manager George W. Fuller, of Metro, has eight offices, seven of which are en suite, while the eighth room is located near the freight elevator and is used as a shipping and receiving room. At the extreme end of the exchange is the inspection room and the film vault, which holds 1,500 or more reels.

Equally attractive are the rooms in the Mutual suite. Manager McShane has a very attractive office, and in it at this time stands the handsome loving cup which goes to the offices showing the best results. It is known as the William J. Clark trophy. To retain permanent ownership of the trophy an exchange must win it three times in succession. So far, Boston and Portland have each had it in custody for one month. The Washington branch is going to do its best to hold it for April.

This exchange has a projection room with a built-in operator's booth. This is to be equipped with two machines, and all films coming into the exchange will be screened before they are permitted to go to exhibitors.

Flax Purchases "The Masked Rider."

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit is to distribute "The Masked Rider," fifteen-episode Western of the Arrow Film Corporation, for the Liberty Film Exchange. The latter organization has been founded by Sam Flax, with headquarters in Room 607, Mather Building. Mr. Flax recently purchased this serial for the District of Columbia, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia. Mr. Flax is well known in the film business by reason of his connection with the General Film Company, beginning in 1913, and with Pathe as booker and assistant manager from 1914 to 1917. In the latter year he became manager for Metro, remaining in that position until a short time ago.

Crandall Company Improves Its Park.

The Crandall Amusement Company is greatly improving the open-air park adjoining its Apollo Theatre, on H street, N. E., preparatory to opening at an early date. The park is to be rewired, new lamps put in, and the operator's booth is to receive two new Simplex motor-driven projection machines.

An important part of the work will be the grading, so that the people seated at the rear will have an unobstructed view of the screen at all times. A new shadow box and new screen are to be erected, and an attractive brick ticket booth is to be constructed at the front.

Lenihan Resigns from Goldwyn.

Washington exhibitors have heard with regret the rumor now current here that George F. Lenihan, manager of the local exchange of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, has tendered his resignation to the home office, to take effect May 15. It is said that he is going to New York to accept an important position with the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. The nature of his new work is not known, nor has his successor been named, although it is thought that L. L. Crandall, now in the South, will be recalled to Washington to become manager of the exchange. Mr. Crandall is a Washington boy and was at one time in the employ of the World Film Corporation.

Melvin Returns to Fox.

Another returned veteran of the war is Mr. Melvin who, the exhibitors in the southern part of this territory will remember, traveled out of the Washington office of the Fox Film Corporation until he joined the colors. Mr. Melvin landed in town last week and, in line with the policy of the company to take back on their old jobs all returned soldiers, he is preparing to take up his work where he left off to go and learn how to jab the Boche.

The Smokes Were on Steve.

Cigars were very much in evidence in the offices above the Metropolitan Theatre last week, when Steve Eilbacher, manager of the Savoy, "set them up" in honor of the arrival of a little cashier in his home.

A Lion Among Ladies and Pool Sharps Is a Dref'ul Thing.
It's a case of pooling resources in this L-KO comedy with much local color.

MILLION DOLLAR DEAL IS CONSUMMATED

Ascher Brothers to Erect a 2,500 Seat House on Howard Wurlitzer's Property in Cincinnati

A DEAL involving more than a million dollars, by which Cincinnati will have a new theatre was consummated April 29, when Ascher Brothers, of Chicago, acquired a forty-year lease on the property at the northeast corner of Seventh and Vine Streets, owned by Howard Wurlitzer. The lot is 100 by 134 feet, and a building of brick and concrete will be erected at an approximate cost of $350,000. The seating capacity will be 2,500, 1,500 of these seats being on the ground floor and 1,000 in the balcony, which will be of the hanging type, with no posts to obstruct the view from any seat in the house. A pleasing innovation will be the arrangement of the seats, which will be twenty-two inches wide and the rows thirty-two inches apart, permitting patrons to enter or leave without disturbing others in the same row of seats. The main entrance will be on Vine Street, thirty feet north of Seventh and the lobby will be thirty-five feet in width. There will be eight exits. Besides the theatre proper there will be four store rooms on the Vine Street side. Other features of construction will include between 40,000 and 50,000 electric light bulbs for the exterior illumination of the building; a refrigerating system for cooling the house during warm weather, which calls for a difference of ten degrees between the inside and outside temperature, graduated so that the two extremes will not be immediately felt. An orchestra of thirty pieces will be a feature of the house, which will be supplemented by a Wurlitzer orchestrion and organ, only a little smaller than the one in the Denver Municipal Auditorium, which cost $90,000. Arrangements already have been made for first-class film service for this house, and it is expected to have it ready for the first performance on Thanksgiving Day, which will necessitate the completion of the work in about six months. The owners of the new house are operators of some twenty-four houses in and about Chicago.

Industry War Potent Factor in Raising Loan.

The Victory Loan campaign is now entering upon the home stretch, and so far as Cincinnati is concerned, has been a big success from the start. This city was "over the top" before the campaign had reached the half-way point, and is rapidly proceeding to roll up a big over-subscription. That the men connected with the moving picture industry have been a potent factor in achieving this remarkable record is an admitted fact. Nothing has been asked of them which has not been cheerfully and enthusiastically done, and they have bent all their energies and given of their resources in a truly unselfish manner to do their bit in support of the loan. One of the best bits of loan propaganda presented at any of theatres was called a "Victory Loan Dialogue," which was presented by Frank Burnett, an attorney of the city, and a young lady partner. The young lady took the part of a loan solicitor and the lawyer represented one of the chronic croakers who are always growling about graft and waste in the war work. He is finally shown the error of his ways and gladly signs on the dotted line. This was a welcome diversion from the usual run of four-minute work and showed evidence of dramatic thought and histrionic ability unexpected and refreshing.

Film Storage and Repair House is Planned.

Max Goldstine, New York, has leased the temporary Court House, at Broadway and Pioneer streets, for use as a storage and repair house for the principal producing companies of the country. The central location of Cincinnati and its facilities for quickly reaching any point in a large section of the country were deciding factors in the deal. Much time and money are expected to be saved by this arrangement, especially in the repair department, as heretofore no adequate facilities for this work have been provided outside the headquarters of the producing companies. The annual rental is stated to be $17,500 for a term of fifteen years, and a counter proposition was made for a 99-year lease at an annual rental of $14,000, with a cash bonus of $20,000. In either case Mr. Goldstine agrees to pay for all taxes, insurances, assessments, repairs and alterations. The county will vacate the building on October 1, and it will then be remodeled and converted to its new use. It is proposed at some future time to add two additional stories to the present six stories.

Colonial and Ohio Open Their Doors.

Two new theatres were added to the list of downtown houses during the past week, the Colonial and the Ohio opening their doors Saturday, May 3. These are the twin houses made by the remodeling of the old Colonial, on West Fifth street, and both of them are beautifully decorated and finished both as to interior and exterior. Julius Frankel is manager of the Colonial, while Thomas Reilly is manager of the Ohio. The Colonial has for its opening attraction "The Spreading Evil," which also is being shown at the Alhambra, two doors away. This house has an innovation in construction, the mechanical orchestra being located on a balcony in the rear, leaving all the space usually taken up by the orchestra pit available for seating purposes. Both houses were patronized heavily on the opening day and will now take their places among the best of theatres in the central section of the city.

Lyric Will Be Strong on Music.

The Lyric Theatre, which opens for a summer run of pictures Sunday, May 11, under the management of I. Libson, with "Oh You Women," will have an excellent musical accompaniment, the entire Lyric Theatre orchestra having been engaged for the summer. This is one of the best orchestras in the city, and is under the direction of Theodore Hahn. New musicians will be added to bring the orchestra up to full symphonic proportions. Manager Libson has become convinced of the value of good music by his experience at the Walnut and is a firm believer in this adjunct to the business. "The Unpardonable Sin" is booked for an early showing at this house. Another interesting feature at this theatre will be Mack Sennett's "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," with its real live chorus of twenty Broadway beauties. This show opens May 18 and the innovation is attracting considerable attention here.

Business Continues Good.

Continued good business has been the rule in the Cincinnati houses during the past week, few runs being made with any of the seats empty, except the first run in the morning and the last run at night. Generally speaking, all the picture houses in the central section of the city open at 10.30 or 11.00 a. m. and run to a like hour in the evening.

The officials of the Victory Loan organization states that the average daily attendance at the movie houses is in excess of 50,000, or a weekly average of 350,000, which is more than three-fourths of the population of the city. They estimate that, eliminating duplications, or those attending more than one performance weekly, there are some 200,000 "movie fans" in the city.

Cincinnati Screenings.

The Gifts opens the week with "The Courageous Coward," supplemented by a Harold Lloyd comedy and the Universal News Weekly.

The Walnut presents "The Midnight Romance," "The Little Widow," and Pathe News.

The Strand offers "Three Men and a Girl," together with Pathe News.

The Family has "Poor Boob" for the first part of the week and "The Rescuing Angel" the latter part.

Jack Weil Is Seattle World Manager.

JACK WEIL has arrived in Seattle to take over the management of the Seattle territory for World. He began work at once.

Mr. Weil announces that Seattle is soon to be established as the Coast division office and the World office will be moved within a few months to a fine new location on film row, which will be built for them.

Mr. Weil has engaged, since his taking charge of the Seattle, C. P. Merwin, formerly manager of the Exhibitors Mutual, and F. A. Tipton. The former will cover Washington and northern Idaho, while the latter will have Oregon and southern Idaho. More stenographers, shipping clerks, and other office employes have also been added.

Lustig Visits Seattle.

Harry Lustig, special representative for Metro Pictures Corporation for the Pacific Coast, is in Seattle exploiting "The Red Lantern" in the Northwest territory. Some exceptional first run bookings have been made already in Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, and Spokane. It has been booked for two weeks at the Clemmer in Seattle.

While in Seattle Mr. Lustig engaged Melvin G. Winstock as special salesman for Metro.

"Hearts of the World" Breaks Record.

"Hearts of the World" has been playing to very big business at the Coliseum, and records of Seattle's largest motion picture theatre have been broken. The picture has caused almost as much talk as did "The Birth of a Nation." A regular feature of Coliseum shows which is very popular just now are the fashion shows, which are given every Tuesday night. These fashion shows are given by arrangement with one of the large department stores of the city. They were begun two years ago, and immediately became so popular that they were continued for several weeks during the beginning of each winter and spring season.

Auto Men See "The Roaring Road."

Three-quarters of the lower floor of the Liberty Theatre was reserved on Tuesday evening, April 22, for the automobile dealers and their employes to see "The Roaring Road" with Wallace Reid. Realizing the special interest which automobile men would take in this production, J. Von Herberg, manager of the Liberty, sent them notes suggesting that he would be glad to reserve the best seats for as many as would like to see the picture on that evening. Over five hundred reservations were made.

Maxwell Reports Good Business.

M. E. Maxwell, special representative for Rothapfel Pictures, is in Seattle spending several days at the office of the Film Clearing House. Mr. Maxwell supervises the offices in Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle. He reports the first run on the Rothapfel Unit closed in Portland, Spokane and Tacoma.

BALTIMORE KEEPS RIGHT ON BUILDING

This Time It Is To Be a New and Fire Proof Exchange Structure for Palmore and Homand

PALMORE AND HOMAND, who have for some years conducted a film exchange at 412 East Lexington street, have bought the property at 424-426 East Lexington street, and ground has been broken to start the foundations for a three-story fireproof, brick and concrete building which will measure 30 by 30 feet. The architect is J. W. Beal, and the contract has been awarded to the Guilford Building Company. All the floors will be equipped with fireproof film vaults. The first floor is to be occupied by the owners; the second floor will probably be arranged with desk space to be rented to the various representatives of the film companies in Baltimore, and the third floor will be arranged for office space to be rented out and fitted up as a screening room so that the various film companies can hold their private trade showings there. It is also probable that the roof will be arranged so that during the summer trade showings can be held on the roof at night.

Parkway Holds Services for Service Men.

An impressive service was held for the men of the 117th Trench Mortar Battery of the 42d Division at the Parkway Theatre, 3-9 West North avenue, on Sunday afternoon, May 4, through the courtesy of Harry Webb, president of the Parkway Theatre Company, and Bernard Depkin, Jr., manager of the theatre. Stirring addresses, prayers and sermons were made, and the men were entertained with vocal and instrumental music.

The Crescent Is Being Improved.

The Crescent Theatre, 1110 South Charles street, which is under the management of J. J. Hartlove, is now being thoroughly overhauled and renovated. The interior of the theatre is to be redecorated and repainted, while the floor is to be recovered with battleship cork lineoleum. The lighting, heating and ventilating systems have been changed, and two new Simplex projection machines and a new piano have been installed.

The Wizard Will Be Made Like New.

Oliver B. Wight, the architect, who designed the Parkway and McHenry theatres, has been commissioned to prepare plans for extensive improvements and alterations for both the interior and exterior of the Wizard Theatre, 30 West Lexington street.

The Park Movies Reopens.

The Park Movies Theatre, 2265 North Fulton avenue, owned by K. N. Crawford, and which has been dark for some time, has been thoroughly overhauled, and was thrown open to the public on Saturday, May 3. This playhouse is now under the supervision of J. Louis Rome, manager of the Baltimore, Broadway and Arcadia theatres. Mr. Rome is doing the booking for the house.

Baltimore Personal Notes.

Herndon Edmond, who formerly managed the General Film Exchange in Baltimore, when that company had an office there, but who has been in the army for several months, has been discharged. Mr. Edmond was first-class sergeant in the Motor Transport Corps, and was stationed at Camp Holabird. At the present time he is working for the Victory Loan, and has been traveling through Maryland with the Government moving picture, "The Price of Peace."

L. H. Bell, Baltimore representative of the American Film Corporation, very proudly announced to his friends that he is now the father of a bouncing baby boy.

Dick Roberts, formerly with Triangle, and Eddie Carr, formerly with Paramount, have taken leave of the film industry and associated themselves with the automobile business, having connected up with the Trail-Mobile Company.

Rudolph Berger has now become the representative of the W. W. Hodkinson Film Corporation in Baltimore.

Well, Well, If Here Isn't the Old Oaken Bucket Shop!
Fox's comedy, "Words and Music By ——," with Albert Ray and Elinor Fair is a well of deep stuff.

Zerbel Is Back from France.

Raymond H. Zerbel has returned to Marquette after driving an ambulance in France for twenty-two months. He was with the French army during the entire time. He has resumed his old position as manager of the Opera House.

A NEW PORTLAND SUPPLY HOUSE OPENS

M. Aparton and F. J. Beier Quit Projecting and Become the General Supply and Repair Company

M. APARTON and F. J. Beier have formed partnership under the name of General Supply and Repair Company, with a salesroom and shop at 213 Fourth street, and are making a bid for the theatre supply business in this territory. Both of these men are electrical experts and each has been a moving picture operator for a dozen years. Mr. Aparton has been associated with Halberg in New York and with the Feaster corporation, and Mr. Beier is one of the best known operators in the Rose City.

The partners are making a specialty of electrical supplies for theatres, including lamps, fixtures and stage lighting effects. They have established an agency for Simplex machines and have equipped their shop with lathes and machinery to repair all make of machines. They do not handle films.

George Bligh Is An Optimist.

"The theatre business is the best I have ever experienced it and has increased fifty per cent. in the past year," is the sentiment of T. G. Bligh, controlling three theatres at Salem, Oregon. Mr. Bligh operates two of his houses continuously, the third playing road shows and special film attractions. He is now completing the installation of a new photoplayer costing $10,000 in his Liberty Theatre. The instrument is one of the large models made by the Berkeley factory and is being installed in Mr. Bligh's theatre with camouflaged pipes in the auditorium.

Loan Film Exploited.

C. M. Hill, chairman of film exploitation for the Victory Loan in Oregon, gave free morning exhibitions of the committee's film, "The Price of Peace," in his theatre, the Globe. The picture was afterwards shown to big audiences in the municipal auditorium.

Silverton Theatre Is Sold.

Walter Johnson has purchased the Palace Theatre, Silverton, formerly conducted by Cooley Brothers. Mr. Johnson took over the Palace May 1, and Messrs. Cooley will hereafter devote their attention to their Gem Theatre.

Serials Go Well in Portland.

H. C. Phelph, operating the Gay and Ideal Theatres, comments favorably on the use of serials in suburban districts such as those served by him. He took over the Ideal in North Portland when it was not paying and by consistent use of serials two nights a week has built up a nice business there. Mr. and Mrs. Phelp divide their time between the two theatres

Jack Tillman Is Busy.

Jack Tillman, manager for the General Film Company, is the busiest man on Film Row these days. Mr. Tillman has been acting in all capacities from manager to shipper. To the hundreds of questions asked by exhibitors as to General's future the Portland manager answers enigmatically that he expects to be here for some time.

Omaha News Notes

They Want the Last Word.

NEBRASKA exhibitors, in the recent session of the State Legislature, defeated state censorship of motion pictures in a decisive manner, but the Fourth Nebraska district Federated Women's clubs, meeting last week, voted to keep up the fight for motion picture censorship.

Getting Back to First Principles.

Manager H. M. Thomas, of the Rialto Theatre, Omaha, has revived the old custom of showing the words of songs on the screen and inviting the audience to join in the singing. "That Tumble Down Shack in Athlone" was the first song introduced at the Rialto.

Bluechel Is on the Warpath.

At Norfolk, Nebraska, Exhibitor H. Bluechel, of the Auditorium Theatre, has crossed swords of the local censorship board which, after seeing Theda Bara in "Salome," prohibited a showing of the picture in Norfolk. Exhibitor Bluechel says that he does not like to have his business interfered with by citizens who do not know moving pictures from mumps. He may take the fight to the courts.

"Caleb Piper's Girl" Released May 18.

Helene Chadwick interprets the title role of "Caleb Piper's Girl," a five-act comedy-drama produced by Astra, which is released by Pathe on May 18. "Caleb Piper's Girl" is a vivacious comedy-drama of the lighter type of feature photoplay.

Harold Lloyd Uses China in a Spanish Comedy, "Si, Senor."
But these are international days, so Pathe's to be commended.

Producers' and Distributors' News

"In Search of Arcady" Is Billie Rhodes' Next Picture

WITH the success of her four most recent feature productions as a criterion, much is expected of the forthcoming Billie Rhodes comedy-drama "In Search of Arcady," soon to be distributed through Exhibitors Mutual by Robertson-Cole Company.

Miss Rhodes is seen in the role of Barbara Chichester, a winningly wilfull Miss., who breaks through the circle of admirers with which her title-hunting mother and aunt have surrounded her and goes forth as a gypsy in search of Arcady.

The story itself is taken from the novel of the same name by Nina Wilcox Putnam. The comedy possibilities as well as the dramatic situations of the original story have been well utilized in the film version by John B. Clymer, who adapted it for the screen.

Wellington Playter gives an excellent impersonation of the manly Earl. Tom Santschi plays the part of Lascho. Kathleen Kirkham and Genevieve Blynn are seen to advantage as Barbara's aunt and mother, respectively.

Bertram Bracken, the director, has done his work well. Not only has he made the most of the many comedy situations but he has selected locations for the exterior scenes which carry undeniable beauty of their own.

The dramatic is not neglected. In fact the fight between the Earl of Chamboyne and Lascho is as well done and exciting as any seen on the screen in many a long month.

The art direction of Martin J. Doner has furnished the picture with many beautiful interiors, conspicuous among which is the interior of the abandoned hunting lodge where Barbara and the Earl seek refuge from a sudden storm.

Back With Old Favorite.

Naomi Childers, who is playing opposite Tom Moore in his new Goldwyn production, played her first important part in motion pictures opposite the star six years ago, at the old Kalem studio in "Panic Days in Wall Street." Alice Joyce, with whom Mr. Moore was then playing, was taken ill, and Miss Childers substituted for her.

Elsie Ferguson

Pauses to show us a new gown which she wears in "The Avalanche," her new Artcraft.

Dolores Cassinelli's Next Is from Paris Stage Success

A SENSATIONAL Parisian stage success from the pen of Pierre Wolff, the noted French playwright, has been selected as the story in which Dolores Cassinelli, the Cameo Girl, will make her debut as a star under the banner of the Albert Capellani Productions, Inc. The production which will be known as "The Gutter" is adapted from Mr. Wolff's "Le Ruisseau," which played in Paris at the Theatre du Vaudeville for over two years. Work on the picture is already well under way.

Franklyn Farnum has been engaged to play an important role in support of Miss Cassinelli. The action depicted centres around no less than seven important characters, and Director Capellani, aiming toward the double objective of securing artistic perfection in the new production and providing exhibitors with a cast that will offer unlimited advertising possibilities, is sparing neither expense nor effort to surround Miss Cassinelli with a supporting company of exceptional strength.

"The Gutter" is described as a high-tentioned drama throbbing with passion and pathos, the locale of which shifts alternately from the Parisian slums to society salons. The story reveals in all its intimacy the soul of a beautiful girl cast by Fate into the swirling vortex of night life in the slums of Paris.

In her portrayal of the girl who "came back," Miss Cassinelli is afforded the greatest opportunity of her career to display the remarkable range of her emotional powers.

"A Rogue's Romance" To Be Earle Williams' June Release

VITAGRAPH announces as its Earle Williams release for June "A Rogue's Romance," a drama of a society thief's experiences in Paris by H. H. Van Loan. This is the second photoplay especially constructed for Mr. Williams by this well-known script builder, Mr. Williams having been seen early in the year in "The Highest Trump."

"A Rogue's Romance" has already been viewed in the private projection room of Vitagraph's New York office and has achieved that requisite effect, a thrill. It is a crook drama full of suspense and surprises, with an unusual finish. Throughout interest is not only maintained but worked to an increasingly high pitch, according to reports made by those who viewed the advance showings.

A strong cast appears in support of Mr. Williams. Such actors as Brinsley Shaw, Harry Van Meter and Herbert Standing, are prominently identified with the play. Katherine Adams makes her appearance as Mr. Williams' leading woman. Another artist of parts, Karl Formes, whose fame on the operatic stage was attained not only through vocal efforts, but to consummate dramatic artistry as well, makes a screen debut in the new Williams play in an important role.

Lesser roles are taken by Marion Skinner, Maude George, Jenette Trebol, Pat Moore, Mrs. Griffith, Sid Franklin, William Orlamond, Rudolph Volantino and Gladys McMurray. James Young is the director.

Bennison Hires Train of Pullmans.

Louis Bennison's new Betzwood production, "The Road Called Straight," which is scheduled for release May 11, required the use of a Pullman train for several incidents and a locomotive in another. Arriving at Dover, N. H., where many of the Eastern scenes in the production were photographed, Bennison got into communition with officials of a railroad company and secured five Pullman cars, with an entire crew.

It is in one of these Pullmans that Al Boyd (Louis Bennison) is speeding to claim as his bride Betty Swiftmore (Ormi Hawley), daughter of an Eastern capitalist.

It is in the scene requiring a locomotive that Louis Bennison sustains his reputation as a daredevil Western cowpuncher.

Russell Begins "This Hero Stuff."

Work has been begun at the American studios on the production of William Russell's new picture, entitled "This Hero Stuff." The story was written by Stephen Fox and is characterized as a satire on hero-worship. It will offer "Big Bill" in the role of "Captain November Jones, U. S. A." There is, however, nothing of the military about it, as the action takes place in a Western mining colony.

The supporting cast includes Winifred Westover, Mary Thurman, J. Barney Sherry, Charles V. French, Harvey Clark and J. Farrell McDonald. The production is being directed by Henry King.

Yes, They've Actually Caught the Man Thinking.
But it's apropos, since the scene is from "As a Man Thinks," the Four Star feature being released by Hodkinson.

"Crimson Gardenia" Reveals the Hand of Rex Beach

ACCUSTOMED to depict the conflict of primitive passions, Rex Beach is too skilled a novelist to overlook the appealing element in the human beings he characterizes. He paints his canvas with big, sweeping strokes, yet the figures in his dramas are essentially human and appealing. "The Brand" demonstrated that, and it is confirmed in "The Crimson Gardenia," newest of his photodramas, set for release May 18.

Produced at the Goldwyn studios under the personal supervision of Rex Beach, the drama reveals the noted author in a new light, even while demonstrating afresh his virility and tremendous "punch." He has written what is described as "a romance of the Mardi Gras," but it is much more.

"The Crimson Gardenia" is a melodramatic mystery with New Orleans as a colorful, ever-changing background. A band of expert counterfeiters furnishes the sinister element, sharply contrasted with the piquant simplicity of a girl who has just arrived from Paris and the romantic masculinity of a young New Yorker eager for a carnival adventure. Into this network of conflicting desires Rex Beach infuses power and reality and pathos. The latter comes from a little, old, blind Frenchwoman, Mere Felice (Gertrude Claire). She sits patiently in a small black room waiting for her son, whom she has not seen in years.

Her most poignant moment comes when her niece, Madelon Dorette (Hedda Nova) brings to her a young man whom she believes to be Mere Felice's son. This is accomplished in a very adroit way, characteristic of Rex Beach when evolving a tale of mystery and intrigue. The girl has mingled with the merrymakers to keep an appointment with Mere Felice's son, whom she has never seen. He is a fugitive from justice and can only meet her while masked. At the same time another man, Roland Van Dam (Owen Moore), happens to wear the identifying device chosen by Mere Felice's son—a gardenia. It is this flower that later becomes crimsoned with blood and gives the play its name.

Get Big Bookings on New Joyce Film.

With the release of "The Third Degree" impending, bookings for this latest Klein screen adaptation, starring Alice Joyce, are multiplying at Vitagraph's various branch offices. All the various circuits have already been heard from, and the big independent houses have been scheduling the picture for the past two weeks.

Minnesota Boosting for Outing-Chester Picture

MINNESOTA'S great Ten Thousand Lakes Association is arousing intense interest throughout the Northwest in "Itasca Makes Her Bow," Outing-Chester release No. 11, which pictures the source and early life of the Mississippi river. Through the efforts of J. F. Cubberley, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of the Northwest, the association has learned of the subject, and many of the officials have viewed it at a private showing. As a result, the big travel-promoting organization is backing it and interesting every citizen and society it can reach.

"'Itasca Makes Her Bow' surely will go over big here," Mr. Cubberley states, "as it is very near and dear to all exhibitors in the territory."

While screening this release with its unusual local interest, Mr. Cubberley, taking thought of the many prominent exhibitors also present, screened the Outing-Chester big game double release, "Cameraing Through Africa," and he reports that it is causing unusual amount of talk among film folk.

Lake Itasca, source of the Father of Waters, is the heroine of "Itasca Makes Her Bow," and the onlooker is conducted down the infant Mississippi, and round about in the scenery. A spectacular forest fire near the lake provides a hot climax.

Simplex Used in Industrial Field.

At the Sidney Blumenthal textile plant in Shelton, Conn., where thousands of operatives are employed, it has been necessary to work on both day and night shifts, and in order to bring the employes going to work on the night shifts to their various departments in good humor, Miss Kenyon, supervisor of the factory welfare league, had several Simplex Projectors installed in the factory restaurant.

"Bolshevism on Trial" Breaks Loew Record

THE entire circuit of Marcus Loew theatres in New York City is playing "Bolshevism on Trial," Select Pictures' special attraction, to box office figures which are setting records in many houses on this circuit.

An example of the means employed by the various Loew houses to stimulate public interest in the neighborhood can be taken from the exploitation methods used by Manager Dolinsky, of the Avenue B Theatre. The usual exhibition hours for the Avenue B are from 1 to 11 P. M.; to accommodate the crowds he opened the house from 10 o'clock until midnight daily. The Avenue B Theatre is in a neighborhood populated largely by Jews, and accordingly Manager Dolinsky got out special fliers and a half-sheet printed in both Jewish and English, in addition to the paper furnished by Select. He made liberal use of cut-outs made from this paper, which he pasted on the mirrors and doors of his theatre lobby.

On the doors in his lobby, he pasted stills from the production with original story captions, and printed the name of the picture, one letter on each door. Finally, he used double his usual quota of paper, window cards and his own sign cards in the theatre and throughout the neighborhood, and the result was that Manager Dolinsky turned in for his Avenue B Theatre receipts on the half-week showing which exceeded by several hundred dollars the receipts for any other bill, vaudeville or combination of vaudeville and pictures, that had ever been taken in at this Loew theatre in its entire history.

Bacon to Start First Picture Next Week.

Gerald F. Bacon, who recently organized his own producing company, releasing through Independent Sales Corporation and the Film Clearing House, Inc., announces that he will commence work next week on the first of the series of eighteen productions to be made. Mr. Bacon will occupy the Bacon-Backer studio, following Charles Miller, who is now completing the first of the Miller features.

Mr. Bacon received the finished scenario for his first feature from Basil Dickey this week. Mr. Dickey wrote the continuity from Max Marcin's play, "Substitute Prisoner," retitled "At Sunrise." Oliver D. Bailey will direct Mr. Bacon's production. He is now casting for the first picture.

Unheralded Showing of Normand Film Goes Big.

At the Strand Theatre in Pasadena, Cal., Mabel Normand's latest Goldwyn photoplay, "When Doctors Disagree," was given an advance showing. The event was not heralded nor were there any invitations, only a regular audience of about 1,800 persons seeing it. The performance was given at the request of Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, for the purpose of seeing its effect upon an average gathering. The picture went over splendidly.

Film Reveals Hidden Grace of Tennis.

Pathe Review No. 9, released May 11, gives an inside revelation of tennis through the Novagraph slow motion pictures. The analysis shows every variety of play by experts, and an opportunity carefully to study all phases of the play is afforded by these views. Strength and alertness find full expression in the game and the ultra-rapid camera shows the action to ten times less than normal, and so display the hidden grace and tensity in the play of muscle. It shows just how the game should and should not be played.

Hayakawa Has Role of Big Gambling House Proprietor

THE Robertson-Cole company is making no elaborate predictions about the success of Sessue Hayakawa's next Haworth production, "His Debt," which will be released through Exhibitors Mutual, but is extremely confident that it will prove the biggest box office attraction of any Hayakawa offering.

The production was written by L. V. Jefferson and prepared for the screen by Frances Guihan. William Worthington, who has directed all the big Hayakawa successes, also supervised "His Debt."

There is a decidedly human appeal in the picture which smacks entirely of the western world. Hayakawa is seen as the proprietor of a handsome gambling establishment which has a reputation of always playing "on the square."

Playing opposite Hayakawa is Jane Novak. As Gloria Manning, Miss Novak has a most becoming character to portray, one which she handles with all the grace and ease that marks her every performance.

It is a limited cast which appears with Hayakawa, for besides Miss Novak the only other important players are Frances J. MacDonald, the clever young lead, and Fred Montague, a screen veteran well and favorably known for his histrionic ability. Goro Moriyama is the role which Hayakawa enacts.

The smoothness of the Japanese star's acting—the subdued tone of his emotion—was never better examplified than in "His Debt."

Safety Board Praises "Bolshevism" Film.

In addition to the approbation for "Bolshevism on Trial" recently expressed by Governor Coolidge, of Massachusetts, and Charles Black, president of the Omaha Retailers' Association, and other prominent citizens of Omaha, Miss Irene Weir, president of the School of Liberal Arts, New York, Select Pictures Corporation, which is distributing this special, received recently a letter from Paul Durlingame, chairman of the Louisville Board of Safety, lauding the production and its wholesome effect on the public mind.

The Louisville Board of Public Safety comprises the health, building, fire, hospital, police and other governmental departments of the city of Louisville, and Mr. Durlingame's letter was sent in his official capacity as the chairman of this governmental body for this leading southern city.

New Arbuckle Comedy Near Completion.

"A Desert Hero," "Fatty" Arbuckle's new Paramount production, is nearing completion at the location in Glendale, Cal.

One hundred and fifty persons have been working for the past ten days in what is probably the largest interior set ever erected for a Western picture. The story is a travesty on the conventional wild and woolly drama in which Al St. John is the "bad man," Mollie Malone the persecuted heroine and "Fatty" the dead shot and lion-hearted knight of valor and chivalry who triumphs against all odds.

Sherry Engaged for "The Tiger Lily."

J. Barney Sherry has been engaged to play an important character part in support of Margarita Fisher in "The Tiger Lily." This marks that popular actor's second consecutive performance at the "Flying A" studios, he having just completed the big character role in "Yvonne from Paris," in which Mary Miles Minter soon will be offered.

In "The Tiger Lily," Mr. Sherry will appear as "Philip Remington," millionaire owner of half the hamlet in which Miss Fisher, an Italian-American peasant girl, lives and loves and has her being.

"Art for Art's Sake, Miss," Says the Beauteous Buccaneer.
June Elvidge in the title role of the World film, "The Social Pirate," has to fight a few of the tea-room pirates herself.

May Schedule of Paramount and Artcraft Releases

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's schedule of release for May, just announced by Walter E. Greene, vice-president and managing director, department of distribution, includes the Paramount-Artcraft Special, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," as well as a number of other features which, though released under either the Paramount or Artcraft trademark, would ordinarily be classed as specials. In the list are two Artcraft productions and nine Paramount, beside the special.

The releases announced for May 4 are the John Emerson-Anita Loos Paramount production, "Oh, You Women!" Ethel Clayton in the Paramount picture, "Vicky Van," and William S. Hart's latest Artcraft production, "The Money Corral."

"Oh, You Women!" is said to be the most timely satire that Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos ever turned out, treating the after-the-war problem which has arisen through the pre-emptying by women of hundreds of thousands of the jobs formerly held by the boys in khaki. Ernest Truex and Louise Huff are featured in the leading roles and the cast includes Joseph Burke, Bernard Randall, Ida Fitzhugh and Gaston Glass.

"Vicky Van," Miss Clayton's picture, presents the star in a mystery role. It is an adaptation by Marion Fairfax of Carolyn Wells' novel which has proved one of the most successful of recent works of fiction. Robert G. Vignola directed.

In "The Money Corral," which was supervised by Thomas H. Ince, Mr. Hart returns to Western characterization, or rather, semi-Western, for much of the action takes place in Chicago. The story was written and the production directed by Lambert Hillyer and Mr. Hart, with the kind of photography for which Joe August is famous.

Marguerite Clark's newest Paramount picture, "Come Out of the Kitchen," adapted by Clara Beranger from the story by Alice Duer Miller and its dramatization by A. E. Thomas, is scheduled for May 11. The same day brings Vivian Martin to the screen in the Paramount picture, "The Home Town Girl," adapted from Oscar Graeve's story, "You Can't Just Wait," which appeared in Collier's Weekly. The scenario is by Edith Kennedy and Robert G. Vignola directed. Also released on the same day is Dorothy Dalton's latest Paramount production from the studio of Thomas H. Ince, "The Lady of Red Butte." This is from an original story and scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan and was directed by Victor L. Schertzinger, under Mr. Ince's supervision.

May 18 marks the release of "The Knickerbocker Buckaroo," a big Artcraft picture of seven reels starring Douglas Fairbanks. Albert Parker directed and the picture is said to be teeming with action and big scenes. Shirley Mason in "The Final Close-Up," a Paramount picture, is also released the 18th. The story was written by Royal Brown with scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers, and Walter Edwards directed. On this date also Charles Ray appears in "The Busher," an Ince-supervised Paramount picture. This is a baseball story by Earle Snell. R. Cecil Smith wrote the scenario and Jerome Storm directed.

The Paramount-Artcraft Special, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," which was directed by Hugh Ford, is scheduled for May 25. This is a picturization of what many consider to be Hall Caine's greatest novel. An all-star cast is featured, including Katherine MacDonald, Milton Sills, Theodore Roberts and Jack Holt. The scenario is the work of Beulah Marie Dix.

Another Thomas H. Ince-Paramount production, "The Haunted Bedroom," with Enid Bennett as star, is also released the 25th. Fred Niblo directed from the story and scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan. On the same day is released "I'll Get Him Yet," Dorothy Gish's latest Paramount picture. This is a rollicking farce comedy written by Harry Carr and directed by Elmer Clifton. Richard Barthelmess appears opposite Miss Gish and George Fawcett is in the cast.

Well-Known Actors in "Phil" Film.

When the cast was assembled at the World studio at Fort Lee to begin work on "Phil For Short," the new picture which Oscar Apfel is to direct with Evelyn Greeley as a star, James A. Furey and Henry Hallam, two actors with historic careers were among those engaged. This engagement is the first in thirty-two years that these two players had in which they are to play together. When "Erminie" was produced thirty-three years ago at the Casino Theatre, New York, both Mr. Hallam and Mr. Furey were in the original production, Furey playing the Marquis de Ponvert while Hallam was Eugene Marcel. Proving that the world's a small place, they meet at the World Studios.

They Have a Log for the Doings of This Robertson-Cole Log Cabin Town.
The log is in photoplay form, "Just Squaw," Beatriz Michelena's first release through Exhibitors Mutual.

Demand Increasing for Rapf's "Wanted for Murder"

FRANK G. HALL, president of Independent Sales Corporation, announces the bookings on Harry Rapf's special production, "Wanted for Murder," starring Elaine Hammerstein, have increased more than 50 per cent. over the normal bookings recorded prior to the decision reached by Peace Conference to the effect that the former Kaiser would be tried by five of the nations represented at the Conference.

"The result of the action taken at the Conference may or may not have incited this increase of bookings on "Wanted for Murder," said Mr. Hall, "but the fact remains that since the announcement was made our branch managers have been kept busy filing orders for bookings on this feature. Additional prints were shipped to some of the branch managers following the increased demand, and our exchanges are doing a bigger business with the Rapf production than was done for any time during the preceding three months."

In some instances exhibitors have asked for return bookings on this feature. In addition to the world-wide publicity the Kaiser is given through the columns of the daily press, Mr. Hall has started another advertising campaign on "Wanted for Murder," so that directly and indirectly, the Rapf production, dealing with the actions of the Kaiser which resulted in the decision reached by the Peace Conference to bring him to judgment, is given far-reaching publicity and advertising.

"Best Man" Is Kerrigan's Fastest and Speediest Film

THE popularity of speedy, thrilling, romantic melodrama has been proved more conclusively with the latest Jesse D. Hampton-J. Warren Kerrigan production, "The Best Man." In this picture Kerrigan has been given an eventful story packed with action and suspense; a vastly different kind of story from those associated with Kerrigan's name in the past.

There has been instant recognition among exhibitors and the reviewers for the motion picture trade journals that "The Best Man" reveals J. Warren Kerrigan in evolution; shows him deliberately stepping away from the hero-worshippers to seek his rightful and higher place as a dramatic actor depending upon screen skill called forth in the enactment of a good story rather than upon established popularity of years' growth.

"The Best Man" is a wire-tappers, "False Faces" kind of a story. With sustained coherence, it is nevertheless told in staccato; it possesses the dynamics of a pneumatic riveter, in that plausible, swift action follows action with startling rapidity.

Marguerite Clark Latest Is "Come Out of the Kitchen"

WHO ever heard of a girl who wanted to stay in the kitchen all the time instead of being the real society young lady that she was? Girls don't do such things today. But there isn't a girl in the United States who wouldn't be glad of the opportunity of going into the kitchen and coming out of it as Marguerite Clark, as Claudia Daingerfield, does in her new Paramount picture, "Come Out of the Kitchen," which is released May 11.

This picture is an adaptation by Clara Bernager of the story by Alice Duer Miller, and dramatization by A. E. Thomas. The direction of the production was entrusted to John S. Robertson, and he is said to have succeeded in preserving all the original charm of the original stage production. Miss Clark, moreover, has invested the leading role with all the delightful artistry of which she is capable.

The story is rich in romance, even though it is laid for the most part amid the prosaic surroundings of a plain, old-fashioned kitchen.

Eugene O'Brien is Miss Clark's leading man, and the cast includes among others Crauford Kent, Frances Kaye, Bradley Barker, Frederick Esmelton and Albert M. Hackett.

Lieutenant Hall Appearing in Person.

Reports coming to Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation, handling the distribution of "A Romance of the Air," starring Edith Day and Lieut. Bert Hall, American Ace, through the exchanges of the Film Clearing House, indicate that this aerial attraction is meeting with big success through the Middle West and on the Coast. An added attraction in the presentation of this feature in these territories is the personal appearance of Lieutenant Hall in the larger cities.

Mme. Vera Amazar Must Have "Ze Hand Claps"

MME. VERA AMAZAR, who is cast for an important role in the new Augustus Thomas Four Star production, second of the Thomas series of six, now in work at the Biograph studio, is to resume her work with the Chicago Opera Company under Campanini at the close of her engagement with Producer Harry Raver.

Mme. Amazar, one of the most beautiful of the grand opera stars who sang in the New York productions of "Thais" and "Le Jongleur," played the vampire role in Mr. Thomas' first Four Star picture play adaption of "As a Man Thinks," and although that was her first picture experience she gave a finished interpretation of the pretty Latin Quarter grisette who beguiled the hero of the famous drama and carried the big scene, "The Four Arts Ball," with her sympathetic treatment of the character she essayed.

"I am vat you say—deelight voos ze picture," laughed Mme. Amazar, as she talked to Leah Baird, the star, and Director George Irving, after appearing in her new role—"but I am sorree I may not also seeng.

"In ze grand opera it is important much to sing and important—not so much—to act. In ze picture eet is important not to seeng at all, and ven I have—vat you call my beet done—zen I go to my dressing room and zere I seeng to myself. Eet ees tres difficile.

"Perhaps, some day, ven I act in zee peecture, I seeng also in ze vings, and zen ze great audience applaud ze peecture, but I appear from ze veengs I bow, I laugh—it eese vat you say—triomphe.

"You seenk some day grand opera veel be in pictures, no? Zen I am in peectures not long. Eet is too cold for ze artiste. Ze handclap I must have; voila!"

First Miller Picture Nearly Finished.

Charles Miller, Charles Miller Productions, Inc., is completing the first of a series of special productions for release by Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation, through the Film Clearing House, at the Bacon-Backer studio, and announces that the production work will be finished within the next week. Herbert Rawlinson, Stuart Holmes and Florence Billings have the principal supporting roles. Charles Stevenson, Maud Hill, Regina Quinn, Herbert Webster, Vinden Friedly and Basil Webb are seen in supporting roles.

The first production will be shown in six reels. The title has not been announced.

"Trixie from Broadway" Completed.

Production of "Trixie from Broadway," in which Margarita Fisher soon will be presented by American, has been finished. As "Trixie" Miss Fisher is a slangy chorus girl, and Emory Johnson, who plays opposite, has the role of a Westerner who marries her and carries her back to his orange-ranch—when things begin to happen. Other prominent members of the cast are George Periolat, Frank Clark, Olga Grey, J. Farrell McDonald and Perry Banks. Roy Neill directed.

Interest in "The Iron Test" Unabated.

With a new Moreno serial impending, interest in "The Iron Test," the current chapter-play in which that Vitagraph star is appearing, is stimulated rather than abated. Hundreds who have not had an opportunity to see "The Iron Test" to date, are now being given this opportunity by smaller exhibitors who have had no previous chance to book "The Iron Test," due to an extraordinary long list of bookings in the bigger houses.

Take Scenes on Transport for Second Thomas Film

PROBABLY the most unusual motion picture stunt of recent happening was staged aboard the United States transport "Finland" this week when the principals of Augustus Thomas' new Four Star screen drama starring Leah Baird, now in work at the Biograph studio, boarded the ship at Quarantine soon after daylight from a small tug, Director George Irving, Billy Gibson, the Cohan & Harris comedian, and Cameraman Vanburen being yanked over the side of the ship from their dancing little tug on a bowline.

The deck officers of the transport had already received orders as to permitting picturization of deck scenes and every one of the 3,400 officers and men aboard tried to get into the picture. Most of them did in one or another of the several shots made showing the crowded deck of the big ship.

Billy Gibson, known in the profession as "Cheero Bill," who has driven over 5,000 wounded men to New York military hospitals in his service car during the last six months, and whose remarkable dance stunt has entertained more than 15,000 convalescing soldiers at the Lambs' Club and elsewhere, was personally known to many of the soldiers, and as the military hero of Mr. Thomas' new sociological play he was given an ovation by the men in uniform.

It is probable that no scene had so many lusty-lunged directors as did this one in which "Davy" (Mr. Gibson) disports himself as the footless soldier returning on crutches to the land of his birth.

Morey Film Has Solid Coast to Coast Dates.

"Beating the Odds," solidly booked from coast to coast, comes to the screen May 12, rated as the best production ever made with Harry T. Morey as the star. "The Money Maker," a popular novel, forms the foundation of the production. The story was written by Irving R. Allen and Paul Scardon directed it.

The new Vitagraph-Morey production deals for the most part with life in the underworld, but that phase of life is not converted into lurid melodrama.

Others in the cast are Betty Blythe, Jean Paige, George Majeroni, Robert Gaillard, Eulalie Jensen, Robert Mowbray and Frank Norcross.

Beautiful 24-Sheet for "Bishop's Emeralds"

"The Bishop's Emeralds," the first Virginia Pearson photoplay, which will be released by Pathe, will be liberaly supplied with advertising and promotion aids. The posters are unusually attractive. Two three sheets, one six-sheet and a twenty-four-sheet are the work of MaDan, whose Gaby Deslys twenty-four has been widely acclaimed as one of the brilliant triumphs of poster art. The Virginia Pearson one-sheet is by Emmet Owen Smith, artist, who has made all his studies for the magazines of Pearl White and Ruth Roland. Miss Pearson's twenty-four-sheet, however, marks a new achievement for the artist, both in its originality of conception and its brilliant color scheme.

Big Advance Bookings on New Serial.

With its release date twenty-four days off, "Perils of Thunder Mountain," Vitagraph's latest chapter-play, has already scored the biggest write-up in the history of Vitagraph serials, according to the assertions made by one of the officials of that organization.

Antonio Moreno is starred, with Carol Holloway playing opposite. R. N. Bradbury and William Baumann are directing the serial, which was written by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady.

Look as If Priscilla Dean Had Struck Rough Sledding in "Pretty Smooth."
Even the bon bons don't help in this predicament from the Universal picture.

"The Master Man" Reveals Seventh Human Motive

THE MASTER MAN," the first offering of the Frank Keenan Productions, which will be released in the Pathe Star Series on May 25, is said to be a splendid achievement, and in it is answered Mr. Keenan's recently propounded question, "What is the seventh human motive?" The six he classified basically as self-preservation, love, duty, gain, pride and self-indulgence, with all their derivatives. And in "The Master Man," on an analysis of it after completion, he realized that the seventh motive, as suggested by a New York editor, is self-sacrifice.

The first of the Keenan plays in which he is both star, producer and general director deals with politics, big business and the ruthless ambitions of men who are guided by corrupt and selfish ideals. It is taken from the great, throbbing heart of national realty, a deft dramatization of the news of the day as chronicled in various sections of the country.

So far as interpretation is concerned the production is perfectly cast, those appearing in the support of Mr. Keenan including Kathleen Kirkham, W. Barney Sherry, Joseph J. Dowling, Jack Bramhall and Joseph McManus. They furnish a series of perfectly expressed and accurately timed types in an intensely dramatic story which begins on a stormy, tempestuous night, when, during an effort to secure records which incriminate a powerful corporation, the discovered emissary, in his flight, slays the governor of the state. For swiftness of action and holding and carrying along the interest by direct continuity the opening scene stands as a spendid model.

Mr. Keenan considers "The Master Man" one of the most strongly motivated themes with which he has ever dealt, and that the scenario by Jack Cunningham is as perfect a bit of story mechanism that this craftsman has yet turned out. The picture was personally directed by Mr. Keenan and Ernest C. Warde, son of the American tragedian, Frederick Warde, and who has been associated with Mr. Keenan in the making of the greater number of his screen successes.

Prominent Players in Stage Women's Film.

Many prominent actresses and actors are featured in the tenth picture now being completed for the Stage Women's War Relief at the Estee Studios, New York. The picture has been given the title of "The Littlest Reason" and Galli Curci is one of the most prominent in the cast. Others in the cast are Jeanne Eagels, now playing in "Daddies"; Holbrook Blinn, now playing in "Moliere"; Helen MacKellar, on the stage in "The Unknown Purple"; Ethel Intropidi, playing in "East Is West"; Luis Alberni, Victor Sutherland, John Morris and Jessie Ralph. The last four named are also playing in current plays in New York.

The Stage Women's War Relief pictures are being produced under the direction of Eugene Spitz and George Terwilliger and will be released through the Universal exchanges.

Amsterdam House Has an All-Fox Anniversary Bill

EDWARD C. KLAPP, manager of the Rialto Theatre at Amsterdam, N. Y., never overlooks a bet when he is playing anything special, as he has just demonstrated by the way he made a huge success out of his anniversary week program.

Not only did Mr. Klapp celebrate the week of April 20 as anniversary week, but the Rialto advertised it as "The Big William Fox Week." In a half-page advertisement, published in the Amsterdam Evening Recorder on the Saturday preceding the celebration, the Rialto printed this note to the public:

"By special arrangement with the Fox Film Corporation we have been able to secure two of the most popular motion picture favorites on the screen. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday: William Farnum in 'The Jungle Trail.' Thursday, Friday, Saturday: Theda Bara in 'The Siren's Song.'"

In addition to Farnum in "The Jungle Trail," the Rialto on the first three days of the week also ran the Fox Sunshine comedy, "Money Talks," so that the entire bill, except for vaudeville, was made up of Fox pictures.

The advertisement of the Rialto was the biggest theatrical advertisement ever printed in Amsterdam. On one side of the display was a symbolical line drawing of a woman blowing a trumpet as greeting to a knight, who on the other side of the page carried a banner bearing "Anniversary Week" in bold type.

Spoor-Thompson Process Greatly Reduces Flickering

THE troublesome jumping of film in projection, which has been a constant source of annoyance to the moving picture patron, has at last been reduced to such a minimum as to be practically negligible.

George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Company, by the Spoor-Thompson method of processing film by automatic machinery, however, has reached a practical solution of the difficulty.

"This was accomplished," said Mr. Spoor, "through feeding the film into the wet end of the machine in thousand-foot lengths, thus requiring, with the ordinary run of film, but two splices to the reel, whereas under the old method anywhere from ten to thirty splices are needed.

"As it is the splices that cause the jumping and flickering of the film, it readily can be seen with what smoothness the film can be projected, with but two splices to a thousand feet.

"In the case of many various tints in the same reel, more than two splices are sometimes necessary, but even with numerous tints the machine reduces the splicing an appreciable amount over the old method of processing."

"Third Degree" Released May 19.

"The Third Degree," the latest of Charles Klein's plays to be filmed by Vitagraph, will receive its screen baptism on May 19, when it will be seen at first-run houses throughout the country. Advance bookings have been very big, according to the Vitagraph sales promotion department.

Alice Joyce again impersonates a heroine precipitated into the heart of situations and complexities. She is supported by Gladden James, Anders Randolf, L. Rogers Lytton, Hedda Hopper, Herbert Evans, George Beckus, J. T. Wade and Edward McGuire. Tom Terriss directed the production.

"Better 'Ole" Opens Big in San Francisco.

World Pictures is in receipt of a telegram from Floyd St. John, San Francisco exchange manager of the company stating that "The Better 'Ole" in photoplay opened to capacity business at the Curran Theatre. With prices ranging from 25 cents to 75 cents the record of the theatre was broken on the opening day. Record crowds attended.

Marion Davies and "Horse's Neck."
The Select star had July 1 in mind when she purchased her newest saddle horse.

"Six Feet Four"—Four of 'Em Being Horse's Feet
Viola Vale's favorite steed has white feet and a white face in American's "Six Feet Four."

Universal Western Depicts Stirring Civil War Days

UNIVERSAL is reviving its production of Western dramas. In its latest "Riders of Vengeance," in which Harry Carey is starred, there is little of the improbable, such as was the case in Western photodramas of former days.

Carey's new vehicle was written by Jack Ford, the director of the picture, and himself. The scenario was edited by Eugene B. Lewis. A notable group of Western actors support Mr. Carey. They are Seena Owen, who plays opposite Carey, Joseph Harris, J. Farrell McDonald, Alfred Allen, Jennie Lee and Clita Gale.

The scenes of the picture are laid in the deserts and mountains of the West in the days of the stirring times which followed the Civil War. Harry Carey is cast as "Cheyenne Harry" Carson who, upon seeing his three brothers and his father lying mortally wounded on the steps of a little Western church and his bride dying in his arms, all the victims of hired assassins, lifts his hands to the heavens swearing that he will avenge the murder of his people with the blood of each member of the murder gang.

Marion Davies Starts on Another Five Reeler.

Marion Davies, having completed her last starring feature "The Dark Star," and her producers being greatly pleased with the unusual success of "Getting Mary Married," her present starring release, has started work in the Biograph studios, under Robert Leonard's direction, on a five-reel feature as yet untitled. It is said to be the screened version of a recently published novel.

Working on New Lyons and Moran Comedies.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, the pair of laugh-producers in the Lyons-Moran brand of comedies released through Universal, are at work on several new comedies. The titles of three of their newest comedies soon to be released have been announced as follows: "Harmony in a Flat," "The Bullshiviks" and "Three in a Closet." Grace Marvin and Mildred Moore are the feminine leads in the comedies.

Lyons and Moran Complete Their 250th Production

THE coming Lyons-Moran comedy which has been given the title "Love Thy Neighbor," is the two hundred and fiftieth production made by these two fun makers of the films. Today Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are known the country-wide as two screen comedians who never fail to produce a laugh. Although the two men themselves are the real fun-makers of the comedies, a good bit of the success of the comedies is due to the excellent supporting cast used with their pictures.

Lyons and Moran have been adhering to their schedule of one comedy a week for two years at Universal City, many times making considerable more than one in a week. Al Gawood, the official Lyons-Moran cameraman, has been photographing the two comedians ever since they entered Universal's service.

Two comedy writers, Clyde Bruckman, former Saturday Evening Post scribe and Melville Brown, erstwhile magazine author and vaudeville producer, are steadily engaged in writing stories for the Lyons-Moran comedies.

New Minter Picture Being Cut.

"Yvonne from Paris," in which Mary Miles Minter soon will be presented by the American, is in the cutting-room, and reports from the "Flying A" studios indicate that it bears all the earmarks of a record-breaker. It was writetn by Joseph Franklin Poland, prepared for the screen by Frank Howard Clark, and directed by Emmett J. Flynn.

Build Long Street for Russell Film.

What is said to be probably the longest Western street ever built for a picture-play was recently constructed at the American studios for use in "Six Feet Four," the adaptation of Jackson Gregory's celebrated novel, in which William Russell soon will be presented. It measures 380 feet in length and includes 32 buildings.

"From Headquarters" Is Popular.

"From Headquarters" is continuing to thoroughly interest picture audiences throughout the country. Booking returns received daily at the various branch offices of Vitagraph indicate that the popularity of the production, of which Anita Stewart is the star, will expand far into the summer and beyond.

Following "The Tiger's Trail"
Often requires speed, so Ruth Roland hires a jitney mule for the Pathe serial in which she stars.

Title Work a Feature of Michelena's "Just Squaw"

GEORGE MIDDLETON, who produced and directed the series of three features starring Beatriz Michelena which Robertson-Cole will release through Exhibitors Mutual, has always been regarded as one of the most original men in his line. His previous efforts with Miss Michelena's offerings were always marked by some departure from the beaten track of motion picture direction.

Now, with "Just Squaw," the drama which will bring Miss Michelena back to the screen after a long period which she devoted to the making of the three pictures just purchased by Robertson-Cole, Middleton has introduced several new and artistic features.

The most noteworthy of these is a new make-up of quotation title, wherein the picture of the character speaking is embodied into the art work that co-operates with the hand printed verbage.

All who have viewed the first sample copy of the production have been impressed with the effectiveness of this device, and among those who have complimented Mr. Middleton upon his ingenuity in working it out is Earle Snell, author of "Just Squaw." The production will be released by Robertson-Cole this month.

Andrew Robson as Snake LeGal gives one of the most impressive exhibitions of a Western bad man ever introduced on the screen. He is a bad man without the customary gnashing of teeth, and wailing of his victims. Yet he is effective and makes himself biterly disliked right from his first appearance until his life is crushed by a bullet from the rifle of the heroines father.

Dedicates Song in Honor of Norma Talmadge, Select Star

ANOTHER song dedicated in honor of Norma Talmadge, Select Pictures star, has been published by the Leo Feist Company, of New York. The name of the song is "Norma." The words are by Sidney D. Mitchell and the music is by Archie Gottler.

An important point in the publication of this latest Norma Talmadge song is the co-operation between the Leo Feist Company and the exhibitors of Norma Talmadge pictures. Orchestrations of "Norma" and two lantern slides, one announcing Norma Talmadge in her forthcomping Select picture, "The New Moon," and another, showing the chorus of the song, will be distributed by the music company to all Norma Talmadge exhibitors.

In addition to this plan of co-operation, the Feist Company is having posters printed which will be pasted in the windows of every music house handling the song. The posters are in colors and bear a large portrait of Miss Talmadge, with appropriate wording announcing that she is a Select star, and that the song has been dedicated in her honor.

Idolizing the Idol.

Pauline Frederick Scores Anew in "The Fear Woman"

GOLDWYN studio executives are delighted with the latest Pauline Frederick picture, "The Fear Woman," which has just been completed at the Goldwyn studios at Culver City, Cal. They are sanguine that this latest triumph will further enhance her reputation as the screen's incomparable emotional artist. Never before in her career has Miss Frederick been called upon to portray such a variety of emotions as are demanded by the exacting role of Helen Winthrop.

"The Fear Woman," by Izola Forrester, is Miss Frederick's third Goldwyn picture. It presents a modern psychological study, replete with dramatic situations which increase in intensity up to a final smashing climax.

In "The Fear Woman," the star plays the difficult role of a young woman who has grown, flower-like, to maturity, only to discover that a horrible weakness has afflicted every member of her family for generations past. How the unsuspecting girl meets this disclosure; how she is overcome by the sudden fear that she may become the victim of the curse; her fight against this possibility, and the more subtle terror lest she may never rise above its shadow, are portrayed by Miss Frederick with characteristic forcefulness.

Supporting Miss Frederick are Milton Sills, Harry Northrup, Walter Hiers, and Beverly Travers.

Many Noted Comedy Players in "When Doctors Disagree"

A CAST of exceptional merit was assembled for Mabel Normand's newest Goldwyn picture, "When Doctors Disagree," which is scheduled for release May 25. The production was directed by Victor L. Schertzinger. Playing opposite Miss Norman is Walter Hiers.

"The Little Girl Next Door" afforded Fritzie Ridgeway her first screen opportunity, and she has since appeared in "The Raven," "High Speed" and "The Calendar Girl." In "When Doctors Disagree" she plays with skill the role of a haughty village belle, the Queen o' the May.

Alec B. Francis, who plays Dr. Harris in Miss Normand's latest production, was for years on the English stage before entering the cinema. William Buckley began his screen career in "The Escape," and later became a director. Both George Nichols and James Gordon play prominent parts in the production.

Bessie Love Completes Timber Scenes.

Bessie Love and her company is back on the lot at Hollywood, California, after several weeks spent in filming exteriors for her coming photoplay of lumber camp life, "The Little Boss," in the big woods of Northern California. Most of these scenes were taken adjacent to Eureka, on vast timber tracts. For additional exteriors the company went to Fresno, after completing its work at Eureka. Here flume scenes were taken.

"The Little Boss" was especially written for Miss Love by Rida Johnson Young. In it Wallace McDonald appears as Miss Love's leading man, with Otto Lederer, Harry Russell, Karl Formes, J. Morley, Joe Rickson and Clara Knight to complete the cast. David Smith is the director.

"Look in the Book for It"
Is the sage line followed by William Russell, the star, and Stephen Fox, the scenarist, of American's "Six Feet Four."

Elaborate Midnight Revue Staged for Metro Picture

A STARTLING reproduction of a popular New York midnight revue was staged at the Metro studios for scenes in connection with a May Allison picture.

"Almos tMarried" is the name of the story by E. V. Durling, written especially for Miss Allison, and accentuating her varied talents. Charles Swickard returned to Metro to direct the star in this production.

Nothing was neglected or overlooked to make this set one of the finest theatre interior ever constructed for motion pictures.

Over a hundred tables on the ballroom floor, and an artistic stairway curved its way from the stage to the floor. The stage was equipped with back drops, wings, flies, foots and spots, and a beautiful monogramed heavy velvet curtain hung from the flies.

June Mathis and Luther A. Reed, of the Metro scenario staff, adapted the story to the screen.

The cast includes Walter I. Percival, Frank Currier, Harry Rattenbury, James Warton James and Hugh Fay.

The play opens in the Swiss Alps and finds its conclusion 'mid the bright lights of old Broadway's gay white way, and recounts the incidents in the life of a young Swiss maiden with vocal talents who is imported by a vaudeville promoter to become the bone of contention between a father and son as rivals for her affection.

Here's One Full of Hot Tomale.

The information is volunteered by Hal Roach, head of the Rolin company that "Si, Senor," starring Harold Lloyd, with Bebe Daniels and "Snub" Pollard, "fairly thrills with the spirit of chili-con-carne and is full of tomale tensity," which is only a way of saying that this Lloyd comedy is about the best Spanish-American travesty that has ever been given to the screen. Miss Daniels as the Mexican beauty is vivaciously alluring.

The action of the comedy is swift, and Harold Lloyd, who carries the burden of the laughs, does some of his nimblest and most daring acrobatics.

Among Independent Producers

Conducted by C. S. SEWELL

Nearly All Territory Sold on Gale Henry Films

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Bulls Eye Film Corporation that all available rights on the Gale Henry two-reel comedies has been sold with the exception of New Orleans and Minneapolis territories. These sales were made within a thirty-day period, and are claimed to set a record on productions State Rights market.

Milton Cohen, president of Bulls Eye, says:

"We are naturally pleased with the success of the Gale Henry productions, and point to the rapid-fire sales of territory as an indication of the general trend toward clean-cut comedies. Our aim is to make every picture better than its predecessor. Exhibitor opinion received through our exchanges is back of us, and the outlook for the future never was brighter."

The following sales are reported:

To Consolidated Film Corporation of San Francisco, for California; the R. D. Lewis Film Co., Inc., for Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas; Equitable Film Corporation, for Kansas City territory; Educational Film Corporation, for Wisconsin and North and South Dakota.

Guinan Westerns Proving Easy State Right Sellers

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation only recently announced the release to state rights exchanges of the series of twenty-six Texas Guinan two-reel westerns, and twenty-six single-reel Mack Swain (Ambrose) comedies.

Within four days after the publication of the advertisement in the trade papers more than sixty per cent. of the entire United States, including the entire foreign market, has been disposed of,and the executives of the Frohman Amusement Corporation releasing these productions expect a record in the disposition of the state rights attractions will be established by the closing out within two weeks of the entire world to independent exchanges on both series of productions.

The original plan will in all probability be extended. The New York office is advised by William L. Sherrill, who at present is supervising the initial releases, that "The She Wolf," originally intended for two reels, will be in five reels, in which event the state rights exchanges contracting for the series of Texas Guinan subjects will be receiving a five-reel production at the same cost for the rights as they pay for the two-reel attractions. The subject was too big for a two-reel release.

In line with its policy to exploit these productions as features, the Frohman Amusement Corporation has contracted to distribute two-style one sheets, three sheets, six sheets, slides, photo enlargements, newspaper cuts and press books, a line of advertising material usually circulated only in connection with special feature attractions. The first release of the Texas Guinan westerns is scheduled for May 15 and the first Mack Swain comedy for May 20.

Special Local Advertising Prepared for S-L Feature

TO assist exhibitors in exploiting the title of their production, Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin have prepared a newspaper campaign for "Virtuous Men." It has been ascertained in what cities the exhibitor preferred to supply his local paper with photos, mats or cuts, and the expenditures necessary in order that exhibitors might secure the best possible results with minimum expense.

Exhibitors will be supplied with a set of one-line teaser advertisements to be run. These teasers gradually increase in space until the title "Virtuous Men" has been "planted" in the minds of readers, and following these, a series of display advertisements has been prepared containing punchy reading matter, accompanied by striking cuts. These displays also increase gradually in size until the exhibitor can climax his campaign with a large-sized advertisement on the day prior to his presentation. For these big advertisements special plates have been made of original drawings by Clarence F. Underwood and R. G. Morgan, setting forth the big moments in "Virtuous Men."

In conjunction with the advertising campaign outlined, a set of publicity stories designed to appear the same days as the advertisements has also been prepared. The entire layout has been arranged in sequence, the space to be used by exhibitors has been marked.

Harry Grossman Leaves for Trip to the Coast

HARRY GROSSMAN, vice-president and general manager of Oliver Films, Inc., is on a tour which will include many of the principal cities in which a number of the leading picture theatres are exhibiting "The Carter Case," the Craig Kennedy serial, which was produced under his personal supervision. Mr. Grossman will make his first stop at Los Angeles and visit the other cities on his return.

Carrying out the idea of Oliver Films, Inc., to assist both exchanges and exhibitors in every way possible to enjoy success and big returns with the serial, Mr. Grossman will inaugurate special advertising campaigns in the important territorial centers, including local newspaper and widespread billboard advertising.

Before leaving, Mr. Grossman stated negotiations are under way for closing the few open territories. He will complete these during his trip, and upon his return "The Carter Case" will be in the hands of a prominent exchange in every territory in the country. He will be absent about two weeks.

"Reclaimed" Sold for New England.

Alpha Pictures, Inc., reports the sale of "Reclaimed" for the New England states to the Major Film Corporation of Boston; also the Metropolis Comedies for the same territory.

Lewis Film Company, Inc., for Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas; to the Equitable Film Corporation for Kansas City territory.

President Rose of Pioneer Buys a Special Attraction

MORRIS ROSE, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, has returned to New York after several weeks' absence in the middle West. The purpose of Mr. Rose's trip, which was to secure the rights to a big special production, was accomplished and it is announced that this production, the title of which will be announced later, will be given a special presentation at a prominent Broadway theatre.

In addition to his connection with Pioneer, Mr. Rose is also interested in several stage productions, including one of Cosmo Hamilton's plays, and has also secured the film version of this author's "Sins of the Children," produced by Harry Rapf. Mr. Rose reports that during his trip he found that the greatest optimism prevails in motion picture circles throughout the country.

Gaumont Graphic Features the Sayings of Will Rogers

THE witty and clever sayings of Will Rogers, the popular comedian whose work is a feature of Zeigfeld's Follies and Midnight Frolic, will appear regularly in Gaumont news reels, the first appearing in the current issue of Gaumont Graphic.

This issue also shows the christening of the U. S. super-dreadnaught "Tennesee," together with a vessel of an entirely different type, as queer craft being built by a colored pastor to carry the gospel into Africa. Chicago welcoming Lieutenant Rickenbacker, the famous American ace; the entry of French troops into Constantinople, the big military parade of war machinery in New York's liberty loan campaign.

Several Big Theatres Book "Virtuous Men"

SEVERAL of the leading theatres are preparing to present "Virtuous Men" for extended engagements. H. C. Simeral, general manager of Co-Partner Attractions, who purchased "Virtuous Men" for Ohio, western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, states the production will be presented for a run in the Grand Theatre, Columbus, commencing Sunday, May 11. Mr. Simeral is conducting an extended exploitation campaign in behalf of the S-L picture, including a large amount of advertising in the newspapers.

The new Palace Theatre of New Haven will present the S-L production beginning Monday, May 19. The Palace is one of the Poli circuit houses.

In addition to a comprehensive advertising campaign, furnished by S-L Pictures, a representative of the company will spend several days in each town prior to the openings, to carry out an advertising campaign in conjunction with the theatre management. This offer on the part of Sawyer and Lubin has been enthusiastically received by State Right buyers and exhibitors.

Pioneer Starts Big Poster Campaign.

An extensive outdoor poster campaign has been inaugurated by the Pioneer Film Corporation on "Virtuous Sinners" calling for a wide display of twenty-four sheet stands, and it is announced that this policy will also be followed with the other forthcoming Pioneer attractions.

Second Walthall Special Completed for Pioneer

REPORTS from Los Angeles received by the Pioneer Film Corporation announce the completion of "The Long Arm of Mannister," the second of the series of special productions being made by the National Film Corporation for the Pioneer Film Corporation, with Henry B. Walthall in the leading role.

The production is a screen dramatization of the novel of the same title by E. Phillips Oppenheim which enjoyed wide popularity. In the picture, the director, Bertram Bracken, is said to have closely followed the novel and retained the strong dramatic development of the story leading up to an unexpected climax.

In the extensive exploitation campaign to be conducted by Pioneer on this subject, it is announced that several new departures will be introduced.

Few Territories Open on "The Carter Case"

HARRY GROSSMAN, vice-president and general manager of Oliver Films, Inc., producers of "The Carter Case," the Craig Kennedy serial featuring Herbert Rawlinson and Margaret Marsh, states that he is now completing negotiations for the sale of the few remaining territories and expects to close them within a short time.

The list of open territory was recently shortened by the sale of Iowa and Nebraska to the Sterling Film Corporation, of Omaha. Prominent exchangemen from Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Colorado visited the Oliver Films studio last week and viewed several of the initial episodes and opened negotiations for purchase for their respective territories.

According to reports made to Oliver Films by various exchanges, bookings for the serial are progressing at a rapid rate. Samuel Grand, Boston, announces his trade showing was followed by a large number of sales throughout New England, several bringing unsually high prices; also, the serial was booked in a large number of theatres that had never before played a chapter picture.

Illinois, controlled by the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, shows a percentage of bookings that are said to approach a record for a serial. With both the Ascher Bros. and Lubliner and Trinx Circuits playing the picture in many of their houses and with independent bookings, Chicago will run a close second to New York in volume of bookings.

Similar reports are being received from exchanges in all parts of the country, one of the chief reasons for the success of the serial seeming to be the popularity of the Craig Kennedy stories with millions of readers. The theatres in which the picture is being shown report it receives the highest approval from their patrons and that it is becoming an important part of their programs.

New England Audiences Like Frohman Feature

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation is in receipt of communications from state rights buyers who have secured rights to "Once to Every Man" commenting on the vogue this picture is having in their territories.

Messrs. Farrell and Aechtler, of the Major Film, Inc., operating in New England, write:

"We take this opportunity to congratulate you upon your production and trust in the future we shall be considered for any and all of the Frohman productions featuring Jack Sherrill, as the above mentioned production has been the means of the various exchanges handling a Jack Sherrill Feature to triple their business.

"'Once to Every Man' is going bigger than we anticipated and we feel that if the two reelers will receive the same care in the production end, there is no doubt but same will be a tremendous success."

In view of the impending world's championship fight between Jack Dempsey and Jess Willard, added impetus is lent to "Once to Every Man" which has been characterized picturizing the most realistic fistic battle ever screened.

Christies Sold for Three Western States.

C. H. Christie, of the Christie Film Company, has arranged with the Arrow Photoplays Company, of Denver, for the release of Christie films through that company for the states of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming. Arrow Photoplays have not previously handled Christie films and secured both the Christie comedies in one reel and Christie two-reel Specials for its territory. The deal was closed during C. H. Christie's stay in New York City.

New Christie Two-Reeler Is Titled "Rowdy Ann"

THE title, "Rowdy Ann," has been selected for the second of the Christie Special two-reel releases featuring Fay Tincher. It aptly describes the leading character, a girl who was so "rough and Western" that her father sent her to a boarding school to be polished. What happened may be imagined from the first episode in which Ann licks the toughest cowboy on the place.

"Sally's Blighted Career" will have a special cast, including Fay Tincher, Patricia Palmer, Harry Depp and Katharine Lewis, and Eddie Barry, who has just returned to the Christie Company. Katharine Lewis was specially engaged for the production.

Al E. Christie, who directed "Rowdy Ann," from the story by W. Scott Darling, is better satisfied with it as a fast comedy than with his premier effort at two-reel comedy making, although he has never yet been satisfied with a Christie comedy, but has been agreeably surprised to learn that some of the most popular of the comedies have been those which he termed as "rotten."

The Christie Follies' girls will also be seen again in "Rowdy Ann," as seminary maids.

"Rowdy Ann" will be released May 25, through the twenty-nve exchanges in the United States and Canada.

Canada and New Jersey Sold on "Virtuous Men"

ARTHUR H. SAWYER and Herbert Lubin announced more sales of territory on "Virtuous Men." The First National Exhibitors' Exchange of Paterson, has acquired the rights to the E. K. Lincoln starring vehicle for New Jersey. Jacob Fabian, president of the exchange, feels this purchase will be an important addition to the features he is at present distributing.

A. M. Fabian, general manager of the First National Exhibitors' Exchange, has arranged to present "Virtuous Men" at the Garden Theatre in Paterson beginning Monday, May 12. Following this, the picture will be placed in one of Mr. Fabian's houses in Newark for a run. Sawyer and Lubin will provide all of the original sketches done by Clarence F. Underwood and other artists of E. K. Lincoln for the lobby display.

S-L Pictures also reports the sale of the Canadian territory for "Virtuous Men" to The Big Four Limited, of Winnipeg, who will distribute this production through their offices in Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, and already report bookings in many of the larger theatres of the Dominion for the picture.

Much Newspaper Praise for "The White Heather"

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S latest production "The White Heather," had its premiere at the Rialto Theatre, New York, Sunday, May 4. It was offered with a special musical arrangement created by Hugo Reinsenfeld. Many favorable comments were expressed by the New York daily newspapers, among which are the following:

"'The White Heather' is a thrilling story, and the photography is beautiful. Maurice Tourneur is a maker of moving pictures. His work invariably affirms it. Many of the scenes, especially, but by no means exclusively, those shades by fog and night, are masterpieces of their kind."

"Spectators will enjoy the thrills of Mr. Tourneur's latest melodrama, which includes a fight between two men on the bottom of the ocean."

"Many fathoms under the sea men struggle. The wreckage at their feet, the fish all about them, and the bubbles of escaping air from their helmets made the scene one of the most stirring and realistic achievements depicted in a long time."

Rights on W. H. Reissues Being Rapidly Closed Out

W. H. PRODUCTIONS COMPANY are rapidly closing out the territories in the United States on their latest re-issues, "Custer's Last Fight," the two-reel William S. Hart re-issues, "Jim Cameron's Wife" and "His Hour of Manhood" and the series of twelve Arbuckle re-issues.

There is being prepared on "Custer's Last Fight" an unusually comprehensive line of advertising matter considering that this feature is in three reels. Sketches are being made for two styles of one sheet, three sheet and six-sheet posters, an attractive set of lobby display is being made up and there will also be a press sheet with newspaper cuts and publicity stories.

The advertising matter on the two William S. Hart re-issues will consist of one, three and six-sheet posters and a lobby display and on the Arbuckles there will be one and three sheets and a lobby display.

The exchanges who have already contracted for the two series of Keystone single reelers, viz., the Eagle Brand and the Liberty Brand and the two series of Kay Bee subjects, the Columbia Brand and Union Brand, state that they are meeting with fine results, and in many cases prominent theatres are featuring them as added attractions.

Weintroub Visits New York

MR. M. WEINTROUB, manager of the Fontenelle Feature Film Company, of Omaha, spent the past week in New York. He reports that the motion picture industry is thriving in the middle West.

Mr. Weintroub was an interested visitor at the Gaumont Company plant, at Flushing, Long Island. The Fontenelle Feature Film Company is handling the Gaumont News and Graphic, "Satan on Earth," and the Gaumont serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," in Iowa and Nebraska; the object of Mr. Weintroub's visit was the booking of Gaumont's new novelty release, "Pictorial Life."

First Sholom Aleichem Film Will Be Shown on May 12

A PRIVATE showing of "Khavah," the first Sholom Aleichem story ever filmed, will be given to the motion picture trade and newspapermen by Zion Films, Inc., the producers, on Monday afternoon, May 12, at 3 o'clock, at Wurlitzer Hall, 113 W. 40th street.

Great interest is said to have been manifested by exhibitors throughout the country and their patrons in this initial release of a story from the pen of the writer who has been called the Jewish Mark Twain. Sholom Aleichem is known for his stories, which have either been written in Russian or Hebrew. But this is the first time the American public will have an opportunity to see just what qualities have gone to make this Russian writer so beloved by the people of his race.

The title role of "Khavah" is played by Alice Hastings, star of the stage production "Turn to the Right." Miss Hastings is supported by Giacomo Masuroff and Alex Tenenholtz. The rest of the cast is made up of Sonia Radin, Phil Sanford, Billie Wilson, Ray Friedgen and Anna Kehlman. The picture was directed by Charles E. Davenport.

Excellent Backgrounds in Texas Guinan Films

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, who is supervising the making of the Texas Guinan attractions, announces he is determined to put into these two-reel subjects the same detail and endeavor that has been put in the feature attractions made by that company.

What is said to be the largest cattle ranch in the world, with 80,000 head of cattle, is but one of the backgrounds in one of these productions. The scenic beauty of the Topango Canyon, thirty-five miles south of Los Angeles, is the locale for scenes in "Malamute Meg," the third release. A Chinese Western saloon and dance hall furnishes an important interior scene for "The She Wolf," the proprietor of one of these places assisted in the construction of the set, which is a replica of his establishment, and some of his Chinese waitresses appear in the scene.

Miss Guinan's reputation for realism, it is said, will be further borne out by her work in the Frohman productions, and she has undertaken tasks which it is claimed even a man might be justified in dodging. One of these occurs in "South of the Santa Fe," where, in a realistic fight with cowboys, Miss Guinan was injured in filming one of the scenes.

Sidelights and Reflections

A GLANCE through the advertising pages of the New York dailies reveals several significant events in the moving picture world. The week of May 7 saw the opening, Monday night, of the Salvation Army picture, "Fires of Faith," in which Commander Evangeline Booth appeared. At the other theatres Nazimova in "The Red Lantern," Blanche Sweet in "The Unpardonable Sin," and Anita Stewart in "Mary Regan" were being shown. For the following week Mary Pickford, in her initial First National release, "Daddy Longlegs," is underlined; also Norma Talmadge in "The New Moon" and the opening of the D. W. Griffith repertory season, which is announced as "A world epoch in the history of the theatre."

---

Another event which shows the advancement of the moving picture in a direction which practically has been barred to it in the past, is the meeting in New York of a committee from the Methodist Society to secure pictures for exhibition at the Conference in Columbus next July at which over two hundred thousand members of the society are to be present. At a meeting of the committee several of the trade paper reviewers were invited to attend and assist in the selection of the pictures.

---

The showing the week of May 7 in New York of the British films brought over for the purpose of ascertaining if the reviewers and others connected with the screen consider them suitable to the American market should prove a quick method of getting a line on the information wanted. Reviews of the first half of the pictures appear in this issue.

---

Give us new stories! says the exhibitor, and the demand is echoed by the public. This cry is natural enough. But to meet the demand is not so easy as it appears to the man in front of the screen. Authors, directors and producers know the chances they are taking when they depart from the conventional. Certain situations may be relied upon to please the majority of amusement seekers. These have been used over and over again and will continue to be used as long as the screen exists. When a producer spends a small fortune on a picture and secures the services of a director and actors of known ability he is loath to use a story with untried situations. He cannot follow the example of his rival on the stage and substitute a bit of "sure-fire" for the new material. Novelty pays big returns when it succeeds, but has an unpleasant trick of betraying the manager's trust. WEITZEL.

"Fires of Faith"

Salvation Army Picture Produced by Paramount Is Splendid Tribute to This Noble Organization.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE SALVATION ARMY has acted wisely, as usual. The decision of its leaders to permit the use of its name in connection with a moving picture has opened up a wide channel for spreading the story of its wonderful achievements in the war. Less a propaganda picture than a piece of story-telling that will compare favorably with any of the screen tales of the great conflict, "Fires of Faith" will interest and entertain regardless of creed. While a splendid tribute to the noble organization whose activities inspired it, every spectator will be doing himself a kindness when he buys a seat and sits down to look at the picture. He will receive full value for his money. That, by the way, is true of every investment in the work of the Army. The war has taught everyone this important fact.

The combination of circumstances which produced "Fires of Faith" guarantees expert effort in every department. Charles E. Whittaker wrote the original story, Beulah Marie Dix put it into scenario form, and the picture was produced by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation under the direction of Edward Jose. The cast, which includes Catherine Calvert, Eugene O'Brien, Robert Anderson and Ruby de Remer, and is supplemented by the appearance of Commander Evangeline Booth in person, is up to the mark in every particular.

On the opening night at the Harris Theatre, New York, Colonel William McIntyre, speaking as the representative of Commander Booth, assured his hearers of the Army's pride in the picture. That pride is well founded. It is now up to the exhibitors and the general public to show their appreciation of the men and women who worked so unselfishly to aid the boys "over there" by booming "Fires of Faith" to the limit.

The Story.

"Fires of Faith" is a cleverly conceived blending of what the Salvation Army has accomplished for humanity, and a love story of the great war, whose entertaining qualities make it excellent entertainment for the general public. A young girl, Elizabeth Blake, who is inveigled into a road house and betrayed, is discovered by Salvation Army workers after she has sunk to the lowest level of womanhood, and has been struck down while trying to help Harry Hammond, who knew her when she was a maid in the home of Mrs. Traverse, to whose daughter Hammond is engaged. The young man has wandered down toward the docks while waiting for Agnes Traverse and her mother, who are attending a Salvation Army meeting at headquarters, and has been attacked by two thugs. They exchange clothes with him and sell him to the captain of a freighter, who is short of firemen.

Elizabeth is taken to headquarters by the workers and kept there until she recovers. There is then shown how she may become a useful member of society. She accepts the chance and goes to France as a Salvation Army lassie. Luke Barlow, a farmhand who knew and loved Elizabeth when she was living with her foster parents in the country, meets her just as the workers are leaving for the other side. He enlists in the regular army and follows Elizabeth as soon as circumstances will permit.

Hammond is forced to shovel coal on the freighter until France is reached. He enlists in the aviation service and eventually meets Elizabeth, and also Agnes, who became a Salvation Army worker, after the death of her mother. Elizabeth has learned to care for Hammond, but she realizes that her love is hopeless, and Luke turns out to be so faithful and such a fine soldier, that she is glad to accept him.

Scenes of the conflict and situations of dramatic strength carry the latter part of the story to a thrilling climax.

"The Amateur Adventuress"

Emmy Wehlen Attractive in Entertaining Comedy Romance Released by Metro.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

OF THE type of photoplays built principally to amuse is "The Amateur Adventuress," released by Metro April 28. It is a comedy romance starring Emmy Wehlen. The work of the star is pleasing, and she has been afforded ample opportunities to appear to advantage in gorgeous gowns.

The clever and witty subtitles are a feature of the production, and there is an abundance of good clean comedy provided by the love affair between the son of a wealthy soap manufacturer and a delicatessen keeper's daughter, although the characters of both are exaggerated.

There is a gentle jibe at the movie fans, in the character of the soap makers' widow, whose two passions in life are her love for her son and "the movies." This has been effectively used in the ending of the picture.

The supporting cast is excellent, Victor Potel being exceptionally good as the soap maker's son. Praise is also due to William V. Mong as the hypocritical benefactor of working girls, and Gene Pallette as the self-centred young clerk. The photography is very good, and Director Henry Otto has handled this adaptation of a popular magazine story in such a manner as to bring out its entertaining values well, although plausibility has been somewhat sacrificed.

Emmy Wehlen in Metro's "The Amateur Adventuress," portrays a stenographer employed by a wealthy hypocrite who conducts a bureau to help working girls, as a cloak for his unscrupulous business methods, and who is inclined to take a personal interest in his pretty applicants.

Engaged to a smug, selfish clerk who decides that she may continue at work after they are married, and goaded by her employer's repeated declarations that she should wear pretty clothes, she determines to see "Life." She orders gorgeous clothes, charging them to her employer. His wife learns of this, and the girl claiming that her employer is to blame, finally wins his wife's sympathy and a check for $500.

Then her adventures commence. She meets a wealthy man whose sister's son is in love with a delicatessen keeper's daughter, and agrees for $5,000, to "vamp" him. She finally succeeds, but in the meantime falls in love with the rich man who has engaged her for this undertaking. ## "The White Heather"

Maurice Tourneur Production Adapted from the Drury Lane Melodrama with a Sensational Undersea Conflict.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

ENGLISH melodrama, strengthened by highly interesting undersea views photographed by the Williamson submarine tube, "The White Heather" portrays some tremendous efforts to get the "papers" in the case of a young lady, Marion Hume, who married Lord Angus Cameron aboard his yacht by the Scotch ceremony of declaration before two witnesses. The documentary evidence of the marriage, enclosed in water-proof wrappings before the yacht was sunk, constitutes the sole protection of Marion and her child, as one witness disappeared in the deep, and the other in the flotsam and jetsam of the London underworld. Lord Angus, finding himself in serious financial circumstances, urged to marry a woman of wealth, denies his secret marriage to Marion, and fights with high-bred selfishness to make his own son a bastard, a conflict ending in his own death, and that of a lad who tried to clear the young wife's name. Such is the tragic plot of the Tourneur production, the theme embodying vehement denunciation of class prejudice in Great Britain.

Just as Liszt paraphrased and transformed a lot of barbaric Hungarian melodies into rhapsodies of beauty, so Tourneur paraphrases and transforms these Drury Lane melodramas into visualizations of scenic charm by consummate skill in accomplishing fine picture effects. Some of his exteriors are filled with the instinctive delights of beautiful landscape, his interiors gems of lighting effects.

The Story.

Lord Angus Cameron, of the White Heather country, finds himself seriously embarrassed financially during a panic on the stock exchange, and goes to Donald Cameron on his country estate for a loan. Donald refuses because Angus will not contract a favorable marriage with one of his class. Under compelling necessity, ruin staring him in the face, Angus decides to rid himself of a secret marriage made with Marion Hume on board his yacht before it was sunk. Many fathoms under water lies the documentary evidence; one witness is dead, and the other has long vanished, a sailor on some long voyage. During a hunt he accidentally shoots his own son by this marriage, and this leads to a revelation, Marion announcing the alliance to protect her injured child. When it is denied by Angus, she goes to her father, James Hume, while two modest admirers search for the missing witness in the London haunts of the underworld. David Hume makes a fight in the courts for his daughter's honor, but the case is lost from lack of evidence, and Hume is ruined on the exchange, dying when he is unable to meet his liabilities.

The mising witness is found, but Angus has not been idle, and he bribes the witness to disappear again. There remains only the papers on the sunken yacht, encased in a chest. Diving operations are in progress there. Lord Angus and the two humble admirers of Marion hasten to the scene. One of the later goes down. So does Lord Angus. They meet at the wreck, Angus armed with a knife. In the struggle he accidentally cuts his own air tube, and is lost. The survivor comes back with the much-desired proofs of the marriage and claims Marion for his own, while the other humble admirer dies, confessing his love.

The Rialto spectators who watched "The White Heather" appreciated the acting of H. E. Herbert as Lord Angus, and Mabel Ballin as Marion Hume, and they thoroughly enjoyed Tourneur's artistry of production in conjunction with Rialto skill of presentation, just as they enjoy the Rialto's orchestral skill of interpretation, but interest centered on the undersea combat at the last of the melodrama, and this will be the story's chief value to exhibitors generally throughout this country.

Anita Stewart in New First National Release Presents Fine Type of Womanhood.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FOLLOWING her impersonations of a daughter of the American aristocracy of dollars and a royal princess in Louis B. Mayer productions, Anita Stewart's third picture, directed by Lois Weber, is a screen version of Leroy Scott's novel of today, "Mary Regan." The heroine is a young girl whose mother fell in love with a handsome thief and married him with the hope of working his reformation. Mary's mother sacrificed a fine social position for love, only to die of a broken heart when her husband was taken by the police. The little girl inherits her mother's fortune and character. When she grows into a beautiful woman she realizes she belongs to neither the social nor the underworld, but occupies a position between the two. It is her efforts to win her true place in the world that makes up the story told on the screen.

Leroy Scott's novel is melodramatic in incident and its motives are not always convincing, but it contains an excellent clash of characters and the manner of its production goes a long way in making it good entertainment for the average screen patron. Lois Weber is as faithful as ever to her creed of correct detail in every scene, and quite as successful in result. Anita Stewart invests the name part with the fine type of womanhood intended by the author, and plays her scenes with the restraint suggested by Mary's refined nature. Beautiful gowns add to her attractiveness. Frank Mayo is a splendid representative of the well bred manly Police Commissioner who wins Mary at last. Other admirable characterizations should be credited to Carl Miller, Barney Sherry, Brinsley Shaw, George Hernandez, and Hedda Nova.

The Story.

When Mary Regan learns that Robert Clifford loves her she refuses to listen to him. She loves him in return, but will not imperil his career by becoming his wife. The daughter of a notorious thief and a girl of wealth and position, the heroine of Leroy Scott's story, "Mary Regan," finds that she belongs to a world apart. Her mother sacrificed everything for the man she loved, in a vain effort to reform him, and her daughter follows her example by stifling her love when she realizes that if Clifford marries her his career as a public official is at an end. Through her father's connection with the underworld, Mary is known to a band of swindlers. They try to use her to entrap a wealthy young chap, who has just come into a fortune and is spending it as rapidly as possible.

Mary's mother has left her considerable money, and she goes to a resort in the mountains to escape Clifford, and also the gang of crooks. Peter Loveman, the legal adviser of the gang, has convinced young Jack Morton's father that he can keep the boy out of trouble. The gang has introduced Jack to a woman named Nina Cordova, and he has become infatuated with her. He has not been home for several days, and is kept stupefied with liquor. Under pretense of finding him they bring the boy home and then get his father's consent to send him to a resort accompanied by one of the gang who is to keep young Morton out of mischief. The elder Morton is supposed to believe that the lawyer and his companions are trustworthy persons.

Mary meets Jack Morton, and the boy falls honestly in love with her. Hoping to reform him and being anxious to put Clifford completely out of her life, Mary marries Morton. Her plans do not accomplish the ends intended. Jack goes back to Nina, and is killed in a raid on a cabaret, and Clifford at last convinces Mary that it is her duty to follow the dictates of her heart and become his wife.

'The Man Who Turned White'

Robertson-Cole's First Superior Production Features H. B. Warner in Story of Rich Oriental Setting.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE first of the Robertson-Cole pictures under the Superior brand, "The Man Who Turned White," released through the Exhibitors Mutual, evidences not only costliness of production, but much attention given to correctness of detail in its Arabian settings. There is also exhibited in the picture an unusually beautiful quality of photography, with effective toning. Scenes in the Arabian restaurant have been skillfully made and assembled, giving only such glimpses of dancers in action as serve to eliminate any sense of amateurishness, and act as an added garniture to artistic settings. The picture, based on a combination of romance and tragedy, has its beginning in the desert where opportunities for action and spectacular atmosphere are afforded among marauding Arab tribes.

The development of the story on the screen might have been strengthened by paying more attention to details relating to the human interest of the play; but if technical errors are looked for, they will be hard to find. The production will stand largely on its spectacular merits, and on the excellent character interpretation of the cast. H. B. Warner in the title role gives a fine performance, and Barbara Castleton in the feminine lead is one of the pleasant memories of the production.

The Story.

The story of "The Man Who Turned White" covers a period in the life of Captain Rand, an English officer, after he has allowed himself to be dismissed from the service to protect from justice Captain Beverly, who previously saved his life in battle. Assuming the garb and outward appearance of an Arab he becomes known as Ali Zaman, and finds an opportunity to avenge the bitterness which rankles in his heart, when on a moonlight night on the desert, he steals from Beverly the woman that he loves.

The woman, Ethel Lambert, discovers that her captor is a white man, and inspires in him the white man's heritage of chivalry, which causes him to release her.

A restaurant in an Arabian town is the scene of their next meeting, where the hero appears in European garb, and overcomes by force, a quartet of ruffians who attack the girl's father. In the days that follow, the romance between the pair grows, and Rand is about to tell the girl of his love, when Beverly appears on the scene and tries to strengthen his own cause, by repeating the story of Rand's disgrace.

Rand gives Ethel a week to think over the affair and give him her answer. In the meantime, a conspiracy to kill him and to kidnap Ethel is put in motion by his enemies. A dancer, in love with Rand, is a party to the conspiracy, and helps to lure the heroine out on the desert in search of Rand, who has departed in the belief that she has refused to forgive his disgrace. Beverly repents of his action, follows them into the desert, and is killed in the battle that ensues, while the lovers are rescued by European soldiers and left to go their happy way.

"Some Liar"

William Russell Gives Effective Portrayal of the Title Role in Speedy Comedy for Pathe.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE speedy action of "Some Liar," a five-part William Russell production for the Pathe program, is its distinguishing feature. The comedy situations lean toward the farcical, and will please the average audience. There are fights in plenty, and considerable comedy is derived from a rather gruesome subject, the selling of cradles and coffins. William Russell in the title role gives a creditable performance. The development of a propensity for lying in the young salesman creates a number of amusing situations set in the atmosphere of the Wild West.

The hero of "Some Liar" is Robert Winchester McTabb, a young salesman who works for a manufacturer of cradles and coffins. He lands in a mining town in Arizona and promptly falls in love with Celie, a pretty Western girl, who listens to his stories of bravery and learns to look upon him as a hero. She tells him that she knows some one who will need a coffin very soon. The man, Kellard, holds a package of letters which she wants, and she orders McTabb to kill him and bring her the letters. High Spade McQueen, proprietor of the gambling house, orders a coffin for Kellard, who has

Continuing his tales of man-killing to Celie, McTabb finds himself face to face with carrying out her request that he kill Kellard. In trying to get the letters McTabb is followed to Kellard's cabin by High Spade, who does the killing to win Celie's favor. In a struggle between McTabb and Kellard, McTabb gets the letters, and both men return, claiming the glory of the deed. McTabb is about to be lynched for his pains, when it is proved that Kellard is the murderer. He is spared death because it is against the rules to lynch home folks, and Celie and McTabb decide to "hang together for life."

The Story.

The author of "Josselyn's Wife" has chosen a rather unusual setting for the eternal triangle idea, placing a man's youthful step-mother in the role of the vampire who worms herself into his domestic relations, causing him to be untrue to his young wife. This circumstance comes about when the man, an artist, brings his wife and child to the ome of his father, from which he has been estranged because of the type of woman which his father has put in his dead mother's place.

Once a reconciliation has been established his stepmother sets herself the task of diverting the young man's affections from his wife to herself. In the course of affairs, when the father has discovered the tangle in the domestic relations of the family, a quarrel ensues between father and son. The following morning the old man is found dead in his chair. After the son is arrested and held for trial, and his wife and child have gone to live at her father's home, the little boy innocently reveals that he shot his grandfather, a civil war veteran, while they played at catching spies. When the child tells his story to the authorities, the hero is released, and the scene shifts to California, where he goes with his family to regain his health.

"Taxi"

Comedy Well Put Over Characterizes Taylor Holmes Special for Triangle.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THERE is no doubt of the box-office values of "Taxi," the Triangle adaptation of George Agnew Chamberlain's story, with Taylor Holmes in the masculine lead, and pretty Lillian Hall in the ingenue role. The production is well made, with plenty of comic incident and speedy action. It is not a one star picture, but shares its responsibilities with more than one competent player. Maude Eburne's eccentric comedy is one of the strong features of the picture. The production contains the elements of comedy, drama and adventure; its situations are skilfully developed and its detail convincing. Taylor Holmes in the role of Robert Hervey Randolph gives an especially pleasing performance, and it is doubtful if Lillian Hall has ever been seen to better advantage. Henry Sedley as Duke Beamer gives a convincing impersonation of an unscrupulous millionaire.

Robert Hervey Randolph is the young man in "Taxi" who comes suddenly face to face with a situation which causes him to trust the shaping of his destiny to the Ajax Taxi Company. One night as he mingles with the Broadway crowd, he causes the taxi in which he is riding to stop in front of the stage entrance to a theatre, where millionaire Beamer is trying to force his attentions on Vivien Vivierre, a little chorus girl. As the door of the taxi opens, evidently for Beamer's accommodation, the girl steps in and Randolph gives Beamer a proper "bump" as he closes the door and hurries off with the girl.

Vivien confides to Randolph that Beamer has had her discharged, and that she is at a loss to know where to turn for a living. He takes her to his apartment. While he prepares her something to eat, he discovers that she is the missing heir to the ten thousand dollars a year income that he has been enjoying. He persuades her to stay all night while he seeks other quarters, and incidentally buys a job, uniform thrown in, from a taxi driver. The following morning at the request of Randolph, the family lawyer calls on Vivien and acquaints her with her position as heir to the estate. Some amusing situations develop before Randolph is rounded up and made vice-president of the Ajax Taxi Company, forestalling an attempt by Beamer to ruin the company from which Vivien receives a large part of her income. The romance started at the first meeting of Randolph and Vivien comes to a climax at the close of the last chapter.

"The Third Degree"

Vitagraph's New Alice Joyce Picture Good for a Long Run.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

VITAGRAPH has a big picture in its new release, "The Third Degree," with Alice Joyce and Gladden James. It is a most affecting story. In working it up, Director Tom Terriss has resourcefully and without padding made each scene add just enough more to the developing situation to keep a constantly increasing hold on the spectator. This is accomplished largely by keeping the action of each of the well-chosen characters so carefully within the probabilities, that the whole is perfectly convincing. After the hero is proved guiltless, the humanity of the wife, Alice Joyce, in her piteous predicament gives an interest even deeper than the excitement of the hours before the trial.

Alice Joyce provides masterly work in this character, Annie Jeffries. Gladden James ably portrays the boy who isn't a strong character. L. Rogers Lytton, as the police captain, and Edward McGuire, as his sergeant, are capital. These players carry the action, but they are ably supported by the whole cast. It is one of the best pictures of the year, and is sure to occasion talk of a highly commendatory kind. It can safely be boosted as a picture with both a big punch and a human heart story. Charles Klein's famous stage success of the same name is its source.

In the Vitagraph picture, "The Third Degree," the hero is Howard Jeffries, Jr., son of a millionaire. Howard Jeffries, Sr., marries again, and we are told that the new Mrs. Jeffries and Robert Underwood, the rather fast roommate at college of Howard, Jr., had once been something more than friends. Howard, Jr., marries Annie Sands, a beautiful girl who had been a waitress in the college town.

When the father hears who his son's wife is, there is a flare-up, and the young couple leave the house. Underwood has opened a curio store, and lost money that didn't belong to him. He writes to Mrs. Jeffries, Sr., telling her that unless she comes to him, he will shoot himself.

Howard, Jr., remembers that Underwood owes him money, and goes to collect it. He is drunk, drinks more and falls asleep on the sofa. Underwood hides him. Mrs. Jeffries comes, refuses to have more to do with Underwood and leaves. Underwood shoots and kills himself. The sound wakes the young man who is trying to get out, is captured by the police. Under the hypnotic strain of third degree, he confesses to murder.

It is brought out that a woman had called on Underwood, and the police try to fasten it on Annie. The girl suspects that it is the other Mrs. Jeffries, and gets her to provide evidence that will show a suicide; but, to save her relative, lets it be thought that she was the woman of the visit. Old Jeffries, after the trial, determines to get his son a divorce on the sly, and Annie is bravely going on with the role she has taken. A lawyer friend of the family gets the older Mrs. Jeffries to confess, and the happy ending is near.

"The Master Man"

Frank Keenan Gives Impressive Performance in Pathe Drama of Crooked Politics.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

WELL devised and cleverly acted melodramatic situations characterize "The Master Man," a five-part Frank Keenan production for the Pathe program. Frank Keenan in the portrayal of the title role finds ample opportunity for the display of his talent. He handles tense situations with an ease that lends conviction. The best character work is done by Jack Brammall and William V. Mong.

The production is highly melodramatic, and its situations developed in the bosom of crooked politics have been devised by the author for the purpose of forming a setting for the magnetic personality and influence of the "master man." These situations with their various solutions are satisfactory, even to the point where the "master man" is caught at his game and conceives the unique idea of playing dead for the purpose of again cheating justice. In order to develop a note of romance which the story holds, and also to prove a "clean-up" in the character of the "master man," he is allowed to reappear and rescue the woman he loves from indictment for the murder of her husband. In the courtroom scenes there is at times questionable confusion, and now and then a stray incident that interferes with their otherwise convincing qualities.

The Story.

Emanuel Blake, Attorney General of the State in "The Master Man," is a man of powerful personality who manages to entirely cover, or shift the blame of crimes committed in connection with the State political machine, to innocent shoulders. At the opening of the story he is ordering Davenport, one of the catspaws of the men higher up, to steal from the Governor a deathbed confession which would menace Blake's future. In so doing Davenport shoots and kills the Governor, and in the scenes which follow Blake cleverly covers all clues, gains possession of the confession himself, and succeeds in getting the wrong man arrested.

At a hearing of the murder case Davenport, becoming panicky, tells that he shot the Governor at Blake's orders. True to former ingenious methods, Blake now maneuvers to save himself, and straightway collapses and has his associates place him in a sanatorium controlled by them. Shortly afterward he is reported dead, at which time he leaves the sanatorium and starts life over again as an employe in a mill, learning something of the lives of the mill people. When the woman he loves is about to be tried for the murder of her husband, he uses his old influence to have himself elected as foreman of the jury, and succeeds in having her acquitted.

Four English Pictures

W. Arthur Northam Shows to the Trade a Series of English Productions to Get American Opinions.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

WE have been told that English producers are looking to the United States for a market to dispose of their surplusage, now that war is over and photoplay matters are reviving in the old country. Should the pictures thus far shown in Arthur Northam's "carnival" on the New York Roof be fair samples of what the English manufacturer expects us to take, there will be disappointment on the "tight little Isle" when the verdict is rendered.

Starting Tuesday morning, May 6, Mr. Northam introduced two films at a session, the series of showings being set to end Friday morning of the current week. In this way provision is made to show eight English productions, four of the lot being referred to in the appended opinions. Mr. Northam represents several English producers in this preliminary work, and has shown the pictures for the main purpose of getting American opinion upon their adaptability to general exploitation in this country.

"The Kiddies in the Ruins."

Here are three reels of "war," showing a peaceful home before the outbreak, with the husband and father joining the colors and leaving the wife, kiddies and old folk behind. There are scenes near the firing line, and then the father passes through his home village on the way to battle. Temporary reunions take place, and again the soldier is ordered on the march. The final scenes show peace restored in the village devastated by the Hun.

Welsh, Pearson & Co. are given as the producers. They are based on Pulbot's French cartoons. While the numerous children who enter into the scenes are generally clever in their work the story is too long in the telling, and brings no fresh light upon a subject that is becoming more and more unwelcome as a source of "entertainment." An entire reel might better be eliminated, if the subject is to be offered to the American screen—and then there would be nothing remarkable to recommend the subject, even at its best and in most condensed and essential form.

"God and the Man."

Six reels made from Robert Bushannan's book by the Ideal Film Company. One is most inpressed by the excellence of the acting. Even the least conspicuous player is excellent, everybody in the cast giving best attention to the opportunities for dramatic expression that abound. That it is a costume drama will be its first drawback to distribution in this country. With or without reason exhibitors are opposed to anything that is not clothed modernity as to dress. The general public has little chance to express preferences, for the showman will not give them many opportunities to pass upon costume plays.

The second and most important item to militate against the very heavy melodrama here pictured, is the dogmas of religion that dominate the subject. Considered purely as a commercial proposition, Wesleyan Methodists might be concerned in the work as propaganda for their faith—but we are led to believe that Methodists are not prone to patronize theatrical entertainment of any type in liberal numbers. For general exhibition the subject does not invite profitable possibilities because of its preachments.

"Uncle Remus—Brer Rabbit."

This cartoon comedy is by Anson Dyer. It was interesting to see the work of an American (Joel Chandler Harris) set forth by an English manufacturer and, particularly, a typical American folklory product. The tale of how the rabbit secured milk for the little ones is well told by automatons that work cleverly, and provide a novel outcome in screen attempts.

This subject might provide an interesting diversion in houses big enough to go in for novelty for novelty's sake—but it is doubtful if the general run of picture showmen would want the Dyer comedy, for the reason that their public might not care for just that sort of fun. It would be of great interest to kiddies, however; and as a special feature for children, might be made available and serviceable in most theatres.

"Nearer My God to Thee."

In five reels; produced by Hepworth. The title is impossible for use here. Fortunately the references to the hymn run in titles that may be cut out entirely by the application of a suitable and commercial title might be decided upon. There is nothing in the picture that "hooks it up" with the hymn, apart from the main and sub-titles.

As usual in English films, the acting is uniformly excellent. The locations are refreshing in their natural beauty and charm, pretty vistas of English countryside framing the incidents as they slowly progress to a belated ending of the story. To make this picture suited to American exhibitions it would require re-titling all through; cutting and trimming down to a size that would give action to the incidents and tell the story without dragging it out to the bitter end.

With proper editing the feature might slip past in most of the smaller houses as an issue bringing novelty in locations and a story that holds enough interest to make it better than the average run of program attractions. Hepworth films have been seen in America very often. But this particular Hepworth must be "born again" if it is to live here.

(The last four pictures will be reviewed next week.)

Theda Bara Has Character Story and Acts Well in Fox Picture.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE new Fox attraction, "The Siren's Song," depends for its interest on one character, its heroine, played by Theda Bara. This young girl is endowed with a wonderful voice. The key to her character is a tragic weakness that makes her the prey of any strong suggestion impressed on her mind. Her instincts are good always, and she does no evil. The way other characters conduct themselves often lacks interest, except in so far as the things they do affect the singing girl. Her fates and the peculiar emotional angles that bring them about are freshly imagined, and to some will be of gripping interest. How wide a circle of spectators will understand it is a question.

Theda Bara plays the singing girl with effectiveness. The average spectator will probably count it a good Theda Bara picture, but with a somewhat forced plot. The story and scenario are by Charles Kenyon. It was directed by J. Gordon Edwards. Together they have accomplished something out of the ordinary run.

The Story.

In the Fox picture, "The Siren's Song," Marie Bernais, daughter of a French lighthouse keeper, has a wonderful voice. Her father is a bigot and hates her sweet singing. She has a hard time in the home, falls in love with Raoul Nieppe, a nonconformist minister and, after inviting her father's curse to go to him, finds that he is false.

She tries to commit suicide, is rescued by an old music teacher and in time becomes famous as a singer. Gaspard Prevost, a rich man, falls in love with her. Nieppe comes to Paris to invite her to return to the village to sing to troops about to depart for the front and she accepts.

The influences of the home village act to make her throw over her lover, Gaspard. In a strange scene with her father alone at the top of the lighthouse, the old man is so overcome that he dies and this makes the girl send Gaspard away. Bidding good bye to him on the beach, she catches a cold. The music teacher warns her that if she sings to the soldiers her voice will be ruined. She sings well, but from that time has no voice. Then God gives her happiness in simple duties.

"Sally's Blighted Career"

First Christie Two-Reel Special a Good Attraction with Plenty of Snap.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS is the first of the new Christie Special comedies, and there is snap in its two reels. It begins with country scenes, has back stage scenes, a pretty girl chorus, a rumpus show, scenes in a theatrical boarding house, a scene before a magistrate, and goes back to the farm. Fay Tincher, Harry Deep, Molly Malone and other Christie leaders have prominent roles. It is an excellent farce attraction.

Some stranded theatre people kid Sally into thinking she has an opera voice. When she appears for a job, they feel they must give her a chance. None of the audience kicked at the rumpus show she put over, and spectators will like it. Billy had come to the city to find her and is at the show, after being ejected from the stage door. He too gets into the limelight. Sally wins a few thousand by capturing a burglar. Billy finds a way to make her go back to the farm.

Advertising Aids: Two two-column and three one-column ad cuts, and one one sheet and one three sheet poster.

"The Social Pirate"

World Pictures Shows June Elvidge in Role of Violinist Who Plays on Heart Strings.

Reviewed by William J. Reilly.

THE World production, "The Social Pirate," while it displays the tendencies of the ready-made picture, will satisfy the average theatregoer. June Elvidge, as the violinist whose failure at her first appearance in public leads to such a complicated series of events, wins sympathy by her patient and womanly endurance of the harsh treatment of fate. The cast lends good support, particularly Allan Edwards in the hero's role, Laura Burt as the Irish landlady, and Ned Sparks in a crook part full of flavor.

About ninety-five per cent. of the picture was staged indoors. More outdoor bits would have freshened the story. There are several errors of omission in the continuity. It is not explained, for instance, why the police inspector permits the villain to walk out of the hero's house carrying the stolen jewels in a traveling bag even before he has completed his examination of the persons who were in the house on the night of the robbery. Nor is it explained why June Elvidge wastes much valuable time walking around New York while presumably in haste to get the first boat for Chile. The story is unwound with an upkeep of suspense, however, and sustains a fair amount of interest.

The Cast.

Dolores.....June Elvidge
Mrs. McBride.....Laura Burt
Mrs. Ridgeway.....Lillian Lawrence
Madge Ridgeway.....Winifred Leighton
Bruce Ridgeway.....Allan Edwards
Allen Hobington.....George McQuarrie
Harry Barnes.....Ned Hopkins
Ann Muller.....May Hopkins

The Story.

Dolores Fernandez, in World's picture, "The Social Pirate," is an orphaned South American girl, ambitious in music, who makes her first appearance in a cheap New York cabaret. Her music is too "highbrow" for most of the patrons. Some of them like it, however, and a small riot follows, bringing in the police to arrest everyone in the place. Dolores is permitted to go home on the promise that she will appear in court the next morning. On the way home she finds a diamond bracelet, just lost by Mrs. Ridgeway. The paper next morning does not tell her with whom to communicate in regard to the return of the bracelet, and Dolores writes a note to the advertising department of the daily. She is taken ill suddenly, and the sheet of note paper on which she had written the letter is used by the doctor as a prescription blank.

Dolores goes to court, where as she testifies concerning the riot, the bracelet slips from her purse. The inspector recognizes it as the lost Ridgeway bracelet, and since Dolores can produce no evidence, her note having gone to the druggist, she is given four months in the reformatory.

"Fool's Gold"

Mitchell Lewis and Florence Turner in Big Melodrama by Arrow Film.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE Arrow Film Corporation's new picture, "Fools' Gold," is a melodrama in six reels, with a big sensation—a mine on fire with men rushing through a long gallery in flames. The attraction is sure of a favorable reception, especially on account of its big scenes, but also on account of its humanity and well acted characters.

There are two love stories. The first is unhappy, but in the second generation the children get the happiness their parents missed. At the opening of the second there is a noticeable slackening of interest; but it quickly picks up as the story again gets under way.

Florence Turner again and again puts dramatic power in her role. Mitchell Lewis draws a sterling character getting polish, but remaining true while Sarah Truex, as this man's wife, draws an accenting of unpleasant selfishness. Evelyn Brent, as the younger generation heroine, shows her marked ability. There is no poorly played character.

The background is a Western mining country with scenes full of variety and interest. Director Lawrence Trimble has made his big scenes with crowds as convincing as he has the bits of humanity he pictures in cabin, parlor, office, mine or woodland. The photographs are life-like.

A LADY BELLHOP'S SECRET (Sunshine Comedy).—Two reels that will surely make a houseful of laughter. A farce of comical characters as well as comical doings, it is replete with good old doings worked up anew. A flood in the upper room of a hotel, caged lions and buried gold are some of its fun-making things.

THE CAVE MAN'S BRIDE (Mutt and Jeff Cartoon).—The comic pals find themselves among a people where interlopers in love affairs get rough treatment. Jeff takes up and finds the cop and the landlady telling them to pay rent or vamoose.

SEEING THINGS (Mutt and Jeff Cartoon).—It looks as though Jeff has got two old shoes trained to obey orders. Mutt looks in at the door and thinks it necessary to call the cop. He is taken to the bug house. He escapes and finds that Jeff has two rats in the shoes, tries to punish Jeff. The rats run up his trouser legs and make him howl.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE MARATHON (Rolin).—A Harold Lloyd comedy of the rough and tumble sort. The excitement takes place over a young woman whose affections are claimed by a couple of men. Much of the comedy comes from the fact that the wrong man is usually the victim of the punches. A marathon race helps the runaway hero to hide his identity for a brief period from his pursuers.

PATHE REVIEW NO. 5 (May 18).—This issue covers subjects of special interest such as "Pear Raising in California," "Juggling," a series of slow motion photographs, and scenes with our wounded soldiers showing X-Rays of shrapnel, bullets and barbed wire lodged in different parts of the body.

THE TIGER TRAP (Pathe).—Episode No. 5 of "The Tiger's Trail" continues the thrilling action of former episodes. It opens with Belle struggling with Gordon who is about to shoot her. A struggle between Gordon and Jack Randall, the accidental killing of Smith by Gordon, and the releasing of the sacred tiger are salient features of the episode. It closes showing Belle about to step backward into the room where the tiger is devouring a piece of meat.

DANGER SIGNALS (Pathe), May 11.—Episode No. 4 of "The Tiger's Trail." There is a big "punch" in this instalment, where the girl is hung over the side of a railroad bridge, head downwards, and the passing train cuts the rope. The hero dives from the bridge and rescues her. This is a familiar stunt, but is worked here with splendid results. Belle regains possession of the stolen idol once more at the close of this number.

HIS VAMPY WAYS (Pathe-Broadway Comedy), May 11.—A two-reel comic featuring Walter Hall, Doris Dean and others. There are some amusing characters in this, but the business is only fairly good. The scenes occur in a hotel and cabaret. The chief plot element concerns the efforts of a middle-aged wife to hold down her flirtatious young husband. The subject is one of about average slapstick quality.

Universal Film Company.

A SKATE AT SEA (L-Ko), April 2.—A two-reel comic featuring Charles Dorety. He plays the part of a stowaway on a vessel loaded with monkeys, snakes and other animals and birds. He is discovered and forced to act as cook. This contains some amusing stunts all through, but the strongest feature is the close, which has several new and original chase scenes. The number is well up to the average.

LOONEY LIONS AND MONKEY BUSINESS (Century Comedy), April 23.—There are a lot of funny stunts in this two-reel comic, which deals with the adventures of an escaped convict. He has all manner of experiences, and some escaped lions take a big part in the number. The subject is one that will please lovers of knockabout, slapstick situations, with no particular dependence on plot structure.

SAMBO'S WEDDING DAY (L-Ko), April 30.—A bridegroom on the eve of his wedding falls down a chimney and becomes so covered with soot that he is mistaken for a colored man. Some real colored folks participate, also some bewhiskered individuals of anarchistic tendencies. This is just a compilation of knockabout stunts, some of which are quite funny, but the production as a whole is not particularly strong.

A FEW REASONS

why "NEWMAN" METAL FRAMES have been chosen by all the big circuits and best class of theatres.

1—Because the constant exposure to all sorts of weather conditions cannot affect "NEWMAN" NON-CORROSIVE METAL FRAMES.

2—Because of their richness in beauty and design, they liven the entrance and render the lobby more inviting than any other kind of frames.

3—Because they will outlast a dozen wood frames. They are practically un-wear-out-able.

A. F. WILLIAMS, 166 W. Adams St., Chicago

CURRENT EVENTS NO. 16 (Universal), April 18.—Inspection of British dreadnaughts, decorating a courier pigeon, how giant Yankee naval guns smashed routes of supply, review of Coblenz garrison by General Pershing—these and other topics are pictorially treated in this issue.

GUN LAW (Western), May 10.—An interesting two-reel number featuring Pete Morrison, Helen Gibson and Hoot Gibson. The story concerns a young Government detective on trail of the "Cisco Kid." He falls in love with the youth's sister, and afterward becomes partner to the "Kid." The detective's struggle between love and duty is well worked out and with a fair amount of drama. The scenic effects are pleasing.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS NO. 17 (Universal), April 23.—This opens with a Victory march in London led by the Prince of Wales. A strike of telephone girls in New England, climbing Pike's Peak in a tank, bringing American troops home in German steamers and American police troops on the Rhine are also prominent features. The reel closes with one of Tad's amusing animated drawings.

GREEN-EYED JOHNNY (Nestor), April 14.—A comedy in one reel, which begins with a case of "love at first sight" in a cabaret. Johnny marries the girl and afterward becomes wildly jealous of a man who turns out to be her brother. The subject is one of about average entertainment value.

A MOVIE RIOT (L-Ko), April 9.—A two-reel comic featuring Charlie of the Orient and others. A bevy of bathing girls appear in the opening reel. There is not much plot, but several good features. The burlesque melodrama is funny, and the rescue of the baby from the miniature train by a dog makes an exciting close.

AT THE MERCY OF A MONSTER (Universal), April 14.—This is a lively instalment picturing the experiences of Billie as a prisoner in the hands of the Vultures. Thode penetrates Blind Canyon disguised as a Vulture, but is also overpowered and made captive. Billie's fight with the chimpanzee and a big fire scene bring the number to an exciting finish.

GOOD NIGHT, TURK! (L-Ko), May 7.—An unusually good two-reel comic of its kind. The burlesque fire scene at the beginning is very funny; also the burro run by the electric trolley. The knockabout scenes are good and the burrowing under ground, while not an original stunt, is at the same time very laughable. A successful number.

THREE IN A CLOSET (Star Comedy), May 19.—Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appear in this pleasing comedy, assisted by Mildred Moore and Fred Gamble. Lee, who appears as "Swat" Dugan, is employed by the girl's father to keep her away from Eddie. Instead Swat makes a series of errors and assists Eddie to get the girl. The number is typical and amusing.

Vitagraph

PASSING THE BUCK (Larry Semon Comedy).—Much of the comedy in this two-reel knock-about picture is new and goes over with a good deal of liveliness. Many scenes are shown, but no plot is left in the spectator's mind. He sees a bag of gems snatched and then people and things are hurled here and there with astonishing rapidity. One episode introduces a colored person, a roast chicken, a cook and a cat. It is a very good specimen of this kind of farce picture.

An Announcement

OUR ACTIVITIES for the past year have been nearly 100 per cent. devoted to war production of vital importance to the government, compelling us to discontinue regular manufacture in practically all of our lines.

The cessation of hostilities has now enabled us to begin the readjustment to a peace production basis. While this adjustment must be gradual, we are pressing it with all possible speed in order to satisfy the requirements of our normal trade at an early date.

We appreciate the patience and understanding with which our patrons have reacted to the situation and trust they may continue to exercise such consideration until our manufacturing facilities are once more on a pre-war footing.

THE STAGE OF PERFECTION IN MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

From the splendid results given by Silvertip and White A. C. Carbons in their respective fields of lighting, it appears as though there is no room for improvement. The years of experience which our chemists and projection experts have devoted to screen illumination have proved successful; and they're still on the job to make even better carbons.

For D. C. Current

This metal plated negative carbon of smaller diameter than its companion—the Columbia upper—produces

A Strong, Penetrating Light
Steady Screen Illumination
High Current Carrying Capacity

RECOMMENDED SIZES TO USE:

|---|---|
| 25 to 50 Amps. D. C. | 5/8x12" Columbia Cored Upper5/16x6" Silvertip Solid Lower |
| 50 to 65 Amps. D. C. | 3/4x12" Columbia Cored Upper11/32x6" Silvertip Solid Lower |
| 65 to 70 Amps. D. C. | 7/8x12" Columbia Cored Upper11/32x6" Silvertip Solid Lower |
| 70 to 85 Amps. D. C. | 7/8x12" Columbia Cored Upper3/8x6" Silvertip Solid Lower |
| 85 to 100 Amps. D. C. | 1x12" Columbia Cored Upper7/16x6" Silvertip Cored Lower |

For A. C. Current

Not the ordinary carbons, but a combination of two especially designed carbons of equal diameter, giving

A Pure White Light
Flickerless Illumination
An Absolutely Quiet Arc

RECOMMENDED SIZES TO USE:

40 or less than 60 Amperes—5/8" Combination
60 or less than 75 Amperes—3/4" Combination
75 or less than 100 Amperes—7/8" Combination

BOYLAN EVEN TENSION REEL

FOREVER ENDS ALL TENSION TAKE-UP TROUBLES

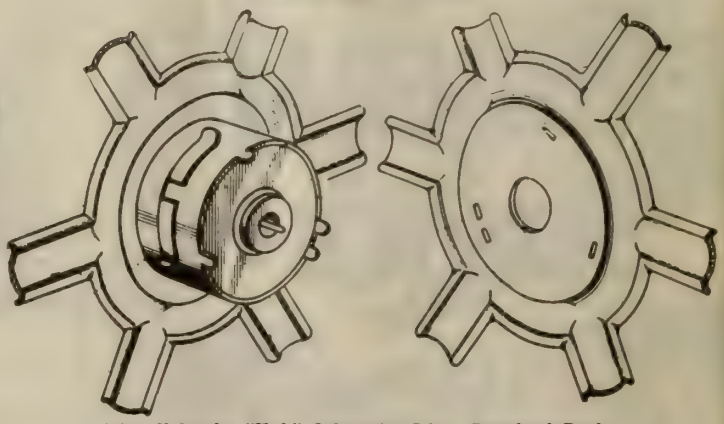
Patented April 23, 1918



It's All in the "Hub" Otherwise It's a Standard Reel

Increases Life of Lower Sprocket Many Times. Also this Reel Does Away with the Necessity for a Take-Up Friction in the Projector Itself.

The take-up friction of the projector is set tight so that it cannot slip at all and the tension on the film is entirely taken care of automatically by the friction between the two hubs of the reel, the friction becoming automatically greater as the weight of the reel increases by the film being wound on it.

It has no springs or weights or complicated mechanism and can be used on any machine using the standard reels, without making any change whatever.

It has been tested out under all kinds of conditions for more than eighteen months.

It will save the projectionist all his present worries from variation in take-up tension, losing the lower loop, etc., and will save the moving picture industry many thousands of dollars annually through the elimination of the various kinds of damage done to the films through excessive tension.

Three Perfect Hits!!!

U.S.S. PENNSYLVANIA
Guantanamo, Cuba.
April 2, 1919.

The Precision Machine Co., Inc.
317 East 34th St
New York

Dear Sirs

I feel that it is my duty to tell you of the perfectly satisfactory service that I have received from the big "SIMPLEX" type S projector purchased through your concern over a year ago.

During the entire year the machine has been mounted on a heavy coaling truck, which is pulled from one part of the ship to the other every day to where they order the pictures shown, sometimes over gratings in the deck, over the raised bottoms of water tight doors and over places that make the machine subject to a great deal of vibration and jarring that would shake the spokes out of the wheels of a coal wagon.

During the firing of the big fourteen inch guns, also the five inch guns the machine sits right up on the gun deck, and within twenty feet of one of the five inch guns when it is fired eight and ten times in succession, and the same concussion and vibration coming from the firing of these guns tears ventilation pipes from the rivets and snaps half-inch rivets from the bulkheads of the compartments, but the SIMPLEX has gone through at least ten firings and to-day I will match the picture I am projecting against any theatre on the outside for steadiness, detail and beauty.

I am inclosing two pictures of the machine, so you can see what my four years projecting pictures in the U. S. Navy has proven to me to be the ideal way to mount a machine for service on board a battleship.

You may use the letter and pictures if you wish and I will be glad to show anybody the machine in operation any time the ship is in New York harbor.

Yours truly,
Alan L Hawke - Electrician
